"Walter," said his mother, "take this glass of pure water, and put just one drop of ink into it." He did so.

"O mother, who would have thought one drop would blacken a whole glass so!"

"Yes: it has changed the color of the whole, has it not? It is a shame to do that. Just put one drop of clear water in it and restore its purity." Said his mother.

"Why, mother, you are laughing at me. One drop, nor a dozen, nor fifty won't do that."

"No, my son; and therefore I cannot allow one drop of Robert Scott's evil nature to mingle with your careful training, many drops of which will make no impression on him."—Herald and Presbyter.

HOW JEANNETTE SAW THE REVIEW.

A German story relates how one day a little girl named Jeannette witnessed a great army review. Thousands upon thousands of spectators crowded around the stand before which the emperor was to watch the passing regiments.

While Jeannette was seated in the stand she saw an old, feeble woman trying very hard to get where she could see. The little German girl said to herself, "It's not right for me to sit here when I am strong and well and can stand, while that poor, feeble old woman can see nothing. I ought to honor old age, as I want some one to honor me when I am old." Then she gave up her seat to the old woman, and went and stood in the crowd.

But while Jeannette was standing upon her tiptoes, trying in vain to see, a courtier of the emperor, covered with gold lace, elbowed his way to her side, and said, "Little girl, her majesty would be pleased to see you in the royal box."

When the abashed child stood before the empress she graciously said, "Come here, my daughter, and sit with me. I saw you give up your seat to that old woman, and now you must remain by my side."

So does God honor those who are kind and helpful and courteous; and he never forgets or leaves unrewarded any act of kindness, no matter how small. —The Continent.

"I HAPPIED HIM UP."

Agnes is a little girl with such a bright, happy face that it is a pleasure to look at her.

One day, in answer to her mother's call, she came running home from a neighbor's, two or three doors away.

Her eyes were bright, her lips so smiling that her mother smiled, too.

"Do you want me, mother?" asked Agnes.

"No, dear," said her mother. "Not for anything important. I missed you; that is all. Where were you, daughter?"

"At the Brown's. And oh, mother, Walter was cross, but I happied him up so that he got all over it; and then the baby cried, and I had to happy her up; then some one stepped on the kitten's tail and I was just going to happy her up when you called me."

"Why, what a happying time you have had!" laughed her mother. "It must make you happy yourself to happy up little boys and babies and kittens, for you look as happy as possible."

And this is true. The more we try to make others happy the happier we shall be ourselves. Then put away frowns and pouting lips. Try to "happy up" those who are troubled, cross, or sick, and soon you will find yourself so happy that your face will shine with smiles.—Western Christian Advocate.

A NEW KIND OF GEOGRAPHY.

Mother looked sorrowfully at the report card Bobby handed her.

"Well, I don't care. Geography isn't any use, anyhow. What difference does it make about Africa and the British Isles? I'm an American, and so's everybody else I know," grumbled Bobby. "I don't believe there are any such places, anyhow. I just believe the geography men made 'em up on purpose to bother us," he concluded, with an injured air

Mother began to wrinkle her forehead as if she were trying to think of something. Suddenly she nodded. "So he thinks we're all Americans," she said to herself. "He thinks geography was made up to bother folks. He doesn't think there are any such places." She smiled as if she was very much pleased and went on with her sewing.

"What is it, mother? Please tell me," pleaded Bobby, "what are you laughing at."

"I'm laughing at the surprise waiting for you," she answered. "Bobby, will you do this for me; ask the first person you meet where he was born? Will you?"

"Why, yes," replied Bobby. "But what seems sillier than geography? Americans are born in America, of course, just the way Germans are born in Germany."

Mother laughed merrily. "Oh, you funny little boy!" she cried. "Come back in an hour. If you haven't been surprised, I will give you three caraway-seed cookies."

It was less than an hour when Bobby rushed into the room where his mother was still sewing. "Why, Mother Barrows, what do you think?" he exclaimed. "I asked grandmother first, and—let me see if I can remember it—she said she was born in Peebles. She was surprised that I didn't know where Peebles was. She said: 'Why, it's Peebleshire, near Edinburgh. My father was a Peebleshire shepherd.' And, mother, I didn't know where Edinburgh was. I was so 'shamed I wouldn't ask; but I asked George, and he said it was in Scotland. I'll never forget that, I guess. I'm going to look it right up in my geography." And away he ran. "But, O mother—" He stopped and came back. "I haven't told you about George. He was mowing the lawn. I was watching him, and then I remembered and said: 'O George, where were you born? And he said: 'Why, in London, of course. Where else was there for me to be born?' He told me another queer thing, mother. He said he remembered when they put electric lights in Billingsgate. That's a fish market. He said people wouldn't buy the fish because the new light made them look as if they were spoiled. They had to take out the electric lights and put back the other kind. I can't remember just where London is. I'm going to look it up." He had almost reached the door when he came back again. "I'll take it all back, mother," he exclaimed, throwing his arms around her neck. "Geography isn't a make-believe; it's real and it's fun, and next month I'll have a good report in it. Honest, I will."—Annie Louise Berray, in Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

PITY THE AFFLICTED.

As one's knowledge of people in general increases he sees many evidences of the fact that there is a wide lack of real pity for afflicted ones. I have been frequently amazed at this lack. Especially have I been astounded at Christian people. I have seen that certain ones, whom I had regarded as being among the very best of Christians, were coldly indifferent to the sufferings of some who were very poor, and who were enduring great bodily affliction.

One particular instance may be referred to. There is a Christian woman living in Georgia who for about ten years has been almost entirely helpless, and suffers continually. She is unmarried, and lives in a part of a small house by herself. She is extremely poor, and she has but the barest necessities of life.

For a few years I have been in correspondence with her, doing what I could to cheer her and make her feel that I had an interest in her

About a year ago I told a Christian woman in the place of my residence of the condition of that afflicted one, and suggested that she write a comforting letter to her. She wrote one letter, which was duly answered, but never since then has this woman written to that afflicted one. I know no definite reason for the neglect. I saw the letter which the suffering one wrote, and I could see nothing objectionable in it. All of her letters manifest a tenderly Christian spirit, and words of gratitude are frequent and fervent. I have been astonished at this evidence of cold indifference; indeed, it indicates a species of hard-heartedness.

What would this woman say if she, in the same condition, were treated in the same manner? How would she feel if an afflicted sister of hers were the subject of such neglect? Make the afflictions of others your own. C. H. WETHERBE.

THE GOAT COMES FIRST.

Switzerland is the only country in the world where the goat is placed ahead of all other animals. If a boy plagues a goat, he can be fined and sent to jail. If a person meets a goat on a path and drives him aside, he can be arrested. If a goat enters the yard of a person, not his owner, and is hit with a club or stone, the person guilty of the offense must pay thirty cents. If the engineer of a railroad train sees a goat on the track, the train must halt until the animal can be coaxed to move.—Child's Hour.

AN INSTRUCTIVE BIOGRAPHY.

We have recently finished reading the "Life of Joshua Soule," by the Rev. H. M. DuBose, D.D., the accomplished pastor of St. John's Church at Augusta, Ga. It is one of the Methodist Founders' Series which is being brought out by the Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South, under the supervision of Bishop W. A. Candler, and is a neat volume of 281 pages. The frontispiece is an impressive likeness of the great Bishop, whose soldierly features and bearing betokened the granite foundation of his character, and are said to have led to his being mistaken for the Duke of Wellington on the streets of London.

American Methodism has produced no more majestic personality than Joshua Soule. Well does he deserve a place in that great triumvirate of early leaders who planted and husbanded the principles of Wesleyanism on these Western shores, the other two being Asbury and McKendree. Having served the Church Militant for more than three score years with a fidelity unsurpassed, he ascended to the Church Triumphant in 1867, forty-four years ago. That his biography should have gone unwritten for so long a time would be passing strange but for the explanation which Dr. DuBose gives in his admirable preface, namely: that Bishop Soule in 1844 declared before the General Conference that he wanted no one to write and publish his life; that he would do so himself so far as he thought it necessary for the interest of posterity and the benefit of the Church of God. It seems, however, that later he did consent "to have his story told as a side-light to that of his long-departed coadjutor, Bishop McKendree," though he was pleased when the inexperienced biographer-elect faltered and gave up the task.

But, beyond any question, the careers of such men should be set forth upon the printed page. They belong not to a single generation, but to all time. Their struggles, triumphs, and achievements are the common heritage of mankind. To trust them to the fading recollections of those who successively come upon the stage of action, is to imperil and lose many of the most priceless legacies of the race. Tradition, though worth something, is but a poor substitute for history.

The life of Joshua Soule is singularly rich in instruction and blessing. The mere example of the man is itself an unfailing source of inspiration. It shows how one, with a good native endowment of intellect, may triumph without the advantages of wealth or the opportunities which are usually considered necessary to open the way to success. Though he had no college training, by assiduous application he became marvelously well informed and was at home in any circle. His preserved writings and utterances are models of good taste and correct English, and accomplished scholars, like Dr. Thomas O. Summers, have borne testimony to the accuracy of his information and the extent of his acquirements. Dr. DuBose says: "I should judge him to be the most rounded self-made scholar of his century." And the superb attainments of Bishop Soule were acquired in the midst of a busy life, crowded with strenuous and unceasing activities. Not even Asbury and McKendree were more diligent in the field than was this New Englander, whom the Methodist pioneers discovered in the forests of Maine.

The career of Bishop Soule is also a tonic to one's faith. It shows that it is not unprofitable to be loyal to one's highest conceptions of truth and right—that as a governing principle in life, honesty is better than expediency. Never did Joshua Soule compromise his convictions; on the contrary, where they led he unflinchingly followed. It was this adherence to conviction which brought him out of a Presbyterian family into the Methodist fold; which caused him to decline ordination to the episcopacy when he thought the constitution of the Church had been invaded, and which later influenced him to leave his own section and people to live and die among the Methodists of the South. The question as to whether a thing was popular, had not the slightest weight with him—he only desired to know what was right, and from the path of duty, as he saw it, nothing could deflect him. Yet he lived respected and honored, achieved enduring fame, and died mourned by countless thousands. To be sure, he was assailed when the storm of controversy raged in the Church, but the voice of detraction has long been hushed, and no star to-day shines brighter in the galaxy of great American Methodists than that of Joshua Soule.

But the biography of Bishop Soule has other values than the influence of his illustrious example. It sheds a flood of light upon many of the more important movements and events which have shaped the history of Methodism in the United States. Joshua Soule came upon the stage of action when the Church was in a formative state—when it was emerging from a widespread evangelism with little order or system into a well-defined ecclesiasticism, which only a wisely constructed government could safeguard and perpetuate. In the making of that government the masterful mind of Soule played the leading, if not the most conspicuous, part. He wrote the constitution of the Church, and became its ablest expositor and defender. Our publishing, missionary and educational interests were blessed by the fostering care of his strong hand in their incipiency. Hence, to trace the career of Bishop Soule is to observe how the foundations of Methodism in America were laid, and to become familiar with the struggles which were necessary to preserve the structure that pious hands had reared.

That Dr. DuBose, in writing the biography of this great leader, has done his work well, scarcely needs to be said. His genius for authorship is well known, since he has within the past few years enriched the literature of the Church by the products of his pen more than any other man in the connection. Though we have read and admired his other volumes, we have no hesitancy in pronouncing this the best one that he has yet given us. It is beautifully written, abounds in brilliant passages, and contains much valuable historical information not obtainable elsewhere. Indeed, in the composition of this biography the versatile author has rendered Southern Methodism an important and enduring service, one which will be more appreciated with the passing years. Dealing, as it largely does, with the formative principles of the Church and the issues which led to its division, its appearance at this time, when the unification of the Methodist bodies of the United States is being considered, is peculiarly appropriate. It well deserves a wide circulation, which we do not doubt it will have. We urge our preachers and more intelligent laymen to procure a copy and read it at their earliest convenience. They will find themselves greatly profited by doing so. The price of the volume is $1, and it may be ordered either of Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., or of the Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.

NEED TO BE ALERT.

We notice that some of the secular papers state that, encouraged by their success in Alabama and elsewhere, the whisky forces will undertake to secure the repeal of statutory prohibition in Mississippi. In no commonwealth in the Union have the people had more wholesome instruction concerning the evils of the liquor traffic and the advantages to be gained by its suppression, than in this State, and it would seem that such a scheme is chimerical and foredoomed to failure. But it should be remembered that a whisky lobby, supplied with an unlimited amount of money and booze, can exert a tremendous influence and that it is a force to be reckoned with. Hence, it behooves the temperance people to be watchful and ready to take up the gauge of battle at any moment. We think it would probably be wise for the prohibitionists to have a public meeting in Jackson next January with a view to conserving the interests of the temperance cause before the incoming Legislature. This is a time when those who oppose the open saloon need to be on their guard and take nothing for granted. A sleepless vigilance is the price of safety.

THE PUBLISHER VISITS GEORGETOWN.

Several years ago Georgetown, Miss., consisted of a postoffice and a store, situated on Pearl River, about 12 or 15 miles east of Hazlehurst. It served as a shipping point for the farmers who tilled the soil in the country roundabout when there was no railroad and when Pearl River was a navigable stream. About six years ago the New Orleans Great Northern Railroad secured a right of way, surveyed its road and built a depot one mile west of the old town site. Those holding land interests and others who were attracted to the place because of the vast tracts of timber lands, set busily to work with hammer and saw, and to-day Georgetown is a thriving, growing town, holding out a bright future for the industrious sons of toil on the banks of Pearl River and the adjacent country.

On last Saturday it was the good fortune of the publisher to meet on a north-bound train Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, and Rev. H. E. Carter, pastor of the Monticello Circuit. These brethren were on their way to Georgetown, to hold the Third Quarterly Conference for the Monticello charge, and the publisher was invited to be present at the meeting. Arriving at Georgetown, the party repaired to Mrs. Martha Catchings' Hotel, and after divesting themselves of the dust of travel and partaking of refreshments, all were ready for the Conference, which convened at 3:30 o'clock p.m. in the neat little church, which is a new frame building, having been built last year at a cost of $3,500, and which is a credit to the congregation. The church is a substantial frame building, with cathedral glass windows and circular pews made of golden oak, and has a seating capacity of about 200. One of the most prominent members and sturdy supporters of this church is Brother F. B. Catchings.

There was a good attendance at the Conference, and from the reports read one would judge that Brother Carter is doing splendid work on this circuit. He has six appointments, five of the societies having houses of worship, and the sixth is planning to build a church at Sontag. At this meeting on Saturday a building committee composed of three members was appointed, who are expected to carry forward this enterprise at once. Brother Carter reported that twenty-five copies of the Conference organ are being taken on his work, and that a canvass is being made for others.

The Conference over, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Steel took charge of the publisher and brought him under obligations by conveying him to their country home, where he was accorded delightful entertainment. Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, Rev. J. T. Leggett preached a missionary sermon to an attentive audience, after which the sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered. The pastor, Rev. H. E. Carter, occupied the pulpit at the evening service.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

We are pleased to learn that the contract has been let for a new brick church at Shelby, Miss., to cost $7,000. We congratulate Brother Storment and his enterprising flock upon this forward movement.

Saturday, October 7, is the Work Day of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage. Let every pastor in the State call attention to it by an announcement from the pulpit and a communication in the local paper, if one exists within the bounds of his charge.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer occupied the pulpit at Bogalusa, La., last Sunday, the pastor, Rev. J. M. Alford, being absent in a meeting. It is needless to say that the worshipers in that goodly town were pleased and impressed by the Doctor's ministrations.

It is announced that the training school for Sunday school teachers, under the auspices of the Louisiana Sunday School Association, will begin the first Monday in October. It will be conducted for the remainder of this year in the Rayne Memorial Church.

One in a position to know informed us a few days since that Rev. J. H. Smith is in high favor with the people at Boyle, Miss., and the other places on his charge. This does not surprise us, as it is Brother Smith's habit to win his way into the hearts of those among whom he labors.

In ordering a copy of Rev. W. G. Harbin's excellent book, "Modes of the Heavenly Life," Brother W. W. Jenkins, of Franklinton, La., takes time to say some things commendatory of the Advocate. It is not our habit to publish the generous words of praise written by our friends, but we appreciate them notwithstanding.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham sends cheering news from his good charge at Rienzi, Miss. He says: "Our meetings have all been held, and many souls have been given us for our hire. It greatly pleases me to see our work advancing rapidly along all lines. Recently we have painted the parsonage, and made improvements on the interior of the church at this place."

Dr. J. M. Henry held the third quarterly conference of the Louisiana Avenue Church, this city, Monday evening of this week. The reports showed that the work is progressing favorably under the pastorate of Rev. J. L. Sutton. Especially is the attendance upon public worship gratifying and encouraging. It has been remarkably good all the summer in spite of the heat.

We acknowledge the reception of a copy of The Second Methodist News, a small weekly published in the interest of the Second Methodist Church of Memphis, of which the Rev. R. A. Clark is the popular pastor. It contained an entertaining account of Brother Clark's recent visit to Chicago, Toronto, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, and other cities.

Rev. Thomas Chisholm, who is Brother Joyner's assistant at St. Mark's Hall, will have charge of the morning services at the Epworth Church, this city, until Conference. Mr. Chisholm is an Englishman, who came to Louisiana a few months ago, and who has been recommended by the Baton Rouge District Conference for admission on trial into the traveling connection.

Rev. A. G. Shankle, pastor of the Rayne Memorial Church of this city, was called to Commerce, Ga., the latter part of last week by the critical illness of his sister, Mrs. W. B. Hardman, who died last Saturday morning a few hours after he reached her bedside. Brother Shankle will have the sympathy and prayers of his many friends in Louisiana and elsewhere in his sore hereavement.

Writing from Sicily Island on the 11th inst., Rev. G. D. Purcell instructs us to send his Advocate to that place instead of Harrisonburg as heretofore. He adds: "My wife has been elected principal of the Florence school. I had a good day yesterday. I preached Saturday night and three times on the Sabbath. It was also my pleasure to baptize six infants and to receive two persons into the Church."

Dr. S. H. Werlein is back from his trip to Panama and was in his pulpit at First Church last Sunday, both in the morning and evening. While gone, he spent ten days on the sea and seven on shore. He made an interesting journey across the isthmus, and inspected the near-by banana plantations. He thinks that the Panama Canal is one of the world's wonders and that it is oppressive in its greatness.

Mrs. E. A. Neblett, of Eupora, Miss., desires us to announce that the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the Winona District will hold a joint meeting at Moorhead, October 18-20. The occasion, we dare say, will prove to be one of much interest. We are grateful to Sister Neblett for an invitation to be present, which, if circumstances allowed, we should be most happy to accept.

That noble veteran of the North Mississippi Conference, Dr. T. C. Wier, in a recent communication writes as follows: "Including the third Sunday in July and through August, I have been itinerating somewhat, preaching once or twice on Sundays and a number of times in the week. In some instances, my work was filling vacant pulpits; in others, I was helping the brethren in meetings. I find preaching a good tonic for both soul and body."

We call special attention to the communication entitled, "An October Opportunity," from the pen of Dr. Bulla, which appears in this issue of the Advocate. We print this article at the request of Mr. John R. Pepper, of Memphis, than whom Southern Methodism has no choicer layman. Let every Sunday school in Louisiana and Mississippi take a collection for the Model Sunday School Building on Rally Day, Sunday, October 15, as requested by our leaders.

The Carrollton Conservative (Mississippi) states that Rev. J. W. Dorman, of Ittabena, recently assisted Rev. S. M. Thames in a successful meeting at Valley Hill, in Carroll County. That journal also says that Brother Dorman preached at the Presbyterian Church in Carrollton on Wednesday evening of last week to a large and delighted audience. Brother Dorman is one of the strong men of his Conference, and may always be counted upon to give his hearers a helpful message.

Rev. J. E. Brasher, of Goodwater, Miss., has been abundant in labors during the past few weeks. He has recently aided in services at DeSoto, Hale, Goodwater, Threadgill, and State Line, all of which towns are in Mississippi. At present he is laboring in Georgia, but will go to Elton, Ala., to assist Rev. A. O. Spivey in a meeting at an early date, after which he will return to Mississippi to open up at Many about October 7. He reports that the Lord is graciously blessing him in his labors.

Rev. M. L. White, our pastor at Prentiss, Miss., accompanied by his son, Mr. H. O. White, a prominent young attorney at Hattiesburg, called at our office Tuesday of this week. The Advocate has no better friend than Brother White, and his visit was much appreciated. He came to the city to have an operation performed on his eye and will be at the Touro Infirmary about ten days. We hope that complete relief will be given this faithful worker, and that he will soon be able to resume his "loved employ."

Mrs. Laura L. Delap, of Natchez, Miss., informs us of the death of her sister, Miss Fanny J. Cozzens, who was well and favorably known to many of the older preachers of the Mississippi Conference and their families. The decease of this elect lady, which was due to heart failure, took place at her home in Natchez on August 31, in the seventy-eighth year of her age. We extend sympathy to the sorrowing relatives and friends, and pray that divine grace may be vouchsafed to comfort and sustain them.

The opening sermon of Whitworth College was preached in Reuck's Opera House at Brookhaven last Sunday morning at 11 o'clock by Dr. John E. Purser, a Baptist minister from Atlanta, Ga. The music was furnished by a choir composed of young ladies in attendance upon the college, and a most impressive solo was sung by one of the teachers of voice in the musical department of the institution. President I. W. Cooper and Rev. J. M. Wyatt, pastor of the local Methodist Church, were seated on the platform with Dr. Purser.

Rev. J. F. Foster, our pastor at De Ridder, La., was in the city last Friday and paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. He had been spending some days on the Mississippi coast, near Biloxi, and looked to be in the pink of condition physically. Brother Foster stated that owing to the low price of lumber and labor troubles a number of the largest lumber mills in his section of the State have closed down. Should this situation be prolonged, it is liable to have a most injurious effect upon our church work in some localities.

From the Lincoln County Times of September 14 (published at Brookhaven, Miss.), we take the following: "The protracted meeting at the Methodist Church closed last night. Rev. C. N. Guice, of Summit, has been with Mr. Wyatt for ten days of earnest work, which has resulted in great good to the church and to the community, regardless of denominational lines. Mr. Guice has an especially happy faculty in his work with the children. His beautiful voice and his deep consecration have left an impress for better living on all who heard him."

We clip the following personal from the Central Methodist Advocate of Sept. 14: "Rev. J. W. Herring, for a number of years a member of the Western Virginia Conference, taking his first work in that Conference, thoroughly identifying himself with its every interest and occupying some of its most responsible positions before his transfer, is now stationed at Corinth, Miss., where he is serving a large and influential church. He has recently been on a visit to a number of points in West Virginia and Kentucky. He represents the Methodism of the South and West as a great force."

Mr. Thomas V. Ellzey, the General Secretary, has sent out letters announcing the semi-annual meeting of the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Sunday School Association, which is to be held at the headquarters of the organization in this city on October 13. There are many matters of importance to be considered, and a full attendance of the members of the Committee is urged. We are pleased to be informed that the work of this Association continues to prosper and grow under the direction of Mr. Ellzey, who is untiring in his efforts to strengthen and extend it.

Rev. W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District, writes as follows: "You may say in the Advocate that it has been decided not to open the Seashore Training School at the Camp Ground this year. It has been the intention of the Board of Trustees to have the school commence operation this fall, but the buildings could not be completed in time. It is their purpose to have everything in readiness by September, 1912, when the first session will begin. The main building, which will be a very suitable one, is nearing completion, and the other buildings will be constructed during the year."

Mrs. John T. Sawyer, of this city, has favored the Advocate office with a picture of the memorable General Conference of 1858, which assembled in Nashville, Tenn. It is suitably framed and is in a good state of preservation. We heartily thank this elect lady for her valuable gift, which we shall accord an honored place on our walls, which are adorned with portraits of Bishops Keener, Parker, and Galloway. We ought also to have a picture of Bishop McTyeire, who at one time was editor of the Advocate, and we hope that we may at no distant day.

A dispatch to the Times-Democrat from Moss Point, Miss., states that after the prayer meeting at the Methodist Church on Wednesday evening, Sept. 13, a church conference was held, which showed the charge to be in an excellent financial condition. It was decided to appoint two committees on church attendance—one composed of women and the other of men. The duties of these committees is to visit the membership and urge a more regular attendance upon public worship. By request the pastor, Rev. Robert Selby, preached a special sermon last Sunday morning to the young people who were on the eve of leaving home for college.

A note from Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Jackson District, informs us that Rev. J. W. Ward, the pastor at Madison Station, Miss., has been transferred to the North Mississippi Conference and stationed at Friar's Point. Brother Ward is a most acceptable preacher and worker, and his people have given him up with great reluctance. Rev. W. B. Hogg, who has been attending Vanderbilt University and serving the Ashland City Circuit in the Tennessee Conference, will have charge of the work at Madison Station until December. Brother Hogg finished his course at the University last June, and will continue in the active service from now on, transferring to the Mississippi Conference this fall, if he has not already done so.

While spending a night at the hospitable home of Mr. R. T. Jones in the growing city of Greenwood, Miss., last week, it was our pleasure to have a call from our efficient pastor at that place, the Rev. H. S. Spragins. Brother Spragins is in his third year in this excellent charge, and the people are exceedingly anxious that he shall be returned to round out his quadrennium. Evidently the Methodists of Greenwood know a good thing when they have it. We trust that the powers that be will see fit to accede to their request and leave their pastor undisturbed until the time limit makes a change inevitable. We think it is wise administration to let a minister serve four years, if agreeable both to him and the people, unless there is a demand for his services elsewhere that is so imperative that it cannot be disregarded.

THANKS TO THE BRETHREN.

Dear Brother Meek: I have received so many letters of sympathy on account of recent bereavement that I have been unable to send a reply to each friend. I take this method of expressing thanks to one and all. The words of sympathy have been very precious.

With prayers and best wishes, I am fraternally,

JNO. W. BOSWELL.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 16, 1911.

We wish to make some mark in life. We turn to the distant and far away, we believe in the things that lie like mountain peaks under the horizon, when, indeed, the things for us, the things to make our marks upon, the things to do with, to grow by, to let us into heaven, are little ones lying just here about our daily path, the overlooked things next to us.—J. F. W. Ware.

On Monday, Aug. 8, 1911, the death angel came to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Conly and carried away little JESSIE MAE. She was born on April 30, 1911. For three months she had brightened the home of her parents. A large number of relatives had learned to love her. God sent this little messenger down from heaven to bless and brighten an earthly home. When her mission was finished, he called her back to fill her place in the choir of heaven. There she will live throughout eternity, happy with the loving Savior who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not." Grieve not for her, dear loved ones; but look up and follow the little beckoning hands that call you on to glory and to God. She has gone, but her influence will live forever to bless her young father and mother. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Dan Scarborough. A host of friends and relatives listened to the beautiful lesson and tribute he brought. After the service her little body was laid to rest in the cemetery in Magnolia, Miss. May God's richest blessings rest on the bereaved ones!

MARY EULICE HOWARD.

W. TILLY ROOT was born in Vermillion parish, La., at Perry, Nov. 29th, 1889, and died in Lake Charles, La., at St. Patrick's Sanitarium following an operation for appendicitis Aug. 15th 1911. He moved with his parents to Dutch Cove, Calcasieu parish, at the age of six. From thence to Sulphur, La., in 1903, where he spent the remaining portion of his short life. In infancy his parents dedicated him to the Lord in baptism, and on Sept. 7th, 1902, just before he closed his thirteenth year, he joined the Methodist Church at Dutch Cove under the pastorate of the now ascended R. C. Grace, and died an acceptable member of our Church at Sulphur, La. In all his ways he acknowledged the dominion of the Lord to whom he had been dedicated. All those enrichments of life that come through Christian parentage and training were his, and surely, if God had not called him so soon, the Church and community would have reaped largely from his splendid life. Socially, he was a great favorite—truthful, honest and fair. He was popular everywhere and with everybody. He had a fine vein of quiet humor which he often injected into his conversation. And when this was used in argument sometimes it caused his opponent to stop in the midst of discussion, as though speechless. In appearance, he was tall and dignified. Though slightly stooped, he was yet graceful in all his movements. His devotion and respect to his parents and brothers and sisters were beautiful. He was taken ill Friday morning, Aug. 11th, with well defined pains in the region of the appendix, and the battle for life was immediately begun. All was done that fond parents, kind friends and money could do, but alas, we lost in the struggle, and he died Tuesday, Aug. 15th, at 9:30 p.m., after a manly and heroic fight. His body was brought back to Sulphur, where religious services were held, after which, assisted by the Woodmen of the World and the Sulphur Squad of Company K (both of which he was a member), his body was conveyed to Dutch Cove Cemetery for interment.

His pastor and friend,

J. D. NESOM.

Brother GEORGE H. REID, of Silver City, was stricken with paralysis about Aug. 1. He recovered from this stroke after a few weeks sufficiently to travel, and he and his wife went to Brown's Wells, where for a few days he seemed to improve. The night preceding his decease, he suffered another stroke of paralysis, from which he did not rally. At the time of his death his brother, W. H. Reid, was with him and he had all the assistance needed. The remains were brought back to Silver City for interment, and the funeral service was held at the Methodist Church. Brother Reid leaves quite a number of relatives and a host of friends to mourn their loss. He was a devoted husband and a kind hearted neighbor. We pray God's blessings upon his wife in her loneliness.

Before we were through with the burial of Brother Reid, there came the sad news of the death of Mrs. W. J. SMITH, of Silver City, who had been sick for several weeks. She was thought to be dangerously ill, but the end came sooner than we expected. She suffered long, yet patiently. She was a member of the M. E. Church, South. Her home was the home of the preacher, and many a tired itinerant found a resting place under her shelter. She was devoted to her family—she was a loyal friend and never faltered in her devotion to her family and friends, and was supremely happy when she was surrounded by those she loved. She leaves a husband, several children, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. We extend to the bereaved of these two families our sympathy and pray God's blessings upon them in this time of sadness. God's ways are past finding out.

Their true friend and brother,

J. H. FOREMAN.

WOMAN PAST HELP.

Chandler, Okla.—In a letter from this place, Mrs. Elia Flowers says, "I hardly know how to thank you for the good that Cardui has done me. Before I tried Cardui, I thought I was past help, but after taking it, I was relieved at once, and gained at least 10 pounds. Everybody says I look so much better. I am still improving greatly." Many women are completely worn-out and discouraged, on account of womanly weakness. Are you? Have you not tried Cardui? It only needs a few doses to convince you that Cardui is just what you need. Try it to-day. It will cure your pains.

RHEUMATISM
A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as those who have it know, for over three years, and tried almost everything. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial, I will send it free. Address

Tidings From the Field

Belle Fontaine, Miss.:

We have just closed a very successful meeting at Bell Fontaine. The preaching was done by Rev. J. H. Bass, who is a clear and forceful expositor of the Scriptures. The house was filled at every service; many were awakened to a sense of their duty, and several were added to the Church. I feel confident that the seed sown by Brother Bass will bring forth fruit for many days to come. We have one new church going up, which we expect to finish by Conference.—C. A. Northington, P. C.

Harrisville, Miss.:

We have had good revival meetings on the Harrisville charge. I was assisted by Brother J. S. Purcell, W. N. Thomas, J. O. Ware, J. E. Williams and B. E. Meigs. These brethren did good work. They are fine help in a meeting, and my people were delighted with their preaching. This is my third year on this charge, and I think the spiritual condition is better than it has been since my connection with it. Up to the present I have received 30 members, baptized five infants, and some improvements have been made on the parsonage.—R. T. Nolen, P. C.

Duck Hill, Miss.:

We closed our meeting at Duck Hill last night. Brother O. L. Savage did the preaching for us. He proved himself to be an earnest and good servant of God. He won a place in the hearts of our people here by his affectionate work with the children and his gospel preaching to the large crowds which flocked to hear him. His sermon last night, we can truly say, was a masterpiece, his theme being, "The Supremacy of Christ." The Duck Hill charge is doing moderately well, I think. We have built a church and covered another this year. Children's Day has been observed in every church, and each of them has had a good revival; a live Sunday school in each congregation; an Epworth League in one of them. We had at our last quarterly conference 400 people at both the Saturday and Sunday services. We ask the prayers of the church that greater things may yet be done.—J. D. Wroten, P. C.

Washington, Miss.:

We are in the midst of a protracted meeting here at historic old Washington, and are praying that it may be a revival meeting. Brother W. W. Simmons, of Gloster, is with us. We had a good day yesterday. We thought we had out as many as could be induced to come on Children's Day, but on yesterday our expections were exceeded. The preacher profoundly impressed the large audience. Our church needs a season of refreshing, and I believe that we are going to have it. I have lately been in a meeting with Brother W. H. Young at McNair and Knoxville. We were obilged to close at the latter place on account of the large amount of sickness prevalent in the community, but at the former we had a helpful meeting with several additions to our church and two to the Baptist Church. We had one accession at Knoxville.—L. E. Wicht.

Sept. 11, 1911.

DeSoto, Miss.:

Things are going on well on the DeSoto charge. I have just finished my revival work for this season. Rev. John Paul, of Poplar Springs, Meridian, assisted me at DeSoto. Rev. W. W. Hopper, of Meridian, was with me at Hopewell, Coopers Chapel and Salem; B. F. Crook, of Yazoo City, was with me at Manassas, and our junior preacher, J. E. Brasher, was with us in some of our meetings. I am glad to say that these men of God wrought well with my people. Their preaching was to the point and with power. Eternity only can reveal the good that was accomplished in these meetings. May God's richest blessings rest upon these faithful men as they go about doing good. I have had 13 accessions to the church, and have baptized 17 infants on my charge this year; we are gaining ground little by little. Rev. W. H. Lewis, our popular presiding elder, was with us on the 9th and 10th insts., when he held our third quarterly conference for the DeSoto charge at Hopewell. He preached us three able sermons while here. We are always glad to have him come. The people on the DeSoto charge are cheerful, and I am happy.—Hilary Westbrook, Pastor.

Baker, La.:

Dear Dr. Meek: I held my meeting at Deerford, embracing the second Sunday in August. Rev. S. L. Riggs did the preaching, and he did it well. He uncovered sin in all of its forms and then pointed men and women to Jesus Christ. The church was somewhat revived, and if the meeting could have continued at least four or five days longer, the results would have been more satisfactory. The meeting at Blackwater followed, continuing from the third Sunday until Friday night following, when we had to close on account of my meeting at Baker. Rev. H. B. Perritt did the preaching at Blackwater from Monday until the close. The people enjoyed his preaching, and while there were no additions to the church, I feel that much good was accomplished. Like the Deerford meeting, we needed more time. Brother Perritt did good work. Beginning at Baker the fourth Sunday, Rev. A. J. Gearheard held the attention of the people with his beautiful sermons until Friday night when the meeting closed, and while there were no additions, the congregations were large and appreciative, and I feel that great good was accompliished inside of the church. From Baker I opened fire at Bethel the first Sunday in September and held the fort until Monday night, when Rev. Wilson Brown appeared upon the scene of battle and opened fire with the gospel gun, which he continued to use until Friday night, when the meeting closed. There were six additions on profession of faith. The church was somewhat revived, and the people in general awakened. Brother Brown did good work and preached to the delight of all. The foregoing is a report of my four meetings. I want also to say that I assisted Brother Robert Fulton at Friendship Church the last days of July. We had a fine meeting and I had the pleasure of meeting with many of my old friends. God bless them and theirs!—S. D. Howard.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Recently the writer took part in an all-day Sunday school rally at Mitchell, on the Pelican charge. In spite of the busy cotton-picking season, the workers, with their friends, gathered for an all-day institute and rally, and gave their guest of honor a most patient hearing and were responsive to every suggestion made. The pastor, Rev. S. S. Holladay, took the lead in every effort for an aggressive forward movement. Suggestions and plans were made looking to a rally day, at which time an effort will be made toward grading the school and introducing the graded literature, organizing a young people's and an adult Bible class, beginning a cradle roll and home department and possibly a teacher training class, and supplying the school with new song books.

Convinced from every psychological and pedagogical fact that the Sunday school pupils should have lessons adapted to their several needs at each stage of life's development, the International Sunday School Association brought out the graded course of lessons in 1908 and have already tested their worth, and it will only be a matter of time, doubtless, when they will supplant the old uniform lessons that compel the child to study the same lesson as the adult. Grading the school is one thing, and using the graded literature is another, though they both should go hand in hand; and as October is the time the graded lessons begin, now is the time to send to the Publishing House for samples and instruction, grade the school and introduce the new lessons.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

We are gratified to have a letter from Bay St. Louis stating that Children's Day was pleasantly and profitably observed by that flourishing school. Bay St. Louis, with a membership of less than 150, has two Sunday schools which run "all the year round," with an enrollment of 120.

The International Sunday School Association has proposed as a goal for 1911-1914 the following:

One million yearly increase in Sunday school membership.

One million conversions in the Sunday school per year for the next three years.

Three hundred thousand enrolled in teachers' training courses.

Three thousand three hundred and thirty-three mission Sunday schools per year organized.

What will be required to accomplish this?

Every sixteen members now in Sunday school bringing ONE scholar per year to Sunday school.

Every sixteen officers and teachers combining to pray for the conversion of ONE scholar per year.

Isn't this reasonable?

So far as membership is concerned, the Mississippi Conference did that well last year. But cannot we do better? What about the teacher training course, and especially the conversions and mission work?

By the time this paper reaches the pastors and Sunday school superintendents, all will have received blank orders for Rally Day programs. Will each one see that the day is observed, the collection taken as requested, and the money forwarded promptly? We have asked that it be sent to our treasurer only that we may have in hand early the amount raised by the Sunday schools; but if the pastors prefer sending it direct to Nashville, it is their privilege. Only observe the day.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

A fine mixed Adult Bible Class has been organized at Hinds Chapel, with Mrs. E. G. Pollard as teacher and Mr. Russell Womack, president. Their class motto is, "Search daily the Scriptures."

The Sunday school at Olive Branch has a good crowd of women and children at work. Mr. Jones, as superintendent, has done a great work and Mrs. Jones' class of boys and girls is phenomenal, in that nearly every one of them reads the Bible every day. They have good lesons, and are unusually regular in attendance.

* * *

Mr. Milton Smith, of Moorhead, Miss., has built three delightfully commodious and attractive Sunday school rooms to the church in his home town, and his brother, Mr. Alfred Smith, had them well painted and prepared for happy and successful Sunday school work. These busy business men are the very life of the work in their town and give it an impetus not procurable in any other way.

Hernando has a fine young people's society, systematically studying the Bible, thus training teachers and giving youthful minds a taste for the best literature of all the ages. Brother and Mrs. Wendel personally teach this class.

Mrs. Randolph has a mixed class at Como, whose program rings a true note of progress. They mean to double their membership in the immediate future, and have a great program ahead of them. The class is called "The Helpers," and its motto is, "Live and help live." They have 27 now enrolled. On Sept. 3, there were 116 present in the entire Sunday school, against 69 of the same date last year. The school is very crowded, and new and better quarters will soon have to be provided.

* * *

Mrs. Phil Pointer, Como, has had her class of boys and girls for eighteen years, and from under her skilled and loving hands will come men and women polished and fit for the Master's use. Mrs. Bob Short's class of girls in the same school has won the banner for attendance, lessons and collections, her enthusiastic little girls having worked well these summer days to secure the coveted award.

SOME RALLY DAY SUGGESTIONS.

Some such arrangement as the following might be adopted in preparing for Rally Day. Let the superintendent call the pastor and teachers together in council and arrange every detail of the program carefully. Then secure from the Publishing House a good supply of attractive Rally Day cards and buttons, and send the cards to every member of every department of the Sunday school, as invitations, a week in advance; and have the buttons worn on Raily Day. Let the printed program sent out by the Publishing House be used by the children at 10 o'clock, at the conclusion of which have all promotions made and honors awarded, using the regular Sunday school diplomas, which are beautiful and not expensive. Then re-grade the school, start the new departments and inaugurate any forward movement, taking the collection for the model Sunday school building at the Southern Methodist Assembly at Waynesville, N. C.

At 11 o'clock, instead of the pastor's sermon, let addresses be made by local speakers on some such themes as the following, thus letting the church and the world know what you propose doing, and the co-operation, you expect from them:

(1) The Sunday School's Place in Moral and Civil Life.

(2) The Sunday School's Place in the Life and Growth of the Church.

(3) The Essential Quaiities that the Sunday School Must Possess in fulfilling Its Highest Mission as a Religious Educational Institution.

(4) The Why, the What, and the How of the Organized Bible Ciass and the Adult's Place in the Sunday School.

(5) The Officers' and Teachers' Part in Successful Sunday School Work, and the Church's Provision for Their Equipment in the Teacher Training Ciass.

(6) The Church Ministering to the Needs and Enlisting the Co-operation of the Home in the Cradle Roll and Home Departments.

(7) Some Things We Can and Ought to Do the Coming Year.

(8) Brief talks might be made on Sunday school music, the Sunday school library, enlisting new scholars, etc.

At night have an invited speaker, if possible, discuss "The Sunday School Filling Its Highest Mission to the Individual, the Church and the State," or some such theme, or have local addresses again. Any near-by successful Sunday school worker will be glad to be with you as a guest of honor.

Pian, advertise, pray, rally, and move forward.

P. O. LOWREY.

IF I WERE A BOY AGAIN.

In some papers of the late Doctor Harper of the University of Chicago was found a memorandum which read like this:

"If I were a boy again, I would read every book that I could reach. I would strive to find out from good books how good men lived.

"If I were a boy again, I would cultivate new patience with the faults of others, and study my own with greater care. I would strive for humility.

"If I were a boy again, I would more and more cultivate the company of those older, whose graces of person and mind would help me on in my own work. I would always seek good company.

"If I were a boy again, I would study the Bible even more than I did. I would make it a mental companion. The Bible is a necessity for every boy.

"If I were a boy again, I would study the life and character of our Savior persistently, that I might become more and more like unto him."
—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

THE EXEMPLARY LIFE.

(I. Tim. 4:12; Psa. 15).

CONCERNING THE SCRIPTURE.—If there is one thing that the world expects of a Christian it is that he shall lead an exemplary life. Those who are not followers of the lowly Nazarene have, notwithstanding their waywardness, a very definite idea of what it is to be a Christian.

I. Tim. 4:12. Timothy was a young man at the time when the apostle wrote these words to him. Yet Paul tells him that he was not to let any man despise his youth. Of course such words would be useless unless the life that was lived was of such a nature as to make it impossible for anyone to do so. One can not give an order to folks telling them that they are not to despise us. One must live in such a way as to win respect. The youthful Timothy was to be an example to believers. It is true he was a minister of the gospel; but what of that? Are simply clergymen to live properly? Not at all. It is a duty that devolves upon every follower of Jesus Christ. In word and in spirit, in faith and in purity—in all things are we to be different from the world at large; in all these things we are to be examples.

Psa. 15. Leaving the apostles, we are taken back to the days of David, the sweet singer of Israel. Explicit is the fifteenth Psalm. Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? Why, those who walk uprightly. They are the ones who are to be recognized as his followers. Then there is a description of what it is to walk uprightly. It means no backbiting and no doing evil to a neighbor; it means refraining from taking advantage of folks; it means living a life that is above reproach—an example in all things to those with whom one comes in contact.

WHAT THE LESSON MEANS TO US.—There is nothing that hurts Christianity more than faithless followers of Christ. When people are able to point to those who are dishonest or who are mean in any way, and say, "Those are members of the Church," then there is that which hinders the progress of Christianity. Of course we all know that there is much less of failure on the part of Christians than those of the world would have us believe. Yet there are too many altogether whose faith is at variance with their lives. And this would be true if there were only one delinquent. And there are more than that.

A Christian is to lead an exemplary life. Let it be understood that the eyes of the world are upon him. They are looking at him all the time, and they are judging of his religion by that which he does. And let it be said that they have a right to do so, for it is not said that we can judge a tree by the fruit that it produces? There is no use in our trying to excuse ourselves; we can not do it.

Now, an exemplary life does not mean that we believe that we are leading perfect lives. It is impossible for us to do that while we are in the flesh. Always will we come short of the glory of God; always will we fall of the very best that there is in us; and yet when all of that has been acknowledged it is still true that we can live in such a way as to bring no reproach upon the name of Christ.

Who shall dwell in the holy hill? The Psalmist answers, "He that walketh uprightly." How are we to walk uprightly? Well, there is to be no backbiting. See how that fits into the statement made by Paul to Timothy, when he says that he is to be an example to believers in his word. How mean a thing it is for one to indulge in backbiting—when some one else is not present, to tear that one's reputation, to say things behind his back that we would not say to his face.—Central Christian Advocate.

ORGANIZE A BIBLE STUDY CLASS.

Vacation is now over, and every live chapter should settle down to some definite plan for more aggressive work. The Bible is our best university; then why not organize a Bible study class in your chapter?

The following nine ways to study the Bible are suggested:

Regularly. As far as is possible, every day, and at the same time in each day.

Prayerfully. It is God's Word, and God is its best interpreter.

Sympathetically. The Bible is a closed book to the unfriendly reader. "Seeing, he does not understand."

Intelligently. Bring your knowledge of related subjects to bear. Do not confuse the Saul of the Old Testament with the Saul of the New, for example.

Systematically. Get the whole Book's teaching on the great doctrines and the great lives. To illustrate, the Bible is the best text-book on faith, sanctification, and the life of Christ.

Frankly. Let the Bible master your prejudices. Do not befog mind and soul by "private interpretations."

Believingly. It will "prove" itself, if you read it in good faith.

Obediently. Bible study without Bible living is a mockery. "Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

A NOBLE ACTION.

James Pettigrew was the smartest boy in our class. He was a praying boy, and we all liked him better for that. Willie Hunter was a real good fellow, too, and Willie and James used to run neck and neck for the prizes. Either the one or the other was always at the top of the class.

Examination day came around, and we were asked such a lot of puzzling questions that, one by one, we all dropped off, till just as we expected, the first prize lay between Jamie and Willie.

I shall never forget how astonished we were when question after question was answered by Willie, while Jamie was silent and Willie took the prize.

I went home with Jamie that afternoon, for our roads lay together; but, instead of being cast down at losing the prize, he seemed rather to be really glad. I couldn't understand it.

"Why, Jamie," I said, "you could have answered some of those questions; I know you could."

"Of course I could," he said, with a light laugh.

"Then why didn't you?" I asked.

He wouldn't answer for a while, but I kept pressing him, till at last he turned round with a strange, kind look in his bonnie brown eyes.

"Look here," he said, "how could I help it? There's poor Willie—his mother died last week, and if it hadn't been examination day, he wouldn't have been at school. Do you think I was going to be so mean as to take a prize from a fellow who had just lost his mother?"—Sunday School Advocate.

SOME REFLECTIONS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I see in the Advocate of August 30 an article over the name of George Jackson—a venerable Christian gentleman and faithful minister of the gospel.

From the tenor of his writing he is as zealous for the prosperity of Zion and the upbuilding of the church now as he was thirty-seven years ago. In 1874 he was the pastor on the Winnsboro Circuit. I have not met him since he left here then. During that year I attended his meetings and preached with him and for him.

With fondness and delight I look back over those days and call to mind the pleasant associations with the brethren, many of whom have crossed over the river, and I am left behind; and sometimes I wonder if there can be a recurrence of similar associations.

In my imagination I could see Brother Jackson when reading his account of the Mansfield Female College. I remember Brother Thweat when he was president of that institution of learning. I don't know whether he was the first president or not; but he was president of it in the early days of its existence. If I am not mistaken, it was established about the year 1855. But of this I am not certain.

On another page of the same paper, Brother Jackson tells of his age and bodily feebleness. It is not a surprising thing that he is tottering and halting in his movements. To carry the weight of eighty-seven years would be enough to make any of us physically tottering and halting; but his immaterial parts are as live, vigorous and active as ever. His faith is strong and reaches to that within the veil; and with joy he anticipates the day when he will lay off the armor of the soldier and have placed on his head the crown of righteousness, hold in his hands the palm of victory, and hear the voice sounding from the realm of glory, "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." A. W. MOORE.

Winnsboro, La.

REV. J. G. BABB.

Rev. Joseph G. Babb, son of Matthew J. and Sarah Jane Babb, and a brother of Rev. D. W. Babb, of the North Mississippi Conference, was born in Alcorn County, Miss., Dec. 10, 1849. While only a youth he professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South. He was licensed to preach in 1874 under the administration of Dr. J. D. Cameron as presiding elder. He was ordained deacon at Corinth, Miss., in 1882, by Bishop H. N. McTyeire, and was ordained elder by Bishop Robert K. Hargrove at West Point, Miss., in 1886. At old Farmington he was married to Miss Mattie Henson in December, 1870. Only eight months later she was taken away by death. In 1877 he was again married on Dec. 14 to Miss. Luvicia A. Cogdell. Of this union were born eleven children, the eldest and youngest dying in infancy; the others, five sons and four daughters, survive with their widowed mother and his three brothers and four sisters to mourn his going away, which occurred at his home near Corinth, Miss., Sunday, Sept. 8, 1911. Thus ends a most useful life which had been given to farming, teaching, and preaching. He was a quiet man, never presuming to put himself forward, but a well informed and able man, so that wherever he was called upon he rendered most efficient service. By his industry and intelligence he was able to acquire a good home and educate his children. It would be hard to find a home of more perfect order, refinement, and peace. His ministry was attractive because of its instructiveness. He took time to study the Greek language to prepare himself for good work. Internal cancer caused his last illness, which was long, and caused him much suffering, through all of which he displayed the greatest patience. His composure in contemplation of death was perfect. Talking to each member of his family, he gave assurance of the triumph of faith and fell on sleep in great peace. His pastor, Rev. R. A. Miller, was assisted by the writer in the funeral service in the presence of a large audience, after which his body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Box Chapel.

Mena, Ark.—"I find Cardui to be all you represent," writes Mrs. H. B. York, of this city. "I suffered from womanly ailments, for nearly two years, before I tried Cardui. I have been so relieved since taking it. I cannot say enough in its praise. It has done me a world of good, and I recommend Cardui to all women." Cardui is over 50 years old, and the demand is greater tod-ay than ever. Cardui is the standard, tonic medicine, for women of every age. Would you like to be well and strong? Then take Cardui. Its record shows that it will help you. Begin to-day. Why wait?

How to Get Rid of Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way and it Costs Nothing to Try.

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive, home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty six years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of these. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased mucous membranes and arrests the foul discharge, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not poison the system and ruin the stomach as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you by return mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal headaches, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet. Write him immediately.

OUR OWN CHURCH AND COUNTRY.

To love the home is a great virtue, and a traitor to his own country must remain always in dishonor. To love all mankind is also a Christian duty, but the individual untrue to his own home and to his own country is of necessity false to all homes and to all countries.

The question of church union and love for all churches is much discussed. The divinely given rule is to "love our neighbor as we love ourselves." Trueness to self, as well as trueness to a neighbor, is a most binding obligation. All this being recognized as harmonizing with Bible teaching and proper ideas of life and duty, it becomes to be binding upon us to love our own church and our own country as a condition of divine approval, and this is absolutely essential to the best type of individual.

"No North and no South, no East and no West," is counted by some as a thing to be desired, and in the sense of being true to our nation as a whole, such is to be desired. But the individual who makes Texas his home and proposes at the same time to hate Texas, would be incapacitated to love his entire country in the true sense. The American who is untrue to the flag of his own country would acquit himself poorly as a citizen of England. To love God's Church in the real sense, we must also love intensely our own department of that Church. Party spirit in the extreme sense is hurtful, but very much more hurtful is a spirit which allies with nothing, and which is at the peril of being so broad as to be in the "broad way" that leads unto eternal death. The man who can be counted as a factor in his own special department is the individual who can contribute most largely to the general good. Special love for a given Church or given section of America is not a crime in the estimation of enlightened people.

Individual merit, and even the merit of a great Church, may not be measured by the points of the compass. The Savior many times was at a disadvantage because it was said, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" The second greatest body of Methodists in the world is misunderstood by some, and even disliked, because located chiefly in the southern half of the great American country. The same is true in some sense of the Methodist Episcopal Church because located chiefly in the northern section of America. But each "in his own corner" may shine for God, going at the same time to the utmost into the "regions beyond." The great Author of all the Churches measures by a bigger standard than the mere question of which location. The Gentile man enjoyed a "ration" of pork and lived in Samaria. The Jew scorned him because of his country and was strict in the use of meats. St. Paul said to each alike, "whether we live, we live unto the Lord, and whether we live therefore or die, we are the Lord's." True and worthy people are great, independent of the mere accidents of location. A good Christian and an honored citizen in the estimation of God and right-thinking people stands just as high at one extreme of the poles as at the other, and in no sense is he discounted because of fidelity to native ties.

Our love for all the churches and the nations finds its strongest and most life-giving support in the fact of oneness to local attachments. "There is no respect of persons with God."

REGRET TO GIVE HIM UP.

Sad are the hearts of the Madison people over the removal of the beloved pastor, Rev. J. W. Ward, to the North Mississippi Conference. Some of them are as "Rachel weeping for her children and will not be comforted." As loyal Methodists they submit, but as personal friends their heart's cry is, that "the cup might pass." Last week, as we read the commendation of Dr. F. N. Parker by the people of Alexandria, we felt a deep sympathy for them in the loss of a man the description of whom corresponds so accurately with that of the man that has for nearly three years blessed Madison with his presence and teaching.

Members of every denomination feel that they have lost a pastor. Some of his closest friends are members of other denominations. We realize that our loss is some charge's gain, and that we are required to share our blessings—to "pass them on"—but we are brought into hearty sympathy with monopolists when we are called to part with him. It is evident that he is well known by some one in the North Mississippi Conference, for this is not the first time he has been invited to join them.

His ability as a preacher and his exemplary life as a man render him worthy of anything they may give him. While our hearts ache at the parting, we bid him "godspeed" as he goes to his new field.

Garden City, Kas.—In a letter from Mrs. James Hammer, of this city, she says, "I firmly believe that I would not be alive to-day, if it were not for Cardui. I had been a sufferer from womanly troubles all my life, until I found that great remedy. I feel that I can't praise it too highly." Are you a woman suffering from some of the troubles to which a woman is peculiarly liable? If so, why not try Cardui, the woman's tonic? You can rely on Cardui. It is purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and acts gently but surely, without bad after effects. 'Twill help you. Ask your druggist.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE GREAT.

We cannot look, however imperfectly, upon a great man without gaining something by him. He is the living life-fountain, which it is good and pleasant to be near; the light which enlightens, which has enlightened the darkness of the world; and this not as a kindling lamp only, but rather as a natural luminary, shining by the gift of heaven; a flowing light-fountain, as I say, of native original insight, of manhood and heroic nobleness, in whose radiance all souls feel that it is well with them.—Carlyle.

The strongest, truest, and boldest utterances on social and moral problems go to make up

"A Man Wanted"

"I have read it with pleasure, and feel that it should do good."—Rev. Jno. F. Foster, De Ridder, La.

"No man can read this sermon without being aroused to earnest thought."—Rev. W. L. Doss, Rayne, La.

"Any pastor is fortunate to have this sermon preached or circulated among the men of his congregation."—Rev. T. J. O'Neil, Newton, Miss.

"I would be glad if every young man in the land could hear this address."—Bishop W. B. Murrah.

"A MAN WANTED is a strong sermon by Rev. W. G. Harbin. Price, 15c postpaid. C. O. Chalmers, publisher, 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

Unsolicited Praise

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

"I have read and thoroughly enjoyed MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE. A long and tedious railway journey was made pleasant because I had this book with me. I have re-read it since that time, and have gained new inspiration from it. The chapter on the Spirit of Prayer I found especially helpful. It is such a readable, understandable, Spirit-filled book."—Reader in Carthage, Texas.

A TOUCHING TESTIMONIAL is this from St. Alham, West Virginia: "I have read and re-read the book, and then I sent it to my cousin who is an invalid. He had his back broken in a coal mine and has not left his room for ten years. He was delighted."

MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE, by Walter G. Harbin. Cloth and gold, 50c., postpaid. Order from C. O. Chalmers, publisher, 512 Camp St., N. O., La.

AL-E-THE-IA.

"One of the most terrific arraignments of the whisky traffic we have ever seen is contained in the little book under the title which heads this article, which is from the strong pen of Mrs. Martha Carolyne Keller Miller, and is published by the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The scene is laid in the extreme South and the story from preface to finish moves with a momentum and moral force which is wonderful."

The above lines are copied from an editorial in the St. Louis Christian Advocate. The book can be had from the N. O. Christian Advocate, or from Mrs. C. C. Miller, of Hammond, La. Price, 25 cts., postpaid.

BOGALUSA, LA.

It was my lot to spend Sunday, Sept. 17, in Bogalusa, in answer to the pastor's request, he being engaged in a revival meeting at the Talisheek Campground. I enjoyed preaching to the two attentive congregations at 11 a. m., and night. I found everything in good shape on Brother Alford's important charge, and that he is held in high esteem and love by his people. The large and splendid choir, under the skillful leadership of Brother Talley, handled the musical part of the services with success. The Sunday school is doing well, and the Woman's Missionary Society and Epworth League are actively engaged in the work. I was pleased to be with the League at their meeting just before the night service and delighted to note the deep interest taken by the young people in their special field of labor for the Master. The efficient officers of this young and growing League are as follows:

At 4 p. m., I attended the Y. M. C. A. meeting in their model building, and a goodly number of ladies and gentlemen were present. The meeting was ably led by a young Baptist brother and a number took part in the service. Each of our towns should have a live Y. M. C. A., for, properly directed, such an organization can do a vast amount of good to the young men of the community. The large-hearted founder of Bogalusa gave $50,000 which was put into a building that is perfectly adapted to the uses of such an organization.

JOHN T. SAWYER.

LISTENING TO GOD.

A friend of mine told me that he called one day upon a brother clergyman who had been ill in bed for six months. He said to this man: "I suspect that God Almighty had a good many things to say to you, but you were too busy to listen, and so he had to put you on your back, that you might be able to give him time."

When he was going out the thought struck him: "I, too, am a busy man, and God Almighty may have to put me on my back, that he may tell me all he wishes."

So he resolved that each night he would sit quietly in his study, not reading, not writing, but opening his heart, that God's Spirit might impress upon him what he designed to teach, and criticise the life of the previous day.—Rev. F. B. Meyer, D.D

Tell Us

No Matter where you are, whether you are a man or a woman, twenty years old or seventy, living in town or in the country, all you need do is to tell us that you want it and it will be sent right out to you. You don't need to write a long letter, don't need to fill out any tiresome blanks, don't need to give any references or send any money or stamps. Simply tell us to send it. It makes no difference what your trouble is, whether you are sick in bed or just not feeling right—we don't ask your trouble and you need not write a word about it. All you need do is to tell us your name and address and we will send it to you, without a penny from you. This is how we are offering Bodi-Tone to every reader of this paper who is ailing or in poor health, this is how over a quarter-million sick people have already tried it. We are glad to send it to you, glad to give you a chance to try it, to learn what a great medicine we have made, to learn how chronic diseases can be cured with the right kind of medicine, containing the right ingredients. If it benefits you as it has benefited thousands, pay us a dollar for it. If you are not satisfied, don't pay a cent. We leave it all to you. We won't ask for pay afterwards or dun you. We know you will gladly pay for real benefit, for real health, real vigor, strength and comfort.

Bodi-Tone does just what its name means—cures disease by toning all the body. Bodi-Tone is a small, round, compressed tablet that is taken three times every day. Each box contains seventy-five tablets, enough for twenty-five days' use, and we send you the full box without a penny in advance, so you can try it and learn what it is, so you can learn how it cures stubborn diseases by helping nature to tone every organ and part of the body. Bodi-Tone is not a patent medicine, for its ingredients are not a secret. It contains Iron Phosphate, Gentian, Lithia, Chinese Rhubarb, Peruvian Bark, Nux Vomica, Oregon Grape Root, Cascara, Capsicum, Sarsaparilla and Golden Seal. Such ingredients guarantee its merit and explain why it cures. Bodi-Tone contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs, nothing your family doctor won't say is a good thing. It does not excite the body with alcohol, but it tones the body and cures it disorders with the remedies nature intended to tone and cure the body. Thus, Iron gives life and energy to the Blood, Sarsaparilla drives out its impurities, Phosphate and Nux Vomica create new nerve energy and force, Lithia aids in the Kidneys, Gentian does invaluable work for the Stomach and Digestive forces, Chinese Rhubarb and Oregon Grape Root promote vigorous Liver activity, Peruvian Bark raises the tone of the entire System, Golden Seal soothes the inflamed membrane and checks Catarrhal discharges, Cascara gives the Bowels new life in a natural way, and Capsicum makes all more valuable by bettering their quick absorption into the blood. A remarkable combination that does wonderful work for health.

You Need It If you are tired of continual dosing without results, you need Bodi-Tone right now. If your local doctor has done you no good, if the ordinary medicinal combinations be used have failed, give this modern scientific combination of special remedies a chance to show and prove what it can do for you. Its greatest triumphs have been among men and women with chronic ailments who had tried good physicians without lasting benefit, and for this reason all chronic sufferers are invited to try it at our risk. If there is anything wrong with your Kidneys, Bodi-Tone helps to restore tone to the Kidneys, helps to set them right. If there is anything wrong with your Stomach, Bodi-Tone helps to tone the Stomach, helps to set the wrong right. If there is anything wrong with your Nerves, your Blood, your Liver, your Bowels or your General System, the health-making ingredients in Bodi-Tone go right to work and keep on working day after day, producing results of the kind sufferers appreciate. If you have Rheumatism, Bodi-Tone helps to drive the Uric Acid from the system while it restores tone to the Kidneys, Stomach and Blood; thereby stopping Rheumatic poison and putting new activity into muscles, nerves and joints. Bodi-Tone should be used by all women suffering from Female Ailments, for its toning properties have been found especially valuable in such ailments.

Indigestion and Bowel Trouble

LONGTOWN, S. C.—Since using Bodi-Tone I am in better health than I had for ten years. I have taken medicine from five different doctors and I can't tell the different patent medicines for Constipation and Indigestion, but none of them gave me relief for more than a few days. I felt the effects of Bodi-Tone in three days, and the benefit stayed with me. My life had become a burden to me, but it has been a pleasure since I took the first box of Bodi-Tone. I wish all who suffer as I did would take one box, for they would then know the happiness it has been to me. My return to health has given me comfort in my old age. MRS. M. J. WHITE.

Dropsy, Liver and Kidney Troubles

ASBURY, N. J.—I was taken with Liver, Kidney and Bladder tronble in the fall of 1902, and the Kidney tronble caused Dropsy. I tried everything far and near, but nothing gave me more than temporary relief. I also took X-ray treatments for six months and was very much disappointed, as it was supposed to do wonders. Since I took the first box of Bodi-Tone I have felt better than from anything I have tried in these seven years. I have used three boxes, and it has made me an entirely different man. I am 65 years of age. HENRY C. MOYLE.

Had Rheumatism and Lumbago

GRAND LEDGE, MICH.—I have been afflicted over six years with Muscular Rheumatism in my arms. It finally settled in my back and the doctor called it Lumbago. Then a year ago my left knee swelled up so I could not get around and I suffered intense pains at times all winter. I could scarcely walk. I took patent medicines with no results. Then I sent for a trial box of Bodi-Tone. From that time on my improvement has been remarkable indeed, and I can now walk better than in years. MRS. TAYLOR HANCE.

We Take the Risk—You Cannot Lose

Bodi-Tone cures conditions which are totally unlike, all in the same way, for the body in health has but one way to act—it goes to all the body and makes it well. It makes up and repays for past sickness with a strong and virile health that is often better than the sufferer knew for a long time before sickness began to trouble, for it makes the body right, with its maximum of strength, vigor and vitality. Bodi-Tone works what seems a miracle by putting tone where tone was needed. Write today, telling us you want it, get a box of Bodi-Tone promptly and try it. We take all the risk.

THE EFFECTIVE CHURCH.

Earnest inquiry is being made to-day as to what constitutes an effective Church. The Pentecostal Church stands out in history as accomplishing its purpose with marked efficiency. We read: "The multitude came together and were confounded." It may be profitable to take general notice of the elements of her character.

First of all, we note her Separateness.

The little band in the Upper Room were very different from the great world multitude outside. They were different in divine fellowship. They held communion with the Father. The knowledge and experience with the Son was ever real and vivid. The Holy Spirit came upon them with divine power. They were looking up and God was coming down. The Source of their influence, consciously and unconsciously, was in heaven. They were different from the world in their human fellowship. The world, then as now, was in a state of strife. They were with "one accord, in prayer and supplication," "in gladness of heart and singleness of purpose." They differed from the multitude again in their waiting. Their confidence was not in their own wisdom or activity, but in the coming and power of God.

The modern Church is somewhat wanting in this Separateness. At times it is hard to distinguish between the Church and the world. She is tempted to seek the source of strength either in herself or other men, or in worldly advantage. Her human fellowship is not as largely in supplication and prayer, and her sense of dependence upon Divine power is not so great.

The Separateness of the Pentecostal Church was attractive to the weary, struggling, suffering world, and in proportion as the Church loses this separateness, in that proportion does she lose her drawing power. The more the Church becomes like the world, the less is her attractiveness.

Again, the Pentecostal Church manifested her Consciousness of the Divine Presence.

There was a reverence, even an awe, which the world felt. She forgot the fear of the world and its opposition in her awe and reverence for God. Her God was a great God, a God of power and justice. There was a sound as of a rushing, mighty wind, which filled the house. There were tongues of fire, and the disciples spake with an utterance not their own. This manifestation of the presence and power of God caused the multitude to marvel and be amazed. This sense of awe is lacking in the modern Church. It is lacking in the way we enter the house of God. It is lacking in many of the hymns and much of the music we sing. It is lacking in much of the modern revival methods. It is lacking in our observance of the Sabbath; it is lacking in our daily life, and the Church and the believer who lacks this reverence and consciousness of God's mighty power and presence advertises a want of genuineness, for if God is what the Church represents him to be, then every knee should bow and every tongue confess to his glory and honor.

Further, the Pentecostal Church was loyal to God's message in the Scriptures, focusing in Jesus and the Resurrection. Any doubt upon the integrity of the Scriptures means weakness in the Church. Any making common of the person and character of Christ Jesus, and belittling of the resurrection, is robbing the Church of her power, and sending her forth with her eyes put out, and her hands tied to the grinding-machine. The modern Church has suffered, and is suffering, much from her weakness at this point. No matter how much benefit might be obtained from devout criticism, if the result is to weaken or destroy faith in the integrity and authority of the Scriptures, then the consequence is to destroy the power and efficiency of the Church. No man, no church, no society in history ever maintained spiritual power or attractiveness, once unswerving faith in the Scriptures and in "Jesus and the resurrection" was weakened or lost. Men are not going to read, preach from or listen to a book which is simply a bundle of other men's experiences, full of mistakes and defects. It is only when men believe that the Bible is God's authoritative Word, that it contains the only way of salvation and the only title to an eternal inheritance, that they will continue to read or use it. Every branch of the Church which has introduced doubt on these things has either become a weakling or ceased to exist, and that in spite of culture, or other advantage.

Lastly, we note that the Pentecostal Church was wide in her outreach.

She gave to "every nation under heaven." Neither race, color, nor condition formed a limitation. "Every man heard in his own tongue the wonderful works of God."

The moment the Church loses this wideness of vision, that moment her eye is losing its power. It betrays a constitutional evil which must be checked, or it will work ruin.

If the modern Church will develop these elements: Separateness, the Sense of Divine Presence and Power, Loyalty to the Scriptures to Christ and the Resurrection, and take in the world-wide vision, "God so loved the world," then again "the multitude will come together and be confounded."—The Presbyterian.

"HE'S GOT HIS CROWN."

By Bishop Berry, in the New York Christian Advocate.

The Annual Conference was called to order.

After devotions, the Bishop said: "The secretary of the last session will please call the roll."

That official came forward and began the roll-call. He had only named a dozen of the senior members when, in a lower tone, he called the name of a man who made no answer. But the eyes of a white-haired veteran on the front seat grew moist as he said: "Never mind about him; he's got his crown."

A murmur of assent swept over the Conference, which instantly flowed into triumphant song as some one started the stanza:

"E'en now by faith we join our hands
With those that went before,
And greet the blood-besprinkled bands
On the eternal shore."

"He's got his crown." That was well said.

For more than forty years the faithful man had worked like a hero for the Master he loved. He traveled many of the largest and poorest circuits of the Conference. He never chose his field of toil, but when the harvest time came around he appeared with arms full of golden sheaves.

At the last Conference he was superannuated. It cost him more than a passing pang. But he stepped down so gracefully no one noticed that his wrinkled face grew pale, or saw that his eyes showed traces of last night's tears. He went from Conference sweet, tender, trustful, and settled in a little cottage in the midst of his late parishioners.

What a year of benediction it had been to all the people of the village! He was the friend of everybody, and everybody was his friend. How the children liked to be where he was! How the young folks honored and loved him! How the "outsiders" were led to think better of the Master because the "outsiders" saw so much of that Master in the old man's daily life! How splendid his loyality to his pastor; and how grateful he was that the Church had so long put up with his infirmities and had treated him so well!

My translated friend was a sunny saint. He carefully avoided the shadows. He believed in people, in the Church, in God and in the triumph of righteousness on earth. You never heard him discussing in mournful measure the departed glory of the Church. This day, he felt sure, was the best day for the Kingdom, and he knew it would be better to-morrow. He felt that the world was growing better all the time, and he thanked God for letting him live to see so many of its modern wonders. A radiant soul was he. Sunshine was in his soul and on his face. When the Reaper came he was a ripened sheaf. That night, when the gates opened and the Master called him in, he was not much surprised. Nor was the change so great, for he had been living in heaven for many years and his conversation had been with the King.

"Never mind about him." No, never mind. The Conference has important matters upon its hands. It must deal with the living, pressing, awful present. It must plan once more for a forward march. It must arrange for new and larger conquests. Time is passing. The "elders'" reports must be read and the disciplinary questions must be asked. Do not pause, Mr. Secretary. Go swiftly on. "Never mind about him."

"He's got his crown." And that crown is all radiant with a thousand stars. Talk about your coronation! Some day King Edward's crown will rest no more upon his brow, for dead kings do not wear crowns. Some day it will crumble into dust. But the other crown, the crown of real royalty, won by the faith and self-surrender and sacrifice of God's dutiful servants—it shall abide forever!

Mr. Edison is reported to have declared recently that no person needs more than four hours' sleep in twenty-four. The great electrician now seems liable to say most anything. It is a pity that one so brilliant should let his tongue so frequently run away with him.

IF I WERE A PASTOR.

I would not disparage the work of my predecessor nor lend a spmpathetic ear to other tongues in the same business. He probably did as well as could be expected—poor thing.

I would not block the way for my successor by holding on to the hearts of my people in a selfish way.

I would not encourage the notion that I, or any other man, was indispensable to tbe prosperity of the Church.

I would not make chums of the folks who were distant or even disloyal toward a former pastor.

I would not be disturbed by the gushing terms applied by some unwise but honest souls to my predecessor.

I would let time balance the account, and then I would get my share of their esteem.

I would not try to outdo another man's specialty I would follow my own powers and providential leading.

I would not make any doctrine unduly prominent in my sermons. I would get the spirit of Christ and the liberty wherewith He sets men free.

I would not dodge some doctrines because they would rouse opposition.

I would not try to do pastoral work in the pulpit, nor to preach in the bomes, unless it might be the bomes of invalids.

I would encourage men's movements, but would discourage all the cant and buncombe attending them.

I would not assume that a man is more valuable or necessary to the Lord and the Church than a woman is; nor that be is more difficult to convert.

I would not run my work without system, but would not allow system to degenerate into mechanical drudgery.

I would not attempt to supply consciences to my hearers. I would keep some valuable goods for home consumption.

I would have as good a library as I could pay for, but not any better. I would not ask the Book Concern and the superannuates to pay for my books.

I would not carry my library into tbe pulpit. I might do it for modesty, and be accused of pedantry.

I would not preach much on different occupations and specialties, for fear of becoming tiresome or ludicrous to specialists in the audience who knew those callings thoroughly.

I would not build sermons on theories or unproved speculations of science. The next daily paper might upset all the theories and leave my up-to-date sermon mere junk.

I would not preach conjectures, doubts, or dry-as-dust scholarship so-called. I would vitallze the dry bones or bury them.

I would not be dead sure of men or manuscripts obsolete or unknown for thousands of years—and label it Higher Criticism. It may be merely lower foolishness.

I would humbly admit that there are some things God has not revealed, history has not preserved, and that "no fellow can find out."

I would preach the Bible as a living book and not as a relic or a warmed-over hash.

I would be a specialist on two points: The knowledge of human heart and its needs, and of the divine food and medicine for those needs.

I would cultivate a sweetness and mellowness of disposition so that innocent children could stand on my level and look me straight in the eye.

I would develop a manly dignity until no pompous individual in the community could grow tall enough to look down on me.

I would love the Lord more than my wife and children—or even my salary and my Conference grade; but I would tell Him about it oftener than any one else.—Western Christian Advocate.

A WELL KEPT CHURCH REGISTER.

Editor Christian Advocate: At our Second Quarterly Conference (Lake Charles charge, Louisiana Conference), in response to the disciplinary question governing tbe subject, I was appointed a committee to examine the Church Register and Records of Church Conferences and to report on same at the proper time. In view of the importance of the subject, I beg your indulgence for sufficient space to tell of the result of my labors under said appointment.

Our church register is not only a model of neatness and accuracy, but is a splendid example of the possibilities of this excellent book when in the hands of a painstaking and competent secretary. In the first place, the names appear in chronological order from the very beginning of the church at this place, some fifty years ago, to the present time, the last name on the roll being No. 1648, which means, of course, that sixteen hundred and forty-eight people have at different times been identified with this church since its organization. It does not mean that sixteen hundred and forty-eight names are now carried on the rolls as appears from the following note: "This register is commenced on January 1, 1904. All the names of the members at this date are transferred from the old register as they occur upon it, retaining in the new register the old chronological number." This note is signed by A. M. Mayo, who was, and is, the secretary. Following name No. 1058, we find the following note: "The foregoing three hundred and two names were reported to the Annual Conference, December, 1903, the numbers referring to the numbers upon the former register." Thus we see that since January, 1904, five hundred and ninety names have been added to the rolls of the church—half as many as had been enrolled during the first forty years of its history.

Turning another page of this interesting register we find names from 1092 to 1127, inclusive, bracketed together with the following note opposite: "Revival services conducted by Rev. J. B. Culpepper and son, O. B. Culpepper, June 29 to July 25, 1904 All the churches received additions to membership besides being greatly revived." Again, following a list of names, we find the note: "Walter Holcombe Revival Service, May 7-21, 1905." Similar notes show when other revival services were held, who held them, and the number of additions to the church. When we get to name No. 1406 we find a new feature which is of special interest in that it shows the work the Sunday school is doing for the church. Names 1406 to 1420 are bracketed together with the following note opposite: "Class from Sunday school after Decision Day." These names were added on the 15th of March, 1908. The same note appears opposite Nos. 1488 to 1562, inclusive, and at rather frequent intervals from this time on to the end of the list. Upon counting the names we find that from the date of the Culpepper meeting in 1904, and including those received into the church as the result of that meeting, ninety-one names have been added to the rolls as the result of special revival meetings conducted by evangelists, while sixty-five names have been added as the result of Decision Day in the Sunday school since March, 1908. It is not necessary to comment upon these figures. This is the record as the church has made it during the recent past; thoughtful workers will draw their own conclusions.

That part of the record set aside for marriages and baptisms is kept in such a way as to show whether the marriage or baptism took place at the church, or at the home of the parties, or elsewhere, as the case may be.

I submit the foregoing for what it is worth. It shows, as said in the beginning, the possibilities of this excellent book when in the hands of a competent and painstaking secretary.

Very truly yours, JNO. B. KENT.

THREE CONFERENCE PRESIDENTS.

Once more the advent of the Conference (British Wesleyan) has revealed the vast variety of men whom the Church delights to honor. The president during the year that has closed was the Rev. John Hornabrook, the very best possible example of a department administrator (be is secretary of the Chapel Committee) who has succeeded in ably administering the business entrusted to him without becoming hardened by figures, schedules, and architect's plans. It is said of him, I know not with what truth, that in his spare time he bas read through the twelve volumes of the Cambridge Modern History—a matter of some 10,000 pages. Whether he has actually achieved this or not, he is a wide and earnest reader, and he has brought into his public utterances during his official year a width of thought, as well as a fervid evangelism, which surprised many. His successor in the chair of the Conference is the Rev. Henry Haigh, who for twenty-five years was a wonderfully successful Indian missionary; and has since proved the essential oneness of all Christian work by being as successful in his administration of an English district as of an Indian. Mr. Haigh is a philosopher with all a philosopher's eye for tendencies and influences and developments, but with more than a typical philosopher's eye for realities and practical necessities. He is the man to make his brethren see visions and dream dreams; and possibly his influence upon the ministry will be greater than his direct influence upon the Church at large; or, to express it differently, his influence upon the Church will be mainly through the ministry. The capacity for self-sacrifice is graciously developed in Mr. Haigh, as was shown a few years ago when acting for the Bible Society in some vernacular translation work. He came home to finish his work, his health having broken down, and then found that the work would have to be finally completed on the spot, in converse with the natives. His doctors absolutely forbade him to return, telling him that it would be fatal to him within a year. "That will give me time," he replied, "to complete my work;" and he went—and returned, graciously spared for other service in his native land. The president-designate for next year, the Rev. F. L. Wiseman, presents a wholly different type. He is more of a man of the people than either of the others, and would naturally be described as "brilliant," in preference to any other adjective. But this must not be taken to denote the absence of deep thought or of solid qualities. His wonderful versatility is built upon a foundation of very real and solid knowledge, and we have very few men in our ministry who can deal adequately with so large a variety of subjects. He will go like a breeze of fresh air through the churches. We may well feel thankful for the steady supply of strong and devoted men, capable of shouldering big responsibilities in the Church.—An English Correspondent in the Western Christian Advocate.

"SPIRITUAL PASSION."

By Rev. Robt. B. Downer.

The articles "Spiritual Passion," "The Paths of Righteousness," and the editorial, "Orthodox Awakening," in the issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate of August 24, are worth more than a year's subscription.

"Spiritual Passion," from far away Zion's Herald, Boston, Mass.! Oh, how that article thrilled my soul to the hallelujah point! Glory to God, the kingdom is coming!

Of late my soul has been sorely burdened for the lukewarm spiritual condition of the ministry and laity of our beloved Methodism. On all other lines, great activity and some progress is observed. Marvelous are the sums of money being expended in church buildings and furnishings; never before have the pulpits of Methodism been filled by such numbers of college graduates. Our religious papers sparkle with editorials born of an ambition to excel—that reflect credit upon the University training of the United States and Germany. The wheels within wheels of our ecclesiastical machinery are well lubricated and move with a hum, that indicates great expenditure of mental and physical power. Camp meetings—at least in name—yet survive; protracted meetings are held annually in nearly all our country appointments and in some city charges, and we still retain some evangelistic pastors who "cry aloud and spare not," and who meet with some success. But addressing cold and lukewarm congregations, the seed sown falls on stony ground, and fails to produce fruit an hundred fold. Reports at Annual Conferences on the "spiritual state of the Church," as made by pastors, indicate that in spots Zion yet has life sufficient to bring to birth immortal souls. Our fathers battled mostly with the outward foe, while in our day we fight not only the open foe, but are kept busy stanching the wounds of Christ received in the house of his friends.

The Church has life, but not "life abundant." In our yellow pine forests, small lizards abound; they hibernate under fallen trees and rubbish; if you take a walk in the forest in the winter time you will fail to see one, but turn a log over, and most likely you will uncover several lizards apparently dead; touch one with a walking cane and a limb will move. You can reverse its position until its back is down, slowly it may move until its back is up. Not dead, you see—just torpid. Now wait till August for your walk: like a flash of lightning, that creature that was torpid in winter vanishes from sight. The heat degrees regulate their activity.

To my vision our Methodism is in a state of hibernation. Our old doctrine—heat-producer—entire sanctification, is seldom preached, and when preached is done in an apologetic manner, not with emphasis. Somehow, the terms holiness of heart, perfect love, entire sanctification, have become offensive to refined ears. In a general way (quite indefinite) some believe it possible to live an aggressive, blameless life, if not on earth, at least in heaven. Theoretically, Methodism stands for the "higher life, now exploited as 'spiritual passion.'"

"Spiritual passion!" Yes, glory to God! Never mind about what John Wesley called it, get spiritual passion; that is the impelling power to do God's will on earth as it is done in heaven. That would cause our Bishops coming to our approaching Conference sessions to examine themselves, as examples to the flock. It would lead them to spend much time upon their knees in the prayer closet, pleading for the elimination of all hindering elements from the soul, body and spirit, making it possible for God to so surcharge them with the Holy Ghost (spiritual passion) that when they face the Conference at the opening hour, countenances would shine with a halo of divine glory, and lips when parted to speak or read the Bible would send forth a thrill of divine power that would illuminate every uplifted heart; and when they prayed all would feel that verily they prevailed with God. Now, if preachers and laymen would seek and obtain the "spiritual passion" at home, and attend Conference red-hot, boiling over, stay there five or six days, who could estimate the influence for good that would come to the town or city by the presence of such a Conference assembly? Then think of the influence of a hundred or more pastors and presiding elders going to their respective fields of labor filled with the Pentecostal "spiritual passion!" Surely Methodism would again become a mighty cleansing, uplifting, progressive force to speed the coming kingdom. Great God of our fathers, thou who didst make them mighty to the overthrow of the strongholds of sin, give unto us as a Church, a mighty, overmastering all-controlling "spiritual passion!" Amen.

THE OPENING OF WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

Dear Brother Meek: Doubtless the friends and patrons of Whitworth College will be interested in hearing something of the opening of this historic old institution so dear to the hearts of Mississippi Methodists. For weeks prior to opening day, Sept. 14, the busy work of preparation had been going on under the generalship of its able president, Dr. I. W. Cooper. Consequently the five buildings and the beautiful campus surrounding them were in perfect order for the reception and physical comfort of the large number of students who had bespoken their intention of availing themselves of Whitworth's exceptional educational advantages.

Rarely has any college of like grade and capacity opened under fairer or more promising auspices. Whitworth's president, faculty, student-body and friends have not been idle this summer. Other interests than politics and senatorial campaigns have enlisted their energies, as the large number of new students enrolling for the session eloquently attests. Thursday and Friday, the 14th and 15th of September, 1911, were devoted to matriculating and classifying the new students, of which there was the largest number ever yet registered at the beginning of a session. Every incoming train brought the returning old students until Tuesday, the 18th, when a formal opening was held in the college chapel.

Dr. Cooper, justly proud of Whitworth's splendid prospects, presided in his happiest manner. Visitors and patrons from a distance, as well as a number of Brookhaven friends, were present to participate in the opening exercises. Speeches, in both a serious and humorous vein, followed in interesting succession, as friends, patrons, and trustees were called out by the president.

This might well be called "Whitworth's jubilee," characterized, as it was, by the jubilant note of success already achieved, and the joy-song of hope breathing of better things yet to come for the "greater Whitworth" of the near future. That there shall be an ampler day for this beloved institution, all its friends, patrons, officers, teachers and pupils are fully agreed, and to this end their united energies are directed. Already plans are formulated for additional buildings and equipment to the amount of $40,000, these to be ready for use by the session of 1911-12. The musical department has recently been strengthened by an increase in its teaching force, and by the purchase of twenty-one new pianos, including a Mason & Hamlin grand. Few colleges can boast of better equipment in this respect. The academic department, which stands for thorough, conscientious, high-grade work, is ably managed by a faculty of accomplished teachers, each a specialist in her subject. All are graduates of one or more colleges, and have added to their years of experience as teachers the superior educational equipment of post-graduate study in some of the greater universities of the country. From this it goes without saying that the 200 now enrolled will have the best attention and the most careful training.

Any account of the school life and opportunities of Whitworth would be incomplete and superficial, indeed, which did not mention especially the happy social environment, the wholesome moral tone, the deeply religious atmosphere characterizing the place.

Truly it is a training school for cultured Christian womanhood, than which there is no grander mission possible to any human institution. At the opening of her fifty-third session, Whitworth stands full-statured and joyous in the consciousness of a high and holy mission, and is willing, under God, to be measured by our Savior's standard, "By their fruits shall ye judge them."

Yours for Christian education,

MARY GORE WYATT.

Brookhaven, Miss.

MY REPORT.

Dear Advocate: My contemporary, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr., of Mississippi, said recently in the Advocate that "superannuates should send in reports, and thus give an account of themselves." This is proper, provided the superannuate has anything to report, and is able physically and otherwise to report it. Pastors are supposed to make their own reports, but preachers above years are shut out of the pastorate and so have little or nothing to report, and because of this and palsied hands, reports from superannuates are seldom seen in print.

Brother Lewis is an exception, it seems. I have an idea that although he is of advanced age, he is a good beef and chicken eater, has a large family connection, and travels around much, and often has something to report. With me it is different. I have no sons nor daughters to visit or to fall back on, and attend no camp nor revival meetings, and my budget of news to report is small.

All that I can report is that I preach three Sundays in each month—five times a month—and never enjoyed it more. Mine is chiefly mission work, and the door was opened by Rev. P. M. Brown and Dr. S. S. Keener. Thanks to them. I preach mostly to the Ouachita river people, and they generally have large farms, big dwelling houses, many colored tenants, and, as a rule, house servants. They treat me royally, and I enjoy it; but when I get home, I am—well, just a servant myself. The calf wants its mother, the chickens want their breakfast, so we rise about five o'clock a. m., and while wife is attending to the cow and chickens, I light the fire in the cook stove, make French coffee, fry the meat, and have breakfast about ready when she comes in. I walk rapidly, and I am congratulated so often upon my elastic step that I would almost forget my age if it were not for the fact that the boys and girls of my boyhood, my father's large family and my comrades in the civil war have nearly all left me behind. One sister in the original family is left, and when I make inquiry about my schoolmates the answer usually is, "all dead." I corresponded with Judge S. S. Calhoun, late of Jackson, Miss., and he informed me a few months before he died, that he and myself alone were left of our company, organized in 1861. Now he is gone.

H. ARMSTRONG.

Olla, La., Sept. 15, 1911.

RELIGIOUS BELIEFS.

There seems to be a quite general aversion to doctrinal standards and belief in them. There is a prevailing clamor for practical affairs, regardless of definite doctrines. Religious liberals are rigidly opposed to strict adherence to many of the doctrines which are incorporated in systematic creeds and confessions. They do not propose to be tied to such old doctrines and dogmas. They say that they believe in "freedom of thought." Hence they say that they are not the slaves of doctrine, especially old-fashioned doctrine. And yet these very men do believe in religious doctrines. They are all the while advocating such doctrines as they like. They are just as insistent in believing and propagating their doctrines as any class of men are in regard to other kinds of doctrine.

The trouble with the very "modern man" is, he is believing in doctrines which are subversive of true Bible doctrine. His beliefs lead him to antagonize some of the most fundamental teachings of God's Word. What the "modern man" wants is that those who hold firmly to the Bible standards of doctrine shall abandon them and accept the doctrines which he believes in. Such a man does not object to doctrinal standards and preaching, provided that they are in agreement with the ones which he advocates.

Does it make any difference with one as to what he believes? It certainly does make a great difference as to whether one believes in true doctrine or in false doctrine, for doctrine and practice are linked together. Belief in bad doctrine leads one into bad living. It has often been shown that youthful criminals got their bad start by reading vicious "dime novels." Belief in their bad contents has issued in a criminal career. Readers of pure literature are never led thereby into evil ways, nor into a love for immoral literature. But bad teaching, believed in, leads to bad doing. An anarchist has become such by believing in anarchical doctrines. The two things are inseparable. We see, then, the great importance of insisting upon belief in the true doctrines of the true Bible.

In a recent number of the New York Christian Advocate Bishop William Burt tells of a visit to Jerusalem last spring to inspect the property which Mrs. John P. Newman (widow of Bishop Newman) purchased there. He states that the property is worth about $15,000; that it is situated in the healthiest and most desirable section of the city, and that it is very well adapted for school purposes. Across the street from it, he says there is a fine site and a quantity of building stone, Mrs. Newman having had it in mind to erect a church there. Bishop Burt suggests that the Church undertake here a school for a limited number of native boys, and also open a Christian home for young men who go to Palestine on scholarships from the different theological seminaries in America and Europe. In doing this, he would make the enterprise conform to Mrs. Newman's plan to have it serve as a memorial to Bishop Newman.

THE TRI-STATE METHODIST HOSPITAL.

The North Mississippi, Mississippi, Memphis and White River Conferences, at their last sessions, laid the plans for the greatest Christian benevolence they have ever enterprised. Each appointed five commissioners, who, with a representative from the Woman's Home Mission Society, form a Board of Commissioners, empowered and directed to proceed to build a hospital, which shall adequately represent Methodism in the care of the sick and afflicted.

Early in the year the Commissioners met and organized by electing Jno. H. Sherard (whose early interest and constant appeals had secured the action of the interested Conferences) president; J. R. Jones, W. S. Lagrone, J. F. Smith and T. K. Riddick, vice-presidents; L. M. Stratton, secretary, and Jno. R. Pepper, treasurer. With the sole view of serving the greatest number within the interested Conferences, Memphis Tenn., was chosen as the proper location for the hospital, its geographical situation and railroad facilities marking it as the logical center.

H. M. Ellis was elected field secretary on the first of last May and given the task of raising the $250,000 and more required to erect and equip a suitable building. At that time many and various district Conferences, Woman's Home Mission Societies, Sunday School and Epworth League, were being held and the entire time of the Secretary for some weeks was occupied in meeting these and presenting the claims of the Methodist Hospital. The cause seemed to go to the heart at once. Every where the enterprise was heartily approved and nearly all these meetings adopted ringing resolutions, pledging liberal support.

Up to date $25,000 has been secured in cash and good subscriptions, and there are several tentative propositions in hand, which promise nearly as much more. This has had to be done in the vacation season, when our families of means were away from home, and all business enterprises and church activities at their minimum. That the Tri-State Methodist Hospital (the official name of the institution) will be built, need not be doubted.

For good-reasons, Hospital Rally Day was changed from October 8, 1911, to January 28, 1912. This will allow the cause to have full right of way and receive the attention it so much deserves. It is hoped that on the fourth Sunday of next January, or as near thereto as practicable, every pastor and presiding elder in these four Conferences will faithfully and earnestly present to his people the obligation of our great Church to care for the sick and afflicted, and urge all our people to such offerings as shall be worthy of the great and urgent need and the ample means possessed.

But in the meantime the work must go right on. No church can afford to turn aside from this great cause of Christ because of its debts or other local obligations. Its surest inspiration for meeting local claims will arise from the exercise of the benevolent function. The best self-help is in the unselfish service which makes the individual worth something to God and humanity. The partner of God's enterprises will certainly be cared for by God.

We ask all our preachers and people to pray that the Holy Spirit may enable all our members, especially those of large means, to appreciate fully and respond liberally to this splendid opportunity to relieve human suffering, to serve our loving Redeemer, to give our loved Church a worthy place in the field of Christian benevolence, and to perpetuate their own Christly ministers through the long years to come.

Now a personal word, if you please: I am anxious to cover the field as rapidly and thoroughly as possible. If the good brethren will write me what dates will suit best for my visit to the charge I will be glad to conform as far as possible to their plans. It will be best to give several dates, as more than one pastor may ask for the same time. By this means, the brethren will be spared a possibly inopportune visit from me, or the embarrassment of having to refuse my request.

Let every pastor write at once. The more the merrier.

H. M. ELLIS, Field Secretary.

PREACHERS' MEETING.

The New Orleans Preachers' Meeting met in First Church last Monday morning with the following present: Henry, Holmes, Joyner, Snelling, Shankle, Atkinson, Perritt, Meek, Ellzey, Chisholm, and Vaughan.

On account of the absence of Dr. Werlein, the discussion of the "First Church Problem" was deferred until the next meeting, which will be in October.

The question of having the "Man and Religion Movement" come to New Orleans was discussed and met with the hearty approval of the preachers present, who thought it wise for the Methodists of New Orleans to join in this work. This movement has been endorsed by the Protestant Ministers' Association, and all of the Protestant Churches will be invited to enter into it. The work will begin in New Orleans on November 13th and continue until the 20th of that month.

Plans for the entertainment of the Annual Conference were discussed in an informal manner, and in a very short time this work will be in the hands of committees. Brother Atkinson, pastor of Parker Memorial, stated that he proposed to appeal to the "community spirit" of the people in the neighborhood of the church, and thought that they might entertain a large number of ministers and delegates. The ladies of the Methodist Churches of New Orleans will be asked to serve lunch during the sessions of the Conference.

Brother Ellzey stated that a Sunday school Institute would be held in New Orleans October 23-26, and that Dr. Bulla would be one of the speakers.

On account of the meeting of the Protestant Ministers' Association next Monday, the Methodist preachers will hold their next meeting on Monday, October 9.

A. F. VAUGHAN, Secretary.

WINONA DISTRICT WOMAN'S MEETING.

Governor Plaisted, of Maine, has appointed Mr. Obediah Gardner, of Rockland, to succeed the late William P. Frye in the United States Senate. Mr. Gardner is a Democrat, as is also the Governor.

Mr. J. W. White, chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Conservation Congress, declares that a process has been discovered by which it is possible to manufacture an artificial lumber, which is quite strong and durable. The ingredients used are as follows: 57 per cent waste paper; 22 per cent straw; 5 percent jute, and 16 per cent wood fiber.

Famine is said to be prevailing in China in the provinces of Chili, Kwang Tung and in the territory along the Yangtse Kiang River. Food is also reported to be distressingly scarce in some parts of Manchuria. The International Famine Committee is active in its efforts to alleviate the sufferings which exist and to prevent, if possible, the situation from becoming worse.

Former Governor Joseph W. Brown, of Georgia, who was defeated for re-election by the Hon. Hoke Smith, has announced himself a candidate for the gubernatorial vacancy caused by Mr. Smith's election to the United States Senate. He will have two opponents: Judge R. B. Russel, and Mr. J. Pope Brown. Manifestly the Browns do not mean to let the Smiths have all the honors in the Goober State.

In a speech at St. Louis on September 23, President Taft advocated a wider power of impeachment as a substitute for the proposed judiciary recall, which seems to have developed a considerable following in the West. He took the position that in settling the question as to whether a judge should be dismissed, the matter should be determined by careful judicial procedure rather than by excited popular discussion. We think that the President's view has much to commend it.

Mr. Charles E. Dunbar, Jr., a 1910 graduate of Tulane University, who since has been pursuing postgraduate studies at Harvard University, has been honored by election to an assistant professorship in the latter institution. He entered Harvard on a scholarship awarded him by the Tulane faculty, and the record which he made at the New England seat of learning won him membership in the Phi Beta Kappa Society. Mr. Dunbar is a native of Canton, Miss., but for some years has been a resident of New Orleans.

Experts from Birmingham, Ala., have expressed the view that Jackson, Miss., is built above vast stores of oil and natural gas, and it is stated in the press dispatches that test wells will be bored as soon as practicable. The strongest indications that these commodities exist there are reported to be about the new capitol. This makes their development a little risky, as the Legislature will convene next January, and with a superabundance of gas both in and under the statehouse, there is no telling what might happen.

Dimitry Bogroff, the assassin of Premier Stolypin, of Russia, paid the penalty with his life on Sept. 25, he having been tried by court-martial and sentenced to be hung. Whatever else may be said of Russian justice, in this instance, at least, it was summary, as the trial was held about a week after the shooting and on the fourth day after the Premier's death. Bogroff declined the assistance of counsel, and is said to have been wonderfully calm and collected while passing through the ordeal of being tried and condemned. He is twenty-four years old, and a graduate of Kiev University.

The latest indications are said to be that France and Germany are approaching an agreement concerning matters in Morocco. This is gratifying news; but we have never had much doubt that the points at issue would be peaceably settled since Great Britain took a positive stand supporting the French in their contentions. No nation likes to go to war with a formidable foe. Preparedness upon the part of a people to protect themselves if necessary, is undoubtedly one of the best safeguards against becoming involved in strife with other powers. For this reason we believe that our own country should maintain an adequate army and navy.

Carefully gathered statistics are said to show that insanity has increased in the United States 104 per cent within the last forty years, while the population has increased 49 per cent. It is stated that there were last year 30,500 insane persons in the public institutions of the State of New York (not including those cared for in private homes and sanitariums), which is about one for every 280 of its population. In this particular form of humanitarianism Japan is said to be unsurpassed by any nation on the globe, her asylums for the mentally unbalanced in Tokyo and at some other points being models in every respect.

Reciprocity was defeated in the Canadian elections, held on the 21st inst., by a large majority. The estimated figures are that the new Parliament will be made up of 81 Liberals and 131 Conservaties. In the one recently dissolved the Liberals had a majority of 42. Mr. R. L. Borden will become Prime Minister, in place of Sir Wilfred Laurier, who for nearly two decades has been at the head of the Government. The general impression is that this victory of the opposition party was brought about principally by the annexation bugaboo, of which much use was made during the campaign. It is probable that the disastrous end of the reciprocity movement in Canada will also affect adversely President Taft's political prospects in the United States.

The following taken from the Times-Democrat, shows how the veto power was exercised by various Presidents of the United States:

"President Cleveland during his eight years as chief magistrate of the nation wrote 343 veto messages, of which 301 were sent in during his first term. Most of these were disapprovals of pension bills and measures designed to afford special relief. Between the two terms of Cleveland, President Harrison wrote nineteen vetoes. Both McKinley and Roosevelt used the veto power sparingly. President Hayes vetoed eight bills, three of which were general appropriation measures, of which he disapproved on the ground that they contained general legislation. President Garfield wrote no vetoes, but President Arthur sent in four. President Grant used the veto power frequently, writing in all forty-six messages of disapproval. President Johnson wrote twenty-two, President Lincoln three, President Buchanan seven, President Pierce nine, President Polk three, President Tyler eight, President Jackson nine, President Monroe one, President Madison six, and President Washington two."

MILLSAPS OPENING.

The twentieth annual session of Millsaps College began on Wednesday morning, Sept. 21, at 11 o'clock, under the most auspicious conditions and surroundings. Dr. David Carlisle Hull, president of the college, in speaking at the opening, stated that he was much gratified at the magnificent showing which was made on the first day. There were present 250 boys, and many others have reported to the college authorities since that time. They are still coming, and before the enrollment is completed it is expected that there will be at least 350 Mississippi boys taking up the work of the coming year in this great institution. The opening exercises were attended by quite a large number of Jackson people, who were highly entertained by the excellent addresses delivered on the occasion.

The following program was carried out: Song, "America;" Scripture Lesson, by Rev. T. B. Clifford, of Yazoo City; Prayer, by Rev. C. W. Crisler, Vicksburg; Words of Welcome, by Dr. David C. Hull, president; Remarks, by Dr. A. F. Watkins on behalf of the Board of Trustees, of which he is vice-president; Address, by Rev. Robert Selby, of Moss Point, Conference Secretary of Education; Principal address, by President J. R. Countiss, of Grenada College on the theme, "Victorious Youth."

The following pastors from the city of Jackson were present and said a few words to the boys, inviting them to their respective churches to attend divine worship: Rev. A. F. Smith, First Methodist Church; Rev. J. M. Morse, W. Capitol Street Methodist Church; Rev. J. S. Parker, Rankin Street Methodist Church; Rev. W. M. Thomas, Galloway Chapel; Rev. W. A. Borum, First Baptist Church; Rev. John N. McMillin, Second Baptist Church, and Rev. B. F. Foster, West Christian Church.

Former State Superintendent of Education J. R. Preston gave a most interesting address on the "Development of Personality." The address of President Countiss, of Grenada College, was a masterpiece of forty-five minutes' duration.

The equipment of the college is better than in any previous year. Workmen have been busy practically all the summer on improvements. The main building has undergone numerous repairs. New porches, new roof, plastering and tinting have been done on this building. A new bath and toilet room has just been completed for the cottages. Founders' Hall has been overhauled and put in complete repair and set aside for the home of the Millsaps Preparatory School, which is a departure from former years. The boys who enter this department of the college will live there, having their meals cooked and served under the efficient supervision of a most capable matron, Mrs. M. E. Joyce. The wants of the students will also be looked after by the house manager at Founders' Hall, W. C. Coggins. This, according to Dr. Hull, bids fair to become one of the most popular and useful parts of the entire college plant.

Millsaps is under the care of most capable instructors, and those attending it will have most excellent advantages.—The Clarion Ledger.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

Dear Doctor Meek: Please let me, through the columns of the Advocate, thank my many friends for their letters of sympathy and condolence after my husband's death. I greatly appreciated them, and would love to answer each separately, but I cannot. The physicians said my husband died with pellagra. I never knew when he did not suffer with indigestion, and, at times, he was most melancholy. As the years passed he grew worse, and my anxiety for him was very great. Life for some time before he passed away was to him a continuous battle. But now he has entered into peace and rest. Pray that I may regain my strength, and be able to take care of the children left me.

I should like to sell some of Mr. Moore's books. Possibly some of the young preachers would like to buy them at a discount. If so, they can write me at Poplarville, and I will send them a list with the price of each volume. Very sincerely,

MRS. M. H. MOORE.

BISHOP TIGERT MEMORIAL LOAN FUND.

The Board of Church Extension of the Illinois Conference, under the leadership of Mr. W. L. Demaree, president, at the session of the Conference held in Worden, Ill., Aug. 31st, by unanimous vote, established the "Tigert Memorial Loan Fund." An appropriation was made out of the Conference Board funds to this end, and a sufficient amount subscribed at the Church Extension anniversary on Friday night, after an address by the Corresponding Secretary of the General Board, to make the total $1,000. The only Conference held by the late Bishop Jno. J. Tigert was the Illinois, held in the Worden Church in the fall of 1906. The brethren of the Board and the Conference thought it appropriate for them to honor his memory in this way.

Contributions to this fund from the friends of the Bishop in other sections of the Church will be gladly received, and should be sent to W. F. McMurry, Corresponding Secretary, 1025 Brook St., Louisville, Kentucky.

Concerning Missions.

THE FAYETTE AUXILIARY (MISSISSIPPI).

The Woman's Home Mission Society here (with its connectional members) numbers about 33, of whom 14 art connectional, the others local members. Our Society is in its infancy, but seems to be doing good work. We have paid $125 on our church debt, besides some local work which we have done. Our members are willing workers, ever ready to listen to the good advice and he guided by our faithful leaders, Mrs. W. H. Lewis, president of the local work, and Mrs. W. W. Ellis, president of the connectional work.

Friday following the first Sunday of each month is our regular time for meeting at the church, though our last meeting was "Rally Day" for our members, and we were entertained at the hospitable home of Mrs. Lewis, where a most delightful afternoon was spent; and with our usual song service and prayer, all were dismissed till our next meeting.

A MESSAGE TO MISSION WORKERS.

(A letter from the corresponding secretary of the Home Department of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference.)

Dear Sisters: The first week of October has been set apart as the Week of Prayer and Self-Denial. Let every auxiliary in the Conference observe it. Use these days to study the work of the Home Department, the agencies at work in redeeming this beloved Southland of ours. Through some error, I have not received and, hence, have not sent to you the programs to be used. I have written again and hope to get them to you by the time you read this. However, do not let this deter you; but make a study of our institutions, and I'm sure good will be done.

The offering this year goes to Brevard Institute, which touches the life of the mountain people of North Carolina. This school, under the wise management of Prof. Trowbridge, has done successful work; but the time has come for enlargement, and increased facilities are needed, if we would make the best use of our opportunity in this needy section of our country. Presidents and officers should see that we have a liberal offering for this year. Appeal to our women to give liberally, that these young people may come to know the Christ who means so much to you.

A cheering note comes from Mrs. B. E. Eskridge, the secretary of the Baton Rouge District, telling of the organization at First Church, Baton Rouge, of a united society with both departments. This is the first Home Mission work to be organized in Baton Rouge, and we take courage and press on.

On Sunday night, Sept. 17, Mrs. U. L. Millsaps, the secretary of the Shreveport District, and I organized a Missionary Society with both departments at Queensborough, a rapidly growing suburb of Shreveport. With the wise counsel of Brother Jamieson, the pastor, and with the fostering care of Mrs. Millsaps, I feel sure that this auxiliary will accomplish great good.

By order of the Board of Missions, our fiscal year closes with Dec. 31. This quarter closes with the month of September. I sincerely trust that the auxiliary treasurers will use great diligence in collecting and sending to Mrs. Holmes all of the dues, pledges, etc., possible by Oct. 1st.

MRS. H. R. SINGLETON.

CALLED HOME.

Dear Brother Meek: Mrs. Mary Ann Williams, the widow of Rev. J. N. Williams, late of the Mississippi Conference, died this morning at the residence of her son in Morton, Miss. She died in triumph. She would have been 85 years old in October. A suitable memoir will appear later.

THREE SISTERS RESCUED BY THE LOUISIANA METHODIST ORPHANAGE.

HELP FOR THE HOMELESS.

A Case In Point.

On July 22, Mrs. Anna Head, a member of the Baptist Church, came personally to see me to enlist my help to get four children in our Orphanage. She reported that they were about four miles from Calhoun, with their father and grandfather, in an unwholesome atmosphere, destitute, and with no woman to care for them. At the first opportunity I interviewed Brother Vaughan with reference to placing them in our Home at Ruston, and on the 8th of August he and I went out to investigate and see what had better be done.

On our arrival at the place, what we saw beggars description. The house, which presents a very good outward appearance, is in an isolated place, about one mile from Calhoun and Monroe public road. We entered and were met by the father of the little children and seated on the porch. Everywhere that we could see about the house nothing but filth met our eyes and a very disagreeable odor our nostrils. The inmates consisted of six persons: the four children—one little boy about eight years old; three little girls, two, three and four years old, respectively—the father of the little girls, sixty-two years old, and his father, eighty-nine years old. The children were in rags and their rags sleek with dirt and grease. In conversation with the younger man, we were informed that his wife had died a little over a year ago, leaving him the four little children, the boy being his step-child; and he had not succeeded in getting a woman to stay there. His father, was almost blind and too feeble to care for himself, and he himself had been afflicted with a disease which for six months had kept him from doing any work, and almost from giving any attention to the children. He gladly consented for Brother Vaughan to have the little girls and said an uncle would take the boy.

As we left, Brother Vaughan declared: "This is the most pitiable case I've ever seen." And we both thanked God in our hearts that we Methodists have a Home to which we could carry such bright, yet needy and suffering little children, and thus care for them for Jesus' sake.

I have just read a notice that the old man was found dead in his bed on the morning of Sept. 3.

A. S. J. NEILL.

MISSISSIPPI ORPHANAGE WORK DAY.

To the Pastors, Sunday School Superintendents, and Methodist People of Mississippi:

Saturday, October 14, 1911, has been designated as Orphanage Work Day in Mississippi. Please help us to make a success of the occasion. A successful Work Day means freedom from debt next year, and its failure means exactly the reverse. Then, brother helper, give us your intelligent, hearty support. Do you not think your people are willing to give the proceeds of one day's work toward the support of the 196 children who have been taken in the name of the Lord? If our pastors and Sunday school superintendents will take the lead, nearly every man, woman, and child will follow them in doing something for the Lord's children. Write me at once how many collection cards you need. We are willing to furnish you all the help we can, but you must do the work.

Work Day is set apart by the management of the Orphanage, and all friends are requested to give their earnings for that one day for the support of the institution. It is not mandatory; it is no act of the Church, but simply an earnest request from the directors of the Orphans' Home. If Saturday, October 14, does not suit you as a time to do this, take any day that does. But be certain to take one day, work hard, and give God the proceeds. We received $4,000 from Work Day in 1910. The North Georgia Conference raised last year $14,000 on Work Day. What is there to keep the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences from doing as much? Let every Methodist lend a hand, and the showing will be a creditable one.

HELPING MOTHER.

We like to help our mother when she's working all the day;
My little sister dear and I can help in many a way,
For when she sweeps we help to dust the tables and the chairs,
We get her everything she wants down cellar or upstairs;
We carry water for the plants and pick the opened flowers,
And then she puts them in a vase and calls them hers and ours;
We put our toys up in their trunk when we are through with play,
And say, "We've worked so very hard it's been the shortest day,
And time for any other work we never could have found!"
But she says what helps her quite the most is having us around.

—Children's Magazine.

MENTAL FOOD FOR CHILDREN.

The mother who would sacrifice herself to the last extreme to attend to the physical wants of her child, to make his little garments and feed him with dainty food, leaves the finer part to starve, till food (?) is picked up wherever it can be found, says an exchange. We have all seen repeatedly, on long journeys, the mother absorbed in a book while the little one at her side wears himself out with questions that are never answered. He is forced to sit for hours without the slightest entertainment; full of curiosity about the scenes through which he is passing, he has no one to explain them to him, and the ride, which should have been a joy and a charming lesson to him, is a bore. It is that kind of a mother who wonders a few years later why her boy doesn't care for her society; who listens and longs for his return late in the evening, and wonders where he is; who doesn't understand why he makes friends of certain boys whom he prefers and she does not approve of.—The Preshyterian.

WHAT BECAME OF THEM.

"Now, you watch me, Arabella," said Bahy Anna, "an' I'll tell 'oo what's o'clock." Arabella sat up stiffly on the cedar stump and looked straight ahead; that is all painted eyes can do, you know. Arabella's were not even the kind that shut when you laid her down. "Puff, one; puff, two; puff, furee," counted Bahy Anna, hut the pretty little dandelion seeds did not seem very anxious to spread their white wings and fly. Perhaps Bahy Anna could not "puff" hard enough; perhaps the seeds were not ready to leave Mother Dandelion's soft bosom. At any rate, the time of day had not been found when grandfather was seen walking over the green grass and Baby Anna flew to meet him. It was just as she expected; grandfather had two peppermint drops for her—a white and a pink one. Grandfather 'most always had a hit of something sweet in his pocket for this small girl.

But it was not only peppermint drops that grandfather carried for Baby Anna; he always seemed to have a lesson for her as well. The candy drops fell into her mouth and melted and were forgotten, but the lesson went into her little mind and we hope it stayed there and was remembered. "What hecomes of those seeds you blow off the dandelion stem, pet?" grandfather asked.

"Dunno, danpa," answered the little girl, her mouth full of candy. She hadn't even known that they were seeds.

"I'll teii you what hecomes of them," said grandfather. "Each one goes into the earth, takes root, and grows up into another dandelion."

"Oh-h-h!" cried Baby Anna in surprise.

"There is something else that you send out with your breath that grows and spreads," said grandfather. "What is it, little girl?"

"Dunno. danpa," said Baby Anna again.

"It is the little words you say, my child," said the old gentleman. "These pretty dandelions do no harm, hut if you say angry or ugly or unkind words, they grow into hurt feeling and had humors and troubles. You see, you must he very careful what your hreath sends out of your mouth."

"Yes, danpa," answered the bahy, looking very grave, and wondering if grandfather had heard her fussing with Tommy that morning.—Sunshine.

THIN PLACES.

"There! my darning is done for this week—every hole is mended!"

"And the thin places?"

"Thin places! Why, auntie, I never look for thin places! There are always holes enough to keep me busy."

"When I was a little girl," said auntie, "I had a dear old grandmother who taught me to mend and darn, and with the teaching she slipped in many lessons about higher things. 'Look out for thin places,' she used to say. 'It'll save thee a deal of time and trouble.' A few runs hack and forth with the needle will save a half hour's darning next week. 'There are a few thin places in thy character,' she said one day, 'that thee'd better attend to—little failures that will soon break into sins.' I did not quite understand her; so, sweetening her talk with a hit of chocolate she carried for the hairns, she said: 'I see thy mother picking up thy coat and hat; putting away thy ruhbers again and again. I hear thee sometimes speak pretty sharply when some one interrupts thee at thy story reading. I heard thee offer to dust the parlor several days ago, hut thee forgot it, and to-day thy mother put down her sewing to do it.' I felt so ashamed that I never forgot about the thin places after that, though I am afraid that I did not always attend to them at once."

"Why, Aunt Mary! If you hadn't said grandma, I'd think you meant me. There are my rubbers under the stove, and I promised mamma to dust the sitting-room this day! But I don't quite understand what holes she meant."

"If you can't find your things and are in a hurry, what might happen, Grace?"

Grace colored and her eyes fell.

"I did get real mad about my grammar. I was sure I put it in my desk!"

"And you found it on the divan. Then if you promise and do not perform, does it not lower your notion of truthfulness, and so give evil more power over you?"

"Why, auntie, dear, I went right up and tidied my room!"

"I don't understand, Grace."

"I thought you knew," said the girl, in a shame-faced whisper. "I told mamma I had tidied my room (for I promised I would) when I had forgotten it, and was ashamed to own up. Oh, I see how thin places become holes, and I mean to look out."

"With God's help," said auntie, softly; and Grace, giving her a hug, ran to put away her rubbers and dust the sitting-room.

How about your thin places?—Christian Standard.

NEVER RUSHED.

The girl who is never rushed is the girl who has learned how to make the leisure moments relieve the husy ones. A girl spending the summer at a farmhouse in the mountains, shut herself into her room one rainy morning, and did not appear until dinner time. Then she came down, to be received with reproaches by a yawning circle.

"Why did you run away and leave us to ourselves?" some one cried fretfully. "And what have you heen doing? You look so outrageously cheerful."

"I've been writing an essay."

"What!" Half a dozen pairs of eyes were focused upon her incredulously. "Not a school essay?" some one said appealingly.

"Why, yes. When we went on that trip to the caves last week, I thought what a nice essay the story would make written out, and this morning I did it while the thing was fresh in my mind, and I had nothing else to do. Somehow the school essays always come at such busy times. I try to get mine out of the way in vacation."

This same girl does not wait till six weeks before Christmas to begin her Christmas gifts. All the year she has some piece of fancy-work handy to take up when she has a leisure moment. And the result is that when her girl friends are neglecting their studies, and sitting up late at night to finish their gifts, all she has to do is to wrap and lahel a number of dainty articles which she has been a year in making. It is not strange that a girl who knows so well how to make her leisure serve her, should awaken the envy of her acquaintances by never being in a rush.—Girls' Companion.

CAUSES OF TROUBLE IN HAITI.

Religious and educationai conditions in Haiti, where there is at present a revolution, are described as most unfavorahie by the agent of the American Bihle Society stationed at San Juan, Porto Rico, but having San Domingo and Haiti in his field. The Rev. W. F. Jordan, a careful observer and experienced in religious work among West Indians, quotes natives as wondering why the United States Christians send so much money to China, Japan and East India, and pass needy fields, where ignorance, sickness and poverty reign in the midst of tropical plenty.

The Society's agent describes children as neglected, sanitation almost unknown, the marriage relation loose, and whole sections of the island, even large communities, where the existence of the Bihle is not dreamed of. Sales of Bibles and New Testaments reached large numbers last year, so eager are the people to be taught. The report expresses the conviction that for a needy field, where conditions are ripe, hardly one in the whole world is greater, and because of its nearness has a stronger appeal to Americans.

Episcopalians do most of all Americans at present for the island, but limit their work wholly to Haiti, and give nothing to San Domingo. This church has for some years been sending $12,000 a year into Haiti, maintaining fifteen to twenty clergymen, and having churches in most principal settlements. Its work dates from 1861. Circuits of the country have been laid out, and the clergy are supplemented by laymen in ministering to them. The entire membership is less than 1,000 however, and fewer than 500 are in the Sunday schools. The Bible Society's agent concludes his report, sent just before the late political trouble broke out, as follows:

"The beautiful landscapes, second to none in the whole world and much surpassing Cuba or Porto Rico, are the scenes of wretched filth and much physical suffering, dwarfed and deformed mentality, spiritual and moral degradation. Why are not Christians of the United States doing more to help Haitians hreak the shackles of superstition and ignorance?"—Church News Association.

Editorial.

It is stated that Senator B. R. Tillman, of South Carolina, has announced himself a candidate for re-election, buying and carrying home with him on the day that he did so two new pitchforks. His opponents would do well to stay a safe distance from this Harry Hotspur of American politics.

Mr. Reynolds, the Inspector of Police of New Orleans, is represented as having said that the anti-spitting ordinance of the city will soon be strictly enforced. Good news, indeed, is this. The spitter is a public nuisance, and so is the "stubher"—the man who carries aboard the street-car the smoldering stub of a sickening cigar. The law should make such persons respect the rights of others. The measure of one's civilization is the extent to which one regards the rights of his fellow-men. The savage thinks only of himself and the gratification of his own desires.

It is said that the jurymen in the famous Beattie murder case began each day while the trial was in progress by singing and praying together. Perhaps this accounts in some measure why they did their work so well. Those who thus deport themselves can usually be depended upon to do their duty. When Louis Napoleon reconnoitered on the eve of the Battle of Sedan, and heard the German troops singing religious and household songs, he exclaimed: "We are beaten!" And so they were. There is a mighty power and inspiration in the glorious hymns of Zion, as well as in supplicating the Father's throne. So long as our family altars stand and the gospel is sung by our firesides, the foundations of the Republic are apt to remain unshaken. The Bible and the hymn book—let them he scattered from ocean to ocean! They are more potent than constitutions and armies and navies in the building of an empire and the conservation of a people's welfare.

Lady Cook, after having carefully inspected conditions in the "Windy City," exclaimed in a public address a few days ago: "I am surprised to find how many good, pure, men there are in Chicago." That this note of optimism is fully warranted we do not at all doubt. There are good people everywhere—more of them now than at any former time in the world's history. The muck-raker sees only the corrupt and bad because he looks only for that. The preachment that nearly all persons in public life are lacking in integrity and high-mindedness is a base slander. Nor is it true that the people of means are the enemies of those who own little or no property. Such teaching is vicious and tends to develop a spirit of discontent and hatred that is dangerous to society. There has already been too much sowing of this kind, and if it is kept up, a frightful harvest must inevitably result. Let the man who thinks that everybody but himself will bear watching, introspect his own heart. When Elijah lost faith in Israel and was wailing out, "I, even I only, am left," the trouble was in his own condition. The suspicious eye is a curse to any man. It is the antithesis of the love that "thinketh no evil."

THE UTTERANCES OF TWO NOTED MEN.

The Western Christian Advocate of August 23 contained the following: "Governor Wilson, of New Jersey, in an address to the Anti-Saloon League of his State, said the liquor question had no place in politics, as it was purely a moral and social question. He further stated that it is not sound statesmanship to allow political parties to be wrecked on the rock of prohibition." Not having seen the full text of Gov. Wilson's address, we forhear to comment upon it any further than to remark that he seems rather solicitous to preserve the interests of the political parties.

In striking contrast with this apparently cautious utterance are the following ringing words concerning prohibition, spoken before the Indiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church a few days since by that worthy and useful layman, Ex-Governor Frank J. Hanly:

"Deep as my love for my party has been and is, and it has been and is deep, * * * if it betrays its trust again, I will drag into the light its sin. I will paint its crime and folly. There will be no padlocks on my lips. If it fails next year, either in platform or ticket, I will not share its blood-stained hire. I will not help it bear its million-fingered shame. I will not bring my conscience to another brewer's mart. I cannot stay and keep my own hands clean. I cannot stand forever before the truth and mock it with a lie. And I will not go in silence, for in such case silence would be crime. There will be others—thousands of others—and together rising above the crime and folly of an evil time we will wash our hands of its sin and shame and curse; we will lift this great cause up until a common love shall fuse our hearts into one. We will appeal anew to the consciences of men. We will proclaim a new crusade with a prayer-forged zeal that will not be denied. Planted upon the adamant of a righteous cause, we'll put nerve into our task. We'll hew down the opposition. We'll strike home as Christians may, as freemen can strike home—home to the heart and root of this monster wrong—strike home until the blows we deal shall be felt the wide world through."

A SOURCE OF STRENGTH.

There is a materialism so blind that it is most difficult to make it perceive the spiritual. To it, the body is the whole of man, and the gratification of its appetites the sum of all good. To talk to persons thus afflicted of the deathless soul, and what God has prepared for it, is like casting pearls before swine. Sometimes such characters are even found in the Church. The following facetious, and yet pathetic, illustration of this is taken from Lippincott's Magazine: "One day a pastor was calling upon a dear old lady, one of the 'pillars' of the church to which she belonged. As he thought of her long and useful life, and looked upon her sweet, placid countenance, bearing but few tokens of her ninety-two years of earthly pilgrimage, he was moved to ask her: 'My dear Mrs. S., what has been the chief source of your strength and sustenance during all these years? What has appealed to you as the real basis of your unusual vigor of mind and body, and has been to you an unfailing comfort through joy and sorrow? Tell me, that I may pass the secret on to others, and, if possible, profit by it myself.' The old lady thought a moment, then lifting her eyes, dim with age, yet kindling with sweet memories of the past, answered briefly, 'Victuals.'"

OUR METHODIST ORPHANAGES.

On another page of this issue we print a picture of three little girls rescued by the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, with a description of the pathetic conditions surrounding their lives written by Rev. A. S. J. Neill. On the same page we publish an appeal by Rev. W. H. Williams, manager of the Mississippi Orphans Home, in behalf of that great and deserving institution. This suggests the vast importance of this kind of work in the life of the Church.

There can be no doubt in the mind of the Christian who pays any heed to the teachings of our blessed Lord, his interest in children, the exalted place he assigned them in God's kingdom, his unquestioned condemnation of those who "offend," and his general attitude to the unfortunate, that such work is one of the greatest obligations placed upon his followers. It is beyond question one of the best opportunities to do for suffering humanity that which we cannot but believe our Lord will most certainly commend. What could be nobler than to provide for the unfortunate and homeless, the destitute and neglected child?

That our Church is more active in this work, that it is aroused to the necessity of this class of Christian activity, is one of the hopeful and promising evidences of vitality. In fact, since the founding of Methodism our people have not been unmindful of this great work. The voice of Whitefield still echoes throughout our Church in behalf of the homeless child. Yet, when we consider our vast resources, when we behold the profligate expenditure of the wealthy in their selfish pursuit of pleasure and the accumulation of wealth, it seems a pity that there should ever be a struggle on the part of these institutions, seeking, as they are, to help the helpless.

With the ever-increasing cost of living, while the rich are growing richer and the poor becoming less able to cope with life's struggle, with the rich homes becoming to an alarming extent childless homes, and the poorer classes bringing children into the world for whom they cannot properly provide, the need of such Homes for children under Protestant influences becomes imperative.

We are pleased to learn the great good being accomplished by the two institutions for the homeless children in our patronizing Conferences. They are doing a grand and glorious work, and it should be the pleasure of every Christian to help these orphanages. There are men of wealth, both in Louisiana and Mississippi, who are amply able to endow these Homes and make it possible to develop them to a high state of perfection and usefulness. Such can bestow untold good upon vast numbers of homeless children for generations by placing ample means at the disposal of the Boards of Directors of these institutions. Capable men have been selected by the Conferences and appointed to take charge of and conduct these institutions. They are devoting their time and energy to this work, and they deserve the liberal support of all our Methodist people.

The Mississippi Orphans' Home, at Jackson, Mississippi, has been in operation a number of years and is a permanently established institution of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences. It has done a great work in the past. All Mississippi Methodists are justly proud of this institution. They now care for 196 children. They have just completed two new additions to their home. They have a fine plant. Yet they need and must have continued support. Their "Work Day" is the 14th of October. Let every Sunday school and church in the State do its part. There is no reason why $10,000 should not be raised in Mississippi for this Orphanage. The Orphanage at Ruston, La., is a younger institution, but has made a splendid beginning. The reports of the work done are most gratifying. They now have sixty-one children to care for, and the number is increasing as time passes. They owe a balance on their debt of $7000, which will fall due on Dec. 1. Let the Sunday schools and churches of Louisiana respond to the call for help and raise the entire amount needed to pay this debt. It is but a bagatelle, when we consider the worthiness of the cause, the wealth of our people, and the prosperity of the country. Let us arouse the children by setting the example, and let October 7, "Work Day" for Louisiana, be the greatest day in the history of the Orphanage!

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. W. Sandell, of Magnolia, who is on the Honor Roll of the Mississippi Conference, celebrated his eighty-second birthday on September 18.

"The Stability of Christ's Church" was Dr. Werlein's theme at the First Methodist Church of New Orleans last Sunday. His discourse was a strong and impressive one.

In a business note to the publisher, Rev. A. S. Lutz, of Homer, La., adds the following postscript: "My work is moving forward. My prayer meetings are now being largely attended, as I am using a stereopticon to illustrate the life of Christ."

Dr. J. C. Barr, pastor of the Lafayette Presbyterian Church of this city, has received a call from the First Presbyterian Church of Greenwood, Miss.

He has taken it under advisement, and will announce his decision later.

The address which President J. R. Countiss, of Grenada College, delivered at the Millsaps opening has been much complimented. Brother Countiss is an alumnus of Millsaps College and feels a deep interest in its welfare.

Rev. A. G. Shankle chose as his text at Rayne Memorial last Sunday at 11 a. m. I. Corinthians 4:17, 18, and preached on the philosophy of suffering. The sermon, which was a striking one, was reported at considerable length in The Picayune.

Rev. Joe Ramsay, the blind Tennessee evangelist, commenced a series of revival services at the First Methodist Church of Monroe last Sunday. The singing is being conducted by Rev. E. R. Smoot, of Greenwood, Miss. It is expected that the meeting will continue two weeks.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate of September 21 contained the following personal: "Dr. Franklin N. Parker, the new professor of Biblical Literature, occupied the pulpit of Trinity Church last Sunday morning, and Rev. W. W. Peele, Headmaster of Trinity Park School, preached at night."

Rev. Robert Selby, of Moss Point, was present at the openings of Whitworth and Millsaps Colleges, and made an interesting talk on each of these occasions. He has been connected with the educational work of his Conference for a number of years, and has done much to foster and promote it.

Rev. W. W. Woollard spent Tuesday night, September 19, at Brookhaven, Miss., with his long-time friends, Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Wyatt. Brother Wyatt is most active in his new field and his labors are being graciously blessed by the Master. He kindly forwarded us an additional list of subscribers last week.

The Carrollton Conservative (Mississippi) of September 23 says: "Rev. J. A. Hall preached at the Methodist Church last Sunday, morning and evening, to fine congregations. Mr. Hall's sermons were luminous expositions of Scripture, amply illustrated by historical incidents and adorned with rare classical citations."

Dr. John T. Sawyer has moved to Lake View at the west end of the city, where he resides with his son-in-law, Mr. J. Donaldson, at the corner of Taylor Avenue and Bienville Street. As there is no mail delivery in that part of New Orleans, he has secured a box in the postoffice (No. 1569), to which he desires his correspondents to direct their letters.

Rev. D. H. Crowson, of Paris, Miss., writes: "Since I last wrote we have had three very successful meetings. They were at Shady Grove, Pine Flat, and Palestine. I think we shall be able to make a most gratifying report from this charge to the Annual Conference." Brother Crowson has our thanks for his promise to press the claims of the Advocate in the near future.

At the recent session of the Southwest Missouri Conference, Rev. Claude M. Simpson, at the request of his official board, was returned by Bishop Denny to the West Port Church of Kansas City for the third year. This congregation reported 90 additions to the Church and $5,612 raised for all purposes during the year past, which is said to be the best record in the history of the charge.

The entertainment of the Louisiana Annual Conference, which is to meet in this city on December 6, was one of the subjects discussed at the Preachers' Meeting last Monday. The body will meet in Parker Memorial Church, but the other congregations of the city will assist in providing for the delegates and visitors. Nothing will be left undone to make the occasion a memorable one.

The Commercial Appeal of September 18 contained an interesting write-up of the progress of Methodism in the Corinth District under the aggressive leadership of the Rev. B. P. Jaco, who is on the eve of completing his quadrennium of service in that capacity. It was written by Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of Rienzi, and was embellished with pictures of several of the faithful workers in that field.

The following are the members of the Commission appointed by the General Board of Missions to investigate conditions in New Orleans, with a view to projecting the missionary work here upon a larger and more systematic scale: Bishop Collins Denny, Bishop E. D. Mouzon, Dr. W. F. McMurry, Dr. John M. Moore, Dr. O. E. Brown, Miss Belle Bennett, and Mrs. R. W. MacDonnell. This commission is expected to meet in this city October 24.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of Rienzi, Miss., favored us with some additional names to be placed on our subscription files last week, for which we extend him our thanks. He reports that the parsonage at that place has recently been given a new coat of paint. He gives the credit for this commendable piece of work to the Home Mission Society and Sister Cunningham, who, he says, are ever busy in the service of the Master and his Church.

Brother W. S. Holmes, of Baton Rouge, was in the city on Wednesday, September 20, and paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. He is the Sunday school superintendent and chairman of the board of stewards of our First Church in the capital city of Louisiana, and also takes an interest in the general affairs of Southern Methodism. He spoke in commendatory terms of the work of Brothers Warlick and White, our pastors in Baton Rouge.

Hon. H. H. White, of Alexandria, is a delegate to the Ecumenical Methodist Conference, which will meet in Toronto on October 4. Brother White is one of the most successful lawyers in the State, and will make a worthy representative in that distinguished body. He was one of Louisiana's delegates to the last General Conference in Asheville, N. C., and has often been charged with responsible duties by his brethren in the Church, who hold him in high esteem.

In a personal note received a few days since, Dr. J. W. Boswell says: "Brother Barbee is correct in what he said in his recent article in the Advocate concerning the origin of Vanderbilt University, according to my recollection. Dr. W. C. Johnson was never accorded the credit to which his services in launching that movement justly entitled him." Dr. Boswell's opinion on this subject should carry much weight, as he was wide awake as to what was going on in those days.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, the capable presiding elder of the Shreveport District, writes that the members of the Noel Memorial Church, of Shreveport, are delighted with their new pastor, Rev. Felix R. Hill, Jr., who is preaching to large congregations. Work on the new house of worship is progressing rapidly, and it is thought that things will be in readiness for the laying of the corner-store in October. It is also expected that a parsonage will be constructed within the next few weeks.

Rev. W. V. Shearer is making full proof of his ministry on the Moorhead charge, North Mississippi Conference. With his meeting at Sunflower City yet to hold, he has received 65 members during the year. He has built a parsonage and one church, and has taken good subscriptions to erect two other houses of worship. He has recently held a remarkably successful revival at Baird, in which he had the valuable assistance of Rev. O. L. Savage. An account of this awakening from Brother Shearer's pen appears in this issue.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder of the Newton District, in forwarding his fourth round of appointments, makes the following gratifying statement concerning the condition of the work under his supervision: "I have just finished my third round of quarterly conferences. I find by comparison that the financial reports are better than they were the third quarter last year. Much local work is being done, a number of successful revivals are being held: the figures so far as they have gone to record, show 202 persons added to the Church during the quarter."

Rev. P. H. Howse, of Hattiesburg, spent several hours in New Orleans last Thursday on his way to Wilson, La., whither he was going to assist Brother Sweeney in a meeting. He reported success in his evangelistic work, to which he has been assiduously devoting himself during the summer season. He recently was with Rev. J. W. Harper on the Mount Hermon charge in a series of services, which resulted in 16 accessions to the Church, and last week he labored with Brother Dominick at Vossburg, Miss., where there was a gracious season of refreshing.

A letter from Rev. C. A. Northington, dated Bellfontaine, Miss., Sept. 25, says: "The death angel visited the home of Dr. E. F. Arnold and claimed for its victim, Rev. John R. D. King, who had been here for nearly five years, and who had not been outside of the yard in that time. During this year, every time I visited him he had a word of encouragement to say to me. He passed away on the morning of the 25th inst. His remains were interred in North Union Cemetery, a large concourse of friends following the cortege to the grave."

Information has reached us that the Rev. George Jackson, who is an honored superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, has not been altogether well for the past few days. He has abandoned the idea of going to Texas to live, and expects to spend the remainder of his life in Louisiana and then to sleep beneath her generous soil. Brother Jackson is at present in Lecompte, where he intends to remain for some time yet. We trust that the bracing weather of October will entirely relieve him of his physical troubles, and bring to him renewed strength and vigor.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, of Jackson, Miss., in writing the editor, states that his health is good, but that he greatly misses the lamented Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, who was a resident of the same city. Among other things Brother Lewis says: "For eighteen months he and I belonged to the same Sunday school class at the First Methodist Church. We were drawn very close together by our association. It was a great treat to have him in our home. He was most helpful in the Sunday school." Brother Lewis is right in his estimate of Dr. Sullivan. He was a rare and most noble man.

Writing from Cochrane, Ala., on the 21st inst., Rev. W. J. Burt, our pastor at that place, says: "Brother J. B. Binion died yesterday and was buried at Hebron to-day. He passed away suddenly while riding in his automobile. He was one of your subscribers, and a leading member of the Church on this charge. In his decease, Methodism here has sustained a great loss. His good wife is prostrated with grief, and I ask the prayers of all your readers for her." We regret to hear of the death of this worthy man, and we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved loved ones.

Miss Bessie Cooper, the accomplished daughter of Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, has gone to Lynchburg, Va., where she will take a post-graduate course in the Randolph-Macon Woman's College. Miss Cooper took the B.L. degree at Whitworth three years ago, and the A.B. degree at Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., in June 1910. She spent last year in teaching science at Whitworth, proving herself to be a most capable instructor. She is a brilliant and painstaking student, and her friends predict that she will win new honors in the great institution which now claims her as a matriculate.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, presiding elder of the Greenville District, and Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, were in the city on Wednesday, the 20th inst. They, with the Rev. N. E. Joyner, compose the Executive Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate Publishing Committee. These brethren at the meeting of the Publishing Committee last October were charged with the task of gathering information concerning the publication of the Advocate, which will be submitted to the full committee at its regular annual meeting toward the last of next month. It was that they might confer concerning this matter that these gentlemen met last week.

In a communication written from Shreveport on Sept. 24, Sister H. R. Singleton kindly sends the following news item: "Bishop Mouzon writes that his friends have prevailed on him to attend the Ecumenical Methodist Conference which is to be held in Toronto, October 4-17, and that to do this he has been compelled to cancel his engagements in Louisiana. He has called the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference to meet him in Alexandria on Nov. 7, instead of the abandoned date of October 3. I am sending this note in Mr. Singleton's absence from the city, hoping that it will reach you in time for this information to be given out in the next issue of the Advocate."

Bishop Mouzon has transferred Rev. C. M. Thompson from the Texas to the Louisiana Conference and stationed him at Donaldsonville. Brother Thompson has been in the active work for nineteen years, all of which have been spent in the Lone Star State. Among the appointments that he has served are Columbus, Bastrop, Beaumont, and Marshall. In a note to the editor he expresses a purpose to do his best for the cause in Louisiana, and a desire to meet and know the brethren among whom he has come to live. The Texas Advocate of the 21st inst. thus refers to the removal of Brother Thompson from the State: "We regret to give him up. He has done fine work in Texas, and we commend him most highly to the Louisiana brethren. They will find him worthy of their confidence and well qualified for good work."

Judge R. R. Reid, of Amite City, La., has formally announced that he will enter the race for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, to succeed Justice Breaux, whose term will expire in 1914. The primary will be held next August. Judge Reid is an able lawyer, and has had several years of judicial experience. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and a man of most exemplary life and character. It was our privilege to sit with him in the last General Conference, and we entertain no doubt that he would adorn the Supreme Bench, should he be elected. The Advocate is not in politics, and it is not our purpose to disparage any other candidate. But we confess to a sense of gratification when we see such a man as Judge Reid offering his services to the public. Too often it is the case that those who are best fitted for responsible places will not allow themselves to be considered available for them.

OUR GREAT EXEMPLAR.

Preacher, it is well to study Augustine, Chrysostom, Spurgeon, Beecher, Brooks; it is best to study the world's greatest preacher, Jesus Christ.

How the heavy vines of over-wise and over-foolish commentary and criticism have covered that lordly tree, that majestic monarch of the world's books—our Bible.

Would you be a real teacher? Then you must learn the simplest, hardest lesson ever taught, the method of the world's greatest teacher—the highest thoughts wedded to the plainest words. Simplicity is the true foundation of it all.

Are you really thirsty, man? What can be more welcome than a drink of old father Adam's wine of Eden, water. Are you really thirsty, soul? There is only one refreshing drink, the ever fresh Water of Life, found in the reservoir of the Book!—New York Christian Advocate.

J. C. BELL, JR., was born at Trenton, Miss., Smith County, July 19, 1900, and died May 30, 1911. His life was spared for only a few short years. God gave him for some good purpose; his work is finished, and he awaits the loved ones in the home of the soul. His death was sudden and unexpected. A freight wagon, heavily loaded, ran over him, killing him instantly. What a shock to his father, mother, brothers and sisters! He was an unusually intelligent child. His father misses him so much in his business; he trusted him as if he had been a man. The memories of such a son are heart-treasures, far above any heritage of gold. His body was laid to rest at Zion Cemetery, to await the sound of the trumpet on the morning of the resurrection.

D. E. VICKERS, P. C.

ELLIOTT O. STILLE was born in Sabine Town, Texas, July 8, 1869, and died at his home in Many, La., Aug. 4, 1911, aged 42. He was married in 1900 to Miss Lillian Tetts, who, with his only child, Zelma, is left to mourn their loss. Brother Stille was a lifelong Methodist, having been reared in that faith. Both his parents were Methodists. He was undemonstrative in his temperament. He exerted an influence by virtue of his exemplary character, rather than by words. His faith in Christ never wavered, and just before he died he told his brother that all was well with him. We laid his remains to rest in the Many Cemetery. To the wife, daughter, brothers and sisters, and other loved ones, we would say, look up to God and trust him for a glad meeting on the other side of the river of death, where there will be no more sad partings.

B. H. SHEPPARD, P. C.

MARIA LOUISE, daughter of Madison F. Ames and Minerva Hogan Ames, was born in Starkville, May 28, 1867, and died there at 5 a.m., July 26, 1911. As a personal friend and former pastor, I am requested to write a few words concerning her life and character.

Miss Maria was born, reared and lived in a religious atmosphere. No more consistent, faithful and loyal servants of God than her parents ever lived, and it was but natural that she should show the effect of her rearing by an early profession of religion. This she did by uniting with the church at the age of eleven, under the pastorate of Rev. J. W. Lawrance. The very excellence of her life and character largely deny us the material for writing her religious history. Her very fidelity to duty prevents the record of those lapses and recoveries which form the staple of history in many lives.

Having given her allegiance to the Savior, she never wavered in that allegiance. So with her relation to her Church. She believed in its teachings and methods, and was ever ready to defend it as well as to work for it. She was absolutely reliable in her attendance upon its ordinances, and when able it never occurred to her to neglect the public and stated means of grace provided by her Church. Likewise she was loyal to the point of absolute reliability to her pastor. And she was thus loyal because of the deeper underlying loyalty she had to Him who is the Head over all the Church. For twenty-one years she was a faithful teacher in Sunday school. As a daughter and sister, her life was in accord always with her profession as a Christian. She was a true and loyal friend to me, as well as to countless others. Indeed, loyalty was the keynote to her life and character—loyalty, conscience and convictions, loyalty to her Church, loyalty to God.

For the last twelve years of her life, Miss Maria was an invalid and a sufferer. Like her Lord, she was made perfect through suffering, for, with her, patience had her perfect work. She was never impatient. With conscientious firmness, through all these years she steadfastly refused to use opiates and stimulants. And when God had perfected her, he called, and quietly, calmly, peacefully, she entered into rest, and Maria Ames was in heaven.

Her end was the end and breaking up of the Ames' home. How pathetic the breaking up of a home! This particular home had been for over half a century the scene of domestic love, peace and virtue—a place where there was illustrated the great gain of contentment with godliness; a place where there were inculcated and practiced the homely virtues of industry, frugality and plain honesty alike toward God and man, and where there ever burned upon the altar of home religion the ceaseless sacrifice of faithfulness to family, to friends, to country, to Church, and to God. How pathetic is the end of a Christian home!

N. G. AUGUSTUS.

Durant, Miss.

WILLIAMS.—Walton Albert, son of Rev. W. W. and Lillie C. Williams, was born at Multona Springs, Miss., May 10, 1880, and died at Kingston, Okla., August 23, 1911. Between these dates was lived a life that was in many respects full of interest. He had a happy childhood. At the age of six he, with simple, childlike faith in Christ, assumed the vows of the Methodist Church, which vows he faithfully and scrupulously kept to the day of his death. From childhood he showed a fondness for books, and easily held his place in his classes. In 1902 he was graduated with the degree of B. S. from Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., later taking from the same college the degree of LL.B. While in his twenty-first year, he filled the chair of natural science in Bellhaven College, a select school for young women. So satisfactory did he fill this place, that it was tendered him for another year, but owing to his youth and the peculiar surroundings, he declined a longer term of service. At this time he was offered and accepted a position in the civil service of the United States Government, and was assigned to educational work in the Philippine Islands. By reason of his diligence and ability he was rapidly promoted, until, at the end of five years, he stood third in order for further promotion in the Bureau of Education of these Islands. In 1910 he returned to his home land, spending about four months on a visit to his loved ones. Evidently moved by a desire to serve suffering humanity, he returned to his post of duty. About the middle of February of this year, he felt his health giving way. His business was wound up hastily, and preparation made for his long trip across the water to his mother's home. He landed in San Francisco the last of May, well nigh exhausted from his long journey. Finally he reached Yuma, Ariz., where he rested in a hospital until he was able by the help of his brother to resume his journey home. He had great hope of recovering his health; but, in spite of all that medical skill and loving hands could do, he lived only four weeks and three days. He was a fine specimen—a cultured, refined, Christian gentleman, pure in thought, chaste in word, and upright in deed. Righteousness was his motto from early boyhood until he breathed his last. When he was conscious that the end was approaching, he met it with Christian resignation, saying: "I am ready." About the last words he uttered were: "I am going home." We are accustomed to think and say: "Thus ends a life of noble promise." Such is not the case. In no sense is death to such the end, but rather is it the doorway by which he steps into a larger and a better sphere of life. Nor should we grieve as those who would recall him. For it were selfishness indeed to recall our dead when thus they cross death's portals, prepared to meet God and dwell in his presence. To the loved ones who mourn and miss him most let me say in sympathetic sincerity: "You should not recall, if you could. Just a little while—oh, it will not be long—until, by the riches of God's grace, you shall meet and greet him where no more parting shall ever come and no tears shall ever fall." He leaves a mother, father, one brother and one sister to follow on.

His father's friend,
GEO. C. FRENCH.

A MOST IMPORTANT MATTER.

To the Pastors and People of the Mississippi Conference: Let it be said to the honor of the Mississippi Conference, that the assessment for Conference Claimants is nearly always paid in full. This is as it should be, but the amount assessed is all too little; $6,000 was distributed among the claimants during 1910, and during the same time the Conference paid for the current expenses of our Jackson Orphanage $14,563.05. Not one cent less should be given to the Orphanage. More is needed. But surely we cannot allow one cent of the meager $6,200 assessed for our needy claimants to be missing. The treasurer of the Joint Board, Mr. S. A. Tomlinson, of Gulfport, has informed us that he is unable to meet the next quarterly payment for lack of funds. Let us urge the preachers of the Conference to take this collection as soon as possible and send the assessment in full to Brother Tomlinson.

NOLEN B. HARMON,
Secretary of the Joint Board of Finance.

"One of the most terrific arraignments of the whisky traffic we have ever seen is contained in the little book under the title which heads this article, which is from the strong pen of Mrs. Martha Carolyne Keller Miller, and is published by the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The scene is laid in the extreme South and the story from preface to finish moves with a momentum and moral force which is wonderful."

Byhalia, Miss.:

I send a few notes from the field and Byhalia charge. We began our meetings at Fountainhead Church the fourth Sunday in July with our third quarterly conference. Brother W. M. Young, the presiding elder, was with us and stayed all the week. He did a week of the best preaching I have ever heard. I never have heard a series of as good sermons from any man. He preached two sermons that I have never heard equaled by anyone. Brother Young is finishing his quadrennium on this district in fine favor and has done a great work. The Bishop would do well to move him to some other district, for he is a fine presiding elder, and will do a good work anywhere. We held our meeting at Emory the second week in August, and Brother Bradley, of Holly Springs, did the preaching and did it well. He is one of our first young men, a good preacher, and is capable of filling anything in the Conference. We had nine additions on profession of faith in these meetings.—J. W. Raper, P. C.

Kilmichael, Miss.:

Our revival meetings have been held at every church on our charge. On the fourth Sunday in July, we held our first meeting at Lodi Church, with Rev. J. A. Coleman, of Malvina, Miss., to do the preaching. Brother Coleman is a good gospel preacher and a good revivalist. He did some very fine work in this meeting, and the results were excellent. On the fifth Sunday in July we began a meeting at Stewart, with Dr. H. T. Gaines to do the preaching. Dr. Gaines is a good preacher and rendered excellent service, but politics interfered with us considerably, the election being held that week. After all, however, we had a fairly good meeting. The first week in August we opend a meeting at Kilmichael, in which the preaching was done by Rev. J. W. Raper, of Byhalia, Miss. We had a very fine meeting. There were several additions to the church, backsliders were reclaimed, and several family altars established. Brother Raper is one of our strongest gospel preachers. Some of our people here say that they have never heard his sermons excelled. The fourth Sunday in August we held our fourth meeting at Edgeworth Church, with Rev. T. E. Gregory, of North Carrollton, to do the preaching, who is a strong and forceful man in the pulpit. Much good was accomplished. We feel that the Lord has most graciously blessed us this year. We have received 36 into the Church this year on the charge. Our congregations are increasing every Sunday. Our prayer meeting and Sunday school at Kilmichael are good. We have a goodly number of consecrated people on this charge to help us in the work. It is good to be here. Pray for us.—T. J. Halfacre, P. C.

Eureka Circuit:

My summer work is now ended and I thought possibly a short report from the Eureka Circuit would be of interest to some. I began my first meeting at Eureka, the first Sunday in August, with Brother W. R. Williams to do the preaching. He gave us a series of plain, practical sermons, which strengthened the church very much. The second Sunday in August we began our meeting at Mt. Olivet. Brother J. S. Purcell, of the Mississippi Conference, was with us and preached us a series of strong gospel sermons. His trumpet never gave out an uncertain sound and he opposed sin in all its forms. We received four here on profession of faith, and baptized six infants. The third Sunday we opened up at Terza. Brother W. N. Duncan came to us Monday morning and remained with us till Friday at 11 o'clock. It is useless for me to say that the preaching was well done, for that goes without saying. With the earnestness of his soul he divided the Word of truth to us. We received one on profession of faith and one by letter. The fourth Sunday we started our meeting at Lovejoy, and on Monday Brother W. J. O'Bryant came to us and remained with us till Friday night. Uncle Billy preached to us from a heart full of love for lost souls, and here we had five to join on profession of faith and two by letter. Then, on the first Saturday in September, Brother W. M. Young came to us at Pisgah and held our third quarterly conference and remained with us till the following Thursday. While we did not have any accessions to the church, yet the spiritual life of the church was quickened by his earnest preaching. On the second Sunday night in September we began our last meeting at Cole Springs, with Brother A. M. Bennett to do the preaching. He did us earnest, faithful work, which is sure to bring forth fruit. My summer's work is now over and I am back with "the widow and orphans" once more, and am looking forward to a few days' visit from my father and mother.—C. Wesley Baley.

Courtland, Miss.

Buford, Miss.:

I will try to report the work on Buford charge. We have held three meetings since our last report—one at Jamestown down on the N. O. G. N. railroad, three miles south of West Columbia. Brother Hilary Westbrook, from the DeSoto charge, assisted me there. We had a good meeting. Brother Westbrook did some clear preaching and God honored his labors. Our second meeting was at old Hopewell. Brother Leggett, our presiding elder, held this meeting for me. It is needless to say the preaching was fine and some good was done at that place. We have few active lay workers, hence Brother Leggett and I had to do most that was done. Our third quarterly conference was held at this place on August 18.

Our third meeting was at Sandy Hook, 3 miles north of the Louisiana line. Brother Hutson, a Baptist minister in the employ of the Fernwood Lumber Company, helped me here on Friday and Saturday. The people all liked him. Then Brother H. E. Carter, from Monticello, came on Monday and preached till Wednesday night three times a day. Lots of good was done.

I have rented a house in West Columbia, Mississippi, and on last Friday night we were the recipients of a fine pounding at the hands of the people of this place. I noticed that the most of the participants were young men; however, the ladies took part, of course. We took advantage of the opportunity afforded and invited them to come again. May we do these people good, spiritually, as they minister to us in material things.—W. B. Waldrop, P. C.

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The Courtland Sunday School has enthusiastic teachers, and is planning a higher grade of work for the coming year.

Miss Hammer's Men's Class, at New Albany, Miss., is planning an increase in membership and a larger program of local services.

"A teacher is one who has liberty enough, and time enough, and head enough, and heart enough to be a master in the kingdom of life."

Pope Station and Oakland have good teachers, and are ready, anxious and willing to participate in an enlarged and progressive Sunday school program.

Here is a fine motto for an Adult Class: "I am only one; I cannot do everything, but I can do something; what I can do, I ought to do; what I ought to do, by the grace of God, I will do."

* * *

Mr. Hebert Holmes, at Senatobia, has a class of supply teachers always ready for service, and he feels he has solved one of the greatest problems of a superintendent in this way.

* * *

Gov. Shands, Sardis, has a good class of men, and it is a rare privilege to be able to sit under his skilled teaching every Sunday. Mr. Carleton, that enthusiastic superintendent, reports a fine Children's Day service.

* * *

Mr. William Carter, the superintendent at Tyro, has a good school doing a specially fine class of work for the country. His teachers are punctual and untiring, and real results are confidently looked for here. He has been superintendent for eighteen years.

* * *

Mr. Jno. F. Pepper, than whom there is no finer superintendent or Christian gentleman, has a chief welcomer in his great Sunday school, and a welcomer for each department. Such an officer, with a fine, rare smile and hearty handshake, is invaluable to a school in any land. Get a chief welcomer, and before next Sunday.

Do not allow Rally Day to be just a spasm of enthusiasm, but a foundation, strong and steady for a splendid year's work. "Plan your work and work your plan," and remember that it is individual work for individuals which will win in the long run. Rally Day is not for information but for impression, and the impression of that day of high-water enthusiasm must be supplemented by earnest, honest, constant work.

One father, who is greatly interested in his young son's spiritual and intellectual welfare, gives him every school and home advantage, and demands as compensation so many chapters in the Bible read per month and an estimate given of some prominent hero in Holy Writ. The boy pays his way by the studying of the greatest of all books, and is getting, at the same time, a sense of independence that he is paying his own way. The father even now feels the experiment is well worth the attempt. This is only one of the many indications of a really serious awakening to the needs and real desire in the hearts of the people for Bible study.

One hundred preachers in our Conference have not sent in Children's Day collections. It is not yet too late for that valuable and highly educative service to be held; but if it is not feasible to celebrate the day, select a special day for a rousing good Sunday school collection and send it to Brother Gladney, to make him feel that you are interested in this great department of the work. He is preparing to entertain Conference, and would be greatly gratified if each pastor would send in a generous Sunday school collection at once. The Memphis Conference has not had one delinquency in five years, and the attempt is being made to make this the first year of many, when we can stand shoulder to shoulder with this finely organized Sunday School Conference.

Rally Day programs can be secured by writing Mr. E. E. French, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Send for them at once; plan well and wisely for that day. Rally Day should be one of visions and facts, and not of glittering generalities. Rally the men, women and children, and let it be the best Rally Day in the history of your Sunday school. And do not forget to send to Dr. Chappell a generous collection for that Model Sunday School Building to be erected at Waynesville, N. C. Use in observing the day, as far as possible, your own home talent, but if you need special uplift along certain lines, secure a good specialist and make the most of his presence to rebuild the weak places in your school while you have a large and enthusiastic crowd. Observe brevity, unity and attractiveness in every detail of the program, and make the exercise so interesting that everybody present will carry away a sense of the value of modern, organized Sunday school work. Invite every member of the Home Department, the cradle roll, the church membership and the prospective new members, and have a lovely flower or some button or remembrance for each one to take away, as well as a better memory—that of a glorious, well-spent hour, close to the Master's great throbbing heart.

Not a Day in Bed.

Gramling, S. C.—In a letter from Gramling, Mrs. Lula Walden says: "I was so weak before I began taking Cardui, that it tired me to walk just a little. Since taking it, I do all the housework for my family of nine, and have not been in bed a day. Cardui is the greatest remedy for women on earth." Weak women need Cardui. It is the ideal woman's tonic, because it is especially adapted for women's needs. It relieves bachache, headache, dragging feelings, and other female misery. Try Cardui. A few doses will show you what it can do for you. It may be just what you want.

MOORHEAD, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: We have just closed one of the most successful meetings I have ever been in. It was held at Baird, Miss., one of the appointments in our charge. Rather peculiar conditions have existed at Baird for a number of years. They have experienced several fires and various calamities have been visited upon them. Their population, in consequence, has greatly decreased within the past few years; so that with the many changes constantly taking place, Christianity suffered very materially. In fact, very little attention has been given to it by Bairdites; but this last week was a red letter week at Baird. Rev. O. L. Savage, of Rulleville, Miss., with his forceful and spiritual preaching, brought the people out in great flocks, and in a beautiful grove with nothing but the canopy of heaven over us, he proclaimed the gospel of the lowly Nazarene in its purity and simplicity, and in thus holding up the blessed Christ many were attracted to him and made to see the hideousness of their lost condition, and came asking "what they should do to be saved." Fourteen new members were added there, and a subscription of several hundred dollars for the erection of a church was taken, after which a committee on building was appointed. So it will only be a very few weeks before we will have a beautiful little church at Baird to serve God in. There has not been a church at this place for some years. I ask the prayers of all Christians for these dear people. They are anxious to rise again. Oh, what a faithful band of women there is here!

—W. V. Shearer, P. C.

NEW ORLEANS ..... LOUISIANA.

Epworth League Department.

(Conducted by Rev. H. B. Watkins, Magnolia, Miss., to whom all communications concerning League matters should be addressed.)

FOR OCT. 1, 1911.

Thought for the Quarter: "The High Level of Life."

October's Theme: "Firm Foundations."

To-day's Lesson (Oct. 1): Christian Stewardship; or, The Well Rounded Life.

References: II Corinthians 8:7; Luke 11:42.

Those who find fault with the "money demands" of the Church of Christ must go back to St. Paul's time to begin their strictures, for in his journeys we find him busy gathering the contributions for the poor saints at Jerusalem and laying down the broad principles of liberality upon which the Church is supported.

Let the Leaguers notice in verse five the principle which underlies not only Christian giving, but also all other Christian activity. Vain, indeed, to us are even our most generous gifts unless we first of all give ourselves. But having earnestly done that, how naturally flow out our material gifts for his cause.

Notice again in verse seven that he appeals for liberality on the ground of Christian symmetry of character: That "As ye abound in everything—ye abound in this grace also." How serious a flaw is it to find men plus (apparently) and prayerful and faithful, and yet to find them stingy with their means. How utterly disappointing to find them lacking in a grace which is the natural offspring of gratitude and love, as some one has said: When you say, "Let us pay," to have them say, "Let us pray."

Notice again St. Paul's lofty appeal for generosity on the ground of the unselfish renunciation of riches by our Lord Jesus Christ. Read aloud verse nine. Notice the words: "Though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might become rich." How splendid was St. Paul's vision of Christ's laying down his heavenly glory to assume the poverty and hardship of this world in order that through his sacrifice we might share his riches and glory! Surely, with such a vision, the true Christian will not withold his means from Christ's cause.

Notice again in verse twelve that it is the willing mind that Christ values rather than the largeness of the gift. It recalls the incident of the woman with her two mites, and our Lord's saying, "She hath given more than them all." And yet let no man with larger gifts console himself by presenting what he pleases to call his "widow's mite."

We take the following paragraphs from the Epworth Herald, which splendidly illustrate our theme to-day:

SEVEN WAYS OF GIVING.

By Dr. A. T. Pierson.

1. The careless way, to give something to every cause that is presented without inquiring into its merits.

2. The impulsive way, to give from impulse—as much and as often as love and piety and sensibility prompt.

3. The lazy way, to make a special offer to earn money for benevolent objects by fairs, festivals, etc.

4. The self-denying way, to save the cost of luxuries and apply them to purposes of religion and charity. This may lead to asceticism and self-complacence.

5. The systematic way, to lay aside as an offering to God a definite portion of our gains—one tenth, one fifth, one third, or one half. This is adapted to all whether rich or poor, and gifts would be largely increased if it were generally practiced.

6. The equal way, to give God and the needy just as much as we spend on ourselves, balancing all our personal expenditures by our gifts.

7. The heoric way, to limit our own expenditures to a certain sum and give away all the rest of our income. This was John Wesley's way.

Illustrations of the Theme.

"It is reported that a boy who was to personate a shining cherub in a play, on being covered over with a coating of gold leaf, which entirely closed the pores of the skin, died in consequence, before relief could be afforded. Woe to the Christian who gets so gold leafed over with his wealth that the pores of his sympathy are shut, and the out-goings of his charity restrained. He is thenceforth dead spiritually, though he may have a name to live."

A poor widow suddenly became wealthy through a legacy. She became less interested in giving, even doing less than in her poverty. Formerly she volunteered her gifts, now they came only after great urging. A cause that formerly received five dollars now received only twenty-five cents. Upon being remonstrated with by her pastor, she replied, "Ah! when day by day I looked to God for my bread, I had enough to spare; now I have to look to my ample income, and I am all the time haunted with the fear of losing it and coming to want. I had the guinea heart when I had shilling means; now I have the guinea means and the shilling heart."

Suggestive Thoughts and Quotations.

"Giving to God has a wonderful power to bind the life to him. * * * As sure as we live, Christian giving is a long step toward right living."

"Much of the vitality of our churches is consumed in getting the members to pay their debts. If God's stewards would settle their accounts with him freely and voluntarily, the vocation of the ecclesiastical money-lifter, with his corkscrew methods, would soon come to an end."

Bishop Bashford says: "The chief hindrance to the speedy evangelization of the world is the lack of money. With the walls of nations and races fallen down on the one side, and with literally hundreds of young people of culture and consecration eager to enter the field, Christians must either stop praying for more openings and more laborers for the harvest, or else they must begin giving. * * * I believe that the gifts under the new dispensation of the followers of Him who gave the last full measure of his life for us ought not to fall below the gifts under the old dispensation—that the Christian should not be stingier than the Jews. * * * Nine-tenths plus God are more than ten-tenths without him."

Is our manhood going to be dwarfed by the money power? Is it going to be written over our tombstone, 'He was born a man, but died a merchant'—manhood swallowed up by business?"

Rosy as a Girl.

Summit, N. C.—In a letter received from this place, Mr. J. W. Church, the notary public, says: "My wife had been ailing for nearly 12 years from female ailments, and at times, was unable to leave the house. She suffered agony with her side and back. We tried physicians for years, without relief. After these treatments all failed; she took Cardui, and gained in weight at once. Now she is red and rosy as a school girl." Cardui, as a tonic for women, has brought remarkable results. It relieves pain and misery and is the ideal tonic for young and old. Try it. At druggists.

BREAKING THE BOOK RECORD.

Our readers will be surprised to learn that perhaps for the first time in the history of the publishing world a religious book may head the list as having the largest sale in 1911, even over the most sensational novels. The author is a Methodist pastor in S. C., and the book entitled, The Bible Mode of Baptism, is now being read and studied by nearly 400,000 people all over the world.

It gives the Original Authority under which the apostles first baptized, and proves beyond a doubt that sprinkling was the mode. Thousands are surprised at such an array of facts. The last edition is nearly gone and the publishers regret that no more can be had at so low a price, 12c a copy; 15 for $1; 100 for $6, postpaid, while they last. All who want it at these prices should address the author, Rev. J. E. Mahaffey, 33 Main St., Clinton, S. C. One man sold 50 copies in four minutes, another has ordered his 25th hundred.

"SOME BETTER THINGS FOR US."

Dear Brother Meek: The return of the 18th of September calls back that date in 1829 when I was born; it also reminds me that two of our sainted Bishops, Parker and Fitzgerald, were born that year. I am still in this earthly tabernacle, and submissive to God's will in this as in other things. There are many inconveniences in the stage of man's life to which I have attained, but God's grace is sufficient for all that is required of men.

The first man, Adam, lived on the earth 930 years, and the ten living before the flood averaged 857½ years. Adam's work was to "dress and keep" the garden. We have not learned just how long he continued in that happy state. At the age of 82 years my chief labor is in the garden. I have not preached during the last year. The infirmities of age admonish me that my field of labor is where my hand finds something to do; I am a scholar in the Sunday school. Though my sight is dim and hearing heavy, I find it good to be in the house of the Lord, and take some part in the service.

The quotation at the head of this article is taken from Hebrews 11:40, and I understand it to refer to the manifestation of God in the flesh in the person of Jesus and his ministry in the dispensation of the Spirit as taught by the Apostle to the Hebrews. I am persuaded that the Church is not coming up to the standard that is provided for it, and to which it should aspire in this world. We read abont "a new covenant" and "a new testament" and "better sacrifices." Hear the Apostle in the present tense: "But ye are come unto Mt. Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels; to the general assembly and church of the first-born, which are written in heaven, and to God the judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than of Abel. Wherefore, we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear; for our God is a consuming fire." The same apostle says to the Philippians, "Those things which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do, and the God of peace shall be with you."

We live in an age of great progress, and great things are planned for the promotion of worldly interests at home and in other lands. But our forces are lacking in the true spirit of Christ. The Captain of our salvation has taught us plainly "ye cannot serve God and Mammon." The attempt to do that is the mistake of the world and the Church. The sainted Bishop Marvin said, "Covetousness is the sin of the Church." I feel constrained to write these things at this time of my life as a tribute of love of home, Church, State and country. The interests of these are all dear to my heart, and my hope and prayer is for some better things for all.

J. W. SANDELL.

FROM COURTLAND, MISSISSIPPI.

We closed our last protracted meeting of the season Friday evening, Sept. 15, at Pope, in which Rev. W. N. Duncan, of Batesville, did the preaching. The results were that the church was greatly edified by his excellent sermons and Christian spirit, a weekly prayer meeting was begun and four members were received into the Church on profession of faith. We were assisted at Wesley's Chapel in our revival services by Rev. S. L. Pope, of Senatobia. Our church was greatly revived, and Brother Pope completely captivated the hearts of all our people by his sweet Christian spirit and excellent preaching.

Rev. O. L. Savage, of Ruleville, assisted in the meeting and dedicated the church at Chapel Hill. He was a former pastor for four years, and the church was built during his pastorate. After it had been paid out of debt, everybody was anxious for him to dedicate it, which he did Sunday, August 13. No man who ever served this charge is more popular here than he. Notwithstanding he was with us during one of the rainiest weeks, the large church was filled at almost every service. Some of the results of the meeting were that we received three members on profession of faith and raised money to build a flue and purchase a stove for the church. Brother Savage is a whole-souled, genial character, and knows how to make and keep friends. He seems to have gone on the principle all of his life of "laugh and grow fat."

On the whole, our revivals have not been as satisfactory this year as last. Some of the hindering causes, we think, were the political state of mind of the people, the continued rains during the revival season and an epidemic of whooping cough in some of our communities. Nevertheless, we think the Church is on a firmer basis than it was at this time last year. At Courtland, and Wesley's Chapel especially, our Church has been strengthened by the acquisition of some valuable material by certificate. We had Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick with us at Courtland and Pope. Our people were delighted with her and were spiritually edified by her addresses, and the Sunday school interest has received a fresh impulse. The good ladies of Courtland and Wesley's Chapel have done a nice thing for us in the way of furnishing and otherwise improving the parsonage.

With best wishes for the Advocate, its editor and its readers, I am,

Fraternally yours,

T. H. PORTER.

Cut Down Expenses With An IHC Gasoline Engine

SAVING time and work on the farm cuts down expenses—makes farm life more pleasant and more profitable. Of all modern work and time savers—an I H C gasoline engine stands first. It operates the many machines that now mean hard, disagreeable, expensive hand labor. It solves the "keep-the-boys-on-the-farm" and "hired-help" problem.

Wouldn't you like to have a simple, economical, efficient, durable I H C—the engine that thousands of other progressive farmers are using with such great profit and satisfaction? Wouldn't you like to have it run your cream separator, feed cutter, pump, fanning mill, saw, grindstone, thresher, clover huller, electric light plant, washing machine, and do the other odd jobs around your farm?

An I H C engine costs less than any other if you measure by the years of service. And you can get just the I H C you want. There is

A RICH CHURCH.

Methodism is one among the mightiest Protestant and spiritual powers in the world to-day. Swarming over the hills and vales, the cities, towns and villages of the Christian lands, her sons of thunder and consolation, her Spirit-baptized ministry, have not confined their labors alone to the home field, but have gone out to the ends of the earth, carrying every whither the glorious gospel of the blessed God, preaching free and full salvation and singing her songs of faith and hope to all the hapless, sin-cursed sons and daughters of earth. Making much of the cleansing, saving blood of Christ, they have brought many millions of souls to Him who "is able to save unto the uttermost all who come to God through him." John Wesley's triumphant dying words—"the best of all is, God is with us"—have been gloriously verified wherever (as Chalmers called Methodism) "Christianity in earnest" has taken the field for Christ and precious, deathless souls. Though the enervating and deadening influence of "the world, the flesh and the devil" upon our beloved Church has been great, as she has increased in material wealth, worldly power and the honors of men; and though in consequence there may have been at times and in spots, a blighting of piety, a stunting of spiritual growth and a dampening of spiritual ardor; still, there is left us much of the old-time religion and the old-time power of the fathers, and our part in the conquest of the world for Christ moves on with increasing momentum and signal success. True it is, that some of the old-time peculiarities of form and modes of action have passed or been somewhat changed, yet the fires of God still burn in the bones of our preachers and their messages of love and power continue to ring true, as of yore, to "the truth as it is in Jesus Christ."

Christianity, and our Methodism as part of it, is to-day, as truly as is the United States, a world-power, and as the telegraph message now goes round the world, so also goes

Of Jesus and his love."

In the good providence of God, Christianity is building at home and abroad thousands of churches every year. The fact is that her heart is fixed and she means to take and hold every inch of mother earth for her God and his Christ. May every Christian Church throughout our globe be a rich church, according to God's idea of richness; not rich necessarily in the items of dollars and cents, brick and mortar, human titles, position and power; but rich as God counts richness. Since "God is a Spirit and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth," the members of a divinely rich church must be personally pious. Their piety must be actual and thorough. They must be more than book-members who are only duly registered—they must be regenerated. They must be born of God, born of the Spirit, and have within them the abiding testimony as to their sonship and heirship of God. Such is the only religion worth while—experimental religion and the living of consecrated lives.

That a church may be truly rich, there must be divine unction in its services. Rich after the God-idea of richness, it will be filled with the warm atmosphere of believing prayer, and necessarily the preaching of the Word will be in the power and demonstration of the Spirit. Then it shall be that the pastor, himself a man of God and aflame with his message, shall be fired of the Holy Ghost and prevail with God and man whenever he stands to prophesy before such a people.

The divinely rich church must have a teaching ministry. Instead of vapid theorizing, resonant periods, attitudinizing and soaring, but empty eloquence, all devoid of the Spirit, there will be "the warning of every man and the teaching of every man in all wisdom, seeking to present every man perfect in Christ Jesus." Such a church will be pervaded by a spirit of love. As the love of God is shed abroad in every heart, so love unrestrained shall flow from every heart back to God and from each to other's heart. There will be no jealous rivalries, but there will be the provoking of one another unto love and good works. The rich church is distinguished by its universal activities. It steadily runs the church services, prayer meetings, church organizations, Sunday schools, church and mission schools, going out after the outside multitudes of the lost, working up the home field, and is represented and heartily at work in the foreign field. May the Methodists of Mississippi and Louisiana and all other Methodists and all Christians everywhere fulfill the grand mission God has set for his Church—the making of men like unto Christ, earth like unto heaven, and the kingdoms of this world the kingdoms of Christ!

THE MODEL SUNDAY SCHOOL BUILDING.

By Dr. E. B. Chappell, in the Sunday School Magazine.

What is the Southern Assembly? The question is answered as follows in a leaflet recently issued by the Board of Commissioners, of which Bishop James Atkins is president:

"The Southern Assembly is the result of an organized movement on the part of the laity and ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to establish at the most suitable place a great permanent Assembly which will meet the growing need of the Church for rest, recreation, conference, training, and inspiration. This need has expressed itself in various sections of the Church in the assemblies and conferences which are held during the summer season in the interest of Sunday school, educational, Epworth League, and missionary work. These local, district and conference gatherings have emphasized the desirability of Church-wide Assembly Grounds, where leaders from every section and every Conference can meet and confer concerning all the great interests of the Church; where men and women can give and receive not only inspiration and stimulus to do the best work for the Master, but practical suggestions also, showing how results have been obtained and can be obtained. And in addition to this idea of active conference, there is the very attractive idea of the communion of saints, of Christian fellowship and association, of summer homes located in a beautiful, healthful spot, occupied by choice spirits from every section of our great Southern Church, of ideal surroundings for the training of children—in short, of life in a community where the atmosphere and the associations will be helpful and uplifting and 'into which there shall in no wise enter anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination or marketh a lie.'"

The ideal location of the Assembly, the character of the men who are back of it, and the solid financial basis upon which it rests are a guarantee of its large and permanent success. It is destined to become within a few years the great summer meeting place of Southern Methodists and one of our most important agencies for evangelism and religious education.

Taking these facts into consideration, the Sunday School Board decided that it is absolutely necessary that ample provision be made on the Assembly Grounds for Sunday school work and that the making of such provision is a matter of interest to the entire Church.

The Board, therefore, resolved to request every Sunday school of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, observing Rally Day to devote its Rally Day offering for 1911 to the erection of the Model Building; and inasmuch as the third Sunday in October is quite generally observed in our Church as Rally Day, to ask schools not observing the day to join with the others in taking a liberal collection on this Sunday or as near thereto as possible for this purpose.

A committee composed of Mr. John R. Pepper, Memphis, Tenn.; Judge M. L. Walton, Woodstock, Va., and Mr. B. M. Burgher, Dallas, Tex., was appointed to take charge of the entire undertaking. This committee has already sent out an appeal to every presiding elder, pastor, and Sunday school superintendent in the Church. We trust that this appeal will meet with a liberal and hearty response. A Model Sunday School Building on the grounds of the Southern Assembly will be of invaluable benefit in the years to come to the great cause to which it is to be dedicated. To schools purposing to take offerings for the building, Rally Day programs will be furnished free of cost upon application to Mr. E. E. French, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. All moneys collected on the building fund should be sent to the Sunday School Editor.

The longer you read the Bible, the more you will like it; it will grow sweeter and sweeter; and the more you get into the spirit of it, the more you will get the Spirit of Christ.—Romaine.

If I had been made a firefly, it would not become me to say: "If God had only made me a star, to shine always, then I would shine!" It is my duty, if I am a firefly, to fly and sparkle, and fly and sparkle—not to shut my wings down over my phosphorescent self because God did not make me a sun or a star.—Henry Ward Beecher.

LAKE JUNALUSKA—A CONNECTIONAL ASSEMBLY.

The M. E. Church, South, has a larger white membership within the same extent of territory than any other Protestant Church in the United States. The membership is compact; ninety-five per cent of it being in Southern latitudes. Up to the present time the great mass of the population is native born. The social and religious standards are well established. The future material prosperity of the Southern territory is well assured, and already there are thousands of the members of our Church who have become sufficiently prosperous to take days, even weeks, of rest and recreation from business cares. The number of men and women who are already spending regularly every year a week, or a month, or the entire summer away from home, is legion. It is no longer a question of finding enough persons with sufficient time and money at their disposal to take a vacation from business and home cares. They are already taking the vacations. The real work of the Church to-day is to plan so wisely that her people shall not dissipate their spiritual power during the vacation season, but shall be strengthened and made more efficient in the Master's work by the season spent away from the home Church, home influences and surroundings.

Not a New Thought. Our leaders have not been blind to the conditions confronting the Church, and work has been done in various places to supply the need. Here and there in different sections of the Church there are assemblies and encampments, which extend over varying periods of a week, ten days, two weeks. These assemblies are very valuable and should be maintained. They furnish rallying places for the workers and the members of the Church in the Conferences where they are located. The great bulk of our people cannot go far from home, but must seek their recreation close at hand. The leaders who have projected and developed the assemblies already existing within the bounds of the Church should be given hearty support, that the greatest possible good may come from their labors.

A Church-Wide Assembly. But while we have our Annual Conferences in Methodism, we also have our General Conferences. We have our Annual Conference newspapers, but we have our General Conference paper also. We have our Annual Conference Boards, but we have our General Conference Boards also. In short, we are a connectional people. And so, while the assemblies within the bounds of various Annual Conferences are important and of great value, the time has surely come when Southern Methodism should have a great connectional assembly, which will stand not for the advancement of the work of any single Conference, or any separate section, but for the entire Church. If it is important for the leaders of the separate Conferences to meet together and make plans for pressing their work, is it not of equal importance that there shall be some central rallying place for the leaders from all over the Church, where all the various arms of service can be represented and a broad connectional spirit be developed?

The value of such great assemblies has been fully recognized by the Christian people of the nation. Ocean Grove, Northfield, Chautauqua Lake, Winona Lake are known all over the Christian world. Why? Because they are not simply local provincial assemblies, but because they have become great gathering places for the children of God from all over the country. Thousands of people from every section flock to these great assemblies every summer, and sometimes there are over 25,000 people on the grounds, and at Ocean Grove one night this summer the writer was one of 10,000 hearers in the great auditorium.

A Laymen's Movement. The time has fully come for our Church to furnish for our Southern people a great Church-wide Assembly. And it should be a real joy to our people to realize that our Laymen's Movement has taken up this matter as its own special work. In an article in the Nashville Advocate of August 4th, 1911, John R. Pepper, Esq., the President of the Laymen's Movement, declares: "The biggest thing that the Laymen's Missionary Movement has yet done is to make possible by its initial effort the Southern Assembly at Lake Junaluska, Waynesville, N. C.; and if nothing else should ever come of the Laymen's Movement, this one thing would justify its birth into the ecclesiastical world."

The Chattanooga Conference in 1908 instructed the Executive Committee to establish such an assembly. The Executive Committee appointed a special committee to look thoroughly into the matter of organization and of location, and to make report. This committee visited various places, and after having taken into consideration all such questions as healthfulness, beauty, supplies, comfort, accessibility, water, water power, etc., reported in favor of a location in the Richland Valley, under the shadow of Junaluska Mountain, near Waynesville, N. C., and about twenty-five miles from Asheville on the Southern Railway. The Executive Committee received the report of the special committee, and made for itself prolonged and careful examination into all the questions of importance, and confirmed with gratifying unanimity the choice of the site made by the special committee.

The Southern Assembly is, therefore, not in any sense a merely local assembly, nor has it been located at Lake Junaluska by the choice of the Western North Carolina Conference, within whose bounds it is located. The site was selected by a committee composed of leading laymen from Virginia to Texas, and it is to-day the child of the whole Church, and not of any special section of the Church.

Advantages of Location. The Laymen's Committee gave careful attention to the matter of accessibility from the various sections of the Church. Where could a place be found, cool in the hottest summer season, free from mosquitoes, with pure water and beautiful scenery, and at the same time near to the center of population of the Church, and with railroad connections all through the South? The location selected has these qualifications in an eminent degree. The climate is far-famed. During the past summer of 1911, when the country far and wide, was suffering from the intense heat, it was delightfully cool and pleasant at Waynesville. The writer has not felt a mosquito during the entire season. There is an abundance of cool, sparkling water, and the scenery furnishes an ever-changing panorama of delight. There are about seventy-five miles of good roads, which will connect the Assembly Grounds with the various towns and villages of the Land of the Sky, and within a radius of forty miles have already been located the Blue Ridge Association of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. workers, the Bluemont Assembly Grounds of the Southern Baptists, and the Montreat Assembly grounds of the Southern Presbyterians.

If one will sit down before a map of the Southern States, and with Waynesville, N. C., as a center, draw a circle with a radius of five hundred miles, he will take in practically all of the territory included within the Conferences of our Southern Methodist Church east of the Mississippi River. From every leading city south of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi, through trains with Pullman sleepers run into Asheville, about twenty-five miles away, and schedules are such that from cities even as far distant as St. Louis and New Orleans, the trip can be made in a day and a night. Of course, our great Conferences in Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Texas are farther away, and it will be more difficult for our brethren in those States to come to the Assembly, but it can be readily seen that if a site was to be selected in a mountain country suitable for an Assembly in hot weather, Waynesville is more accessible to the great majority of the Church membership than any other spot. There are many visitors and cottagers from these very States west of the Mississippi at Winona and Chautauqua; and we confidently expect very many of our leaders from those States to visit Lake Junaluska every summer and build cottages there.

Business Features. The Southern Assembly has been incorporated under the laws of North Carolina, and the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Movement will work through the medium of this legal corporation to carry out the purposes which it has in view. The charter provides that three-fourths of the capital stock of the company shall be held by members of the M. E. Church, South, and the Board of Commssioners, which works in co-operation with the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, is elected by the stockholders at their annual meeting, so the Assembly will always be controlled by the M. E. Church, South.

The first annual meeting of stockholders was held at Waynesville, Aug. 30. It appeared at that meeting that stock amounting to $243,000 had been subscribed by over four hundred laymen and preachers from over forty cities and towns from Virginia to Oklahoma. In order that every section of the Church might be represented among the stockholders, and in order to furnish ample funds to develop the property to meet the needs of the Church, it was decided to place the full $500,000 worth of stock authorized by the charter, and the books of the company are now open for subscriptions to the balance of the stock. The stockholders elected the following Commisisoners: for one year, Bishop James Atkins, Alden Howell, Julian S. Carr; for two years, John R. Pepper, B. J. Sloan, S. C. Satterthwait; for three years, George R. Stuart, S. C. Welch, and James Cannon. The Board of Commissioners elected the following officers: President, Bishop James Atkins; vice-president, John R. Pepper; secretary, S. C. Satterthwait; treasurer, B. J. Sloan; general superintendent, James Cannon; superintendent of programme and evangelistic work, George R. Stuart.

A Great Success. The Southern Assembly, if supported by our people, must succeed. The motto of Lake Junaluska is: Rest, Recreation, Conference, Training, Inspiration. It will provide a location for summer homes among the most delightful surroundings. It will furnish the conveniences of the city on the shores of a beautiful lake in the midst of the most picturesque mountain scenery. Electric lights, water, sewerage, good roads and drives, telephone, telegraph, railroad station on the grounds, quick transportation by boat on the lake, or motor cars or busses on the land, all these will be provided for material comfort. The Assembly will furnish to those who gather on the grounds for a longer or shorter time wholesome entertainment and stimulating teaching. Great Sunday school, evangelistic, educational, Epworth League, and Bible conferences will be held, at which leaders of the world's thought on these subjects will be present and deliver addresses. In short, the Assembly will be an ideal spot for recreation for young and old, and at the same time will be a great central power-house from which currents of uplifting influences will go out to all sections of the Church.

The Sunday School House. The General Sunday School Board has recognized the great possibilities in the Assembly for the help of our Sunday school work, and has voted to erect a model Sunday school house at Lake Junaluska, and has called upon all the Sunday schools in the Church to make a united offering of at least $30,000 for that purpose, and has asked that the offering be made on Rally Day, Oct. 15. The Assembly has gladly donated a plot of ground to the General Sunday School Board on which to erect this building, and it is hoped that such a building will be erected as will be indeed a model for all of our Sunday schools throughout the Church, and as will furnish the opportunity to carry on every summer a model Sunday school conducted in accordance with the best methods.

The Assembly hopes that the other connectional Boards of the Church will plan to erect buildings on the Assembly grounds in which to carry on their work during the summer.

Competent engineers and architects are at work on plans for the proper layout of the grounds and for suitable and attractive buildings, and it is now the plan of the management to put lots on the market by the spring of 1912. A descriptive pamphlet will be sent to all persons desiring information. Address all communications to James Cannon, General Superintendent, Waynesville, N. C.

A DELIGHTFUL VACATION.

Through the kindness of my stewards who voted me a vacation, and the generosity of a few special friends led by the Hon. S. H. Terrell, son of the late Judge S. H. Terrell, of the Supreme Court of Mississippi, who handed me a well filled purse, I had the exquisite pleasure of visiting Washington City and several places of historic interest on the Atlantic coast during the month of August. A charming feature of that purse was, that it contained enough to permit Mrs. Jones to share and enjoy the trip with me, which she did, and thus enhanced my personal pleasure.

A pre-arranged plan led us to Norfolk, Virginia, where by special invitation we had a taste of real Virginia hospitality in the delightful home of my niece, Mrs. E. E. Harrell, the eldest daughter of the late Rev. W. B. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference, who, together with her accomplished daughter and gallant sons, spared no pains to make our stay with them most enjoyable. This is the first vacation I have taken in twenty-three years.

From Norfolk we went by the steamer—the "Southland," up the Chesapeake Bay and Potomac river to Washington city. The Chesapeake bay is comparatively a smooth body of water, but on this occasion there had evidently been some disturbance on the Atlantic side, as there was sufficient restlessness of the water and roughness of the waves, a part of the way, to give us a distinct sensation of sea-sickness; but fortunately, it did not reach its ultimate stage, and we were spared the experience of the usual distressing climax, for which we feel sincerely grateful.

I cannot refrain from telling you that we saw both branches of Congress—the largest law-making body in the world—at work, and felt a secret pride in the number of Mississippians in the present session. After seeing Washington, Alexandria, Arlington and Mount Vernon, we took passage on the same steel-clad "Southland" for Norfolk. After resting there for a short time, we continued our visitation to various points, seeing Newport News, with its magnificent harbor and navy yard; Hampton, with its beautiful home for old soldiers and its splendid Industrial Institute; Old Point Comfort, with its palatial hotel and bristling Fortress Monroe; Ocean View, with its beautiful walks and inviting verandas; Virginia Beach, with its numerous hotels, foaming surf, and invigorating atmosphere; Cape Henry, with its lofty light-house, whose lamp is of 45,000 candle power, intensified by marvelous reflectors, overlooking the ocean on one side, and its gigantic sand hills and cozy summer cottages, on the other; Portsmouth, with its well equipped navy yard, and the largest dry dock in the United States; and last, but not least, the beautiful and hospitable city of Norfolk, with its 81,000 population, beautiful churches and broad streets, caressed by the rippling water of the placid Elizabeth, the queen of Eastern rivers.

I lingered at Virginia Beach, a quiet summer resort, on the turbulent Atlantic, held there by the charm of its scenery and music of its breakers. I stood on the extreme limit of one of its projecting piers, till I felt every fiber of my being tingle with exhilaration, while I drank to my fullest capacity the salt breezes, fresh from the snow-capped crest of the moaning surf, which kindly sprinkled me with its cooling spray, as it heaved and lashed against the pillars of the pier.

The great pleasure that came to us from this season of recreation is exceeded only by our feeling of gratitude to those who made it possible for us to enjoy it. We returned home in time for me to be in my pulpit the first Sabbath in September, feeling refreshed and strengthened for the fall and winter pastoral duties.

The pleasing memory of this outing will abide as the days go rolling down the teeming years, and the setting sun sends back its glancing beams to tinge the overarching skies. B. F. JONES.

A CALL TO ARMS.

By J. D. Barbee.

Not mine, for I am only a humble private in the ranks; but your call to arms it is, which I wish to endorse, Dr. Meek. Never, in my judgment, was a more timely call made than the one you uttered in a recent number of the Advocate addressed to the Prohibitionists of Mississippi. If we are not to follow in the wake of Alabama and Maine, it behooves us to be up and doing; and I can conceive of no more effective manner in which to act than through the mass meeting at Jackson in January, which you have suggested.

That there is widespread demoralization among the Prohibition forces in Mississippi, is a plain matter of fact. Something must be done to infuse new life into the organization and form new lines of battle, if we are to wage a successful conflict with the sleepless enemy.

I beg to remind you that when the state-wide law went into effect in this State, the citizens of Washington County held a mass meeting, called by you, and organized for the enforcement of the law against the sale of liquor. For two years thereafter, the law was rigidly enforced, so much so that Washington became the banner county in the State. But the people became tired of contributing their money for the purpose of having the law enforced, the pressure of the citizens' organization was withdrawn, and now blind tigers abound on every hand. It is but just to say that to the untiring efforts of that devoted Baptist layman, Mr. H. N. Alexander, is due the success of the program of law-enforcement which proved so effective while in operation. He gave of his time and money, and is still out of pocket to a considerable extent on that account.

I wish to suggest for your consideration the need of new legislation to supplement and render more effective the laws which we now have. I have become convinced that the enforcement of the law lies largely with the sheriffs of Mississippi. In the case of Washington County, we had a fearless one, devoted to our cause, which made possible the measure of success we enjoyed. But under the practice in Mississippi the sheriff seems to be largely a tax-gatherer, his duties as peace officer seeming to be of minor importance. I therefore suggest the desirability of enacting laws requiring sheriffs to suppress the sale of liquor and making it easy to remove them if they fail to do so. Also a law requiring the Supervisors of each county to furnish the sheriff with ample funds with which to ferret out this form of crime. It is not just to ask private citizens to contribute for the purpose of enforcing the law, but the means should be supplied from the general taxes which are paid by all.

These laws should be written in few and plain words, so that no court could misconstrue them and no lawyer, however nimble his wits, could successfully evade them in the interest of his lawless clients.

I possess the conviction that the liquor traffic is as certainly doomed as was African slavery, and that it is our duty to maintain an attitude of open hostility towards it until this end is accomplished.

The Laymen's Missionary Movement is inaugurating what it calls an intensive campaign. That is, it is seeking to garner the fruits of its publicity efforts for the past two years. Baptists of the country are asked to give $50,000 to erect a National Memorial Baptist Church at Plymouth, Mass. The proposed structure is to be of stone, to have colonial columns in front, a conventional dome, and rooms suitable for social work in a small city. From the sale of the old Baptist Church of Plymouth $22,000 has been realized, but it is intended to keep this amount for an endowment fund, if possible.

Dr. Josiah Strong, famed as a student of sociological questions, says that the average income of the families of the United States is $751 a year. Another authority estimates that one-third of the preachers in the country receive less than $400 per annum; yet they manage, as a contemporary says, to live and to present a fairly good appearance in the pulpit and elsewhere, and to lead most of the people in their gifts. As masters of finance on a small scale, clergymen probably stand first in all lands.

Rev. E. T. Greenleaf, who lately resigned his pastorate because of non-support, writes thus: "The manner in which pastors in rural communities have to eke out a miserable existence on their pitiable salaries is a disgrace to Christianity, a reproach to American civilization and a reflection upon present-day church government. The Methodist Protestant Conference of Indiana paid to pastors $23,133 in salaries, an average of $215. The highest salary in the Conference, was $750. These figures tell an eloquent story."

Lutherans of the General Synod, the oldest of the general Lutheran bodies, are soon to have a new newspaper organ, to be known as the "American Lutheran," formed by a consolidation of the "Lutheran Observer" and two small periodicals. The change is brought about through the action of the General Synod last June, and is a change from a private to a denominational owned press. A further step in the direction of publicity for religious work is contemplated by Lutherans in the publication of miniature newspapers in several cities. These newspapers are to be issued three or four times a year only, and to be edited expressly for the people who do not read present literature and it is said would not understand it if they tried to do so. The proposed newspapers are not to have subscribers or advertisements. They mark a distinct advance in Christian literature methods.

A WORD FOR THE MINOR COLLECTIONS.

The time for rounding up the Conference collections is at hand. I wish to speak a word for the minor collections; by these I mean those other than home and foreign missions and Conference claimants. In a great many places in our Conference the preacher takes up all the collections in one, and then prorates as he sees fit. To the taking all in a lump collection, I have no particular objection, for I know that in a great many places, the mission, especially the foreign mission collection, has to go in as a "rider" on the Education, Church Extension and Widows' and Orphans' collection in order to get anything at all for missions. So much of our Church is not only unmissionary, but strictly anti-missionary, that in some parts to put the mission collections on their merits would mean failure.

What I wish to insist upon is that when these other collections are made to carry the mission collections through, the fact that they have done this ought not to make against them in the division, and the preacher ought to see to it that it does not. They should share and share alike. For insance, if a work is assessed $300 as the total of all its collections and pays $200 on them, then each should show two-thirds of the assessment paid and not some one paid and others not paid at all.

In looking over the Minutes of the Conference, among charges with which I am familiar I find that one charge reports all its mission money paid and its Conference claimants paid in full, but when you come to the others you find that they are reported at barely fifty per cent. Now what is the explanation, if they are not discriminated against in the division? And in some others you will find some one of these minors totally ignored in the division. You can pick up a copy of the Minutes for almost any year and find these samples that seem to me to indicate discrimination in favor of certain collections to the detriment of the others. Let us stand for equitable division.

BRISCOE CARTER.

NOTE FROM PORT GIBSON.

Mr. Editor: We cannot join with Bryant at this time when he sings of the "melancholy days, the saddest of the year," for since our schools have opened their sessions there is an air of life and good cheer about us that forbid. During the summer we have had to content ourselves with such attendance as the people of the town could give, and to their credit be it said, they have stood well by the pastor, only a few going into summer retirement. Since the opening of Chamberlain-Hunt Academy, which sends to us thirty young men, and of Port Gibson Female College, which contributes to us eighty and more teachers and students, our seating capacity is taxed to its fullest. What an inspiration is the sight of such a gathering of young people! Both of these institutions are full to their limit, and already there is a spirit of determined effort to be seen in the student bodies. By special invitation it is the privilege of this pastor to stand at one mid-week hour in the presence of these young people, and with pleasure to note the attention given to such things as he may have to say. Port Gibson is known to be in the heart of the boll-weevil section, but with this young life about us it would not be suspected. The measured tread of a hundred and forty young men on their march to the different churches of the city, and the long line of nearly one hundred young ladies in their uniforms, dispel all thought of disaster or failure.

The great majority of these young people come from Christian homes, and the larger number are members of some evangelical church. After an association of nearly twelve months, I feel safe in saying that these sons and daughters of anxious parents are in good hands, and are surrounded, both in the schools and the community, by the best of environments. An occasional letter comes to this pastor from some thoughtful parent concerning their boy or girl. To such permit me to suggest that a weekly letter from home counts for much.

FROM THE COLPORTER.

Some Books and Else.

The editorial in the Advocate of Sept. 21, entitled, "An Instructive Biography," ought to whet many an appetite and bring many orders for the "Life of Bishop Joshua Soule." It is truly a great book that our preachers, old and young, and laymen also, will find profit in reading. The same may be said also for the other books of the "Methodist Founders' Series," viz: the "Life of Bishop Asbury," by Dr. DuBose, already published; the "Life of Bishop Coke," by Bishop Hoss; the "Life of Bishop Capers," by Bishop Candler, and "Studies in The Life of John Wesley," by Dr. Chappell, which will soon be published. The price is $1 for each volume, or $4 for the series of five volumes, postpaid. Send us your orders and the books will go as soon as ready.

Our Publishing Agents announce the forthcoming of a much desired book, "The Hymns and Hymn Writers of the Church, an annotated edition of the Methodist Hymnal," by Drs. W. F. Tillett and Charles S. Nutter, octavo, 583 pages; price, $2, net; will be ready Oct. 15. I shall be glad to receive orders for this book from the preachers in Mississippi to be delivered as soon as ready, at price named, postpaid, to be paid for at Conference. Orders will be placed on file and filled in the order of reception. Who will be the first on the list?

Surely the Methodists of Mississippi will not fail to observe in every church and community, Saturday, Oct. 14, which has been designated as Work Day for the benefit of our Orphanage. Let every pastor, superintendent and church member read carefully all about it in the September issue of "Our Home," and act accordingly. As $4,000 dollars was realized last year from Work Day, let us try to make it $5,000 this year. This amount is specially needed at this time, and no more worthy cause appeals to us just now.

Thank you, Brother Meek, for the call to Mississippians to be on the alert in view of the prospective effort to repeal our state-wide prohibition law. Be assured when the attempt is made, we will be there in force to spike their guns. Yes; we should have that State prohibition convention early in January.

Send us orders for the books which you need and command me for any other service that you desire. Yours faithfully. G. W. BACHMAN.

The rumor that the next legislature will be called upon to repeal the state-wide prohibition law has aroused the temperance workers, and they will inundate the legislators with contrary arguments and put up a hard fight to maintain the status quo, which they claim to be satisfied with.

The Italian embassy at Paris on Sept. 27 authorized the declaration that Italy was seeking satisfaction from Turkey for the happening of a series of recent incidents, among them being the arrest of Italian subjects at Constantinople and their imprisonment, notwithstanding all the Italian government's remonstrances; the seizure in the Red Sea of an Italian bark by a Turkish gunboat; the abduction of a young girl from her parents by an Ottoman, and the refusal of the Constantinople authorities to compel her release; and the general insecurity of Italians. Italy demands satisfaction for these affronts and guarantees for the future.

Frank H. Hitchcock, Postmaster-general of the United States, went up a few days ago with Capt. Paul Beck, of the United States Army, in the latter's aeroplane at the Nassau boulevard aerodrome, carrying seventy-eight pounds of mail matter. Without mishap, the two made a seven-minute flight to Mineola, where, upon signal, the Postmaster-general dropped the mail sack to a carrier. Mr. Hitchcock declared to the crowd who greeted him that "the time certainly is coming when we must depend upon the aeroplane for carrying the mail. It is not effective yet, but it is being developed in a marvelous way, and I think we shall soon find it practical."

Dr. Craighead, president of Tulane University, has announced that he is trying to arrange for many extensive courses on a variety of subjects, open to the men and women of New Orleans. Several experts in certain branches of learning, some who are not connected with the university, will be invited to lecture. Dr. David Spence Hill, whose series of lectures on "Psychology and Pedagogy" before the Summer School awakened considerable interest, and who, during the coming session, will be in charge of the Department of Education, which will be reorganized, is expected to be one of the lecturers. Owing to the development of trade relations with Mexico and the Latin-American countries, there appears to be a great desire to take the Spanish courses. A number of professors in the School of Tropical Medicine are planning to take up a course in Spanish the coming year for the purpose of offering, in the near future, a course of tropical medicine in Spanish."

SOME COMMON ERRORS.

The fourteen mistakes of life, as Judge Rentoul recently told the Batholomew Club of London, are:

To expect to set up our own standard of right and wrong and expect everybody to conform to it.

To try to measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

To look for judgment and experience in youth.

To endeavor to mold the dispositions of everybody alike.

Not to yield in unimportant trifles.

To look for perfections in our own actions.

To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.

Not to alleviate, if we can, all that needs alleviation.

Not to make allowances for the weaknesses of others.

To consider anything impossible simply because we ourselves happen to be unable to perform it.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

To live as if the moment, the time, the day were so important that it would live forever.

To estimate people by some outside quality, for it is that within which makes the man.—The Interior.

A FEW WORDS CONCERNING WORK DAY.

We are gratified at the assurances we have that the Sunday schools and churches of Louisiana will observe "Work Day" for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage. Let all the collections be handed in at Sunday school and church next Sunday morning. The superintendent or some one he has appoined will take the collection and forward it to me. In the church the funds will be forwarded by the pastor or the treasurer of the church. We fully expect this effort to bring our Orphanage $5,000. With this help we will easily pay off the entire debt of $7,000 when it falls due on December 1st.

We certainly hope that every Sunday school and church in the State will make immediate response. Please do not hold back the funds, as we wish to have all the money in and ready for the payment of the debt. Thanking our good people for their interest in and sympathy for our great cause, and praying God's continued blessings on our Church, I am, gratefully,

ROB'T. W. VAUGHAN,
Superintendent Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

THE CONFEDERATE VETERANS REUNION AT LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

This great Southern festival for the present year, 1911, was held in Little Rock, Ark., May 16-18. Returning from my western trip, I reached Little Rock early on the evening of the 12th of May, and was met at the union depot by my son, W. B. Wier, and his wife. Taking a trolley car, we passed through streets brilliant with electric lights, and already taking on a gala attire in anticipation of the great festival.

On Saturday I visited City Park, where a thousand government tents were erected for the entertainment of several thousands of the veterans. Here these several thousands of the city's guests would be cared for, as I understood, free of expense, fed, housed, or rather tented, and made comfortable.

On Sunday night, it was my privilege to preach in Winfield Memorial Church, of which Rev. P. C. Cole is the model and much loved pastor. Just before the opening of the service, a large, fine looking man came into the pulpit. He was introduced to me, if I mistake not, as from Montgomery, Ala. He wore a full suit of Confederate gray. The opening prayer by this strange brother, whose name is not remembered, was most eloquent. I felt a desire to hear a man preach who could offer a prayer of such eloquence. After his prayer, he retired from the platform, and, as I thought, from the church, also.

On Monday I was at the union depot inquiring after my trunk which had been left at Fort Smith. What accuracy and detail of system there is in these great railroad lines! After two or three days delay this tardy trunk was safely delivered, much to my gratification, notwithstanding all the trunks and travelers on the move at this time.

Walking about the airy and pleasant elevated floors of the well operated depot, I saw a man of portly avoirdupoise and fine appearance, who reminded me of my brother of the eloquent prayer the night before; I accosted him after this manner, tentatively, not altogether sure of my man: "I had the pleasure, I believe, of meeting you in the pulpit last night." "No," said he, "I am not a minister—I am a lawyer,—but I have great respect for the clergy, and think they are next to the lawyers."

What crowds and crowds of people were pouring into the city! Every train, I suppose, came in with crowded coaches. It was interesting to pass through the aisles of the crowded depot, looking for a familiar face; or to sit and watch the coming and passing crowds. There were veterans on every side—some erect, some still stalwart, hale and firm of step, and some bowed with the burden of years; some with an empty sleeve, or empty trouser leg—leaning on staff or crutch. There were visitors, men and women, elderly and young people—wives, relatives and friends of the veteran; or friends of the Confederacy. Taking advantage of the cheap rates of travel, they were coming from every State, perhaps, south of the Patomac, or from States even farther North and from the far-away West.

Veterans were coming to meet with veterans—to renew their comradeship, recall and talk over their war memories of the campaign, the bivouac and the battle strife, where brave men from the North and the South met to settle their differences by the arbitrament of the sword, regardless of our Savior's words: "They that take the sword shall perish with the sword." May we not hope and pray that the efforts now being made by leading nations to settle all national disputes by peaceful arbitration may succeed, and that the time is near when the nations shall learn war no more?

Visitors were coming to see the typical Southern city of Little Rock, to enjoy an outing and have a surcease from the hum-drum of every-day affairs, and the ceaseless grind of a strenuous business life, and to witness and take part in the scenes, and participate in the exercises and spirit of the great patriotic reunion.

The several States had their special headquarters. Going into Mississippi headquarters in the old State house, I found a polite clerk, who took my name and placed a metallic badge on my coat lapel. This badge, with its significant letters, U. C. V., introduced the wearer to all other veterans, and to the public as an honored guest of the city.

Little Rock was a generous host and treated with prodigal hospitality its guests, estimated, including veterans and visitors, at more than a hundred thousand persons. The principal streets and many private residences were decorated with Confederate flags and draperies and hangings of red, white and blue; automobiles, street cars and other vehicles were in evidence on the streets, while crowds of well-behaved strangers thronged the sidewalks. Fakirs displayed their curios and souvenirs of the great reunion of 1911. Occasionally I met the familiar face of a friend from whom I had been separated by time and distance. But it was a moving panorama and there was little time for more than a cordial greeting and a few friendly words.

The street cars were crowded to inconvenience, and it was an achievement to catch and pull yourself on to one. Watching for a car placarded "Park Avenue," where, two or three miles away (No. 1704) was the home of my son, I would with strenuous effort press with the entering crowd onto the platform, where with the jostling throng we were glad to get standing room—like sardines standing on end! Men would care for their toes and the ladies smiled, and doubtless did likewise.

"Smile awhile, and while you smile, another smiles. And soon there'll be miles and miles of smiles; and life's worth while because you smile." The jostle and crush of the great crowds provoked no word of irritation or complaint. A pleasant spirit and a spirit of good-will seemed ever apparent. The good-will which belongs to the kingdom of Christ is surely leavening the masses of humanity, promoting the brotherhood of man and the reign of Christ, the Lord.

The auditorium for public exercises was amply provided with seats and profusely decorated. On the large platform were the presiding officer, the speakers, and a number of ladies who led in patriotic songs, some taking part also in the program of addresses and recitation. One of the speakers, whom I took for my portly friend of mistaken identity, who regarded the clergy as next to the lawyers, in an earnest address, quoted in part at least St. Paul's triumphant language: "I have fought a good fight," applying it to the veterans before him, or to the Southern soldiers who fell on the field of battle. I was pleased to know this speaker's familiarity with the words of St. Paul, notwithstanding their unusual application. Another speaker defended the Confederacy on constitutional grounds. "The South," he claimed, "fought within the limits of the constitution of the United States."

A lady with a pleasant face, sitting at the front, led her sister choristers. She was said to be from Virginia. It was, as I recall, in the popular song of "Dixie" that she gave utterance to this patriotic note, "We are a united people," meaning the North and the South. But enthusiasm reached its highest when, with the same clear, ringing voice, she sang, "I'm glad I live in Dixie."

"The Old South is not dead," a sentiment that found expression on the platform, will find sympathetic response all over this Southland. No, the Old South is not dead. It went down in defeat, but not in dishonor, and in good faith surrendered at Appomattox, but lives to-day, "a united people," and loyal to the old Union—to build up and make a greater, and led we trust, a better nation. Of the thousands of veterans present, I did not meet a comrade of the 37th Mississippi Regiment, of which I was chaplain.

The march of the veterans through the streets of the city on the last day of the Reunion presented an imposing spectacle. Thousands thronged the sidewalks, and with others from windows and balconies witnessed the procession as it filed through the streets. A number of enthusiastic women graced the procession—some, notwithstanding the excessive heat, bravely marched afoot. Others were in vehicles, automobiles or on horseback. Bands of music and outbursts of applause enlivened. A faded banner or so that had seen actual service might be seen waving above the heads of the war-worn veterans. It was a pageant at once impressive and pathetic, and the closing climax of the twenty-first Reunion of the United Confederate Veterans. T. C. WIER.

THE LAYMEN'S MOVEMENT AND THE APPEALS.

Dear Doctor: In your issue of the 14th inst. there appears an article from the pen of Mrs. S. G. Weems, from which I quote the following: "The mails bring us weekly an appeal from some Board, or urgent special endorsed by one of our Bishops, calling for special efforts to raise special funds for the cause represetned. Sometimes I wonder how it can be possible for a preacher, who must preach to dying men every Sabbath, to prepare for the pulpit as he ought to do, then visit the sick, bury the dead, minister to the sorrowing, and look after all the interests of his church and act as agent for all these causes. I had hoped the great Laymen's movement would solve this problem, leaving the pastor to do the work of an evangelist, build churches and parsonages." To your readers in the Mississippi Conference Sister Weems is known to be the efficient wife of one of our most successful pastors, and no douht that paragraph has grown out of her deep sympathy with that energetic, tireless husband, as she has heard his groans in the night seasons and seen his efforts to carry the heavy burdens imposed.

As the years have passed this writer has noted the added calls upon the pastors, and in his feeble way has wielded his pen in protest and exhortation. It is suggestive to read the protest as it comes from the pen of this "elect lady in the Church," and we emphasize her query, "Is there no remedy?" Before the meeting of our last General Confrence the impression seemed to prevail that through certain combinations relief would be secured, but as is suggested by this good woman there has been such a flood of special calls from parent and home boards as to make the conscientious pastor cry out, "Who is sufficient for these things?"

In your issue of this date, Sept. 21, under the heading, "A Distracted Pastor," we have some practical, suggestive statements, and well do you say that the brother is in a "dilemma;" yet every pastor, like that brother, wants to be loyal to all of the interests of his Church, and to report "collections in full." I am glad to note that you state that this troubled brother is "one of our most prominent and successful pastors." The case is thereby made the stronger, and therefore, I quote with less reluctance; hear him: "So many calls come to me that, should I comply with all requests, as I want, I could do nothing else. We have too many appeals. It wears out the pastor and tends to disgust or discourage the people."

The Laymen's Missionary Movement, we are told, has evolved another plan—the Duplex Envelope system; but how many of our laymen themselves take hold of this system? Any plan, we have been repeatedly told, is good enough if it is worked. A range of experience in pastorates, from the large circuit of eight appointments, to the station with widely scattered membership, has verified to an extent this statement; but it has also impressed the fact that few are persistent in working any plan. I take it, Mr. Editor, that these and other such complaints are not from a spirit of rebellion, but honest appeals for relief and a surer obtaining of the ends desired. If the Church be, as is stated often, God's organized effort to save the world, and the preaching of the Word is the first duty of the minister, does it not behoove us to return to the teachings of the sixth chapter of the Acts of the Aposties? Such, at least, is the opinion of this writer.

CATCHING BIRDS.

My Uncle Tom says catching birds is easy when you know
The proper way to do it; an' I guess perhaps it's so;
He knows a splendid way, he says, 'at hardly ever fails,
Des creep up close an' drop a bit of salt upon their tails.

I tried it all the afternoon; I know des how to do.
You see a bird down on the ground—but don't let it see you—
Den creep up near it wiv the salt, an' be des awful still—
I didn't catch a bird to-day, but to-morrow p'r'aps I will.

FOR JESUS' SAKE.

"Mother," said a little five-year-old boy, "I wish Jesus lived on earth now,"

"Why, my darling?"

"Because I should like so much to do something for Him."

"But what could such a little bit of a fellow as you are do for the Savior?"

The child hesitated for a few moments, then looked up into his mother's face and said:

Why, mother, I could run on all his errands for him."

"So you could, my child, and so you shall. Here is a glass of jelly and some oranges I was going to send to poor, old, sick Margaret by the servant, but I will let you take them instead, and do an errand for the Savior, for, when upon earth, he said: 'Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me.'"

"Whenever you do a kind act for anybody because you love Jesus, it is just the same as if the Savior were now living on the earth, and you were doing it for him."—The Illustrator.

THE PINK STRING.

"Peter," said his mother, "I want you to do a little errand for me."

"Yes, mother, tell me quick, for it's most school-time."

"You will be sure and not forget?"

"Oh, mother, Jack Ray's been telling me that whenever he has an errand to do his mother ties a string 'round his finger. That keeps him in mind every time he looks at it that he has something to do. Did you ever hear of anyone doing that?"

"Yes, many a time. So you would like a string?"

"Yes, here's the string bag, and here's a nice piece of pink string."

"Now, then"— And she tied it on his finger, and mother told him what she wanted him to do.

"And, Peter," she added, "be sure to speak very politely when you ask for it."

"Yes, I'll remember."

"I know you always mean to be polite, dear, but you sometimes forget, as all little boys do. Good-by."

"What's that on your finger?" asked one of them.

"Oh, that's because I have an errand to do so as to make me think of it."

But, as he gazed at it, what was the errand, anyhow? In his interest in watching the string tied on he had only half listened to what his mother had been saying, and now the most he could remember of it was that he was to be very, very polite.

"I can do that, anyway—to everybody. And perhaps, if I do it all the time, I shall get to thinking of the errand—oh, please excuse me, I didn't mean to," in his heart thinking he had run against a big girl as he was turning into the school yard.

"Peter," said she, "you're such a polite little fellow that it's easy to excuse you."

"A good thing to say of a boy," said one of the teachers who was passing in. "Keep it up, Peter. Good manners are always a very great help to a boy in going through life."

"If they'll only help me to remember that errand," said Peter to himself.

He did remember the politeness. He stood up to give a girl his seat on a crowded recitation bench. He said his best "please" and "thank you" when he went to the teacher's desk to ask about an example, all the while thinking—

"If I'm very polite, p'r'aps I shall think of the errand."

At the close of school the teacher said:

"Who will carry a book with its marked lesson around to Johnny Park's house? He is sick and could not come to school to-day."

"I will," said Peter, rising in his seat as he spoke.

"Thank you, Peter. I might have known you are just that kind of a boy."

He had to go several blocks out of his way to do it. No remembrance of his errand came into his head as he left the book at the door with a polite inquiry about Johnny; and he walked on slowly, doing his best thinking.

He passed a yard in which were many beautiful flowers. A lady was inside whom Peter had sometimes seen talking with his mother, so he raised his hat to her with a very polite little bow. She smiled at him, and then said:

"I wonder if I couldn't get you to do something for me?"

"Of course, ma'am," said Peter, again taking off his hat. "I shall be very glad to do it."

"I am cutting some flowers to send to a sick woman," went on the day. Mrs. Hale told me about her—"

"Oh, that was it!" Peter flung up his hat and capered about for joy.

"That was what?" asked the lady, with a smile.

"My errand. Mrs. Hale's my mother, and you're Mrs. Garde; and mother told me to come here and ask you, very politely, if you would let her have some of your flowers to take to the sick woman. She tied this pink string around my finger so I wouldn't forget. But I did forget, all but the politeness."

Mrs. Garde laughed as she put a wonderful bunch of flowers on Peter's arm, saying as she did so:

"If you hadn't taken off your hat so politely, I shouldn't have thought of asking you to oblige me."

"Will you please to excuse me for not taking it off to say good-by? You see, my hands are full."

"Oh, my dear boy, you did remember, didn't you?" said mother, as he laid the flowers before her. "We will try the string again."

"Mother," said Peter, gravely, "It wasn't the string at all. It was the politeness."—Sydney Dayre, in the Christian Register.

I'LL PAY YOU FOR THAT.

This little parable by an unknown author teaches its own lesson:

A hen trod on a duck's foot. She did not mean to do it, and it did not hurt the duck much; but the duck said: "I'll pay you for that!" So the duck flew at the old hen, but as she did so her wings struck an old goose who stood close by.

"I'll pay you for that!" cried the goose, and she flew at the duck; but as she did so, her foot tore the fur of a cat who was just then in the yard.

"I'll pay you for that!" cried the cat, and she started for the goose; but as she did so, her claw caught in the wool of a sheep.

"I'll pay you for that!" cried the sheep, and she ran at the cat; but as she did so, her foot hit the foot of a dog who lay in the sun.

"I'll pay you for that!" cried he, and jumped at the sheep; but as he did so, his leg struck an old cow who stood by the gate.

"I'll pay you for that!" cried she, and she ran at the dog; but as she did so, her horn grazed the skin of a horse who stood by a tree.

"I'll pay you for that!" cried he, and he rushed at the cow.

What a noise there was! The horse flew at the cow, and the cow at the dog, and the dog at the sheep, and the sheep at the cat, and the cat at the goose, and the goose at the duck, and the duck at the hen. What a fuss there was! And all because the hen accidently stepped on the duck's toes.

"Hi! Hi! What's all this?" cried the man who had the care of them. "You may stay here," he said to the hen: but he drove the duck to the pond, the goose to the field, the cat to the barn, the sheep to her fold, the dog to the house, the cow to her yard, and the horse to his stall. And so all their good times were over because the duck would not overlook a little hurt which was not intended.

"A little explained,
A little endured,
A little forgiven,
The quarrel is cured."

HOW TO WIN MEN.

To win men is a fine art; it is the science of sciences.

No other earthly achievement is so high or great or glorious as this. "He that winneth souls is wise."

And yet this supreme art, or science, may be acquired by all; at least to all who truly love God.

"1. Be a Christian yourself. 'First take the beam out of thine own eye, and then thou shalt see clearly to cast out the mote that is in thy brother's eye.'

"2. Live in the Spirit. 'And the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near and join thyself to this chariot.' We must live, move and have our being' in the Spirit.

"3. Have a desire to see souls saved. 'And when he beheld the city he wept over it.'

"4 Have a working knowledge of the Bible. The Word of God is 'the sword of the Spirit.'

"5. Have confidence in the Word and promise of God. 'It shall not return unto me void; but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereunto I send it.'

"6. Have confidence in the power of God. 'For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.'

"7. Be a man of prayer, 'Continuing steadfastly in prayer,' remembering that though Paul may plant, and Apollos water,' yet it is 'God that giveth the increase.'"—Michigan Christian Advocate.

CHURCH ETIQUETTE.

The following from the Western Christian Advocate is so pertinent and wholesome that we take pleasure in reproducing it:

There is such a thing as Church etiquette, and it ought to be more generally observed. It would seem that a proper regard for the obvious proprieties of the time and place would suggest to any reflecting person the becoming conduct. But in many cases it seems not to occur to those who violate the unwritten code rather flagrantly. Many who would not think of offending at a social function do not appear to be at all concerned when attending a Church service. We may be pardoned then for reprinting the suggestions which we find in an exchange, and which, we believe, will appeal directly to the common sense and sane judgment of all persons whose Christianity includes the primary virtue of good behavior. They are these:

"If possible, be on time. You need at least five minutes after coming to get warm or cool, to compose your body and mind, and to whisper a prayer before the service begins.

"Never pass up the aisle during prayer or the reading of the Scriptures. If you do your presence will distract the minds of many in the congregation.

"If the sermon has begun, when you enter, take a seat near the door, but not otherwise; never occupy a back seat when a front seat is empty.

"Be thoughtful for the comfort of others. Take the inside of the pew if you are the first to enter, and leave all the vacant space at the end next the aisle. Occupy one of the front seats if possible.

"Be devout in every attitude. All whispering should be avoided. Find the hymn and sing it if you can. Share the book with your neighbor.

"Have your Bible with you, take part in the responsive readings, and follow the minister in the reading of the lessons.

"Ordinarily, stand to sing, kneel to pray, and sit during instruction.

"Give a hearty handshake and speak a bright, cheery word to as many as possible at the close of the service.

"Be sure to greet strangers with a most cordial welcome, and, if possible, introduce them to the pastor.

"Never put on your coat or wraps during the closing hymn, and do not make a rush for the door immediately after the benediction is pronounced. There should be no loud talking or jesting after the service is concluded.

"Go quietly to your home and meditate on what you have heard."

DIVINE TRUTH NEEDED.

Man needs God's truth. The Psalmist declares that "the truth of the Lord endureth forever." So God has made provision for our need on this line. The statement may mean God's Word or God's fidelity to his Word—both are true. It is written, that "God is not a man that he should lie, nor the Son of man that he should repent; having said it, he will do it," and that "heaven and earth shall pass away, but my Word shall not pass away." Just think of the state of this world without the Bible. "Looking up through nature to nature's God" has more of sentiment than fact in it. Natural religion is only possible and known when Bible light is thrown upon nature. Man needs the true knowledge of God as he is revealed in the Bible, and the Christ of the Bible. "God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness hath shined into our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." The blessed Bible sets forth the truth in Christ, and shines by the Spirit's aid upon us in Christ, who is the Light of the world. Man needs God's truth to guide him in duty, comfort him in trouble and reveal to his faith and hope his hereafter of supreme bliss and glory in the eternity beyond. Nothing can supply all this need except God's truth. God is the same, yesterday, today and forever, and his truth has never changed, nor has he ever swerved from it. He has never repealed it, but has fulfilled it to the jot and tittle. Every age does not have a new truth of God—no, what was God's truth to Abraham, Moses, David, Paul and all the fathers gone on before us is God's truth to us, and it will be the same throughout the ages. Beyond question, all men should be thankful unto God for his great mercy and his changeless truth.

AN IMPROVEMENT.

The Western Christian Advocate expresses gratification that the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church are ceasing to ask the old stereotyped question when each pastor's name is called at the Annual Confernce, "Is there anything against him?" and insisting upon a reply from the presiding elder in which the same monotonous answer is usually made, acquitting him of any improper conduct. The method being adopted by the chief pastors of our sister Church is to enquire after the presiding elder has made his report, "Is there anything against any preacher in your district?" In this way the whole question of complaints is disposed of at once, without wasting any time upon it. This strikes us as a wise method of procedure. It does not hold the preachers to a less rigid account for their conduct and administration, but does away with a long-drawn-out formality and tends to expedite business. We should like to see the new practice come into vogue in our Church. We do not believe in clinging to a rule of procedure simply because it is old, nor in adopting a proposed variation merely because it happens to be new; but when a suggested change is an improvement, we think it should be welcomed.

A VETERAN CALLED HOME.

A letter from his son-in-law, Mr. E. F. Arnold, of Bellfontaine, Miss., brings news of the death of Rev. J. R. D. King, a highly esteemed superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, which occurred at that place on Monday, September 25, 1911. His decease is reported to have been due to paralysis, but as to the length and circumstances of his illness we are uninformed. Brother King was a son of Judge W. W. King, of New Orleans, and was born in this city on November 24, 1842. He was graduated from the University of Alabama in both the Literary and Law Departments, and was possessed of far more than an average reach of information. He was a Confederate solider, being a member of Company A (volunteer infantry) of the Forty-Fifth Alabama Regiment, and greatly distinguished himself for bravery on the field of battle. He joined the North Mississippi Conference in 1885, and for a number of years rendered faithful and effective service in the itinerant ministry. He was a man of deep piety, strong faith, and unwavering loyalty to Christ and the Church. Everywhere and at all times, he walked worthy of his vocation, and his preaching was helpful and fruitful. For several years his health had been such that he could not pursue his "loved employ," but his interest in the progress of the kingdom was unabated. And now the period of inactivity and waiting has passed, and the time of fruition and larger ministries has come. We cannot but believe that to those who have wrought well in time, eternity will open wider fields for achievement. Brother King leaves two children—Mrs. E. P. Arnold, of Bellfontaine, Miss., and Mr. J. R. D. King, Jr., of New Orleans. He also has in this city a brother, Judge Fred D. King, and a sister, Miss Grace King. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that divine grace may comfort and sustain them. Doubtless a more extended memoir of our ascended brother will be furnished the Advocate in the near future.

REMEMBER THE CONFERENCE ORGAN.

October is an excellent time to press the claims of the Conference organ, and we trust that the pastors and our interested friends among the laity will not overlook this fact. A few weeks later the work of raising the Conference collections will so engross the attention of our preachers, that they will have little time to devote to the circulation of our church papers. We, therefore, urge the importance of attending to this essential matter within the next two or three weeks. Our receipts during the summer months were small, but, notwithstanding, the Advocate made it appearance regularly, and faithfully sought to promote every interest of the Church. We feel that it is now time our mails should begin to indicate that the fall season has opened. Help us, brethren, that we may be able to assist you in winding up successfully the work of the year. It means much to the cause to have the Conference organ well circulated in every charge.

A pastor should see to it that every member of his church is at work for the Master. A great many persons, after assuming membership, do little, if anything, at all, for the Lord of the vineyard. Their talent, of what sort it may be, is practically hid in a napkin. In too many cases the reason for this is found in the pastor's not having given them some special work in the church. Time and again, after a gracious revival is had, it happens that the pastor is slow about giving the new members something to do, and they grow cold and formal and lapse before long into mere once-a-day worshipers. A live pastor will strike while the iron is hot and seek to enlist his new members in some special work for the Church. It is needful for their growth and development that each one should be promptly given work on some line, and that pastor is the most successful who enlists all his people, young and old, in the activities of the Church.

Under the old dispensation, the sons of Levi and the seed of Israel praised God, but the Gentile world praised gods of wood and stone. In the 117th Psalm all nations are called upon to praise the Lord, which, of course, could not be applied to Old Testament times, for unless the people of the land and the outside heathen became Jews and were circumcised, they were not allowed to praise God with them. This was the mystery which was hid in prophecy, but was at length revealed in its accomplishment. As Paul declared in Ephesians, "It is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit: that the Gentile should be fellow-heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of the promise in Christ by the Gospel." Christ, the world's Redeemer, having broken down the partition-wall, the gospel, in obedience to the marching orders of its God-ordained ministry, is being preached unto all the nations and peoples of earth. Those that were afar off have been made nigh and Jews and Gentiles are equally called upon to praise the Lord. The nations of all the earth are God's people, the purchase of his Son, and all are included within the sweep of his redemptive plan, and all may rejoice together in the saving, keeping power of his Son. God's dealings with universal and individual man should cause all the race to praise him for his goodness, mercy, grace and truth. Being the workmanship of God, and having been preserved and blessed of him, we should extol his holy name.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Ecumenical Methodist Conference assembled in Toronto yesterday. It will be in session about two weeks.

We regret to be informed that Dr. I. W. Cooper, the capable president of Whitworth College, has been indisposed for several days. We trust that he will soon be restored to perfect health.

Col. I. D. Wall has returned to Baton Rouge from his trip to the North. Though long a member of the State Legislature, it is said he has decided not to be a candidate again. He is one of the foremost laymen of our Church.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, the wide awake presiding elder of the Shreveport District, has been doing evangelistic work, preaching twice a day for a week or more for the Grand Cane people. The meeting was a powerful one and about 18 were added to the church.

Of his work at Indian Bayou, La., Rev. J. S. Rutledge says: "Things are progressing favorably in this charge; especially is the Sunday school doing well." We thank our brother for his promise to take care of the interests of the Advocate.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, superintendent of St. Mark's Mission, on last Friday night delivered in First Methodist Church his lecture on "The Life of Christ." The proceeds of the lecture were for the benefit of Mary Werlein Mission on Tchoupitoulas Street.

Our Methodist women have been called upon to provide lunches for the Louisiana Conference, to be held at Parker Memorial Church, beginning Dec. 6, and the City Mission Board has in hand the holding soon of a bazar for the benefit of St. Mark's Hall.

The ten days' revival meeting held by Evangelist Kelly in Lucedale, Miss., closed at the 8 o'clock service of Sept. 28. The church members were spiritually strengthened and 23 members were added to the church. Brother Kelly's sermons and solid work will be remembered there for a long time.

Mrs. Levy Marical, of Forest Hill, La., while hoeing vegetables in her garden this week, was severely bitten by a rattlesnake. This is the third time she has been bitten by poisonous reptiles. She has successfully cured her wounds by the application of spirits of turpentine and kerosene oil.

Owing to serious illness in his family, the editor has not been able to give the usual attention to this and the preceding issue of the Advocate. At this writing, Robert, his only son, is in an extremely critical condition, and he requests that prayer be made for his recovery.

Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Galloway, of Jackson, Miss., have recently had born to them a son, to whom they have given the honored name of Charles B. Galloway. May a kind Providence watch over the little one and bring him, through the stages of childhood and youth, to a noble and useful manhood!

We are indebted to Rev. O. S. Lewis, our popular young pastor at Brandon, Miss., for six renewals to the Advocate. The Conference organ now goes into the homes of all his officials, and his charge is entitled to a place on the Honor Roll. Brother Lewis speaks in terms most commendatory of the flock that he serves.

The work moves on smoothly on the St. Tammany circuit under the guiding hand of the appreciated pastor, Rev. N. E. Alford, who writes encouragingly of the outlook. Brother Alford favored us a few days since with five names to be placed on our subscription files, for which he has our hearty thanks.

The New Orleans Protestant Ministers' Association met at the Y. M. C. A. on Oct. 2 in the interest of the Men and Religion Forward Movement. In common with the clergy and laymen of the other American cities and States, the ministers and laymen of New Orleans are planning for a strong movement for the spread of evangelical Christianity.

We have been gratified to learn of the auspicious opening of Port Gibson Female College. Read what Dr. Holloman has to say of this historic institution in this issue of the Advocate. Manifestly, President Hawkins and his efficient faculty are rendering excellent service in the training of the young ladies committed to their care.

The editor of the St. Louis Advocate, Dr. W. B. Palmore, took a severe cold on the Ural Mountains, but he has recuperated at the city of Irkutsk in the heart of Siberia. Passing through Harbin in North ern Manchuria, he expected to reach Pekin, China, about Sept. 20. He aims to be in Shanghai in time for the Methodist Conference there in October.

The pastors of our New Orleans churches who were away some during the summer have all gotten back for regular and steady work. We have had good reports from them all, and each man seems filled with a fresh zeal to lay himself out unsparingly for the good and growth of his charge. There is no better field anywhere than the Crescent City for the man who loves to do hard work.

A few days ago Pastor Booth, of our Algiers charge, became the father of a fine boy, and the Advocate congratulates him and Sister Booth upon the happy event. May the babe, given of God, be a constant joy and inspiration to his parents and become in the years ahead a foremost man and a blessing to all.

Mrs. J. W. Hoyle, of Tupelo, Miss., has kindly sent us an invitation to the anniversary entertainment of the Alpha Wesley Sunday School Class of the First Methodist Church of that city. It is to be held on Friday night of this week at the home of Mrs. W. C. Raymond. Mrs. Hoyle is the capable teacher of this fine class, which has made a most enviable record ever since its organization.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey writes as follows from Mansfield: "While in a meeting at Vivian last week, Rev. A. W. Turner, our Mansfield pastor, was stricken with appendicitis, and is now in course of preparation for an operation in charge of Dr. Parsons, of Mansfield and Dr. Bannerman, of Grand Cane. He is at present doing well, and the best is hoped for and expected."

The Columbus Dispatch (Mississippi) of Oct 1st says: "Bishop A. W. Wilson, of Baltimore, Md., has accepted an invitation from Dr. Henderson, pastor of the First Methodist Church at this place, to preach on the last Sunday in November. Bishop Wilson is considered the greatest preacher in the Methodist Church to-day and the Columbus people will enjoy a great treat in hearing him."

We are in receipt of some papers from our long-time friend, Rev. J. A. Bowen, which deal with the prohibition situation in Alabama. We are pleased to note that the outlook for the cause there is not regarded as so discouraging, as many outside of the State have been disposed to consider it. Of himself and his worthy helpmeet, Brother Bowen says: "My health is perfect and I am closing one of the greatest years of my life. Mrs. Bowen continues to gain in physical strength and vigor, and we are all happy."

Rev. W. W. Perry, the wide awake young pastor of Vaughan, Miss., writes: "I have landed 32 Advocates in my charge this year. There are others beside these. I have held all my meetings. They were well attended and much good was done. We expect to close a good year in fine shape." The brother's expectations are quite sure to be realized. If each of our pastors in the two States would send us only 15 new subscriptions, the mail list of our paper would be a few thousands larger, and it does look like any man determined to do it could send us some additional names.

Writing from Vicksburg, Miss., under date of September 26, Rev. W. H. Saunders says: "Brother C. W. Crisler and I will go to Clinton this afternoon to officiate at the marriage of our brother-in-law, Dr. W. G. Gill, who is to wed Miss Holstine, of Natchez. He has been appointed to service in the United States Army, a position for which he is well equipped, having spent five years in Tulane University. He and his bride will proceed to Washington, D. C., immediately after the performance of the ceremony." The Advocate congratulates the contracting parties, and wishes them a long life of usefulness and unalloyed happiness.

Rev. W. F. Henderson, of Ruston, by postal card, informs us that Rev. Samuel H. Whatley, one of our superannuates living in Ruston, has been quite sick with slow fever for several weeks, but has about recovered from the fever. Brother Whatley is still confined to his bed with a trouble, which seems to have become chronic. Brother Henderson's statement as to his own work, is this: "My work is moving on very smoothly. I hope to make a good report at Conference. I have a noble people to serve." Brother Whatley, when on the active list, was a very successful worker for Christ, and many stars will be found in his crown of rejoicing. Yes, the Rustonites are first-class, and they have a diligent pastor and fine preacher in Henderson.

The annual meeting of the Mississippi Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held at New Albany, Miss., October 19-22. In view of the threatened assault upon the prohibition laws of this commonwealth by the whisky forces, it would, perhaps, be well for many of the brethren to attend this gathering and counsel with "the white ribboners," who for so long have been battling aggressively for the cause of temperance. We are pleased to note the signs of activity among the prohibitionists of Mississippi, and are gratified to know that Hon. R. P. Hobson, of Alabama, and Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, and Mrs. Florence E. Atkins are expected to lend active assistance in still further arousing them in the near future. Let the work go on. Never again should the saloon be allowed to exist in the State of Charles B. Galloway.

A few evenings ago, at their hall, the members of the New Orleans Y. W. C. A. had a delightful evening, it being a combination of the literary, social and educational features of the organization. Miss Rhoda Tucker, who is to teach the class in English for the Association, gave an appreciation of Sidney Lanier. Mrs. Adele Stewart, who is to have charge of the sewing classes for the members, explained her plan of work. She brought with her the garments made in last year's course at Newcimb College, and will give the pupils of her class, as far as possible, the instruction she has received herself. There was singing and refreshments and a good time had. The Young Woman's Christian Association, though only started a short while, is doing an immense amount of good to the young women of New Orleans.

Rev. C. A. Bowen, pastor of our Trinity Church in Birmingham, Ala., is having great success in his charge. The editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate has this to say of him and his work: "This organization has a splendid property at 32d Street and Highland Avenue, and before it is a great future. The progress this congregation is making is remarkable. Since last December, the membership has increased from 98 to 230, 85 of which have been added on profession of faith. There are 240 in the Sunday school, and this number could be greatly increased if there were sufficient room to accommodate them. This is destined to be one of the important locations in the city, and the Board of Missions and the City Church Extension Society will do well to foster their interests here." Our Mississippi and Louisiana young men are apt to give a good account of themselves when transplanted in other sections.

CENTENNIAL OF METHODISM IN THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

While the beginning of Methodism in the Southwest was with the coming of Tobias Gibson in 1799, the first organized society was in the town of Washington, six miles east of Natchez, the seat of the territorial government, and consisted of six white people and two colored. The boundaries of the original Mississippi Conference embraced from the Georgia line on the east to the Mississippi River on the west, and from the Tennessee line on the north to the 31st degree of latitude on the south, being the same as that of the northern boundary of the Florida Parishes of Louisiana. As the country west of the Mississippi became inhabited by white people, the western boundary was extended to include all of Louisiana and as far into Texas as the settlements extended. As early as 1808 we find that there was a Mississippi District of the Western Conference (which had met the previous year at Chillicothe, Ohio), and having the following appointed: Natchez, Wilkinson, Claiborne, Opelousas and Washita.

The General Conference of 1812 authorized the establishing of the Mississippi Conference, which held its first session at Spring Hill in Jefferson County, Miss., November 1, 1813. At this time we find that the Conference consisted of two districts—the Mississippi with seven appointments, including the territory from the Tombigbee to the city of New Orleans, and the Louisiana with its three appointments, Rapides, Attakapas and Washita. In 1831 the Alabama Conference was established with a membership of thirty-eight traveling preachers and 18,196 white, and 2,770 colored members. This left to the Mississippi Conference forty-eight traveling preachers, with 6,380 white and 2,645 colored members. From this period on till 1846 all west of the Mississippi River was embraced within the Mississippi Conference. It takes but a glance at the maps to see what a factor the original Mississippi Conference of 1813 has been in the history of Methodism in the now great Southwest.

These facts and statistics have been briefly extracted from "Jones' History of Methodism, as Connected with the Mississippi Conference." Now that we are approaching so nearly the centennial of this our beginning, it has occurred to the writer that a hint looking to the celebration of this event would not be out of place, and that we should take steps to give some practical expression of our appreciation of the occasion.

It is a very significant fact that at this time the territory embraced within this original boundary is seeking to establish better and broader facilities for the education of our young people. I am certain that no cause needs more than does that of education, and that none should appeal more strongly to our people just at this time. The Southern University of Alabama, Centenary of Louisiana and Millsaps of Mississippi, our colleges for young men, could each use to great advantage a hundred thousand dollars; and our schools for young women would welcome such a movement in their behalf.

What say the people called Methodists to this suggestion?

On Saturday, Aug. 26, Mr. J. H. Chapman and his children suffered the greatest sorrow of their lives in the death of their wife and mother, Mrs. CHAPMAN (nee Tommie Draper). Married in 1878, she became the mother of five children, in whose memory she lives as the ideal mother. The greatness of her maternal qualities is further attested by the absolute loyalty of an orphaned niece, whose childhood has never lacked a mother's care, and whose deep grief bears witness to Mrs. Chapman's perfect nobility in every relation of life. She was one of those rare women whose every act conformed to the highest standard of feminine conduct. She possessed in fullest measure the womanly traits of graciousness, sympathy, sweetness and patient strength. Her comparatively short life of 48 years was full of serene and joyful devotion to others. Nor were her ministrations confined to her family—the ideal world service was hers and her thoughtful attentions to her friends and her zeal in works of charity have made her prominent in the town in which she has spent most of her life. Though ill for the last ten years and unable to attend religious services during a great part of the time, she was a member of the Methodist Church and gave practical, daily demonstrations of her Christianity by the sweet, unselfish life she led. Though all the Christian graces were shown in her life, none was more clearly manifested than the beautiful fortitude with which she bore her long and nerve-exhausting illness. She died Aug. 26, 1911, and is mourned by her family, two sisters, two brothers, and a host of relatives and friends.

ZULA MORRIS.

Mrs. J. R. SULLIVAN (nee Lenderman) was born Dec. 23, 1842, and died Sept. 2, 1911. She professed faith in Christ at the age of 8 years. She was born and reared in Marshall County, Miss. She and two brothers constituted her father's family. She was married to Mr. J. R. Sullivan, Nov. 26, 1867. They never had any children of their own, but raised an orphan who survives her. She was of a sunny disposition and seemed to love everybody. She was a good wife for a steward, always at her place at church when able. Some months previous to her death, she had a light stroke of paralysis, from which she never recovered. She managed, however, to attend her household duties and services at church. The day previous to her departure, she was at church, returned home and was preparing dinner when the attack came. Her husband, who left the room, heard her say, "Oh, Jim!" He hastened in to find her holding on to the door, but speechless. He hastily laid her on the bed, and summoned the near-by neighbors and the physician, but nothing the loving hands could do aroused her. God had called and she had to answer, as we shall all have to do sooner or later. The writer, as well as the whole church, will miss her. We always sat side by side at our home church. She was an inspiration to me, and a blessing at the quarterly meetings, as she always had a well-spread table. Dear ones, let us not weep as those who have no hope, for if we follow her example as she followed Christ, we know, or firmly believe, we'll clasp her hand on the other shore in the sweet by and by. She leaves a husband, two brothers, a sister, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss, which is her eternal gain.

A sister in Christ, L. A. HAYS.

Died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Hill Fullilove, at Shreveport, La., June 7, 1911, EUNICE BURRUS FULLILOVE, who was born Aug. 30, 1837. She was happily married to Mr. LeRoy Kirby on Dec. 15, 1909. As the Lord of hosts comes to make up his jewels, he is constantly taking from us our best beloved, because, in his wisdom, he knows those best fitted for eternity. Thus heaven is becoming more real and nearer to us each day, and we will become so familiar with the blessed Lord that we will not dread the summons. Eunice united with the First Methodist Church when a child—was a constant attendant upon its services. In a word, she was a generous, noble Christian young woman, the pride, the joy and the glory of a happy home. Not until we have sufficiently grown to gaze upon a horizon circle which includes eternity can we see and understand the wisdom, love and justice of her taking away; in the meantime, heartache, loneliness and suffering will prove conducive to that growth in all of her loved ones here who believe in God and cling to the Christ who is the resurrection and the life.

"Near shady wall a rose once grew,
Budded and blossomed in God's free light,
Watered and fed by morning dew,
Shedding its sweetness day and night.
As it grew and blossomed fair and tall,
Slowly rising to loftier height,
It came to a crevice in the wall
Through which there shone a beam of light.
Onward it crept with added strength,
With never a thought of fear or pride.
It followed the light thro' the crevice length
And unfolded itself on the other side.
Shall claim of death cause to grieve
And make our courage faint and fall?
Nay! let us faith and hope receive—
The rose still grows beyond the wall.
Scattering fragrance far and wide
Just as it did in days of yore—
Just as it did on the other side—
Just as it will forever more."

A FRIEND.

In the early morning of Aug. 27, 1911, the messenger of death entered our circle and claimed one of its purest and sweetest. MARGARET ELEANOR, the daughter of Edmond Robertson and Stella Holloman, was born July 3, 1909, and though only a little more than two short years were granted her, she filled them full of happiness in the new-made home into which she came. Being the first-born, it was hers to awaken into fullest life all the tender feelings of parenthood, and as they watched those developments, which gradually came with the passing days, the interest deepened more and more, until the life of the home centered in the life of the little one. But he who gave the precious flower, took it back again. He who said, "Suffer the little ones to come unto me and forbid them not," claimed her as his own. To mourn is natural, but these "sorrow not as those who have no hope," for "the little feet in the golden street can never go astray." Her childish prattle shall not be heard again; those baby sentences may not be repeated; her calls for "papa" and "mamma" are not needed now. That voice has joined the chorus of the song of "Moses and the Lamb."

GRANDFATHER.

AN APPRECIATION.

It is with a sense of sadness that this, the third quarterly conference of Prairie charge, takes notice of the removal from our midst of our brother and co-laborer, Wheeler Watson, who was called home by the Heavenly Father, July 6, 1911.

Brother Watson was a consistent member of the Methodist Church at Strong, Miss., loyal to her principles and doctrines, wide awake to her best interests, and generous in his support of her institutions. As an official member of the Church, he was ever ready and willing to do his whole duty, never absent from the quarterly conference unless hindered by some unavoidable circumstance, and giving good account of his stewardship by seeing that the ministry was supported, and that other interests of the Church were not neglected.

We miss him much now, and in the days to come, we shall miss his presence and influence, but we bow in submission to the divine will of the Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well, while our hearts go out in brotherly love and sympathy to his bereaved wife and family. We commend them to the love and care of our Savior, Jesus Christ, who alone can heal their wounded hearts, and make us in heaven a happily united family and company of friends.

RESOLUTIONS ON THE DEATH OF BROTHER E. M. SPENCER.

Resolved, first—That we bow submissively to the will of our Heavenly Father, knowing that he doeth all things well in mercy and love.

Second—That by his death we sustain a great loss in his personal friendship, and a devoted laborer in our church, Sunday school and society.

Third—That while we mourn his departure, we shall ever cherish the memory of his noble Christian life and seek to emulate those superlative virtues which made his character so admirable.

Fourth—That we tender our sincere sympathy to his bereaved family, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to his family and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a record be made on the Minutes of the Methodist quarterly conference.

Signed: Dr. D. S. Richmond, M. W. Craven, W. W. Cox.

Tidings From the Field

Durant, Miss.:

We have just closed the most satisfactory revival I have seen since becoming a pastor. There were 14 added to the church on profession of faith, and the church was wonderfully uplifted. Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of West Point, did the preaching to the delight and satisfaction of all. He leaves us in high favor with all denominations. —C. P. Moss, P. C.

Coldwater, Miss.:

Both of our meetings have been held. We were assisted by Brother J. B. Randolph, of Como, in both. His preaching was of a high order. It was spiritual and practical. Our people at both churches were delighted and edified. New life, in the main, was given to the Church. There were four additions on profession of faith and five by certificate. Our people are making for higher ground. All departments of church work are being kept up. As to finances, we expect to come out at the end of the year with a clear balance sheet. More anon.—D. W. Babb.

Charleston, Miss.:

We have just closed a great meeting at Charleston. Brother J. H. Bell, of Black Hawk, was with me and did all the preaching. That he did it well, the visible results will show. We received 23 members on profession of faith and some by certificate. There were others who joined the other churches of the town. The meeting was not bolsterous at any time, but at times men sank down under conviction and were converted. Many of our people are on higher ground spiritually. Family altars have been set up in the homes of our people. In fact, the church is in a better state than I have ever known it. Brother Bell is a strong preacher and eminently evangelical. I have not in twenty years found better help in a meeting. We are approaching the end of our third year on this charge. Have received 53 members this year. No man ever served a kinder or more appreciative people.—Jno. W. Bell, P. C.

Sept. 26, 1911.

Mooreville, Miss.:

Just a small place, please, in your excellent paper. All our meetings are past. At Allen's Chapel we had a good meeting, with 3 additions on profession of faith; at Andrew's Chapel we had good services, though, on account of rainy weather, our progress was hindered to a great extent. At Oak Hill we had a great meeting. There were several professions, 3 additions, and the church was revived spiritually. Brother Jno. W. Ramsey did the preaching. At Mooreville we had an eight-day meeting, Brother W. L. Storment preaching a series of fine sermons. We are now busy putting our house in order for the Annual Conference and feel safe in saying that we shall be able to give a good account of the work. I serve a great people—a people capable of doing much for their charge and for the glory of God. May we ever seek the first great thing, viz: the kingdom of God and its righteousness!—W. W. Hartsfield, P. C.

Pearlhaven Charge:

If you will allow me space in the Advocate, I will try to tell the readers something about what we are doing. There has been no report from this work this year, but the people and pastor have not been idle. We have just closed the last meeting, and they were all revivals. At Pleasant Grove we had the greatest meeting this pastor ever saw. It was on the Pentecostal order. Interest was good at the first service, and continued to increase. The last night there were at least three hundred persons on the outside. The house is forty by sixty feet and there were all on the inside that could possibly get in—no room for an altar service. There were confessions that astonished the community. Two young men that had stolen wine from a family four years ago came up confessing and restoring. Another had gotten twenty-five dollars too much in a settlement with a railroad company for labor; and many others that we have not space to tell about. The visible results were 59 accessions to the church (and nearly all grown), more than 100 bright conversions; 23 new family altars pledged; the organization of a Senior League with 32 members, and a general uplift all over the community. Last Sunday I was back there and received 4 persons more into the church as a result of the meeting. From here we went to Bethel. Had a good spiritual meeting and two accessions to the church. The church was revived. From there we went to Mallaileu, where we had a good meeting, with 23 accessions to the church and several new family altars pledged. The work at this place was not what we had hoped, though we have not given up the fight by any means. The Lord of hosts is with us and the victory must come. I had to close this and other meetings too soon on account of sickness in my home. The last meeting was at Hawken's Chapel. Here we had a fight, but won out in the end. The church was built up spiritually. We had seven accessions to the church, several conversions and reclamations, and a few new family altars pledged. In all, this has been a year of victory for the people of God on this work. We take courage and press the battle for greater victories. At Pearlhaven our membership is small and not very active. There is not much hope of this church building up any. The mill has shut down, the people are gone, and there is no prospect of a wheel turning soon. Dr. R. C. Bethea, our helper, has stood in the front of the battle all summer. He has been present at every meeting; his health has been remarkably good. He is traveling on toward the eighty-second mile post on life's road. He conducts the prayer meetings, and keeps the chunks thrown up. The Lord blesses his efforts. Up to last Sunday night, since the fourth Sunday in August, this pastor had preached eighty-three times on his own charge, and received 94 persons into the church on profession of faith. To date we have had 111 accessions to the church since Conference. Pray for us. Fraternally.—Jas. V. Benett, P. C.

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Miss Golden's class at Wall Hill now numbers 36.

The boy and the Bible make a desirable combination for future citizenship.

• • •

A fine point for Adult Class discussion is: "What do the people of our community need most, religiously?"

• • •

Ten men united on an organized plan can accomplish more than an hundred men working singly. Team work counts.

• • •

A smile is the same in all languages. Do you use it as the court-language of Christ's love with which you expound your Sunday school lesson?

• • •

To every class room, to every teachers' meeting, to every convention bring Bibles, note-books and enthusiasm. Take away new ideas, zeal and renewed energy.

• • •

The size of a Sunday school never determines its degree of success. Many a small rural Sunday school is doing just as successful, interesting and uplifting work as the larger ones.

Why be satisfied with having just a good Sunday school? Why not make it better? When your school is better and you are on the upgrade, why not aim to have the best Sunday school in your community?

• • •

All Sunday school rallies and special days are for inspiration, enthusiasm and education. See to it that none of these important factors are left out of the preparation for these really important occasions.

Schools should be made Bigger, Broader, Better, Brighter. B's are busy everywhere you find them. Letters of the alphabet have character like people, and "B" is a friend you need to cultivate spelled be—or bee.

• • •

Mr. J. H. Ledyard, a fine, busy business man, of Tupelo, spoke to Rev. R. P. Neblett's Sunday school, at Houston, Miss., on Oct. 1. Mr. Neblett issued very attractive notices of this event, and is doing a great work along Sunday school lines wherever he goes.

The Adult Bible Class movement is nothing more nor less than practical, applied Christianity. It goes right down where men live and touches the hearts of men of all classes. More and more the Sunday school is coming to see that its work is not primarily the teaching of lessons, but rather the touching of lives."

The Y. M. B. Class, Corinth, Miss., enjoyed a fine Brunswick stew and barbecue on Sept. 15, from 3 till 6. The day was fine, the stew and barbecue par excellence and in abundance, and these fine fellows, their wives and sweethearts met under a cloudless sky and enjoyed a beautiful and uplifting Christian fellowship. Such occasions add much to class friendship and co-operation, as well as class enthusiasm.

• • •

An enthusiastic member of a large adult class moved to a distant State, and the first Sunday of his stay in alien territory he assisted in organizing a class of 6, with 44 possible men in sight. He wanted these fine fellows added to the home mission department of his class. Such work will soon wrap this tired old world in the comforting arms of loving service. On the second Sunday there were 12 present; much enthusiasm is felt.

SEVEN SUGGESTIONS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL SPEAKERS.

1. Be brief.
2. Be bright.
3. Be brotherly.
4. Bring with you what others can bear away. Be practical.
5. Think out thoroughly and present one clear thought. Be pointed.
6. When heated discussions arise, practice the art of suppression. Be patient.
7. Smile. Play the part of the optimist. Paint a bright picture. Be pleasant.

"The world will be evangelized in that generation when the Christian teachers of its youth determine that it shall be done." This was the motto of the great Missionary Department of the International Sunday School Convention at San Francisco, over which Mr. Wm. A. Brown presided.

MODEL SUNDAY SCHOOL BUILDING.

Dear Pastors and Superintendents: We are depending upon you to see to it that Rally Day is observed in your Sunday school. The offering taken at that time is to go towards the erection of a model Sunday school building at Lake Junaluska, N. C., on the Southern Assembly grounds.

The General Sunday School Board has undertaken to build a model Sunday school building with the understanding that the forty-one conferences lend their hearty co-operation. As chairman of the Sunday school board of the Louisiana Conference, I wish to see our Conference do her part, and I am sure she will, but she will not do it so handsomely unless every pastor and superintendent co-operates.

I am writing this letter to you through the Advocate in case you do not receive a personal notice. Your attention will be called to the campaign that is now on and you will co-operate with us.

Louisiana has had no small part in Methodism, and the undertaking that confronts us now should spur us on to greater efforts than ever before.

If your Rally Day has not already been planned and programs secured from A. M. Mayo, Secretary of our Board, write him at once for the number of programs you need.

Yours for the biggest and best Rally Day in the history of your Church,

THOS. V. ELLZEY, Chairman.

Years of Suffering

Catarrh and Blood Disease—Doctors Failed to Cure.

Miss Mabel F. Dawkins, 1214 Lafayette St., Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "For three years I was troubled with catarrh and blood disease. I tried several doctors and a dozen different remedies, but none of them did me any good. A friend told me of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took two bottles of this medicine and was as well and strong as ever. I feel like a different person and recommend Hood's to any one suffering from catarrh."

A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as those who have it know, for over three years, and tried almost everything. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial, I will send it free. Address

Mrs. Vest Felt Like Crying.

Wallace, Va.—Mrs. Mary Vest, of this place, says, "I hadn't been very well for three years, and at last I was taken had. I could not stand on my feet, I had such pains. I ached all over. I felt like crying all the time. Mother insisted on my trying Cardui. Now I feel well, and do nearly all my housework." No medicine for weak and ailing women has been so successful as Cardui. It goes to the spot, relieving pain and distress, and building up womanly strength, in a way that will surely please you. Only try it once.

Good. News for the Deaf.

A celebrated New York Aurist has been selected to demonstrate to deaf people that deafness is a disease and can be treated successfully in your own home. He proposes to prove this fact by sending to any person having trouble with their ears a trial treatment of this new method absolutely free. We advise all people who have trouble with their ears to immediately address Dr. Edward Gardner, Suit No. 480, No. 40 West Thirty-third street, New York City, and we will assure them that they will receive by return mail, absolutely free, a "Trial Treatment."

DEVOTIONAL.

Our October theme is "Firm Foundations." To-day's lesson (Oct. 8) is "The Christian's Emancipation." References: Rom. 8, 1-6, Rom. 6, 6-22.

The most real slavery on earth is a slavery of sin. I make this statement because no other form of bondage so takes hold on the entire man and so completely binds him as sin does.

In II Timothy 2-9, it was St. Paul's boast that though in his preaching he had suffered trouble "as an evil doer," even "unto bonds," that the Word of God was not bound. In other words, although he was physically a prisoner, as a preacher he was free—men couldn't hush his gospel nor stop his influence. The real Paul was free. But sin is a captor that hushes and has hushed the gospel on the lips even of many a preacher and completely stopped his testimony. When Paul and Silas were in jail at Philippi men might justly have called them prisoners, but their hearts were as free as the bird in the morning sunshine. But when sin takes possession it takes charge of the heart. It binds its joys up and takes captive all its nobler impulses and affections. The very mind in many cases has become enslaved, and we find him calling good evil and evil good. The secret spring of human life is the will. As long as you leave it free, no matter how enthralled the body, the real man is free; but, on the other hand, no matter how free the body, if the will be enslaved, then is the man enslaved indeed. And it is sin that so subtly slips in and enslaves often the body, and worst of all, the will, the love, the thought, the purposes of human life! Moreover, sin is a vigilant, never relenting master. Oftentimes the African slaves were so blessed by good masters that they preferred their slavery to freedom. But sin sits at your bedside at night, goes with you upon the way, sits with you at meals, disturbs your slumbers, spoils your friendships, mars your happiness and drags you daily downward toward ruin and hell. There did, at last, come a time when human mastery ended and when death came and made a free man of the slave; but to sin death is his long-waited opportunity, the open door for the eternal ruin of the human soul. It is too sad that all that many men mean by freedom or liberty is liberty to be a slave to sin, to do as they please. All the liberty any real man desires is the power to do right. It is this power that sin steals away and makes men slaves indeed. Might we not then apply the principle laid down in our reference, and say: "If sin shall make you a slave then are you a slave indeed!" We boast often that this land of ours is the "land of the free," but when we see men with debauched faces and enslaved wills we say: "If this be the 'land of the free,' it contains more slaves to the inch than any land on earth." But, thank God, over against this great relentless master Sin, there is One who may well be called "The Great Emancipator," for in every particular wherein sin enslaves, Christ makes free the heart, the mind, the will, the soul, made free by the grace of his love. No wonder St. Paul said, "By the grace of God I am what I am." We need not be slaves, for if Christ make us free, then are we free indeed. There was certainly a great limit to the emancipation given by Abraham Lincoln to the American negro. In a maze of his own sins and passions and infirmities, he is often to-day a greater slave than ever—no Southern shackles ever held him so fast, no Southern master was ever so hard. But Christ, when he sets free, gives a freedom worth while. Let us earnestly enter into this freedom.

MISSIONARY.

Our Conference Epworth League acted wisely at their meeting in urging all Leagues in accord with the provisions of the General Board to direct their missionary gifts for the next twelve months to the Cuban Special. It ought to be an easy task for the Leagues of our Conference to raise $1,000 for this purpose. This plan has many decided advantages. It gives definiteness to our missionary giving and does away with the desultory collection "for missions," in which people have but a forced interest born of sheer loyalty. It turns our faces directly toward one of the most attractive mission fields in which our Church does work.

Last year our young people studied Korea and were delighted with its fascinating lessons. This year our eyes go out to Cuba and Porto Rico in the "Advance in the Antilles." The author of this book is Howard B. Grose, well known to many by his splendid book on Home Missions called "Aliens or Americans." In every congregation there ought to be a class of young people studying this book. The price of the book in paper is 42 cents, in cloth 57 cents.

Since 1820 Gray's Ointment has been sold entirely upon its merits. It is a friend that thousands of people have been unable to do without in the cure of Cuts, Boils, Carbuncles, Felons, Tumors, Rheumatism, Blood Poison, etc.

Dr. Jas. R. Phelps of Dorchester, Mass., writes: "Please send me a new supply of Gray's Ointment. It is my sheet anchor in cases of carbuncles, unhealthy granulations and blood poison."

Ask your druggist for a 25c box, or write Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 804 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., for a free sample postpaid.

The Mineral Wealth of Georgia

If she had no other natural resources whatever, Georgia, on account of her vast, inexhaustible deposits of marble, beyond question the greatest in the whole world, would still have to be accorded a ranking place among the sister states of the Union whose future is conditioned upon the intelligent development of their economic wealth. So inexhaustible are these wonderful deposits, so peculiarly susceptible to architectural adornment, that it is estimated that all of the important monumental landmarks of the world could be reproduced from them without fear of diminution. The principal formation, for instance, a huge deposit, over sixty miles long, from two or three miles wide and anywhere from 150 to 200 feet deep, contains at least five hundred billion feet of workable marble.

Georgia Marble is peculiarly well adapted for buildings that are constructed for permanency as well as show. It has a riot of colors no other stone can boast, ranging from an almost pure white, through the varying shades of grey and pink, to a pronounced blue and black. And the marvel of it is, these colors occur in regular formations, a condition peculiar to the quarries of North Georgia. The matching is perfect, which makes it the aristocrat of all finishing stones, whether for exterior or interior work. A modern building must be able to withstand the wear and tear of time and the elements, and, if necessary, the ravages of fire. Scientifically considered, Georgia Marble is the best building stone on earth, its crystalline grains being completely interlocked, making it a very great deal stronger than marbles of New England or Italy, in which the particles are less coherent.

This peculiar crystalline formation gives Georgia Marble an appearance and durability common to no other stone. Its strength is proverbial. It can resist a pressure of upwards of 10,000 pounds to the square inch and still remain unbroken. Its absorption is infinitesimal, less than six-hundredths of one per cent. Its heat-resisting power is greater than any other stone. Of seven varieties tested, all were injured at 800 degrees Fah., all but one at 900 and three at 1,000 were not injured, in fact, until the temperature had been raised to 1,200, the heat stage necessary to convert marble into quicklime.

In the erection of Government buildings, Georgia Marble is also playing a leading role, and this is as it should be, because a Government building is intended to be a monument to the National life, something to serve the needs of to-morrow as well as to-day. Among the more important of these are the Corcoran Art Gallery of Washingtin and the State Capitol buildings of Rhode Island, Minnesota, Kentucky and Arkansas; The New York Stock Exchange, the Carnegie Library, Candler Building and Terminal Station of Atlanta; The Royal Bank of Canada and the Bank of Montreal, Winnepeg; the Illinois State Memorial, Vicksburg, and the L. & N. Passenger Station, of Louisville.

If you contemplate erecting a building or monument of any kind, ask your dealer to show you samples of Cherokee, Creole, Etowah and Kennesaw Georgia Marble, and if your dealer can't supply you, drop a card to the Georgia Marble Co., Tate, Ga., and they will put you in touch with a nearby dealer who can.

Stops a Cough Quickly --Even Whooping Cough

A Whole Pint of the Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy for 50c. Money Refunded If It Fails.

If you have an obstinate, deep-seated cough, which refuses to be cured, get a 50 cent bottle of Pinex, mix it with home-made sugar syrup and start taking it. Inside of 24 hours your cough will be gone, or very nearly so. Even whooping-cough is quickly conquered in this way.

A 50 cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, gives you a pint—a family supply—of the finest cough remedy that money could buy, at a clear saving of $2. Very easy to prepare—full directions in package.

Pinex soothes and heals the inflamed membranes with remarkable rapidity. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative, and has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. Splendid for croup, asthma, bronchitis, throat tickle, chest pains, etc., and a thoroughly successful remedy for incipient lung troubles.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other healing pine elements. It has often been imitated, though never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a pint bottle, and it is ready for use.

Anyone who tries Pinex will quickly understand why it is used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

IF YOU ARE WILLING TO PAY $10

WILSON, LA.

Dear Doctor Meek: We have just closed a good meeting at Pine Grove Church, Wilson circuit. Rev. P. H. Howse of Hattiesburg, Miss., assisted me in the meeting. We had an old time revival. The power of the Holy Ghost fell upon the people and great good was accomplished. Souls were born of the Holy Spirit and have gone to work for God. And, Doctor, I want to tell you of a pleasant surprise that came to me this morning. Bros. J. C. White and J. E. Walters borrowed my horse; they sent a colored man after him, and as we were seated at the breakfast table the negro came to the window of the dining room and said, "Your horse is at the gate." I said, "What's the matter, that you brought him back so quick?" He replied: "He saw something and would not go any farther." I said, "Did he scare?" He said, Yas, sah; he got it hitched to him out dare at your gate." This excited me, and I went out to see what the trouble was, and he was hitched to a hrand new $70 buggy, and had new harness on him with a note which read thus: "Dear Brother Sweeney—The people in your charge, realizing the good you are doing for them, and desiring to show their appreciation of your efforts, request that you accept this token. There were forty-five names attached. May the blessings of God rest upon these good people.—F. N. Sweeney.

BOGALUSA Y. M. C. A.

Since my return from Bogalusa I have received information in regard to the Y. M. C. A. of that flourishing city, which doubtless may interest the Advocate readers.

The building was erected and furnished at a cost of about $45,000 hy the heirs of Mr. Frank Henry Goodyear, founder of Bogalusa and first president of the Great Southern Lumber Company, as a memorial to him. As Mr. Goodyear ever had the best interests of his employes at heart, there could be no more fitting monument to his memory than this building, providing for the men in the mill and woods a place where they could spend their leisure time in recreation and social intercourse, surrounded by the Christian influences of the Y. M. C. A.

Of "country club" style of architecture, the building is furnished in mission style throughout. In the lobby are tables and easy chairs, making a popular place to rest. In the reading room, well lighted and with large tables and writing desks, there are twenty-two magazines and two daily papers in the files. The billiard room is equipped with two tables for pool and one for billiards, and is supplied with all the accessories to these games. The wash room has shower and tuh-baths, lavatories, toilets and a large swimming tank. The educational department is furnished with tables, desks, silicia black boards and arm chairs. In this room the Bihle study class meets each Tuesday evening. On the east side of the huilding, ou the second floor, there is a large room furnished with chairs, a reader's tahle and piano. This is used for public meetings and the Sunday afternoon devotional service. Three rooms on the west side are devoted to the use of the Ladies' Auxiliary and is their meeting place. It is used by the girls' gymnasium class on the day set apart for that work. The gymnasium has all the appliances necessary for the best work in physical culture and is the most used feature of the hullding. During the winter months classes in common English branches, shorthand and elementary technics are run in the evenings. Social entertainments form an attractive feature of the Association work. The assistant secretary, Mr. Joseph A. Gaines, informs me that the religious work at present is restricted to Bible teaching and devotional exercises in the building, but plans are now being made for the extension of this work, notably in the timber camps of the Great Southern Lumber Company, where a large number of young men are isolated from the benefits of religion.

The strongest, truest, and boldest utterances on social and moral problems go to make up

"A Man Wanted"

"I have read it with pleasure, and feel that it should do good."—Rev. Jno. F. Foster, De Ridder, La.

"No man can read this sermon without being aroused to earnest thought."—Rev. W. L. Doss, Rayne, La.

"Any pastor is fortunate to have this sermon preached or circulated among the men of his congregation."—Rev. T. J. O'Neil, Newton, Miss.

"I would be glad if every young man in the land could hear this address."—Bishop W. B. Murrah.

"A MAN WANTED is a strong sermon by Rev. W. G. Harbin. Price, 15c postpaid. C. O. Chalmers, publisher, 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

"I have read and thoroughly enjoyed MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE. A long and tedious railway journey was made pleasant because I had this book with me. I have re-read it since that time, and have gained new inspiration from it. The chapter on the Spirit of Prayer I found especially helpful. It is such a readable, understandable, Spirit-filled book."—Reader in Carthage, Texas.

A TOUCHING TESTIMONIAL is this from St. Alham, West Virginia: "I have read and re-read the book, and then I sent it to my cousin who is an invalid. He had his back broken in a coal mine and has not left his room for ten years. He was delighted."

"One of the most terrific arraignments of the whisky traffic we have ever seen is contained in the little book under the title which heads this article, which is from the strong pen of Mrs. Martha Carolyne Keller Miller, and is published by the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The scene is laid in the extreme South and the story from preface to finish moves with a momentum and moral force which is wonderful."

A FAITHFUL PASTOR COMMENDED.

Rev. L. A. McKeown has been pastor of the Methodist Church at Merigold, Miss., for four years. As a minister of the gospel he has won the admiration, love and respect of every member of his church; and not only is he loved by the members of his own church, but by every person in the community.

We all feel that in giving him up as our pastor, that we will lose a godly minister, a highly cultured man, and a personal friend. Any church or community will be fortunate to have Brother McKeown as its pastor and friend. I know of no man that the Conference could send to a people who would be a brighter light in their church and homes. Our prayers are that the time may soon come when we may have this good man with us again. It is with great regret that we give him up as our pastor; but we have the sweet consolation of knowing that he will be as great a blessing wherever he may be sent as he has been to us.

H. R. PARK.

We must not at all fret; we must not too much disturb ourselves, when our comforts seem to be withdrawn, and we are left to our own weariness. It were wrong to fret, though we cannot help being pained: because there are matters which our Lord keeps in His own hands, we must leave it to Him: He only knows when and how we need to be comforted, when and how to be left desolate and for how long.—Keble.

Tell Us

No Matter where you are, whether you are a man or a woman, twenty years old or seventy, living in town or in the country, all you need do is to tell us that you want it and it will be sent right out to you. You don't need to write a long letter, don't need to fill out any tiresome blanks, don't need to give any references or send any money or stamps. Simply tell us to send it. It makes no difference what your trouble is, whether you are sick in bed or just not feeling right—we don't ask your trouble and you need not write a word about it. All you need do is to tell us your name and address and we will send it to you, without a penny from you. This is how we are offering Bodi-Tone to every reader of this paper who is ailing or in poor health, this is how over a quarter-million sick people have already tried it. We are glad to send it to you, glad to give you a chance to try it, to learn what a great medicine we have made, to learn how chronic diseases can be cured with the right kind of medicine, containing the right ingredients. If it benefits you as it has benefited thousands, pay us a dollar for it. If you are not satisfied, don't pay a cent. We leave it all to you. We won't ask for pay afterwards or dun you. We know you will gladly pay for real benefit, for real health, real vigor, strength and comfort.

Bodi-Tone does just what its name means—cures disease by toning all the body. Bodi-Tone is a small, round, compressed tablet that is taken three times every day. Each box contains seventy-five tablets, enough for twenty-five days' use, and we send you the full box without a penny in advance, so you can try it and learn what it is, so you can learn how it cures stubborn diseases by helping nature to tone every organ and part of the body. Bodi-Tone is not a patent medicine, for its ingredients are not a secret. It contains Iron Phosphate, Gentian, Lithia, Chinese Rhubarb, Peruvian Bark, Nux Vomica, Oregon Grape Root, Cascara, Capsicum, Sarsaparilla and Golden Seal. Such ingredients guarantee its merit and explain why it cures. Bodi-Tone contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs, nothing your family doctor won't say is a good thing. It does not excite the body with alcohol, but it tones the body and cures it disorders with the remedies nature intended to tone and cure the body. Thus, Iron gives life and energy to the Blood, Sarsaparilla drives out its impurities, Phosphate and Nux Vomica create new nerve energy and force, Lithia aids in the Kidneys, Gentian does invaluable work for the Stomach and Digestive forces, Chinese Rhubarb and Oregon Grape Root promote vigorous Liver activity, Peruvian Bark raises the tone of the entire System, Golden Seal soothes the inflamed membrane and checks Catarrhal discharges, Cascara gives the Bowels new life in a natural way, and Capsicum makes all more valuable by hettering their quick absorption into the blood. A remarkable combination that does wonderful work for health.

You Need It if you are tired of continual dosing without results, you need Bodi-Tone right now. If your local doctor has done you no good, if the ordinary medicinal combinations he used have failed, give this modern scientific combination of special remedies a chance to show and prove what it can do for you. Its greatest triumphs have been among men and women with chronic ailments who had tried good physicians without lasting benefit, and for this reason all chronic sufferers are invited to try it at our risk. If there is anything wrong with your Kidneys, Bodi-Tone helps to restore tone to the Kidneys, helps to set them right. If there is anything wrong with your Stomach, Bodi-Tone helps to tone the Stomach, helps to set the wrong right. If there is anything wrong with your Nerves, your Blood, your Liver, your Bowels or your General System, the health-making ingredients in Bodi-Tone go right to work and keep on working day after day, producing results of the kind sufferers appreciate. If you have Rheumatism, Bodi-Tone helps to drive the Uric Acid from the system while it restores tone to the Kidneys, Stomach and Blood, thereby stopping Rheumatic poison and putting new activity into muscles, nerves and joints. Bodi-Tone should be used by all women suffering from Female Ailments, for its toning properties have been found especially valuable in such ailments.

Indigestion and Bowel Trouble

LONGTOWN, S. C.—Since using Bodi-Tone I am in better health than I had for ten years. I have taken medicine from five different doctors and I can't tell the different patent medicines for Constipation and Indigestion, but none of them gave me relief for more than a few days. I felt the effects of Bodi-Tone in three days, and the benefit stayed with me. My life had become a burden to me, but it has been a pleasure since I took the first box of Bodi-Tone. I wish all who suffer as I did would take one box, for they would then know the happiness it has been to me. My return to health has given me comfort in my old age. MRS. M. J. WHITE.

Dropsy, Liver and Kidney Troubles

ASBURY, N. J.—I was taken with Liver, Kidney and Bladder trouble in the fall of 1902, and the Kidney trouble caused Dropsy. I tried everything far and near, but nothing gave me more than temporary relief. I also took X-ray treatments for six months and was very much disappointed, as it was supposed to do wonders. Since I took the first box of Bodi-Tone I have felt better than from anything I have tried in these seven years. I have used three boxes, and it has made me an entirely different man. I am 65 years of age. HENRY C. MOYLE.

Had Rheumatism and Lumbago

GRAND LEDGE, MICH.—I have been afflicted over six years with Muscular Rheumatism in my arms. It finally settled in my back and the doctor called it Lumbago. Then a year ago my left knee swelled up so I could not get around and I suffered intense pains at times all winter. I could scarcely walk. I took patent medicines with no results. Then I sent for a trial box of Bodi-Tone. From that time on my improvement has been remarkable indeed, and I can now walk better than in years. MRS. TAYLOR HANCE.

We Take the Risk—You Cannot Lose

Bodi-Tone cures conditions which are totally unlike, all in the same way, for the body in health has but one way to act—it goes to all the body and makes it well. It makes up and repays for time before sickness began to trouble, for it makes the body right, with its maximum of strength, vigor and vitality. Bodi-Tone works what seems a miracle by putting tone where tone was needed. Write today, telling us you want it, get a box of Bodi-Tone promptly and try it. We take all the risk.

Editorial

Words are the least part of prayer. He prayeth best who liveth best.

"Doolittle" is not a very common name, but there is a vast number whom it would fit most admirably.

* * *

A religion which has only a history is worth but little. Former triumphs are well enough, but what the world wants to see is present achievements. It does little good to talk of how people were saved in the far-away past unless that power is available to reach and uplift them now.

Greatly to be pitied is the minister who has a passion to be in the limelight—who is ever striving to parade himself and his doings. Of our Lord, it was said he "made himself of no reputation." But it is to be feared that some who claim to be his representatives in this day are conspicuously unlike him in this respect. The pastor who does his duty in any place, no matter how obscure, need not fear that his work will be lost sight of. God's eye is upon him—is not that enough? In the divine kingdom, no flower is "born to blush unseen, and waste its sweetness on the desert air."

Happy the man who has Jesus for his friend! Truly, "he sticketh closer than a brother." And not only is he ever present, but he also has power to help. Though human sympathy is invaluable, how painfully inadequate is the assistance of those who fain would succor us in the hour of great calamity and distress! Amid the wild waves of sorrow, their voices sound afar off—they are like persons on the shore trying in vain to fling a rope to those wrestling with the angry billows of the sea, beyond their reach. But there is a voice that can hush the most furious storm, and a strong arm that can reach the far-away struggler who is almost ready to go down in the depths of despair. "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift"—that of this divine and unfailing Friend.

We are persuaded that there are many "almost Christians" in the world—persons who stand in the very doorway of the kingdom, but who do not enter in. Perhaps they are members of the Church and feel an interest in its work and even help to promote it, yet they are without any conscious experience of salvation. Like the rich young ruler who came to the Master, they have in them much to admire and commend, but there is yet one thing lacking—the surrender of the heart and life to Him who shed His blood upon the Cross. Nothing can take the place of regeneration. It alone can enthrone Christ in the soul, and make certain for it a home in the sky. Dear reader, are you in the kingdom, or merely on its threshold? This is a most momentous question. Would it not be terrible to hear of Jesus, and talk of him, and sing of him, and yet live and die without him and be lost forever? That this is possible, the Scriptures clearly teach. Why not fully accept the Savior now?

AN EXAMPLE OF MORAL COURAGE.

Men of convictions and the courage fearlessly to maintain them have been all too rare in the world's history. The great majority are time-servers, governed chiefly by the effect a course of action is likely to have upon their own personal fortunes. Of adherence to principle they have little, and of the spirit that is willing to sacrifice and suffer for the cause of truth and right, if necessary, they have even less. They have a consuming desire for popularity and what the world is pleased to term success. They forget that the multitude is often in the wrong, and that the effort to uplift the race has been one continuous battle to save the masses of mankind from their own evil inclinations. The "broad way" is thronged with travelers; the "narrow way" is never crowded. To be a leader in any high and worthy sense one must pay the penalty of being often lonely and misunderstood. A majority verdict of the people, though it must be yielded to temporarily, settles nothing finally. The only irreversible decrees will be those issued by the divine Judge on the last great day.

It is the unusualness of men standing out for principle in the face of popular clamor that makes such action appear so sublime. It is well to recall such incidents and dwell upon them, since they show to what majestic heights manhood may rise, and thus tend to elevate and ennoble our ideals. One of the most striking examples of this kind in American history is found in the life of the distinguished Southern statesman, L. Q. C. Lamar. It occurred in 1878 when Mr. Lamar and B. K. Bruce, a negro, were representing Mississippi in the United States Senate. There arose at that time a financial question concerning which Senator Lamar, after painstaking study, found himself in irreconcilable conflict with the views of his constituents. He firmly and conscientiously believed that the proposed measure would prove seriously injurious to his State, the South, and the whole nation. The time when he must be re-elected, if he was to continue in the Senate, was not far off. The suggested legislation which caused the trouble and embarrassed the great Southerner came up in dual form. While it was pending and under discussion, the Mississippi Legislature convened, and by formal resolution instructed the representatives of that State in Congress to vote for the measure. Disobeying these instructions, when the first phase of the question was passed upon, Mr. Lamar voted in the negative. Bruce voted for it, and this led the State Legislature to adopt a resolution condemning Mr. Lamar. A few days later, when the condeming Mr. Lamar. A few days later when the final vote on the bill was about to be taken, Senator Lamar arose from his seat and had the Clerk of the Senate to read the instructions of the Legislature of Mississippi. In the most impressive manner, he then spoke in part as follows:

"Mr. President, between these resolutions and my convictions there is a great gulf. I cannot pass it. Of my love to the State of Mississippi I will not speak; my life alone can tell it. My gratitude for the honor her people have done me no words can express. I am best proving it by doing to-day what I think their true interests and their character require me to do. During my life in that State it has been my privilege to assist in the education of more than one generation of her youth, to have given the impulse to wave after wave of the young manhood that has passed into the troubled sea of her social and political life. Upon them I have always endeavored to impress the belief that truth was better than falsehood, honesty better than policy, courage better than cowardice. To-day my lessons confront me. To-day I must be true or false, honest or cunning, faithful or unfaithful to my people. Even in this hour of their legislative displeasure and disapprobation, I cannot vote as these resolutions direct. I cannot and I will not shirk the responsibility which my position imposes. My duty, as I see it, I will do, and I will vote against this bill."

Where can nobler words than these or a finer example of moral courage than that exhibited by Mr. Lamar on this occasion be found? Whatever one may think of the question as to whether a representative should be governed by the will of his constituents, he cannot but admire the manly spirit of the renowned Senator in meeting this issue. And it is to the credit of the people whom he served that they did not retire him, but, in the face of a formidable fight made upon him, returned him to Washington with a magnificent vote of confidence. This is the type of men we need to-day, both in Church and State—men who have convictions and who would rather go down in defeat than surrender them. No other kind of man is worthy of being trusted, or can ever become in the hour of need "the pillar of a people's hope." A human chameleon, changing color to suit the complexion of every crowd into which he happens to creep, is a counterfeit on manhood and of but little value to any cause.

Under the gospel dispensation we are called to worship no new God, but, being by faith the spiritual children of Abraham, the God of Abraham is our God forever and ever. The God of the whole earth he is, and to each of us he is Maker, Preserver, Savior—God, and loving Father and eternal Friend. In Christ Jesus, God has shown mercy mixed with kindness, and that to the very highest degree. The unsearchable riches of gospel grace should be the subject of our praise. God's mercy is the source of all our comforts, and all our hopes are founded upon his truth, and so, the theme and burden of our steady song of praise should be for both his mercy and his truth. Jew and Gentile alike need his merciful forbearance and plenteous redemption, for "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." God's merciful kindness is great in his slowness to anger, forbearing to punish and long suffering to usward; in his gift of his Son, to be our all-sufficient Savior; in the mission and work of his Spirit in his convicting, converting and sanctifying power; and in the establishment of his Church and its needed means of grace for the growth and perfection of Christian character. God's merciful kindness is great in the comprehensiveness of its aim and purpose of saving unto the uttermost all who come unto God in Christ, giving hope and life and salvation to all classes and conditions of men, even the chief of sinners.

A TRIP TO THE PANAMA CANAL.

By Rev. S. H. Werlein, D.D.

Compared with the seven world wonders the Panama Canal reduces them into almost insignificance. To see it, to measure its gigantic proportions, to inspect its immense machinery, to contemplate the all but insurmountable difficulties which opposed it, is to be appalled by its magnitude. Such engineering the world has rarely witnesses. It took the combined genius of France, Germany and America to assure its practicability. Its completion is now in sight. It is believed that within a year the digging will be finished and the channel will be ready for the inflow of the Chagres River. Some people yet insist that the original plan of a sea-level canal will be found necessary, but the scheme now being prosecuted will doubtless prove wise and perfectly feasible.

The interest which the United States is taking in this part of the globe has done much to stimulate the lethargic Panamanians. A vast multitude of West Indian negroes were attracted to this region. However, before coming they stipulated that return passage to their home land must be provided, to which the United States agreed. After the failure of the French under De Lesseps, thousands of these negroes, thrown out of work, were reduced to a state of almost starvation, and the greatest difficulty attended their return to their native land. A repetition of these conditions was to be prevented by the terms granted by the United States.

At present there is no little excitement among the merchants of Colon and Panama City over the position taken by Colonel Goethals relative to the United States' control of the business which he foresees will be developed in connection with the Canal. In an interview reported by Mr. Hayden Talbot, the Colonel says: "If we don't run the business end of the Canal, it will be administered by huge private interests, which will effectually block our attempts to make the waterway a one-price institution; for the commercial possibilities are such as to tempt trust magnates quite as strongly as newly discovered gold fields draw wild-eyed prospectors. There is a fortune to be made by the concern that gets and holds the upper hand in the matter of coaling stations in the zone." The Colonel wants the United States to do a ship chandler business. His idea is, not only to supply coal, but everything essential to ocean navigation, such as foodstuffs, laundrying, and ship repairing. By thus facilitating the easy reach of long distances, the freight carrying capacity of ocean steamers will be greatly increased. The merchants and interested capitalists of the Isthmus and elsewhere are vigorously protesting against this plan. In other words, they demand that the United States go to the expense of a half-billion of dollars to create business possibilities for the investment of their capital. Their position is preposterous! They intend through American merchants and others interested to bring pressure on Congress to prevent Col. Goethals' plan. The business sagacity of the Colonel is to be commended, and I believe his policy will be enforced. While world-wide commerce will be greatly benefited by the canal, it is the duty of the United States to provide for its own reimbursement. The amount of patronage which will be given the canal is problematical, and every legitimate source of revenue should be carefully husbanded by the government. While, as Colonel Goethals says the Panama Canal will bring Singapore nearer to Bremen than the Suez Canal, it does not assure the use of the former by the Germans. Presumably it will, but those in control of the Suez Canal will do all in their power to retain the patronage they have. America will have to induce patronage by offering better rates and greater conveniencies, and thus the Panama Canal will become a revenue getter.

There are six thousand American employes and thirty thousand negro laborers engaged in digging the canal. This gives an approximate population of twelve thousand Americans—men, women and children—who live within the Canal Zone, which comprises five hundred square miles of land and water. Within the bounds of the Canal Zone the United States is supreme. The zone is distinctly American. Every provision is made for the health, comfort, social and moral welfare of the employes. The houses are all screened and the streets and sewers are absolutely clean, sanitarily. During my sojourn of a week in the zone, I saw hardly any flies and only one mosquito. Crude oil is freely used wherever there is stagnant water, and that is death to the mosquito. These pests, so common in American cities, are noticeably absent in this section, which was once the breeding place of pestilential disease. There is very little sickness along the zone, and the men and women and children I met testify to the healthfulness of that climate. Frost is never known on the Isthmus. Everlasting summer prevails. The temperature is very much like that of New Orleans during the summer, only a little more moist, and perhaps a shade cooler on account of the trade winds. Of course, tropical vegetation abounds. The banana, pine apple, almond and cocoanut grow wild in that region. In the jungles, prolific growth of the fern, palmetto, etc., may be seen.

At a number of the zone villages, Y. M. C. Associations have been organized in buildings provided by the United States government. In these zone villages union churches are attended by members of different churches, thus giving a practical demonstration of the spiritual unity of believers. The government by means of restaurants and hotels and commissary departments affords meals, groceries, etc., to the employes at about cost, thereby making the expense of living no higher than in the States. The Tivoli Hotel in Panama City, owned and operated by the United States government, is a gem, and another hotel is in process of construction at Colon. All the employes seem to be happy and contented, and perform their work with enthusiasm. The esprit de corps of the whole army of toilers is exceptionally fine. Of course, the spirit of Colonel Goethals is contagious and inspiring. He does not "lord" it over the men, but treats them as gentlemen. The Panamanians have had brought to their very doors object lessons of American life. The contrast is so striking, that they cannot but recognize it. On the other hand, the Americans, separated by perhaps only a street, as in Colon, from the customs and residences of the natives, behold a civilization which up to the advent of the canal was utterly unprogressive and worthy of the dark ages. The natives for the most part are dark colored, showing a mixture of Spanish, negro and Indian blood. Many of them speak a broken English, while the most of them have not been able to go beyond the Spanish. It is a country which, aside from the canal and the habitation of the Americans, affords little interest to the tourist. The American villages are prettily laid out, and flowers and ornamental plants please the eye. The West Indian negro, who, for the most part, come from Jamaica, is everywhere seen. He is the common laborer. They crowd the streets, the stores, parks, saloons, gambling dens, cockpits and bull fight arenas. They are paid good wages, and, like the American negro, spend all they receive. All of them speak good English, and have the accent of the West Indian Englishman. Some of them are college graduates. Of course, in Colon and Panama City every moral abomination flourishes. The Panama lottery is running without hindrance. Hundreds of the native women, children and sleepy-looking male drones sit around the streets and curb-stones holding these tickets for sale. Every Sunday morning multitudes gather around the main offices to learn the results of the drawing. The owner of this vicious institution is said to be a white Spaniard, who has fifty wives and concubines and one hundred and twenty-nine children. We, who know something of the corrupting influence of the lottery, can appreciate the morally ruinous effect it is having on its many patrons from America. Some of our American young men have been infected with this gambling mania, and are enthusiastic supporters and advocates of this nefarious business. Sow the lottery, reap the gambler.

I was greatly interested in the missions of the Wesleyan Methodist, Baptist and Episcopal Churches. The unique and curious feature of this work is that the white preachers minister to and are supported by the negro congregations. The Rev. Mr. Cook is the preacher of the Wesleyan Church at Colon, and has a membership of nearly three hundred. He is a college graduate and preaches a sermon which would be creditable in any of our white churches, yet these negroes give him the most intelligent and appreciative hearing. The Church and the school have been the salvation of the emancipated West Indian negro, and these must solve the negro problem in our Southland. There is no negro problem among the West Indian negroes. Among them the white man is the teacher and preacher and leader. This has prevented any breach between the whites and the blacks. Race questions are easily solved where the two races meet in friendly council.

If the tourist wants to know anything about the great banana plantations on the Isthmus he must take the trip to Bocas Del Torros. The United Fruit Company has built railroads into the interior that run northward toward Costa Rica, and traverse banana districts where plantations producing bananas every month and every day of the year may be seen. I was glad to see along the railroad the school house and the chapel, which evidenced the good work of the missionary among these plantation laborers, and the best of all is that Protestant preachers sent by the Wesleyan and Baptist Churches are ministering to them. Our branch of the Church is doing no mission work in this section, and there is no need that it should, as long as others are doing so. While in Colon, I met some distinguished Wesleyan preachers who were making a tour of the Wesleyan West Indian Missions. These were Dr. Haigh, the president of the Wesleyan Conference; Dr. S. Hope Moulton, and Dr. W. Hodson Smith.

The steamship Atenas of the United Fruit Company was the floating palace in which I made the trip. The menu will compare favorably with that of the finest vessels that float, and one can hardly conceive of better appointments for the comfort and pleasure of passengers. Captain E. W. Holmes is a genial and courteous gentleman, and a great favorite with the traveling public. Captain W. M. Rese, the New Orleans port captain of the same company, accompanied by his family, made the round trip, and greatly contributed to my enjoyment. The ships of the United Fruit Company, with a tonnage of 5,000 and a length of 300 feet, are supposed to cost a million dollars each, and are modeled in miniature after the great ocean ships. It is estimated that the United Fruit Company controls sixty per cent of the banana trade of the world. It has a fleet of thirteen ships and charters a number of other ships. Their plantations embrace an immense acreage, spread over Panama, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Jamaica, Honduras and Colombia. This company has been of incalculable benefit to these Latin American countries, giving employment to these shiftless people, as well as demonstrating the productiveness of the soil. They specialize on bananas because they are easily and profitably produced.

A prominent railroad man who was on board remarked: "New Orleans should be more greatly benefited by the canal than any city in the world." Another replied: "That depends on what New Orleans will do with her opportunity." One thing is certain: New Orleans will be brought into such competition as she has never before experienced. Her merchants seem to be alive to the situation and determined to meet the future in a wise and masterful manner. The provincial and high-priced methods which have obtained in New Orleans will have to surrender to the policy of smaller profits and greater trade. Every facility to shippers must be anticipated. Railroads, steamboat lines, public utilities of all sorts must find it to their interest not to discriminate against New Orleans. She must become the granary of the West. Her merchants and capitalists should be able to compete with Northern and Western dealers, and handle the produce of other latitudes as successfully as she does those in her immediate vicinity. Steamship lines, owned and controlled by New Orleans capital, connected with all the ports of Central and South America as well as the Far East, must be enterprised. Her exports must meet the demands of other lands, and her imports must supply American needs. When Venice was the mistress of the sea, her ships sailed to the far regions, and so was it in the palmy days of Phoenicia. There can be little doubt that New Orleans will become a greatly populous and prosperous metropolis, and that the character of the inhabitants will undergo a marked change for the better. New life will come into our churches, and Protestantism will he advanced beyond what we dream. The people who will move to New Orleans to meet the rising tide will be of the live, wide-awake, progressive sort, and such are, as is well known, not Roman Catholics. Protestantism wakes up people, and Romanism lulls them to sleep. The wide-awake business men are generally Jews or Protestants, and not a few of them will come to New Orleans. It will then be the New New Orleans. Some of us will hardly know the city of our nativity. May our people be wise and ready for the coming day!

MY FIRST PASTORAL CHARGE AND ELSE.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

I was less than twenty-two years old; knew but little about the ways of the world; had traveled but little. I knew but little about our Discipline and not much about the Bible. I knew God as a sin-pardoning God. I knew I loved Him; also that I loved his Word, his ways, his people. In fact, so far as I knew, I was in love with everything pure, good and holy. I could sing, tell my experience, live my religion, visit my flock, talk to them about Jesus and his love and pray with and for them. But I could not preach like other men. I felt my inability to anallze properly a text. Yet I felt it my duty to go and do my best, and I did that very thing.

On December 8, 1857, I kissed my precious mother good-by, and mounting my faithful little pony, Jenny Lind, turned my back on my home—the home where lived in my estimation the best woman in Pike County, if not in the State, Pattie Lewis, my now sainted mother—and started out on life's work, for I went into the ministry with the intention of spending my life, whether long or short, in the service of the Master. My work was more than a hundred miles from mother's home. Late in the afternoon of the second day after leaving home, I crossed Pearl river 15 miles south of Columbia, and not far from where the second session of the Mississippi Conference was held in 1814. The third day I got into the bounds of my work and spent the night with one of my stewards, Dunning Byrd. I soon learned he was a brother to J. Ira E. Byrd, a superannuated member of our Conference at that time.

Brother Byrd was a good and true man, and was helpful to his pastor. I enjoyed the honor of receiving one of his sons into the Church during the year. His wife, though a good woman, was a member of another church and was not the help to him she would have been had she been a Methodist.

Late in the afternoon of the fourth day, I reached the home of uncle James Bounds, another one of my stewards, who lived near where I was to preach the following day, which was Friday. Brother Bounds was a good, true man and very helpful to me. The following day, Dec. 12, Brother Bounds and I went to New Hope Church, where we met a small congregation, and I attempted to preach, taking for my text, "He preached unto him Jesus." This was my first effort as an itinerant. (Ten years afterwards I preached my first sermon as presiding elder from the text, "I am doing a great work, etc." (Nehemiah 6:3.)

Thus, on the 12th day of December, 1857, on or near Black Creek in Perry county, I made my first effort at preaching as a Methodist traveling preacher—nearly 54 years ago. From New Hope I went to Pine Forest in Marion county and from there to Hickory Grove, near where Baxterville now stands. Here I had a good congregation. Joshua Stanford was a local preacher, and Daniel Rouse and Dennis Byrd were stewards here. The Baxters lived here.

When at Hickory Grove, I was in a few miles of where my father lived when he was saved from sin, about ninety-one years ago. His conversion was a very remarkable one—one of the kind that sticks. Often have I heard him relate his Christian experience in class meeting and in love feast. He had been under deep conviction for months, had joined the Church, established a family altar, and tried to conform his life to the Christian standard months before he was converted. He lived nine miles from his church, where there was preaching only once a month; hence three or four Sundays out of each month there was no religious service to attend. It was on one of these Sundays that he found the Saviour.

Early in the day he took his Bible, went to the woods, read, prayed and meditated. Late in the afternoon he returned to the house, fed the stock, looked after domestic matters, then said to his wife: "Don't be uneasy about me: I will be in after a while." He then went back to the place in the woods where he had spent the day with the great load of guilt and sin still resting upon him. He felt that if God did not do something for him quickly he was doomed, world without end. As he kneeled in prayer, he resolved in his heart to spend the whole night in prayer or find the Savior. By the time his knees touched the ground, the burden of guilt and sin was lifted from his soul, and he found himself in a new world, so to speak. He sprang to his feet and hurried to the house to break the good news to his wife, who for a long time had been praying for the salvation of her husband. Oh, what a happy time they had together that night!

"Awaked by Sinai's awful sound,
My soul in guilt and thrall I found,
And knew not where to go.
O'erwhelmed in sin, with anguish slain,
'The sinner must be born again,'
Or sink to endless woe.

"Amazed I stood, but could not tell
Which way to shun the gates of hell—
For death and hell drew near:
I strove indeed but strove in vain—
'The sinner must be born again,'
Still sounded in mine ear.

"When to the law I trembling fled,
It poured its curses on my head;
I no relief could find.
This fearful truth renewed my pain:
'The sinner must be born again,'
And whelmed my tortured mind.

"Again did Sinai's thunder roll
And guilt lay heavy on my soul,
A vast, oppressive load:
Alas! I read and saw it plain,
'The sinner must be born again,'
Or feel the wrath of God.

"The saints I heard with rapture tell
How Jesus conquered death and hell,
And broke the fowler's snare:
But when I found this truth remain,
'The sinner must be born again,'
I sank in deep despair.

"But while I thus in anguish lay,
Jesus of Nazareth passed this way,
And felt his pity move:
The sinner by his justice slain,
Now, by his grace is born again,
And sings redeeming love.

"To heaven the joyful tidings flew,
The angels tuned their harps anew,
And loftier notes did raise:
All hail the Lamb who once was slain!
Unnumbered millions born again
Will shout their endless praise."

Now, while I write these lines, twenty or more of my father's descendants are engaged in telling the story of the Cross.

"Ye must be born again."

It pays to get a good start in the Christian life. My father started right.

TRUST AND SERVICE.

Trust and service go together. The man who believes nothing has no confidence and is bankrupt of good cheer and courage in trying to be helpful to others. No man is well fitted to do good until he trusts in the strength of an arm greater than his own, and in the goodness of a heart upon which he may rest in peace.

Dr. Buckley tells the story of a Christian merchant in a Western city who was in sore trouble. He had one of those living sorrows which are infinitely harder to bear than the sorrow which death brings. He had a prodigal son, who had become the victim of strong drink. He was not a vicious boy, was naturally of a loving and tender-hearted disposition, hut he was in bondage to his evil habits. One Saturday night the father had sought to help him, and failed. It seemed as though his heart would break. At midnight he was sitting in his office, worn out, and almost ready to despair. He had been making a losing fight for two years, and it seemed to the care-worn man as if it must be a losing fight until the end.

Presently he saw lying on his desk his religious paper, and taking it up his weary eyes fell upon Katrina Trask's little poem, and he read these words:

"Lie down and sleep,
Leave it with God to keep
This sorrow which is part
Now of thy heart.
When thou dost wake
If still 'tis thine to take,
Utter no wild complaint;
Work waits thy hands;
If thou shouldst faint,
God understands."

The words so fitted to his needs that they roused the merchant from the lethargy of despair which was settling down upon him, and he said: "I will." He went home, and slept in peace. He rose the next morning refreshed and full of power. It was the Sabbath, and setting himself to the work with new devotion, his boy was brought to Christ and redeemed from his sin that very day.

Months passed away when, one day, a young business man in a responsible position, who had recently lost his young wife under distressing circumstances, was in the old merchant's counting-room. The young man was so utterly despondent and cast down that the heart of the older man was deeply moved in his behalf. In trying to encourage him he told him a little of his own experience, and how much good the little poem did him when it came to him in that dark midnight of his life. He read it to the young man, and, though he was not a religious man, he asked the old gentleman to give him a copy of it. Months again passed away before he met the young man whom he had sought to comfort. When they did meet, the young fellow came up and took his hand, and said: "You may remember me, but I owe more to you than to any other man on earth. You remember the talk we had last winter, and the little poem you gave me? Well, I want to tell you that I was in utter despair; I had fully made up my mind to take my life. I had made every preparation, and your words and that blessed poem called me back to reason and conscience." He then went on to tell the old merchant how he had given his heart to Christ, and had come to trust God, and so had found peace.—Methodist Recorder.

It is stated that the proportion of men to women in the Ohio Wesleyan University is five to four.

Rev. J. W. Cunningham, D.D., who has long been a familiar figure in the Methodist circles of St. Louis, will hereafter reside with his youngest daughter in California. His address will be Monrovia, Los Angeles County. Dr. Cunningham is now eighty-seven years of age.

The early fall Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church are said to be showing a decided increase in the funds for Conference claimants. This is gratifying. The inadequate provision made for her worn-out ministers has long been the reproach of Methodism, both in the North and South.

Dr. L. C. Broughton, the eminent Baptist minister of Atlanta, Ga. has opened a pellagra hospital in connection with the great institutional church in that city. At this time, Dr. Broughton is in England, and Dr. R. S. McArthur, of New York, is filling his pulpit, which he was engaged to do for two months.

Ninety-two students registered at the Oklahoma Wesleyan College (at Oklahoma City) the first week after the opening on September 14. This is the initial session of this promising institution for the education of young ladies, which the Southern Methodists have established in this growing western commonwealth.

The Methodist University of Oklahoma (Northern) opened its doors in Guthrie on Sept. 21, occupying as its temporary home the $150,000 structure formerly erected by the citizens of that city for the State Government. This institution has absorbed the Fort Worth (Texas) University hitherto maintained by this denomination.

Wofford College opened its 58th session on Sept. 29, with over 400 students in attendance, the best showing, according to the Southern Christian Advocate, in the history of the institution. It is stated that every county in South Carolina is represented in the student body, and that patronage has also come from several other States.

After forty-one fruitful years, Dr. Robert Stuart McArthur has resigned the pastorate of the Calvary Baptist Church, of New York City. Dr. McArthur is one of the most gifted ministers in the United States, and is president of the Baptist World Alliance. Possibly a desire to promote the work of that organization had something to do with his resignation.

Rev. J. J. Morgan, secretary of the Southwestern Agency of the American Bible Society, has announced that Governor Woodrow Wilson will deliver the principal address on the occasion of the Tercentenary of the St. James Version of the Bible at Dallas, Texas, on October 28. Bishop E. R. Hendrix will preside over the meeting, and Dr. Brooks, president of Baylor University, will introduce the speaker.

The two Presbyterian churches reporting the largest number of members received on profession of faith last year are the First Church of Seattle, Wash., which took in 455, and the Second Church of Portsmouth, Ohio, which gained 452. Of the former church, Dr. M. A. Matthews, who is well known in North Mississippi and Tennessee, is the brilliant pastor.

At the recent session of the Louisville Conference, Dr. W. R. Hendrix was transferred to the North Georgia Conference, Rev. R. D. Smart, to the Virginia Conference, and Dr. W. W. Pinson, to the Tennesse Conference. Of Bishop McCoy's presidency over this body, the Central Methodist Advocate says: "He presided with ability, and seemed to have a full grasp of all the business that came before the Conference. He is a very brotherly man, and impresses all with his fairness and deep religious spirit."

The news of the discovery of a manuscript commentary on more than half of the Book of Revelation, believed by Professor Harnack to be by Origen, is of no little importance to students of patristic literature and also to those devoted to textual criticism and exegesis. Origen was the greatest scholar among the Greek Church Fathers, and one of the earliest. His judgment about this disputed Book of the Revelation, which was not admitted into the early Syriac Peshitto translation, will be of value.—New York Independent.

The Central Christian Advocate thus refers to the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Africa: "We now have 621 workers as against 88 when Bishop Hartzell was elected sixteen years ago. The membership shows a three-fold increase; our schools have an enrollment of 7,762 as compared with 250 then, and our property is worth a half million dollars. Our printing presses publish a variety of literature, including nine periodicals, in three languages. We work under three flags." Yet there are those who affirm that the Gospel cannot reach and uplift the black race.

WANTED—A WORKER.

God never goes to the lazy or the idle when he needs men for his service.—When God wants a worker, he calls a worker. When he has work to be done, he goes to those who are already at work. When God wants a great servant he calls a busy man. Scripture and history attest this truth:

Gideon was busy threshing wheat by the wine press.
Saul was busy searching for his father's lost beasts.
David was busy caring for his father's sheep.
Elisha was busy plowing with twelve yoke of oxen.
Nehemiah was busy bearing the king's wine cup.
Amos was busy following the flock.
Peter and Andrew were busy casting a net into the sea.
James and John were busy mending their nets.
Matthew was busy collecting customs.
Saul was busy persecuting the friends of Jesus.

Football seems to have possession of all England. There are said to be there 16,000 regularly constituted clubs. Of these, 14,000 are under the jurisdiction of the Football Association, which has on its rolls more than 750,000. members, and which has registered 20,000 referees. These figures do not include the clubs existing in schools and colleges, which are operated under an organization of their own.

A story is being told of Mr. Lloyd George, of England, which is good enough to be true. A British sailor wanted to equip a Polar expedition. The Chancellor advised him to appeal to the Stock Exchange. He did so, and a few days afterwards reported to the Chancellor that he had secured $250, but he had a promise of $125,000 if he would only take Lloyd George with him, and double that if he would leave him there. The expedition, however, has not yet started.—The Christian Guardian.

With the exception of rice, and possibly of cotton, it is now affirmed that all the leading crops of the United States will this year be smaller than in 1910, and less than the past ten-year average. Compared with last season, it is estimated that the corn crop will be 400,000,000 bushels short; wheat, 29,000,000, and oats, 380,000,000. This does not mean that food will be scarce in our country, since our harvests are generally largely in excess of what we consume; but it does doubtless mean that the cost of living will continue to be high, and that it will probably even advance.

The Liberal Government in Canada, which has been in power since 1896, has dissolved, and the Hon. R. L. Borden, the opposition leader, has been called upon to form a cabinet. The Christian Guardian speaks of both the retiring premier, Sir Wilfred Laurier, and his successor as men of high ideals and unblemished life. Robert Laird Borden, the new prime minister, was born in Grand Pre, Nova Scotia, in 1854, and became a member of the bar in 1878. He has been in the Canadian Parliament since 1896, and the leader of the Conservative party since 1901, succeeding Sir Charles Tupper in the latter position.

Capt. J. L. Adams, who for many years was connected with the Western Union Telegraph Company, has perfected a device for delivering mail to moving trains and also receiving it from them. A test was made a few days ago on the Northeastern Railroad, with the cars moving at rates varying from three to fifty miles an hour, and the contrivance was found to work almost perfectly. The Government is interested in the invention, and in case a favorable report of it is sent to Washington, it is stated that the device will probably be put through a six months' service test between New Orleans and Meridian.

Particularly interesting was the Senator's discussion of the campaign against the famous Louisiana Lottery, in which he played a leading part, and which was participated in by the renowned Dr. B. M. Palmer, Cardinal Gibbons, and Chief Justice White. Mr. Foster's opponent, Congressman Ransdell, has been actively in the field for several weeks, and is making a thorough canvass of the State.

The fast and luxurious special train service which the Southern Pacific railroad will soon put on between New Orleans and San Francisco will greatly reduce the time between the two cities, and furnish the traveling public with every needed convenience. The trains will be all steel and the cars of the latest design. Each train will be equipped with a barber shop, shower bath, arrangements for pressing clothing, a stenographer and telephone connection. For the convenience of ladies, there will be a ladies' maid, a manicure and hair dresser on board, and many other accommodations. The berths, upper and lower, will be lighted with electricity. From this it will be seen that the early hardships of traveling are being more and more done away with.

The strike of the shopmen on the Illinois Central and Harriman railway lines has attained to considerable proportions, and there has been a good deal of disorder and lawlessness at some points. As yet the passenger service does not seem to have been seriously hindered, but it is reported that there has been not a little confusion in the handling of freight. As to the merits of the controversy between the shopmen and their employers, we are not sufficiently informed to express an intelligent opinion. Certainly such disturbances are greatly to be regretted, and it would seem that some way should be found to arbitrate differences of this character; especially since business is injured and the innocent public is made to suffer in consequence of them.

Concerning Missions.

SOME WORDS OF EXPLANATION.

To the Auxiliary Third Vice-Presidents of the Home Department of the Missionary Society, Mississippi Conference:

My Dear Co-workers: I have been asked through several letters for information in regard to the new report blanks. I do not feel equal to the duty of explaining, but will do the best I can. I am writing to you through the columns of our church organ in order to reach as many as possible, for, you know, this fiscal year will close this time on Jan. 1, 1912, and there is much to be done in this short time. Any radical change brings some confusion, and this time, when we are having so many changes, it is hard to make things clear. This period of readjustment is somewhat of a tax on one's patience, and I have the tenderest sympathy for all, as we try to explain and to understand.

You know, at the first meeting of the Council in St. Louis last April, the Tithing Department was changed to that of Christian Stewardship and Mission Study. This made new report blanks necessary. As there is no longer a tithing department, those questions did not seem to correspond with the new and larger view of stewardship—not that we would fail in the least to stress the fundamental Bible principle of supporting the Gospel. We hope still to try to impress our members with their obligation in this regard, and to teach further our stewardship, not only as to material possessions, but also of our time, our talents, and indeed of our whole life. It is the paramount object of this department to get mightily on the hearts and consciences of our people the great responsibility of stewardship—the individual obligation to do one's part in establishing the kingdom of righteousness in the world. If through mission study we are enabled to give our members a fuller conception of the world's great need, and then through the Stewardship Department to impress our members with the part that is theirs to relieve these needs, we shall accomplish the end for which we pray.

Now, sisters, we can only make progress by trying, and at this time I will sorely need the help and prayers of every third vice-president. I did not get the literature for this department until late, and I earnestly urge a few things:

First—That you read carefully the Prospectus and "A Forward Movement in Mission Study." They contain full information in regard to the course of study this year.

Second—That October is Mission Study Campaign month. If you cannot start your class in October, be sure to arrange it for some other time.

Third—That this work is to be stressed with the young people and children, as well as with the adults.

Fourth—That we should take one book in the fall and one in the spring, thus learning of the conditions at home and abroad. Please give special attention to these things. Then fill out the enrollment card and send to Miss Mabel Head, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Fill out the report blanks and send them to me before Jan. 1, for, as you know, it is from these that I make up my report to send to Mrs. Perry.

I am sending out the literature as fast as possible, and I will try to write a personal letter to each of you as early as I can. Thanking you in advance for co-operation and praying God's blessings upon your work, I am, sincerely,

Mrs. J. R. ELLIS,

SOME OBSERVATIONS ON THE PROHIBITION QUESTION.

Mr. Editor: I most heartily indorse your suggestion in the Advocate of September 21 for calling a meeting of the temperance people in Jackson, Miss., some time in January, 1912. I think you are right in your view of the influence of a "whisky lobby with an unlimited amount of money and booze." A meeting is of the greatest importance to our cause in Mississippi. The whisky interests, inspired by the recent victories in Maine, Texas and Alabama, are now planning through every locker club, assisted by every brewery and wholesale liquor concern in America, an organized and persistent effort to repeal our statutory law. The liquorites in the State have persistently refused to obey the law, and tried in every way to bring it into disrepute, and then blatantly cry, "Prohibition don't prohibit," and this is their only plea for the repeal. Suppose the thieves were to plead for the repeal of the law against stealing, or the libertine plead for the repeal of the law against the white slave traffic, or the murderer plead for the repeal of the law against murder—would not every true and law-abiding citizen rise up and cry: "No, no; these violators and enemies to the peace and safety of the people have no right to be heard!" And immediately there would be a demand for more stringent laws to put an end to their iniquitous business. Is not the liquor business the ally of all these evils? These liquorites have no right to a voice in this matter until they have faithfully obeyed the law, and can show some good reason other than that which they now bring for the repeal. Pray, tell me what right has a set of lawbreakers to dictate to the faithful citizenship of the land what ought to be done? Has a man any right, with a locker-key in his pocket from some damnable club, the sole purpose of which is to violate the law, to say "prohibition does not prohibit," and hypocritically plead for the repeal? This is the best reason I know of for a more stringent law, one that will outlaw every locker-club the hellish business can invent, and it will have to be horse-high, bull-strong, and pig-tight.

There are coming out in this fight everywhere some facts that ought to make every true and loyal citizen sit up and take notice. The first, and the worst of all, is, that this issue is not a local, but a national contest against the combined power of the national liquor organization, protected by the Federal Government at Washington. If it were not for the domination of the liquor business at Washington through the Republican and Democratic parties, we could be freed from this curse in a day. The Government's partnership in this business and the power it is using to further and foster it, is seen to its shame in the action of President Taft's Secretary of State, Mr. Knox, in his instructions to our representatives to foreign governments to use their influence to have delegates from these countries sent to the coming National Brewers' Congress at Chicago, of which James Wilson, the Secretary of Agriculture, will be the honorary president. As long as the Federal Government, controlled by the liquor business, issues a license to sell and allows liquor to be shipped into prohibition territory against the will of the people, we are not free, but are under the domination of the damnable business. With the breweries and distilleries protected by an international law, the mail and express traffic become the key to the whole situation, and this is all manipulated by the liquor interests of America at Washington, so that Congress has sidestepped this loophole for twenty years. The thing to be done is to force the government out of the liquor business, as we did in the case of the lottery business and other kindred evils, and this will we do, if God permit, at no distant day.

Second, the cities are becoming the plague-spots on our civilization. Here is the milk in the cocoanut "in these"—regulation, moderation, local-optionist schemes. These are clubs to beat prohibition to death. Every observant man, woman and child knows the hellish liquor business is as much opposed to local option as it is to prohibition. They know their strength is with the vicious and lawless in the cities, and that they can buy and bribe enough of these to hold their business and then deal out death and damnation to the whole surrounding country, under the protection of the national government.

To-day our only hope for maintaining true American principles, civil, social, and moral, is in the rural population. Take the State of Maine, which so recently went wet. It was the cities that damned her. The rural districts were largely against the repeal. Take Tennessee, and may God pity her! The blackest spots are her cities. It is these that are disgracing her, and that have set her back in civilization twenty years. This was the case in Texas and Alabama. So there are a few black spots in Mississippi, so debauched by liquor and its attendant evils, that they are talking for repeal, while our rural population is standing firm. There is no satisfying those rummies. Twenty-six years ago, when we made the first fight for local option in the State in Montgomery County, they died in the last ditch, and the only opposition we had worth the naming was in the only town in the county. Then they rallied every old white and black whisky-soaked bum against us, backed by every wholesale and retail shop and distillery for a thousand miles around. What for? To defeat what is now their "dear local option."

The third factor to be reckoned with (and it is fast coming to the front) is the foreign element, which, in the main, is a tool of the liquor business and a serious hindrance to our civilization—the Christian Sabbath, and our social and moral standards. It is readily admitted that it was not the change of sentiment in Maine that made the repeal possible, but it was the increased foreign element which the liquor business in America had been pushing in for this occasion for years. It is the foreign element everywhere in the cities that make it possible to perpetuate this evil upon us. It is high time every true and loyal God-fearing and peace-loving citizen should get these facts burned indelibly into heart and mind and conscience, and wake up before it is too late. He is a reckless reader and thinker who is so blind that he can't see packed into these foes enough political dynamite to blow to pieces the whisky-logged parties and sink ere long the ship of State.

The rum-soaked agitators and enemies to every just and righteous cause continue to cry out over the land their slogan, "Prohibition don't prohibit." Why in the name of common sense do they not stand up and say: "We won't let it." A few towns and cities in Mississippi, whose citizens have not the moral backbone to demand the enforcement of law and are fast becoming a blot upon her fair name, are ready to turn loose upon us again this sewer from hell, full of crime and financial blight, political rot, disease and death, beneath whose swirling depths of despair and tragedy sink the hopes and fortunes of men and women and helpless children. No, no; never again will Mississippians allow to be let loose upon their fair land the floodgates of this iniquitous business.

In passing, I would remind these blind liquor-soaked agitators that 80 per cent of the citizenship of "Old Miss." is in rural territory, over which no whisky bum can rule, and upon these we can rely until the doom of the damnable business is sealed forever. But we have cause to rejoice. The prohibition cause is neither dead nor damned, thank God! Even in Maine, before the smoke of battle is over there is a proclamation for a new crusade. Before they can get saloons, there must be the passage of a law by the legislature, and that will be against the repeal. Then the referendum can be invoked, and in such case there would be a question of a direct vote on a rum-trust-approved law, which the rummies themselves admit would be defeated by a large majority.

But we can give them Maine, Alabama and Texas, and we can still rejoice over North Carolina, North Dakota, Georgia, Kansas, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Mississippi. It is only a question of time when we will have Texas, Florida and Arkansas. Despite the influence of Mr. Henry Watterson in Kentucky, we have 92 counties out of 116, and this in the land of "Rock and Rye." In Arkansas 60 out of the 98 counties are dry, and 90 per cent of the whole territory is dry. In Indiana 70 of the 92 counties are dry. In Colorado, 11 counties are dry and 95 per cent of the area of the State. Ten of the twenty-three counties in Maryland are dry, and Idaho and Iowa are better than Maryland. Half of Michigan is dry, and 61 counties in Missouri are dry. "Regulation," "moderation," and "local option" are in these last days the hypocritical subterfuges of these bloated tricksters who violate the law day and night, the year round, debauching the weak and damning the helpless. Why not use "regulation and moderation" for a rabid dog, a den of vipers, cholera, or the yellow fever? Would not a law regulating and moderating stealing and murder be as reasonable? The only way to regulate the liquor business is to kill it, and the only moderation for the vendor of the vile stuff, if he doesn't behave himself, is the pen. Here I will stand until the judgment.

SCIENCE LEARNS TO WALK BY FALLING.

Everybody knows that science makes progress year after year, always discovering some new facts and increasing the world's stock of knowledge, but it is probable that very few persons realize that much of the progress made by science consists in unlearning what it had previously learned. The scientific theories of one generation are very apt to be altogether out of date when the next generation comes forward. The Presbyterian Banner illustrates the changes that are constantly taking place in scientific belief by a case in point:

A comparison of the articles on scientific subjects in the new Eleventh Edition of the Britannica with the same articles in the old Ninth Edition, is suggestive not only of the advances of science, but also of the changes in scientific theories. Doctrines that were in repute if not regarded as demonstrated thirty years ago are now greatly modified or wholly abandoned.

A notable instance of the latter fact occurs in the article on Geology. This was written for both the Ninth and Eleventh Editions by Sir Archibald Geikie. In the former edition the cause of the glacial period is discussed and much importance is attached to Dr. James Croll's theory that this phenomenon was due to the eccentricity of the earth's orbit. Croll was the author of a book entitled "Climate and Time," published in 1875, that enjoyed a great reputation in scientific circles for many years. Dr. Geikie introduced into his former article a statement of Croll's theory furnished him for the purpose by Croll himself, the statement extending to two full pages of fine print. In the present edition Dr. Geikie discusses the cause of the ice age again, but does not so much as mention Croll's theory. It has now been abandoned and become only a memory.

Such is the fate of many scientific speculations that have their little day. This is not to the discredit of science, for it is by such tentative theories that it makes headway, testing them by the accumulating facts and modifying or abandoning them as the facts require; and the very fact that it does abandon theories that are shown to be inadequate or false shows its fidelity to truth, which is the fundamental principle of the scientific spirit. Nevertheless it is well for science to maintain its theories with modesty and not forget its fallibility and past errors.—The Weekly Witness.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR FACE.

"My boy," said a wise father, who knew how to play and be a chum with his twelve-year-old lad, "you do not own your own face."

The boy looked puzzled. He had come to the breakfast table with a frowning, clouded countenance and had started moodily to eat his food. Everybody felt the shadow of his ill spirits evident in his looks. His father's unexpected words brought him back to life, and he looked up with a half-guilty expression, but did not understand what was meant.

"You do not own your own face," his father repeated. "Do not forget that. It belongs to other people. They, not you, have to look at it. You have no right to compel them to look at a sour, gloomy and crabbed face."

The boy had never thought of that, but he understood and did not forget. And all of us should understand, and none of us should forget, that our faces belong to other people.—Christian Herald.

THE WORST BOY IN SCHOOL.

"Give me back my cap, Zedekiah Badders—do you hear me! Give it back this minute! * * * Zed-e-kiah Badders!"

When Christie Lane was on her dignity—her wrathful dignity—she invariably called an aggressor by his or her full name. And that Zed Badders tauntingly dangled her brand-new Tam O'Shanter by its pompom, served to increase her lofty air as it fanned her resentment.

Only when the boy had grown tired of teasing, and not one moment before, did her tormentor hand over her scarlet headgear with a mocking "I beg you to accept this with my compliments, Miss Christina Maria Lane."

"My name's not Maria, Zedekiah Badders, and your name just suits you, for a badder boy never was—everybody says you're bad; so there!" And Christie's verdict was true in the main, for Zed was notoriously defiant of ethical rules.

Miss Ridings, or Miss Geneva, as she was designated by her pupils, was the only teacher in Public School No. 17 who had any faith in, or forbearance with, "that Badders boy," which was probably because Miss Geneva took the trouble to probe beneath the surface.

"He's so thoroughly self-possessed," Miss Geneva was remarking one day; "just the sort of character for an emergency. Besides, he's so pitifully lame, and an orphan, and—"

"Self-possessed! thoroughly possessed of evil, in my opinion," retorted Miss Grant, whose room adjoined. "I'm glad I shan't have him this term." And pretty soon Miss Grant had the gong rung for the fire-drill, quite as much as an outlet for her ruffled feelings as anything else, for it always annoyed her to hear Miss Riding's quick defense of any pupil who had come under the ban of the other teachers.

"There's some good in everyone, and it's the business of others to discover it. Persist in telling a child he's bad, if you want to keep him bad." That was Miss Geneva's view of it.

In a little while the children were back in their respective class rooms, with eyes brightened by even such short respite from actual duties which they seemed in no anxiety to resume. Miss Geneva glanced at Zed, who came quickly to order. For once he had set a pattern for the others to follow.

"Zed, take this note, please, to Miss Strang," commissioned his teacher about a week thereafter. Happy in the confidence she displayed in him, "All right, Miss Geneva," responded the lad respectfully, his cheeks flushing; "shall I wait for a reply?"

Miss Strang's room was on the floor below, and when passing through a cross hall, Zed sniffed the air suspiciously, then glanced toward the girl's cloakroom, the door of which was slightly ajar. One glimpse within showed him the closet in a rapidly devouring blaze!

Fire! the very word held double terror for Zed Badders, for it was fire, or rather the ensuing panic, that had bereft him of both mother and father only a few years previously, and left him with a leg mangled almost to entire uselessness. No wonder his face went deathly pale. Had he immediately sought his own safety, it wouldn't have been brave, but in his case there would have been at least some excuse for the natural impulse.

He hastily and noiselessly closed the door of the burning chamber, after snatching the only object within reach—a red cap, which he stuffed inside his coat as he turned to speed swiftly and as silently as his lameness would permit. When he entered Miss Strang's room, it was with no trace of excitement in his manner.

Thrusting the note in her hand, he whispered something which caused Miss Strang to change countenance. Could she believe the mere assertion of the worst boy in school?

Nevertheless, she could take no chances with the destroying element, and quietly following Zed from the room, a faint, though dread, odor of smoke caused her to gasp. Over thirteen hundred pupils, and a panic possible at any moment!

In a few seconds the fire-drill gong had sounded, and Zed ascended the stairs to take his place in the line of his marching comrades, and in a trifle less than four minutes everyone was in the street. "Christie, here's your Tam," said Zed, and at that moment the first clang of a distant firebell was heard by the children, who had been ordered to disperse.

The general praise of "that Badders boy's coolheadedness" probably had something to do with the steady improvement of the heretofore "worst boy in the school."—Christian Standard.

THE CHILD'S LOVING INSTINCT.

By R. J. Campbell.

How well I remember many years ago, when my only child was little more than a baby, I used to go regularly to kiss her good-night before I went to rest myself. As a rule she was asleep, and I was careful not to wake her, but somehow she behaved differently to me, even in her unconscious or semi-conscious state, from what she did to most others. When others caressed her, however lightly, at such times she was always impatient, although she never actually opened her eyes; but when I touched her, even though she were apparently fast asleep, she always snuggled into my arms.

Sometimes we used to tease her about this, and ask her how she knew the difference when she could neither see nor hear anything, and was herself unconscious of the world around her. "Suppose," we said, "that some one who was not your father should pet you in the dark in exactly the same way as he does, how could you tell?" "Well," replied the juvenile philosopher, "if any one petted me in your way it would be you, of course; where would be the use of asking if it might be somebody else?"

We may well learn a lesson from this wisdom of a little girl. Why go about to seek for some other Christ, some other unknown spiritual helper, than the very Christ whose victory over death set going the wondrous river of spiritual life, whose volume has been increasing in the world from age to age ever since, and with whom a multitude that no man can number has held unbroken communion? Fling all misgivings to the winds concerning the power of the risen Lord. Whatever ought to be true is true in the economy of God, and it ought to be true that Jesus of old should be one with the Christ whose saving power we feel in our hearts this morning. Trust him for all in all. Let the eternal Spirit of truth and love witness him in your soul without let or hindrance. Yield yourself thereto with a glad and humble heart, and his life shall be yours.—The Congregationalist and Christian World.

PERSONAL REQUIREMENT.

By C. H. Wetherbe.

There is reason for believing that a great deal of the prayer that is presented to God is void of effect. An apostle, in addressing himself to certain readers of his letter, reminded them of the fact that though they asked God for certain things, they did not receive them, and that it was because they asked amiss. They did not comply with the necessary requirements. And this is true of many religious people in our day. Much of their praying is totally ineffective. Let us say that one asks God for more wisdom. There is no doubt that he needs it. It is reasonable that he should ask God to help him to get it.

At the same time it is required of that person that he shall exert himself to obtain all the wisdom that is within his reach. He should study, search, and bring to his aid such helps as he can command. God does not pour wisdom into the mind of the one who is too lazy to study and ponder. He gives wisdom to the one who tries hard to obtain wisdom. He helps the one who does his best in helping himself.

Then, too, many Christians pray God to prosper them in temporal affairs, yet no prosperity comes in any considerable measure—perhaps not at all. Very likely the reason is, they do not comply with the necessary requirements. Here is one of them: "Give and it shall be given unto you." If one will withhold from God what he ought to give to him, then he shall not expect that God will largely prosper him. The ancient Israelites learned the lesson that God would not liberally provide for them while they were refusing to provide for him. One cannot exchange his stinginess for God's liberality. There is not a promise in the Bible which favors the one who is stingy toward God. Here is much for churches to think about. Their prosperity depends very much upon themselves.

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The annual meeting of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate will be held on Thursday, Oct. 26, at 11 a.m., in the office of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

N. E. JOYNER, Chairman.

SOME TEST QUESTIONS.

The following concerning the selection of representatives to the general assembly of our sister Methodist Episcopal Church, which we take from the Central Christian Advocate, is interesting and somewhat suggestive:

"At the Columbia River Lay Electoral Conference held in Spokane, Wash., September 1, the candidates for General Conference were called before that body in advance of the balloting and asked four question:

"First—Do you have family prayers?

"Second—Do you have grace at meal time?

"Third—Are you against popular amusements?

"Fourth—Do you favor prohibition?

"Some who were quite acceptable and would have won otherwise failed on these tests. A fifth question might well have been added: 'Do you take a Church paper?'"

We do not much like the idea of calling those being considered as prospective delegates to a church gathering "candidates," but we have observed that this is quite generally done in the Northern Methodist press. According to our way of thinking, it smacks rather too much of the methods of secular politicians. Though it seems to have become almost entirely a thing of the past in the affairs of State, we are yet disposed to think at least so far as positions of trust and influence in the Church are concerned, that the office should seek the man, and not the man the office. The Pauline doctrine that Christians should "in honor prefer one another," should not, in our judgment, ever be lost sight of or abandoned.

To the interrogations propounded by the Columbia River Lay Electoral Conference, we have no particular objection. It does not necessarily follow, however, that one who could answer them affirmatively would make a desirable representative. It takes not only goodness, but also ability and information to constitute a useful and influential member of a General Conference. But certainly in selecting delegates their piety and the soundness of their views on moral questions are matters of the greatest importance, and should in all cases be given careful consideration. This is a time when it behooves the Church to scrutinize closely those whom she permits to speak and act for her. But we doubt whether publicly catechizing them is the best way to measure the fitness of men for places of responsibility. For our part, we had rather be governed by the estimates of those who know their every-day lives and by the characters which they have established. Pledges and platforms made under the stress of circumstances, amount to little—it is the man that counts.

THE WOMAN'S JUBILEE MEETING.

The Woman's Missionary Jubilee will be celebrated in New Orleans November 3 and 4, and plans are under way to make the occasion an interesting and memorable one. A meeting looking to this end was held in the Trinity Parish House on Friday afternoon, October 6, and was presided over by Mrs. S. A. Montgomery. The attendance was good, and reports were received from the several committees appointed at a former conference of the workers interested. The First Methodist Church was selected as the place for holding the regular sessions of the assemblage, and the Athenaeum as the place for the great rally to be held on Thursday evening, November 4. The offer of the Young Woman's Christian Association of its rooms for business headquarters was gratefully accepted. Among the speakers from a distance who are expected to be present at this celebration are Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of Beverly, Mass., Chairman of the Central Committee on United Study; Miss Florence Miller, of Louisville; Miss Daisy Davies, of Atlanta; Miss Edith C. Crane, Advisory Chairman of the Southern Extension Committee; Mrs. W. Eugene Salle, returned missionary from China; Deaconess Hart of the Episcopal Church; Mrs. Heck of the Baptist Church, and Miss Belle Bennett, the brilliant leader in the woman's missionary work of the Southern Methodist Church. These jubilee meetings have been productive of great good in many of the leading cities of the United States, and we trust that the one being arranged for here will be successful in every respect and give a forward impulse to the cause of missions in New Orleans which will be felt for many years to come.

LOCAL CO-OPERATION NEEDED.

Now that it has been decided that the Men and Religion Forward Movement campaign is to be conducted in this city November 13-20, it is to be hoped that our local leaders and workers will leave nothing undone to get things in readiness for this season of special effort. The extent to which the campaign is a success will be determined largely by the amount of co-operation given these enterprising it by the Christian workers of New Orleans. The brethren who are coming to assist us cannot succeed if we are indifferent and inactive. For our part, we believe the city needs this aggressive evangelism, and that much good will result from it if our home people will only lend a vigorous hand in carrying it forward. Let every pastor and Christian layman among us pray for the success of the campaign and exert the full measure of his influence to promote it. There are too many pessimists among the disciples of the Master hereabout. We need more Joshuas and Calebs to give us heart and hope and the courage to dare and do. It is worth something "to attempt great things for God," even if we fail.

THE TURKISH-ITALIAN WAR.

The war between Italy and Turkey does not promise to be either long or bloody. As a result of a naval bombardment, the Italian flag floats over Tripoli, and the Turks apparently are unable to help themselves. The Outlook says: "The direct ground on which Italy claims the right to seize Tripoli, so far as the public has been informed, is found in the disorders in that country and the inability of its government to protect foreigners. These charges of inefficiency and lack of protection, Turkey has declared to be unfounded. The real cause of Italy's sudden action is doubtless the apparent success of France in extending her North African empire." It is reported that the Italian Vice Admiral, Duke of the Abruzzi, thinks that the acute stage of the war is over, and has submitted to the king a plan to organize a scientific expedition into the interior of Tripoli, and possibly extending it southward into Central Africa. It is stated that for the first time since the Knights of St. John were defeated by the Turks and lost Tripoli, 1551, the Cross of Christianity has been raised over this land. Let us hope that it will mark the beginning of a brighter day for its inhabitants.

DEATH OF W. V. CONNELL.

Last Tuesday, just as we were about to close our forms, the following telegram was received from Brother J. J. Baird, of Mayhew, Miss.: "I am grieved to inform you that Brother W. V. Connell died yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Truly, a great man has fallen." This news will cause sadness throughout the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference, in which there was no choicer layman than Brother Connell. His life was above reproach, and in labors he was most abundant. He filled various positions in the Church with unsurpassed fidelity, and leaves behind him an unblemished record. May the Heavenly Father graciously sustain the bereaved family in this hour of trial!

REV. S. H. WHATLEY DEAD.

Dear Brother Meek: I write to say that we laid to rest in the cemetery here yesterday, at 3 o'clock p.m., our dear brother and friend, Rev. S. H. Whatley. He fell asleep in the home he had labored so hard to complete for his wife at 3:30 p.m. the day before, October 6, 1911. Another veteran has gone to his rest—another faithful, efficient Methodist itinerant has finished his course. He was buried from the church here. Dr. S. S. Keener, presiding elder of the Monroe District, was present and took part in the service. The Masons also assisted with appropriate ceremonies in showing respect and honor to the remains of the deceased.

W. F. HENDERSON.

October 7, 1911.

This announcement will touch with genuine sorrow many hearts and homes in Louisiana. Brother Whatley was ordained a deacon in 1882 and was admitted into full connection by the Louisiana Conference the year succeeding. Though it did not cover a long period, his ministry was effective, and the interests of the church were carried forward where he labored. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." They shall one day awake in his likeness, and reign with him in glory evermore. May God comfort and sustain the widow in her loneliness, and lay his healing hand upon every heart made to bleed by the departure of this loved one! (We have just received a memoir of Brother Whatley from the pen of Dr. S. S. Keener, which came too late to appear in this issue of the Advocate, but which will be published next week).—The Editor.

"THE SOUTHERN PATRIOT."

This is the name of a new journal which is to be issued monthly in New Orleans. It has absorbed six weeklies, as follows: The Southern Scribe, Good Government, The Winfield Commercial, The Vicksburg Mirror, The Monroe Doctrine, The Ruston Telegraph, and The Shreveport Scribe; and in consequence has inherited a good subscription list to start with. The editor-in-chief of the new periodical is the Rev. J. B. Lawrence, pastor of the First Baptist Church of this city, whose name at its head is a guaranty that the publication will be wide awake and deal with live issues. The South has few weekly or monthly journals of merit, which is much to be regretted. That the Southern Patriot may help to supply this deficiency and render a real service to the people of this section, we sincerely hope. The initial number, bearing the date of October, 1911, promises well.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. Richard Wilkinson has been assigned to the Fourth Avenue Church of Louisville, Ky., for another year.

Next Saturday, October 14, is Orphanage Work Day in Mississippi. It is to be hoped that it will be generally observed by the 110,000 Methodists of that State.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt, of Brookhaven, recently assisted Rev. W. M. Sullivan in a ten days' revival at Union Church. A good interest was manifested, and the Church was spiritually quickened.

A protracted meeting was announced to begin at Montrose, Miss., last Friday night. Rev. J. W. Campbell, of Fayette, was expected to assist the pastor in conducting the services.

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, of McComb City, assisted Rev. H. A. Gatlin in a week's meeting at Bogue Chitto, which closed on Monday night, Oct. 2. There were 11 additions to the Church.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, of Hattiesburg, is attending the Ecumenical Methodist Conference in Toronto. He was assigned to the Statistical Committee, which is considered one of the most important.

A successful Interdenominational Sunday School Convention for Claiborne Parish was held at Homer, La., last week. Secretary E. V. Ellzey and Miss Juden, of New Orleans, attended, and took an active part in the exercises.

The Methodist congregation at Magnolia, Miss., has lately enjoyed an interesting series of sermons preached by Rev. C. N. Guice, of Summit. We are not informed as to the visible results which followed Brother Guice's efforts.

Rev. John Tillery Lewis, of Clarksdale, Miss., in a personal note to the editor says: "Things are moving on smoothly here." They generally do when Brother Lewis' hand is on the helm. His work in this important charge has been notably successful.

At the recent session of the St. Louis Conference, Dr. Theodore Copeland was returned to Cahanne Church, St. Louis; Rev. H. P. Crowe was re-appointed to the Farmington District, and Rev. J. M. Bradley, having finished his quadrennium at Charleston, was sent to Sikeston Station.

Rev. J. M. Alford passed through the city last Friday on his way home from Brother Sweeny's charge, where he had been assisting in a meeting. He was looking well and was in fine spirits. He stated that this was the twelfth revival he had assisted in holding within the past few months.

Reports from the pastoral charges are read with interest by those into whose hands the Advocate comes. Why not send us an account of what is going on in the field in which you labor, brother pastor? We do not want a long communication, but just a few lines setting forth results.

In a recent note to the editor, Rev. B. P. Jaco, of the Corinth District, says: "I am getting busy indeed now. I am to have a Bishop in a few days to help me whoop 'em up." With both Brother Jaco and a chief pastor to set the pace, doubtless the work will hum in Northeast Mississippi from now on.

Up to date, Rev. D. L. Cogdell reports the reception of 29 members on the Belzoni charge, North Mississippi Conference. The presiding elder of the Winona District, Rev. E. S. Lewis, was with him last Saturday and Sunday, and transacted the business of the quarterly conferences and preached with his usual acceptability.

In a note to the editor, Rev. W. A. Bowlin states that Rev. J. H. Felts, the energetic presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, has been on the sick list lately. He was better when Brother Bowlin wrote, and we hope that ere this he has entirely recovered and is able to move at his usual gait. This is a time when a district superintendent can ill afford to lose a single day.

From the Lincoln County Times of Oct. 5 we take the following: "Dr. I. W. Cooper will leave to-day for Toronto, Canada, to attend the Ecumenical Conference of Methodism as a delegate from the M. E. Church, South. This body meets every ten years. The last session was held in London, when Bishop Galloway was a delegate. It is expected that the next session will be in Australia."

Rev. W. E. Vaughan, the editor and manager of the Pacific Methodist Advocate, requests us to state that the office of that journal, which is published in San Francisco, has been changed from 948 Market Street to 619 Pacific Building. This announcement is made in order that Southern Methodists visiting the city of the Golden Gate may know where to find the headquarters of their Church.

We acknowledge the reception of a catalogue of Edward McGehee College, at Woodville, Miss., which gives much interesting information concerning that historic institution. The worthy president, Rev. E. W. Barrington, has laid his plans wisely and the courses of study which the faculty offers are thorough and attractive. These enterprising and diligent instructors deserve to have success in their work.

Rev. W. G. Harbin, of Haynesville, La., passed through the city last Saturday en route to Abbeville, La., whither he was going to assist Rev. A. J. Gearheard in a series of revival services. He favored the Advocate office with a call, which was much appreciated. Notwithstanding his continuous labors through the summer season, Brother Harbin was looking well and spoke of his work in enthusiastic terms.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Arcadia Church will observe the Week of Prayer from October 16 to October 22. A choice program has been arranged, and the occasion promises to be one of much interest. Among those who are down for addresses and sermons we note the following: Mr. B. F. Roberts, Rev. A. S. Lutz, Mrs. S. C. McGarrity, Rev. J. E. Carpenter, Mrs. R. W. Vaughan, Rev. R. W Tucker, and Dr. W. R. Hendrix.

Rev. S. L. Riggs, of St. Francisville, La., was in the city week before last with his son whom he brought here for medical treatment. He was afflicted with appendicitis, and it was feared for a time that an operation would be necessary, but after a brief stay in the Touro Infirmary, he improved sufficiently for Brother Riggs to carry him home without resorting to the surgeon's knife. We sincerely trust that there will be no recurrence of the trouble.

In a recent letter received at the Advocate office, Mrs. Crow Girard, of Lafayette, La., says: "We are much pleased with the progress of the church work here, and especially with the condition of our Epworth League. We feel that perhaps it would be gratifying to our friends to know that the cause is prospering at this place." So doubtless it will, but we dare say that this good report will occasion little surprise, since it is Brother Battle's habit to bring things to pass where he labors.

We regret to be informed of the ill health of Rev. A. J. Coburn, of Farmerville, La., whose physicians have advised him that it is necessary for him to go to a higher and drier climate. He was expecting a few days ago to leave at an early date for Southwest Texas. He cherishes a strong attachment to Louisiana, and greatly regrets that conditions are such as to force him to go elsewhere. We trust that the change will prove beneficial to Brother Coburn and speedily effect a complete restoration of his health.

We are in receipt of a folder announcing a series of revival services in the Methodist Church at Amite City, La., and giving the subject and text of each sermon to be preached. The meeting began on October 1, and will continue through next Sunday, the 15th. The first service, at 11 o'clock a.m. on the 1st inst., was conducted by Judge R. R. Reid, who delivered an address on "The Trial of Jesus Christ from a Lawyer's Standpoint." The other services were announced to be in charge of the pastor, the Rev. H. W. Bowman.

We are indebted to Rev. A. S. Lutz, for a copy of the "Church Bulletin," issued by his congregation at Homer, La., for the month of October. It is a neat little folder, well arranged and attractively printed. Among other things it contains the subjects of the series of sermons which Brother Lutz is now giving his people, and the program of the Week of Prayer of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, which is being observed this week. We note that this program embraces an address on "Foreign Missions" by Rev. W. H. Coleman, and one on "The Moslem World," by Rev. A. I. Townsley.

One of a series of Sunday School Institutes to be held throughout Louisiana will be conducted in the Felicity Street Methodist Church of this city on October 23-26. Dr. Bulla, superintendent of the Adult Bible Class Department of the Southern Methodist Church, is expected to be present and lend interest to the occasion. The meetings will begin at 4 o'clock p.m., and lunch will be served at 6 o'clock, after which the session will be continued. By managing in this way, it will be made unnecessary for those coming to the church to enjoy the exercises to return home until after the final adjournment each day.

The State Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Louisiana met in Baton Rouge on Oct. 6. The exercises opened with a gold medal contest in Garing Hall, at the State University. Among those present from a distance were Mrs. A. C. McKinney, of Ruston, State president; Mrs. Julie Robinson and Mrs. Lillie Arant, of Wood; Mrs. J. W. Benton and Miss Mollie Stewart, of Pollock; Mrs. Helen Webb, Mrs. Selma Pittman and Miss Mildred Barries, of Athens; Mrs. Bryce and Mrs. McCorkle, of Minden; Mrs. S. C. Adams, Mrs. C. C. Miller, Miss Ella Sipple and Miss Delight Matthews, of Hammond.

Under date of October 5, Rev. W. L. Graves, of Iuka, Miss., writes as follows: "I am just home from Ripley, Miss., where for ten days I assisted Rev. Eugene Johnson in a revival. He is highly regarded by all the people there. Recently his son, Melville, who is eighteen years of age, occupied his father's pulpit, and preached a sermon which greatly pleased the audience and was much complimented by the local paper." This young gentleman was before the licensing committee of the Corinth District a few days since, and Presiding Elder Jaco reports that he stood a remarkably fine examination. He has entered Vanderbilt University, where he will take a theological course.

In a note written last week, Rev. W. M. Young, presiding elder of the Sardis District, says: "I dedicated a most tasteful and attractive church at Cockrum last Sunday. It was a great day for Cockrum Methodism. The decorations were beautiful and the music was excellent. The pastor, Rev. R. I. Collins, is in high favor with the people. Notwithstanding the fact that in this section there has been for years a constant emigration of prominent business men to Memphis, the people are building better houses of worship and supporting the preachers better than ever before." We congratulate Brother Collins and his worthy flock upon this substantial achievement.

The Meridian Male and Female Colleges, according to the report of their presidents, Dr. J. W. Beeson and Prof. M. A. Beeson, have had a most auspicious opening. As is customary with these institutions, their sessions commenced jointly with a revival conducted by their own pastor, Rev. Joseph Smith, in which much interest was manifested. Dr. Beeson says: "The colleges have a fine student body—perhaps the finest in many respects that they have ever had. Pupils are here from many States—from Cuba to Canada, and from Maine to California. Though we have a splendid attendance, we yet have room for a few more. They are still coming, some arriving nearly every day."

From Durant, Miss., Rev. C. P. Moss writes: "On Friday, September 22, death claimed another of our noble women in the person of Mrs. M. A. Herbert. Such was her life that she leaves behind a heritage far more precious than silver and gold. A husband and five children who are devoted to the service of the Master remain to mourn her departure and cherish her memory." We are pained to hear that this faithful wife and mother has been called from the circle which so loved and honored her. But there is comfort in the reflection that she was ready for the summons, and that this separation need be but temporary. Mrs. Herbert was a daughter of the late Mr. John Clower, a well known and esteemed citizen of Holmes County, and a granddaughter of the Rev. Stephen Johnson, who lived and died near Black Hawk, Miss.

Mrs. Priscilla Bentley, one of the oldest members of the Carrollton Avenue Church of this city, passed away last Sunday morning, and her remains were laid to rest in the Carrollton Cemetery the day following. She was 77 years of age, and was rich in faith and ready for the Master's summons. She was one of the organizers of the Carrollton Avenue congregation, and as long as her strength permitted was active in her efforts to promote its prosperity and growth. She was the first president of the Ladies' Aid Society (which now has become the Home Department of the Woman's Missionary Society), and largely shaped its policy until physical disability forced her to commit the task of leadership to others. She was a life member of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and ever felt a deep interest in its work. But from the Church Militant, she has passed to the Church Triumphant, where we doubt not she found awaiting her a glorious reward. To the bereaved we extend sympathy, and pray that divine grace may sustain them.

In a letter from Shreveport, Oct. 6, Rev. P. O. Lowrey writes as follows: "Rev. A. W. Turner, of Mansfield, was operated on for appendicitis between 3 and 4 o'clock Tuesday morning, October 3, and he is doing well at this writing, so far as the operation is concerned. But it developed that his most serious trouble was something like an ulcer on the intestines, and this is now the point of anxiety. It is not improbable that another operation may be necessary to relieve this more serious trouble. Friends are profuse in their love and sympathy; nothing that human hands can do, is being left undone, and many are praying to him "who forgiveth our sins and healeth our diseases." It greatly pleases us to know that Brother Turner has passed safely through the trying ordeal of the operation performed upon him, but, in common with his host of friends throughout Louisiana, we shall feel a deep solicitude until we know that he is entirely out of danger. Let our people generally pray that the valuable life of this faithful worker may be spared, and that his health may be speedily and completely restored.

THE SIGNBOARD THAT SAYS "BE KIND."

"If I can't make people feel better, I certainly am not going to make them feel worse," remarked a lady, recently. I thought: "What a fine motto to live by!" I know a young woman who is a positive terror to her best friends because of her sharp tongue. She believes in "speaking her mind." She says caustic things about her best friends, and then wonders why she has not more friends. She complains that she is not popular, but does not realize that she alone is the cause of her lack of popularity. She "drives tacks," so to speak, into everybody she meets, her sharp tongue being the hammer.

"Words fitly spoken are like apples of gold in pictures of silver," we are told by the sage of olden time; and no truer words were ever spoken. Like the dear woman who said, "If I can't make people feel better, I certainly won't make them feel worse," we can always find something pleasant to say if we try.

"What a shabby buggy your friend drives in!" remarked this "driver-of-tacks" lady. I winced, of course, and did not take the trouble to inform her that my friend was more able to buy a fine buggy than she, had she wished to do so, but was using her money for nobler purposes. We never know the inside of people's lives. With Ella Wheeler Wilcox, we may say:

"Where are you going? Never mind:
Just follow the signboard that says 'Be kind.'
Do the duty that nearest lies:
That is the road to paradise."

HIRAM JONES GRIFFITH was born Jan. 22, 1859, in Rankin County, Miss., and died in Sulphur, La., Aug. 29, 1911, at the home of his sister, Gertrude Rool. He moved with his parents to Louisiana in his infancy. His home was at Hackberry postoffice, La., but he was staying at Sulphur for medical treatment. His death was due to dropsy, from which he suffered eighteen months or more. He bore his sufferings with the greatest of patience and expressed his willingness to go. He was a member of the Baptist Church, having joined in August, 1897, at Vincent Settlement, La., under the pastorate of Brother H. Eddieman. He is survived by an aged father, three sisters and one brother, and other more distant relatives. The service was conducted by Rev. J. D. Nesom, of Sulphur. He was buried by the K. of P. lodge of which he was a member. He has gone, but is not forgotten by his loved ones. The interment was at Dutch Cove Cemetery.

A FRIEND.

Little E. C. BOTT, Jr., who was born in Natchitoches, La., in the summer of 1910, died in the same town, July 13, 1911. He was the youngest child of Rev. E. C. and Mrs. Susie Bott. Brother Bott is a local preacher in our Church, and was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference. He has been teaching for a number of years, and it was while living here and attending the Normal School with his children during the summers of 1910-11, that this fair child was born, was baptized, and was taken away. He was a beautiful child and the light of the happy home until the fatal sickness came. We buried his little body in what is known as the American Cemetery, but he himself is with God and other pure spirits like his. So has the grim reaper cut down another one of the lovely "flowers that grew between." His death was the first in a large family of sons and daughters, and it was very hard. But they bow in submission to God's will. And they sorrow not as those without hope. May they all meet him again!

THE PASTOR.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. SARAH ANN BASS, was born Dec. 16, 1838, at Gainsville, Ga. When she was a child her parents, Rev. P. C. Wimbish and wife, moved to Alabama, where she was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of nine years. While visiting in Mississippi she was married to Mr. J. F. Bass in July, 1867. Of this union were born two sons and four daughters, two of whom preceded her in death; the other four, with the aged father, remain to mourn her departure. Making her home from the time of her marriage in Mississippi, it was here she gave her life-work to the Church, having been a Sunday school teacher for quite a number of years and a lover of the work. She was also a worker and a good deal of the time an officer in the Woman's Society of the church until her health failed. She was a great sufferer but bore her sufferings without murmuring, and still manifested great interest in the Church. Her home was always open to the preachers. She was conscious till the last, and having faith in the Lord, expressed herself as ready to go, and fell on sleep June 28, 1911.

Mrs. OCTAVIA BASS GEE.

J. N. KING was born March 20, 1852, and died on July 30, 1911, at his home at Pine Grove, La. He joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of ten years. At the age of sixteen he was converted. In 1875 he was married to Miss Amelia Packwood. Of this union were born thirteen children—eight sons and five daughters. It was the writer's privilege to be his pastor for three years. Brother King was a good man; he loved his church. While he was a poor man of this world he was rich in faith. Almost every one loved "Uncle Nick," as he was called. He has gone from among us, but we still think of him. He was a Methodist of the old type. He would always pray in public when called on. He was buried at Pine Grove Church, that he so long loved. May our Lord comfort the dear wife and children, and may they keep close to Jesus and remember the words of a good father and husband, and some day meet him around the Father's throne, where we will never say good-by.

His former pastor,
H. C. MURPHY.

Tickfaw, La.

EARNEST CARADINE, son of Rev. J. R. and Mattie James, was born June 30, 1896, near Adamsville, McNairy County, Tenn. He was dedicated to the Lord by his mother's uncle, Rev. J. V. Worley, Aug. 16, 1897. In December, 1904, he moved with his parents to Corinth, Miss. The family moved to Iuka, January, 1908. Earnest was again put in school and his faithful application to his studies was such as to win for him the praise of his teachers. His kind treatment of others and his manly ways won for him the friendship of all who knew him. Earnest professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Church during the revival held in Iuka by W. L. Graves May, 1908. The remaining years of his life were marked by a beautiful devotion to his Lord, and none were more faithful in attendance upon the Sunday school and church services than he. Though so young, he nevertheless had high ideals, for he had caught true visions of Christian principles. He had been taught at the family altar from early childhood concerning holiness of heart and life. Earnest was ever good. The memory of his love and faithfulness to his parents and his noble life will cheer them through the days to come. He passed from his loved ones on earth July 23, 1911, being drowned. The funeral service was held in the Methodist Church, Iuka, by the pastor and presiding elder, W. L. Graves and B. P. Jaco. A large number of people were present, among whom were many of Earnest's school friends. The deceased was carried to Corinth for interment, where many friends, including several ministers, were present. He was laid to rest by the side of his brother, Herbert, who, when dying, took Earnest by the hand, saying, "Meet me in heaven." A father, mother, two brothers and a sister mourn their loss. The Lord bless and comfort them.

Tidings From the Field

Lucedale, Miss.:

The ten days' meeting recently held here by Brother Kelly was a continuous love feast and blessing to all who heard him. Twenty joined the church on profession of faith, but this by no means tells the whole story. Over fifty men and women who were backsliders in heart and life pledged themselves to real Christian service. The preachers of the Mississippi Conference know their evangelist too well to need words of commendation from me. No mistake was made when he was put in the evangelistic field. Any church is fortunate to secure his services—J. W. Bowman.

Sept. 30, 1911.

Lafayette, La.:

On Sept. 10 an Epworth League was organized in the Methodist Church at Lafayette, La., with thirty-five members. Since that time the membership has increased until it now numbers nearly sixty. This evidence of interest on the part of the young people shows a forward movement in the work at Lafayette. The Sunday school is in better condition, and on last Sabbath the past records were broken by the number in attendance. The pastor, Rev. C. A. Battle, is much liked, and his earnestness, zeal, consecration, and talent are appreciated by the people, as is evidenced by the attendance upon all of the church services.—Mrs. Crow Girard.

Smithville, Miss.:

Smithville charge is in good shape, and moving on smoothly. Have had a good revival at each appointment, with 37 accessions to the Church; a Ladies' Aid Society has been organized at two places which promise to be of great value to the charge. I had the assistance of Dr. T. C. Wier and Rev. J. W. Ramsey in revival work, both of whom did effective work, and will long be remembered for their zeal and love. Brother Ramsey has quite a degree of revival power about him, and does work after the order of an evangelist. Our fourth quarterly conference was held at Old Greenbrier Church last Saturday and Sunday, with good reports and an encouraging outlook for everything in full at the Annual Conference. Our beloved presidlng elder, J. H. Felts, has been quite sick in bed for several days, wrestling with a severe attack of nettle rash. But he has made his escape, and has been seen at Pontotoc filling his engagements.—W. A. Bowlin, P. C.

Amory, Sept. 30.

Keithville, La.:

Our revival meeting closed on Sept 4, with 7 additions to the Church. Our faithful pastor, Rev. W. R. Harvell, was assisted by Brother A. S. Lutz, of Homer, part of the time, who gave us the "stralght" gospel. Brother Harvell preached three days at the close of the meeting with great power. The Holy Spirit came upon us, and strong men were brought into a saving knowledge of our blessed Savior. We feel that we are getting on higher ground. The Sunday school and Epworth League have taken on new life, and for the first time in our history we have a surplus of efficient, consecrated teachers; however, they are working whenever they are needed. Our people are very much in love with our pastor. Not only at our particular church, but over the entire charge is he well liked. The Grand Cane charge will meet its assessments in full, with a surplus for Conference claimants. We thank God and take courage.—W. F. Henderson, Jr.

October 2, 1911.

Fannin, Miss.:

To keep the brethren from thinking we are all dead on the Fannin charge, I will write a few brief notes. We have some good people here, and they konw how to take care of the preacher. They have given us two good poundings, besides the good things that have been sent in all along. The boll weevil will not starve the preacher here, for the people have bread, biscuit, meat, potatoes, molasses, and other good things made at home; they are always ready to divide with the preacher. We have four Sunday schools and two prayer meetings that are doing well. We have held seven revivals on the charge and the Lord has been with us in great power. I was assisted by Revs. W. W. Murray, B. F. Crook, and O. S. Lewis; the other meetings were held by the pastor. We have had 34 accessions to our church and two joined the Baptists. I baptized 4 infants; the church members have been revived, and I believe the influence of these meetings will be felt for years yet to come. When I meet you at Conference I will tell you more. I cannot write on paper how happy I am.

I am happy, brethren, happy,
And I'm shouting every day,
Glory, glory, Hallelujah,
Bless the Lord; I'm on my way.

—J. F. Campbell, pastor.

Sept. 23, 1911.

Tunica, Miss.:

Dear Brother Meek: It is about time I was reporting to you, my ex-presiding elder, to whom I owe much of the happiness of my declining years. Our fourth quarterly conference was held last Sunday and Monday. Our presiding elder, Brother Woollard, was with us, and preached one of his best sermons on the faith and sufferings of Job. It was the best discourse that I have ever heard on that subject—a feast to the soul. Our work is very well up. We have paid the presiding elder and the collections ordered by the Conference. We have received during the year over 50 members, at least 40 of them on profession of faith. I do not know whether I should continue in the active work or not. Old men never do; so I shall leave all this to my presiding elder and the Conference. I shall be 75 years old the 9th of next month, and 50 years old in the traveling connection. I have suffered much this year, but it has been a means of grace. Amid it all, I have been able to say, "The will of the Lord be done." I am serving as noble a people as any pastor ever served. Conference will soon be here; then as Dr. McAnally used to say, "we shall see what we shall see." Our district is in good condition. Our presiding elder looks well after the interests of the church, and our preachers, with one or two exceptions, have been doing their work faithfully. I hope to see you at Conference, and finally at the great conference above, where each preacher will be satisfied with his appointment. May the Lord bless you and the noble work you are doing!—J. W. Honoll, P. C.

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Mrs. Neblett, Houston, Miss., has now 83 members in her Adult Bible Class.

Columbus First Church, held an interesting and profitable Rally Day service on Sept. 24.

* * *

Mr. Terry Reese, Booneville, Miss., in Mrs. Allen's fine Men's Class, will soon close four years of unbroken and prompt attendance. He has a splendid record in every way.

Men and women not only come to the Adult Bible Classes on Sunday morning to be entertained and edified, but they come above all to get help for their daily tasks during the other six days of the week. Oh, teacher, they must not go away disappointed!

The thoroughly organized classes are making themselves felt in all the activities of the school, the Church and the community. They are constantly looking for an opportunity to assist the pastor, the general and department superintendents in the school.

* * *

The North Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board offers a Bible to the school raising the largest amount on Children's Day, one to the school raising the next largest amount, and one to the school raising the largest amount in each presiding elder's district, barring the two that receive the Bibles from the Conference at large.

A fine Sunday school and a number of Y. W. C. A. Bible study classes give the nearly nine hundred girls at the I. I. & C. a splendid opportunity to be good Bible students, as well as a great help to the home Sunday school and the Church when they return. Dr. DuBose's very consecrated and talented daughter, Miss Roberta DuBose, who is secretary of the Y. W. C. A. in this institution, has planned a fine year's work.

"The live, up-to-date school will frequently check up, like a wide-awake business house, to see wherein it is lacking. It is so easy to grow self-complacent and self-centered, and make ourselves believe that we are doing our best where the younger classes are suffering for want of help from the 'big brothers' and 'big sisters. Let us rise to our whole opportunity in our relation to the whole school."

It is now time for the classes to begin preparing their exhibits for our Annual Conference. The Sunday School Board is most anxious that many classes and all types of work shall be attractively exhibited. This is a fine way to secure recognition for your own work, and to help some other class with your well worked-out method. The rewards are for the best work exhibited at our next Annual Conference at Macon by any Sunday school as a whole; for the best exhibited by any Cradle Roll, Graded Lessons, including beginners, primary, junior and intermediate departments; and for the best exhibited by any Wesley Adult Bible Class. These offerings are for classes organized this year.

The rich man may purchase a library, but only the student possesses it, for he has conquered it paragraph by paragraph. In many of our Sunday schools the libraries are out of date, moth and dust have added their weight to that already possessed by the volumes themselves, and nobody reads them and nobody cares for them. Indeed, there is no more pathetic sight to a book lover than these neglected and ill-assorted books. Such splendid ones we have, fresh from the great minds of our Church and the world and easy to secure from our Publishing House; and no greater incentive to good work can be found than even a half dozen such books on the reading table (not on the sheives) of a teacher-training class room or a Wesley Adult Bible Class room. Purchase these valuable helps, mark them and pass them on to the heart-and-head-hungry, waiting people.

FIRST CHURCH, LAUREL, MISS.

We have just closed one of the most successful meetings I ever held. The success was not so much in the number of conversions and additions to the church, as it was in the work done in the church. The preaching was done by Brother C. M. Chapman, of Meridian, and his theme through the entire meeting was the witness of the Spirit, and the danger and methods of apostasy. I am quite sure I never heard these great Arminian doctrines more clearly stated nor more conclusively proven by the Holy Scriptures. For two weeks our people listened, accepted, and earnestly sought to get themselves right with God. The only regret is that all our people did not hear and profit by his splendid preaching. The most encouraging feature of the meeting is in the fact that the uplift of the church did not die with the close of the protracted services. Every department of the church is manifesting a greater interest and zeal than I had known before. Our congregations at the preaching and prayer services are increasing, our Sunday school has outgrown our accommodations, and some of the teachers have tried to rent rooms in private homes for their classes. We have three splendid Epworth Leagues, and have received 34 members. We now have a large force at work on our new $18,000 house of worship. While we are making ample provision in our auditorium for our congregation, we are making a work shop of our Sunday school room for the church. In the basement we have a kitchen and dining room. On the first floor we have a ladies' parlor, pastor's study and three class rooms. In the gallery we have an Epworth League parlor and six class rooms. On occasions the whole house can be thrown into the auditorium. The building is a reproduction of the Lovick Pierce memorial at Athens, Ga. The structure will not be completed by Conference, but if the Georgia Bishop concludes it will be the best for Laurel Methodism for me to move, my successor will have no difficulty in finishing up the work.

JAMES M. WEEMS.

FROM ARCADIA, LA.

Dear Dr. Meek: Rev. W. R. Hendrix, D.D., lately pastor of the Methodist Temple, Louisville, Ky., will begin our revival meeting on Sunday, Oct. 22. Dr. Hendrix will be open to engagements in the Louisiana Conference during the month of November, as he has been transferred from Louisville to the North Georgia Conference, and will have two months interim. Dr. Hendrix is too well known to the Louisiana brethren to need any introduction from me. He held a most successful meeting at Second Church, New Orleans, last fall. He was one of the ablest preachers at the Seashore Camp Meeting this summer. He has just completed his quadrennium at the Temple in Louisville, where, though laboring under adverse circumstances, he wrought a most monumental work.

The Arcadia Epworth League observed "Old Folks Day" on Oct. 8 with marked success. Carriages and autos were sent for the dear old people, rosebuds and rocking chairs awaited them at church and old time hymns were sung in the service. The sermon was preached from the text (the last triumphant hallelujah of St. Paul): "I am now ready to be offered; I have fought a good fight," etc.

A. INMAN TOWNSLEY.

MEETING IN MONROE.

We are just closing a revival service in Monroe. We have had with us the blind lay evangelist, Joe M. Ramsey, of Manchester, Tenn., and Rev. E. R. Smoot, of Greenwood, Miss., leader of song.

The prospects for a successful meeting seemed to be unusually favorable, but Brother Ramsey was taken sick after preaching three days and has only been able to preach a few times since. Notwithstanding that fact, the meeting has been a great benefit to the Church and Brother Ramsey has endeared himself very much to the community. He is a man of wonderful spiritual power in preaching as well as in altar exercises, and his methods are excellent. His health for the present seems to be quite seriously impaired and friends everywhere should pray for his recovery. Brother Smoot is a man of consecration and is a splendid soloist and leader of chorus singing. He has been associated with a number of prominent evangelists, such as Sam Jones, French Oliver and others. He is an ordained preacher in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, but is planning to apply for admission in the North Mississippi Conference of our Church at its ensuing session. He will undoubtedly be a valuable addition to the regular work of the pastorate.

R. H. WYNN, Pastor.

A Family Supply of Unequaled Cough Remedy for 50c—Money Refunded if It Fails.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large proportion of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one that anyone can make. A pint of granulated sugar, with ½ pint of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, mixed in a pint bottle with home-made sugar syrup, gives you a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-mixed for $2.50. There's a clear saving of $2.00. Full directions in package.

And money couldn't buy a quicker, better remedy. Takes hold at once, gives almost instant relief, and usually stops the most obstinate, deep-seated cough in 24 hours. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative and has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. Splendid for hoarseness, asthma, chest pains, and other throat troubles, and unequaled for prompt results in whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of imported Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix it as directed with sugar syrup or strained honey, and it is ready for use.

Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

MRS. POWELL ALMOST DEAD.

Dry Ridge, Ky.—"I could hardly walk across the room," says Mrs. Lydia Powell, of Dry Ridge, "before I tried Cardui. I was so poorly, I was almost dead. Now, I can walk four miles and do my work with much more ease. I praise Cardui for my wonderful cure." Cardui is successful in benefiting sick women, because it is composed of ingredients, that act specifically on the womanly constitution, relieving headache, backache, irregularity, misery and distress. Only a good medicine could show such continual increase in popularity as Cardui has, for the past 50 years. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic.

He Reduced 57 Pounds.

New Method of Flesh Reduction Proves Astonishingly Successful.

Johnstown, Oct. 9.—The truth of the claim made by Hon. H. T. Stetler, of Johnstown, Pa., that he reduced his weight by 57 pounds in an incredibly short time has been fully established.

The facts are, as proven by a careful investigation, that Stetler received, at his own request, on forty days' trial, from Prof. G. X. Burns, of No. 17 West 38th street, New York, a simple, invisible device, weighing less than one ounce, which when worn as directed, acts as an infallible flesh reducer, dispensing entirely with dieting, medicines and exercises. The results with Stetler, as with other prominent men and women, were gratifying and astonishing. It is said that the offer to send these outfits on 40 days' free trial has been extended for a time.

LOUISIANA MAN TESTIFIES.

Writing under date of May 3, 1911, Mr. R. H. Marcotte, of Bordelonville, La., writes:

W. H. Bull Medicine Co., Dear Sirs:—I took sick the first Monday after Christmas last, and was down in bed for two weeks. I called in my family doctor, he gave me relief for a few days only. My trouble was pronounced liver trouble, with an attack of Dropsy, caused hy the liver. After I was up a few days from his treatment, which I only found temporary. I hegan to feel bad again, followed by an awful aching in the upper part of my stomach, which I could hardly stand. As I had read one of your Almanacs, I decided Herbs & Iron was what I needed, and I walked to a druggist near hy, the Fritz, Hess & Son, and bought one 50 cent bottle of Herhs & Iron, and the second dose gave me relief, I used two hottles and am now in good health. Herbs and Iron did the work.

You must excuse such a lengthy statement, as I don't care to tire you but it seems that I cannot say too much in regard to such a fine medicine as Herbs and Iron for a stomach that is badly out of order—no way of resting, appetite gone, and in fact feel like you were torn to pieces and life not worth living. I will at all times recommend Herbs and Iron. With hest wishes to your success, I remain Yours truly."

W. H. Bull's Herbs and Iron is the quickest and surest remedy for stomach and liver troubles, and is a blood purifier of high merit. Get a bottle at your druggist's. Take two-thirds of it and if you are not fully satisfied that it is improving your health return the remainder and the druggist will refund your money.

Little faithfulnesses are not only the preparation for great ones, hut little faithfulnesses are in themselves the great ones. The essential fidelity of the heart is the same whether it be exercised in the mites, or in a royal treasury; the genuine faithfulness of the life is equally beautiful whether it be displayed in governing an empire or in writing an exercise.—F. W. Farrar.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

(This report has just heen received and we are publishing it without any delay.—The Editor.)

The annual meeting of the North Mississippi Conference Leaguers was held in West Point, June 13-15, 1911. The opening service was held Tuesday evening at the church, after which the lovely home of Mrs. C. F. Cottrell was thrown open to the visiting Leaguers and the people of West Point.

On the lawn of the Cottreil home, Mr. John Valentyne extended a most hearty welcome to the delegates and visitors. He was responded to most happily by Rev. K. P. Foust.

Interesting talks were made by Rev. R. A. Clark, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, and Mrs. J. O. Wiygul.

Much was added to the program by the two songs by the Junior League, under the direction of Sister Dorsey, and a reading by one of the Junior girls.

Wednesday morning at 6 a.m., was held the first quiet hour service, with Rev. O. P. Armour in charge. This was a most helpful service, and prepared the Leaguers for the real work of the day. At 8:30 the Conference opened with a devotional service led by Rev. S. L. Pope. This was followed by a message from the president, W. T. Boswell.

After announcements, the annual reports of the district secretaries were made. All of the districts were reported except the Greenville, Oxford and Winona. The Aberdeen, Durant and Sardis Districts reported district conferences held during the year. The first vice-president, Miss Nora Evans being absent, a splendid paper from her on "Personal Preparation of the Leader" was read by Miss Kate Cunningham. A paper was then read by Mrs. Harbin on the "Preparation of the Program for a Devotional Meeting," which evidenced careful thought upon this important subject. Prof. J. R. Brinson then spoke on "Conducting a Devotional Meeting." Rev. J. H. Holder, president of our League Board, led the open discussion of the devotional work, and many helpful questions were discussed. At 11 o'clock, Rev. J. H. Felts delivered an address on "Fishers of Men," which closed the first morning's session.

The afternoon session opened with a devotional service conducted by Rev. S. L. Pope. The work of the Charity and Help Department was then taken up. A report from the second vice-president, Miss Esther Hall, was made and her paper, "Servant of All," which followed her report, was much appreciated. This was followed by an essay by Miss Mary Stokes on "The Ministry of Flowers and Song," which was also a very fine paper. Rev. J. H. Felts then spoke on the theme, "If you know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." Mrs. Wiygul read a paper on "Problems of the Junior League Work," and Rev. R. A. Clark led the round table discussion under this department.

Wednesday evening's sesson opened with a devotional service by Rev. S. L. Pope, which was foliowed by an interesting address hy Dr. H. G. Henderson on "The Mission of the League."

Rev. W. L. Graves led the second quiet hour service Thursday morning with a large crowd of Leaguers present. At 8:30 p.m., the devotional services were led by Rev. S. L. Pope, which were followed by a strong talk on the "Boys' League and the Boy Scout Movement," by Mr. W. H. Carter. Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Orphans' Home, was introduced and made an appeal in the interest of that excellent institution. Mr. V. H. Stephenson, fourth vice-president, then spoke on the work of the fourth department. "Am I My Brother's Keeper?" was the suhject of an address which Rev. W. L. Duren brought us. A reading by Miss Annie Rose was greatly enjoyed. Rev. J. R. Countiss then spoke on "Special Preparation as essential to the Successful Advancement of tiie Cause of Missions." A consideration of the Loan Fund was taken up and pledges fhom the different Leagues were made to the amount of $400. This should be raised to at least $600 or $700 by the Leagues not represented at the Conference. Prof. Noble, of Millsaps College, addressed the Conference on "Christian Education."

The work of the third department was taken up Thursday afternoon, and a demonstration of a League social by Miss May D. Williams, third vice president, was enjoyed by all. Rev. J. R. Countiss then gave interesting information as to Grenada College, and impressed all with the high class of work being done by this school. Mr. Ellis made a strong talk for our Methodist hospital to be erected in Memphis. The Conference then elected officers for the next year. Okolona was selected as the next place of meeting.

Resolutions were adopted expressing the Conference's appreciation of kindness shown us hy the good people of West Point, and extending thanks to all who had contributed to the success of the occasion. A resolution was also adopted calling for a definite hour for consideration of the League work in our district conferences. The Conference closed Thursday evening with a great sermon by Rev. E. B. Ramsey, of Memphis, and the installment of the following officers hy Rev. J. H. Holder:

President, Dr. W. B. Baker, Houston; first vice-president, Prof. J. R. Brinson, Cleveland; second vice-president, Miss Mary Stokes, Columbus; third vice-president, Miss Kate Cunningham, Booneville; fourth vice-president, Mr. V. H. Stephenson, Booneville; secretary and treasurer, W. T. Boswell, New Alhany; assistant secretary, Miss Esther Hall, New Albany; Era Agent, Mrs. E. D. Gilmore, Amory; Junior Superintendent, Mrs. Lamb, Mathiston.

District Secretaries: Aberdeen, Mrs. J. P. Wiygul; Columbus, Miss Isabelle Leslie; Corinth, Rev. K. P. Foust; Durant, Miss Allene Ramsey; Greenville, Rev. T. J. McCafferty; Oxford, Rev. W. T. Brown; Sardis, Miss Maud Atkinson; Winona, Rev. W. V. Shearer.

W. T. BOSWELL.

Every soul on its way to Eternity has its appointed times and seasons for good, which, if they be allowed to pass away, shall never return again. —Keble.

BREAKING THE BOOK RECORD.

Our readers will be surprised to learn that perhaps for the first time in the history of the publishing world a religious book may head the list as having the largest sale in 1911, even over the most sensational novels. The author is a Methodist pastor in S. C., and the book entitled, The Bible Mode of Baptism, is now being read and studied by nearly 400,000 people all over the world.

It gives the Original Authority under which the apostles first baptized, and proves beyond a doubt that sprinkling was the mode. Thousands are surprised at such an array of facts. The last edition is nearly gone and the publishers regret that no more can be had at so low a price. 12c a copy; 15 for $1; 100 for $6, postpaid, while they last. All who want it at these prices should address the author, Rev. J. E. Mahaffey, 33 Main St., Clinton, S. C. One man sold 50 copies in four minutes, another has ordered his 25th hundred.

OLD LADY'S SAGE ADVICE.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Mrs. Mamie Towe, of 102 W. Main Street, this city, says: "If you had seen me, before I began to take Cardui, you would not think I was the same person. Six doctors failed to do me good, and my friends thought I would die. I could hardly get out of bed or walk a step. At last an old lady advised me to take Cardui, and now I can go most anywhere." All ailing women need Cardui, as a gentle, refreshing tonic, especially adapted to their peculiar ailments. It is a reliable, vegetable remedy, successfully used for over 50 years. You ought to try it.

THE ROYAL MONTH AND THE ROYAL DISEASE.

Sudden changes of weather are especially trying, and probably to none more so than to the scrofulous and consumptive. The progress of scrofula during a normal Octoher is commonly great. We never think of scrofula—its bunches, cutaneous eruptions, and wasting of the bodily substance—without thinking of the great good many sufferers from it have derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla, whose radical and permanent cures of this one disease are enough to make it the most famous medicine in the world. There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, in arresting and completely eradicating scrofula, which is almost as serious and as much to be feared as its near relative,—consumption.

Epworth League Department.

(Conducted by Rev. H. B. Watkins, Magnolia, Miss., to whom all communications concerning League matters should be addressed.)

Remember that our topic for October is "Firm Foundations," and that our subject for to-day (Oct. 15) is "Some Things We May Know." For our references we have I John 1:1-5; Acts 4:18-20; Romans 8:16; II Timothy 1:12.

Let us inquire in the realm of religion, What are some things we may know, for surely when we leave the objective world we don't leave behind us the privilege of knowing. The truth is that the men who have given us our great religious truths have spoken with more confidence than in any other realm of knowledge. It is, moreover, true that the fundamental doctrines of Christianity have not shifted nearly so much as those, for instance, in medicine, so subject to physical tests, and where men were so sure they knew. In Christianity there are really few "absolute" teachings, and we deal every day with the "old, old story." In other words, our knowledge in religion has been "the sure Word."

First, I would say we may know Christ Jesus. The apostles knew him physically as well as spiritually. (Have some one read I John 1:1.) In that verse their knowledge came through their ears, their eyes, and their hands. All the senses had been called into play to make sure their knowledge of him. And it is from these very witnesses we get our knowledge of Christ. While these things are the basis of their knowledge of him, yet I am sure they knew him better by means of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost than they had ever known him before. Read verses 7, 8, 13 and 14 of the 16th Chapter of St. John, and you will find that the main office of the Holy Spirit was to show Jesus in his divinity to human hearts. The Holy Spirit is as accessible to you and me as to them, and we in our heart of hearts may know him as well. No wonder St. Paul could say: "I know whom I have believed!" The Bible is the basis of our knowledge, but when we have read and believed, the Holy Spirit makes us acquainted with our Lord. I believe in eternity that we shall know him not so much because of the "print of the nails in his hands" (as the song has it), but rather because he fulfills the impression of him in our hearts.

Secondly, we may know our relationship to him. God doesn't leave us to guess how we stand. We don't have to grope on in doubt and darkness. We "know whom we have believed." We know it indirectly by the evidences in our lives as when St. John said, "We know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren." If we find love there, love different from the indifference or even malice we used to carry, may we not know, to some extent at least, that all is well? But there is here, too, a better witness. For the same witness that "glorifies Jesus" brings us sweet messages of sins forgiven. (Have some one stand and read Romans 8:16.) Let us seek this witness until out of a full heart we say: "I once was blind, but now I see!"

Thirdly, we may know our duty. Even in the minor details where the broad principles of God's Word don't itemize, the man or woman eager to do God's will may know. (Read John 8:12; John 7:17).

Fourthly, we may know our future, our destiny. Everything conspires to make us know it. The Christ we know says: "Where I am there shall ye be also." The Spirit in our hearts points us to a "land that is fairer than day." The duty done leaves echoes of heaven in our souls. Though it be a narrow path, it surely leads to life. So every finger, every friendly guidepost makes us know the end. We know whom we have believed and are persuaded that he is able to keep us against that day.

EPWORTH ERA DAY.

Let every chapter arrange to observe Era Day. "What day?" some will ask. In view of your local conditions, select the nearest and most convenient day. But don't put it off too long. If you cannot see a favorable time near at hand, make one. All things come to him who will not wait.

Mrs. Little's program will put into the hands of any Era agent, aided by the Third Department, the material for a delightful evening. Or a part of it may be used at the Sunday devotional service if an evening is not available.

Prepare the program; also send for samples of the Era for free distribution and for an Era Agent's subscription book. Both will be sent on application to the Era office, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

On this ocasion all new subscriptions may be taken at seventy-five cents, and as many renewals at the same rate (75 cents) as there are new subscriptions from the chapter—that is, a renewal and a new subscription for one dollar and a half. No renewal can be taken at this rate unless accompanied by a new subscription, for the Era costs over ninety cents a year.

NOTES.

In Mr. Clifford R. Field, of Natchez, the Mississippi Conference Epworth League evidently has a good leader. We are expecting great things for our Mississippi work this year. Will Brother Field please use the Advocate columns to push his work?

We, as fourth vice-president, have received $46.30 more for the work in Korea, a part of last year's report from the Mississippi Leaguers. Let us have quick subscriptions for our Cuban work for the next ten months. What part of that $1,000 will your League give?

BOARD OF EDUCATION LITERATURE.

ANY ONE WHO HAS USED IT ASK EVER

The situation which is exactly to our liking has not yet been discovered. Most people go in search of it but no one finds it; and the wisest thing is to play the man in the place you are in, while you are in it, until you are called to play the man in the better place.—J. G. Greenhough.

MISS FRANCES J. COZZENS.

A Tribute.

It has always seemed so tender in the writers of the olden time to say of the departed ones that they had "fallen on sleep," or that they "slept with their fathers." The Master often spoke of death as a sleep, and so it should be regarded by his children. I cannot think of this sainted woman as dead—such people do not die; they cannot die, for good is as indestructible as matter. There is a change, and science does not explain it, but it seems inconceivable to think of extinction, especially for one who has lived as did Miss Fanny. She was born in Saint Louis, Mo., in 1833, and came with her parents to Natchez, Miss., in the third year of her life. For more than seventy-five years she lived a modest, unassuming, helpful life in her adopted home, and left a name like that of no other woman in the city. No one ever called on her for help and left her gate empty-handed. She was always giving more than her ability warranted, but only the recording angel knew to whom she gave, or the amount it aggregated. Sometimes I would be told of some peculiarly painful case, where my professional services were needed, and then I would hear about her ministrations from the beneficiaries. She would never tell me what she was doing, unless she wished my help. It was an honor to know Miss Fanny, but a still greater honor to be loved by her and to possess her confidence and affection. It was my pleasure to sit in her pew at the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, and between us there was a very warm friendship. She joined the church more than fifty years ago, and the love of her Savior was a most precious possession all the long years of her life. Never very strong, the latter years of her life were spent in much pain, and her sympathetic heart was so often wrung by the sorrows of her friends and the oft-repeated visits of the grim reaper to the thinning ranks of her old-time acquaintances. She remarked to me on one occasion, that there were so few of the old people that she had known all her life left for her to speak to of the days long gone by. I have never known a person more perfectly unselfish, and she always had something good to say of the most unworthy. On Aug. 31, 1911, like a tired child, she fell asleep, and loving friends laid her form away in the old cemetery of the city she called home. Besides a legion of friends, she leaves one sister, Mrs. Laura L. DeLap; a brother-in-law, Colonel DeLap, and one niece, Miss DeLap, in Natchez. Her other relatives live in St. Louis and elsewhere. Miss Fanny's faith in her Savior was supreme, and she never seemed to doubt that he would "bring it to pass." Her life reminded me of that beautiful hymn—

"If our faith were but more simple
We would take him at his word,
And our lives would be all sunshine
In the sweetness of our Lord.

ORDER NOW

The strongest, truest, and boldest utterances on social and moral problems go to make up

"A Man Wanted"

"A masterly discourse on the evils of the present day."—Rev. T. V. Peters, Slidell, La.

"I have read it with pleasure, and feel that it should do good."—Rev. Jno. F. Foster, De Ridder, La.

"No man can read this sermon without being aroused to earnest thought."—Rev. W. L. Doss, Rayne, La.

"Any pastor is fortunate to have this sermon preached or circulated among the men of his congregation."—Rev. T. J. O'Neil, Newton, Miss.

"I would be glad if every young man in the land could hear this address."—Bishop W. B. Murrah.

"A MAN WANTED is a strong sermon by Rev. W. G. Harbin. Price, 15c postpaid. C. O. Chalmers, publisher, 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

Unsolicited Praise

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

"I have read and thoroughly enjoyed MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE. A long and tedious railway journey was made pleasant because I had this book with me. I have re-read it since that time, and have gained new inspiration from it. The chapter on the Spirit of Prayer I found especially helpful. It is such a readable, understandable, Spirit-filled book."—Reader in Carthage, Texas.

A TOUCHING TESTIMONIAL is this from St. Alban, West Virginia: "I have read and re-read the book, and then I sent it to my cousin who is an invalid. He had his back broken in a coal mine and has not left his room for ten years. He was delighted."

MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE, by Walter G. Harbin. Cloth and gold, 50c., postpaid. Order from C. O. Chalmers, publisher, 512 Camp St., N. O., La.

A Severe Sickness Leaves The Kidneys Weak.

After recovering from a severe spell of sickness some time ago, I was all run down and suffering from poor blood. I would have pains in my back and legs and my kidneys bothered me all the time. I started taking Swamp-Root upon the recommendation of a friend and found it was just what I needed. My blood became all right and after taking a few bottles, I was surprised at the effect it had on my kidneys. They were entirely cured and I have much to be thankful for that your great remedy did for me. Yours very truly,

OUR HOME MISSION PROBLEM IN LOUISIANA.

By Rev. Wm. H. Coleman, Chairman Confereence Board of Missions.

The possibilities in Louisiana are inestimable. There could not be found anywhere an equal area more richly endowed with material resources. The soil is inexhaustible in fertility and productiveness, the climate is salubrious, and the soil and climate are adapted to perennial and varied productions. The writer once saw in an agricultural exhibit sixty-five different products that had been grown on the same farm in one year.

Louisiana's wealth of forest is immense, her salt and sulphur mines are perhaps the greatest in the world, her gas and oil fields are unsurpassed, and her oyster beds are larger than those of any State in the Union.

Educationally, she has one of the most completely organized systems of public schools in the Union.

Although Louisiana is to-day one of the foremost States in agricultural products, yet only six million of her twenty-eight million acres of fertile soil are in cultivation, leaving her vast untouched resources for future development.

All the above mentioned facts are causing the eyes of the world to be turning toward us and many of the thousands of the world to be coming to us.

With all these conditions making our people rich and ever growing richer, and their number already larger, ever growing larger, we have a tremendous and ever growing missionary problem.

In our strong, perfectly organized public school system, we have no recognition of the Word of God which is the basis and source of our civilization, as well as our Christianity.

In south Louisiana, we have two hundred and fifty thousand French people, largely without the gospel. Here is a vast field of opportunity for us. That they need the gospel and are responsive to its appeals is being demonstrated by the successful work of Hebert, Breithaupt, and Martin, the only men we have been able to place in this fruitful field, and that by the help of our General Board. All we need to reap this white harvest for our Lord is men and means properly used.

We have not only this vast and promising rural field, but the city problem, as well. Our greatest city—New Orleans—is the greatest city of the South, and with the opening of the Panama Canal and the rapid development of the heart of our country whose commerce flows through this city, it will speedily become one of the greatest in the world. It is already cosmopolitan and heterogeneous. There are now in this, our own city, according to actual statistics, more than one hundred thousand unreached by the gospel either from Roman Catholic or Protestant sources.

The political corruption of the city is proverbial; here the liquor traffic is strongly entrenched; here, as in other cities, vast sections are dedicated to vilest vice and licensed to degrade the holiest instincts and sentiments of life, to wreck characters, and send thousands of souls to perdition. To thus recognize as necessary and give place to destructive vice is worse than pagan and yet we are guilty. Here, as in other cities, we have the squalor and vice and degradation and misery of the slums and crowded tenements. Dr. Strong tells us that a mission worker in New York found eighteen people, black and white, all living (existing) in one room ten by twelve feet; in Nashville, Tenn., three families, eleven people, were found, all occupying the same room. New Orleans' population is much larger and more heterogenous than Nashville's and her social conditions are more sadly in need of reformation.

No wonder we have corrupt politics; no wonder we have a spirit of commercialism, void of humanitarianism, which for sordid gain makes possible the awful conditions of our crowded tenements; no wonder the liquor traffic has continued and still continues to boldly pursue its fiendish work of human destruction; no wonder that traffic of perdition itself, the white slave traffic, has flourished in our midst, when we, the Church of the living God, with the divinely given prerogative to abolish these evils and ameliorate these conditions, indifferently accept them as the inevitable!

We forget that when God created the earth he said to his man, "Have thou authority over the earth," and that it has ever been God's purpose that the earth should be run for him by his people.

Do we Christians of Louisiana expect to take Louisiana for Christ? Are we of the whole State willing to do all we can, not only at home, but to help the workers in the French Mission and in the great city?

Soon a commission from our General Board will come to New Orleans to investigate conditions and aid in the work by their wise consel and by a gift of ten thousand dollars from the Board. We heartily welcome them and their work, and appreciate their gift. But shall we show practical appreciation by so adequately augmenting the gift and so wisely using it as to effectively evangelize the great sinful city, or shall we merely spend this fund, un-augmented, within the radius of our present limited enterprises, without broadening or permanently strengthening the work?

If, as has been suggested, it should be proposed to place First Church on a missionary basis and make it our missionary center for the city, the writer would consider it an unwise proposition. First Church is an up-town church too far away from the real missionary center to be expected to reach and draw the unevangelized and neediest masses, as the great Manchester and Birmingham and other missionary centers, all located in the midst of the masses, have done. Let First Church remain as it is, encouraging it and co-operating with it in all its benign institutional and mission work of every kind. There is a great mission for it, as there is for every great, strong Church, and the Church which sees and performs its mission is the one that will live and grow and help extend the Kingdom.

But let all available funds for the establishing of a great central mission and for the maintenance of all work connected therewith be invested in connection with the St. Mark's Hall movement, or some other nucleus that has already been discovered or shall be discovered right in the heart of the most morally destitute section of the city. Then let the whole Church rally to this work, giving it all the means necessary to its normal growth.

It is the adopted policy of the Board of Missions to place every mission charge on a self-supporting basis as soon as possible and to do everything possible for the evangelization of the whole State, both rural and city.

Let us all pay our assessments in full; let missionary information be disseminated by study classes in the Sunday school, in the League, in the Women's Societies, and in the Laymen's Missionary Movement; let earnest prayer be made for the enlargement and success of the sublime work until all Louisiana is taken for Christ! By the help of our God who has called us to the glorious task, "we can do it if we will." Let us realize this fact and with consecration and zeal, say "We can do it, and we will!"

OUR MISSION WORK IN SOUTHWEST LOUISIANA.

By Rev. W. Winans Drake.

The term "Southwest Louisiana" may be taken to include twelve parishes, having a population, according to the last census, of 400,000 in round numbers, or about one-fourth of the entire population of the State. All of this territory except two parishes and portions of one or two others is included in the Lafayette District.

This section includes a large part of the great sugar cane belt and most of the rice producing lands of the State, as well as the great sulphur mine, the richest in the world, several producing oil fields, the great salt deposits and some of the finest pine and cypress timber lands in the entire country. In addition, it is rapidly developing as an oyster producing section, and in the reclamation of marsh lands of incalculable fertility. No section is richer in the abundance and variety of its natural resources.

That these resources are beginning to be developed successfully, is shown by the following facts: Within the last decade the population of these parishes has increased twenty-five per cent; large numbers of saw-mills, some of them among the largest in the world, have been erected in our timber belt; several new railroads have been constructed through the heart of this section, and other large industries, such as fish and oyster canneries, have been inaugurated.

Of the population of Southwest Louisiana, a large proportion, probably about half, is descended from the original French settlers, is prevailingly French in speech, and is in many sections without any real religious attention. In some parts of the territory there is a considerable population of Italian immigrants, working as farm laborers on the sugar plantations, as vendors of fruits in the towns, and as laborers in the fish and oyster industry. There are a few settlements of German and other immigrants, but they are not yet of sufficient proportions to demand special attention. There is also a continuous tide of seekers after home or fortune from the middle western States, a tide that with the opening of the Panama canal and the consequent development of the "logical port," together with the reclamation of vast areas of marsh lands, is certain to be vastly accelerated. It will readily be seen that, aside from the ordinary problems of town and rural evangelization, we must face a number of special missionary problems, such as the reaching of the settler in a new home and environment, that of the saw mill town and logging camp, that of the foreign immigrant, and the unusual problem presented by a race who are the original settlers of the soil, and yet speak a foreign tongue.

The importance of the spiritual and moral development of this section is emphasized by the fact that in the politics of the State it holds the balance of power between the great boss-ridden city of New Orleans and the hill parishes of North Louisiana, which means that it will have a powerful influence in settling the great moral and social questions that affect the development of the Kingdom of God. This great section, with its rapidly growing wealth and its far reaching importance to the destiny of Louisiana, must be thoroughly evangelized and its rich resources brought under tribute to the work of the Kingdom.

Methodism has been at work in this land for more than a hundred years, ever since Lorenzo Dow, the erratic advance guard of our forces, set the first foot of a Methodist preacher on the soil of the Attakapas prairies, in 1805. His steps were shortly followed by those of Elisha Bowman, who, in 1806, began regular labors in the Opelousas country. After a century of labor we find 27 pastoral charges with a total membership of a little more than 5,000. The figures are not at hand for other Protestant churches in this field, but Methodism is considerably the strongest Protestant body laboring here.

Our missionary appropriations have chiefly gone to several weaker charges, supplementing the small salaries of pastors in order to maintain the work. Three charges are now being thus maintained, all of which are for various reasons important fields. By these appropriations, one new pastoral charge has been established, at St. Martinville, where no Protestant church had been in existence, and where we now own a good church and parsonage. No definite work has been undertaken among the immigrants residing here, and in many of the saw mill towns we have never established work. In some of these the M. E. Church has organized churches and keeps up the work.

The great problem and opportunity of this section is to be found in the native French population. The General Board now supports our regular French Missionary, Brother Hebert, and also Brother Martin, who is assistant on the Houma Mission. Brother Breithaupt, pastor of the Houma Mission, is supported by the Conference Board. In this French population of about 200,000 we are supporting three missionaries at a cost of about $2,400. Two of these men have been in the field less than three years, and in that time have opened up largely new territory. The one missionary formerly occupying the whole ground was handicapped by the magnitude of the field and by the necessity of looking after some other work. The real development of our work has been within the last four or five years. In that time about 350 members have been added to the Church. Part of these form the strength of a new self-supporting charge, Vermilion, which consists of two newly organized churches and one old church rejuvenated. The charge has built a parsonage without help from outside. About 150 of these added members belong to the Houma charge, where there are two organized churches, and others in progress of organization. The town of Houma, where three years ago we had nothing, is one of the growing towns of the State, and is the center of a large French population. A church has been organized here, a comfortable parsonage built by the aid of the Home Mission Society, and a valuable site secured for a church. A church was built some three years ago at Bourg, some distance from Houma, and after being destroyed by a storm was rebuilt, and is the home of a congregation of about a hundred members. Another church has been organized during the present year at Mermentau, on the line between Acadia and Calcasieu parishes. In addition to these new developments, the old center of the French Mission at Lydia, near New Iberia, has grown in numbers, has built a parsonage and rebuilt a church destroyed by a storm. A new congregation has recently been organized as a Second Church in New Iberia.

To summarize the results of the present year, five or six new Sunday schools have been organized in the bounds of our French work, two or three new churches organized, some seventy-five persons received into the Church, and several new preaching points established. A contribution from a generous layman of $150 will result in the building of two churches where new openings have been made. The chief difficulty our missionaries are encountering is in attempting to spread themselves over all the opportunities that are opening to them. The people are ready to hear our gospel, and in some communities the leading people are uniting with our church.

Another significant fact is that the mission is developing a working force on the ground. Brother Martin, the assistant at Houma, is a product of the work. Another consecrated worker, Brother Martin's brother, is willing to go into the work if a man can be put into his field to work his place, which would cost about $20 a month. In addition, there are laymen and women doing excellent work in Sunday schools, etc., and keeping up the work already established.

On the whole, I doubt whether any mission field in our church will show more encouraging results in additions to the Church, in the securing of suitable property basis for future work, or in the hopeful outlook for the future than this work which has often been regarded with skepticism as an attempt to reach an inaccessible people.

By the help of the Lafayette District League, Brother Hebert has been enabled to purchase a tent to be used in reaching communities where no other preaching place can be found. This will be a great aid in the opening of new work, and Brother Hebert's own labors in this field ought to be supplemented by the addition of another helper. By all means, provision ought to be made at once to utilize the services of Brother Martin (brother of our missionary) as a helper in the work of the Houma Mission territory. In addition to these obvious needs, help must be given to erect churches for the new congregations being established.

THE RELIGIOUS COMPLEXION OF THE STATE OF LOUISIANA.

By Rev. J. M. Henry, D.D.

It is very difficult to give accurate figures showing the religious complexion of the State and the city of New Orleans, but the United States Census reports of 1890 and 1906 give us what may be considered a fair basis of comparison, and from this we may make a showing of the relative strength of the various churches in the State.

With an estimated population of 1,540,000 in 1906, we find that 778,900 persons are returned as communicants of the Churches, set out as follows: Roman Catholics, 477,774; Protestants, 298,946. The Protestants are classified as follows: Baptist, 185,554; Methodist, 79,464; Episcopal, 9,070; Presbyterian, 8,350; Lutheran, 5,793; Evangelical, 4,353; Disciples, 2,548; Congregational, 1,773; United Brethren, 361; all others, 3,861. These figures do not purport to give the exact numbers for to-day, but are intended to show the relative strength of the various churches. It will be observed that there is no distinction between white and black, all are included in the figures used in this paper except where otherwise stated.

The census report for 1906 shows that in every one thousand of our population there were 310 Roman Catholics, 194 Protestants, and 2 members of other religious organizations, leaving 494 persons who are not members of any of the churches.

We sometimes ask, Has there been any religious growth in the recent past? There are many who feel that the churches are falling behind and that fewer people are taking interest in religion than in times past; others are optimistic and feel that the churches are making great progress. Census reports cannot give the whole truth on this subject, but the returns may be used as a guide to show the trend of things. And it is in this way that the figures in this paper should be used.

There was a religious census in 1890 and another in 1906; a comparison of these shows some growth for Louisiana. In 1890, in every one thousand of our population there were 358 communicants of the churches; in 1906 there were 506 communicants in every thousand of the population, a gain of 148 communicants in every thousand of the population. In 1890 in every thousand of our population there were 189 Roman Catholics, and in 1906 there were 310, showing a gain of 121 in every thousand of our population. In 1890 there were 165 Protestants in every thousand of our population, and in 1906 there were 194, showing a gain of 29 in every thousand of the population.

The increase in the population and the increase of communicants per thousand of the population accounts for the large increase in the aggregate number of communicants in the State, while the increase of communicants per thousand of the population shows the gains being made upon that part of the population which is not identified with the churches. Louisiana stands well toward the top of the list when it comes to counting communicants of the churches. A comparison of States shows that Louisiana stands fifth in that list. New Mexico is first, with 633 communicants in every thousand of its population; of these 562 are Roman Catholics and 67 are Protestants. Utah is second, with 546 communicants per thousand of its population; of these 26 are Roman Catholics, 26 Protestants, and 494 Latter Day Saints. Rhode Island is third, with 540 communicants per thousand of its population; of these 400 are Roman Catholics and 131 Protestants. Massachusetts is fourth, with 513 communicants per thousand of its population; of these 355 are Roman Catholics, and 148 Protestants. Louisiana is fifth, with 506 communicants in every thousand of its population; of these 310 are Roman Catholics, 194 Protestants. Connecticut is the only other State which has as many as 500 communicants of the churches per thousand of its population.

A comparison of the reports for the various States shows that New Mexico has the largest per cent of Roman Catholics in its population, viz., 562, and North Carolina has the smallest per cent of Roman Catholics in its population, viz., 1 in every thousand of its population. South Carolina has the largest percent of Protestants in its population, viz., 450, and Utah has the smallest per cent of Protestants in its population, viz., 26.

But to return to the consideration of the churches in Louisiana, we find that in every thousand of the population there were in 1906, 310 Roman Catholics, 121 Baptists, 52 Methodists, 6 Episcopalians, 5 Presbyterians, 4 Lutherans, 3 Evangelical, 2 Disciples; 1 Congregationalist; all other Protestants, 1; and 1 for all other bodies.

There were reported 3,855 church organizations in the State of Louisiana, with an average membership of 204. The average amount of property held by each of these organizations is $2,946, with an average indebtedness of $939. The aggregate value of the property held by these organizations is $10,500,000, with an aggregate indebtedness of $689,070.

From the reports above quoted we learn that in 1906 there were 148,579 Roman Catholics, 36,875 Protestants, and 1,043 others, communicants of the churches in the city of New Orleans. This gives a total of 186,497 communicants in all. If the population of the city in 1906 was 330,000 there were probably 240,000 white people and 90,000 negroes in the city. Using this as a basis, we may reasonably figure that there were 143,000 white communicants in the Roman Catholic Church and 5,500 negroes; on the same basis we figure that there were 22,000 white Protestants, and 14,500 negro Protestants. If these guesses are approximately correct, then there were 165,000 white communicants of the churches, and 20,000 negro communicants in the city, leaving 75,000 white and 70,000 negro non-communicants in this city.

There are 117 churches for white people and 97 churches for negroes in the city, making a total of 214. Of these, 46 are Roman Catholic, 158 Protestant. The whole seating capacity of the churches is given at 94,566. The estimated value of church property in the city is $4,378,428, and the estimated debt is $444,706.

In 1880 there were 41,157 foreign born residents in the city; in 1890 there were 34,369, and in 1900 there were 30,325. Of this foreign born population many, we may say most, are Italians.

Another item of interest is the small number of negroes relatively found in the churches.

VACATION VAGARIES.

By Rev. C. W. Carter, D.D.

Dear Timothy: I have had a vacation! "What! A superannuate on a vacation?" "What does he vacate?" Who authorized him to do such an unheard-of thing?" Hold on, my son, and listen. When you receive a letter from a gentleman of good standing in his own community, and well thought-of wherever he is known, containing a check whose financial proportions make your eyes bulge out, and asking you to come and spend a month with him, what would you do? You would do just what I did—buy a round trip ticket, pack your grip and take your departure on the earliest train. I wonder that men and women of means do not use more of their money in this way. What a godsend such a check would be to many a weary shut-in, whose patience is worried to a frazzle by the monotonous humdrum of every-day drudgery. Such a check would be a means of rare happiness to the recipient and would raise a bubble of joy in the heart of the giver. Maybe they never think of it.

The second day after leaving home I was cordially welcomed in the home of my friend, and soon found that it was my home, too. Sometimes you visit homes where you never feel at home. The excessive attentions to supply your wants and even to anticipate your wishes drive away the home feeling. What was kindly intended to make you feel free and easy really hampers all your movements and your freedom flies away. You are a prisoner in bonds which you dare not try to break. True home politeness shows the guest his bed-chamber, points out the sitting room and library, the dining room and the lavatory, and says: "Now make yourself at home." And that means, "Be one of our family." Genuine Christian hospitality is very beautiful in its simplicity and shines upon the pages of the New Testament as one of the most attractive features of the early Church.

My friend is a regular church-goer; so on the Sabbath day he took me to church. The preacher is a graduate of one of the great theological seminaries. The order of service of our Church was followed closely. The sermon was a very good one. The divisions of the subject were strictly logical and the illustrations were appropriate and pertinent; indeed, some of them were so unique as to attract particular attention. The audience, while not large, seemed to be attentive to the preacher and his message. Altogether, it appeared to be a satisfactory service. The next morning I called upon a friend, whose library table is always piled with the latest periodicals. Rummaging among these I picked out the Homiletic Review, and about the first thing I saw was the sermon I had listened to the day before. There it was "in cold type," the text, the divisions, the illustrations, the exhortations, word for word, as I had heard it. Now, Timothy, what do you think of that? Here was a preacher, filling an important station in his Conference, getting up before his people and preaching another man's sermon as his own, for there was no hint from start to close to induce the hearers to think otherwise. We Methodists say that we believe that God calls men to preach, but does He call a man to preach another man's sermon? I see no objection to a preacher using another preacher's sermon if he lets the people know that he is doing it. Indeed, some congregations would be immensely delighted with a change of that sort occasionally, and to some congregations I have heard of, it would be an unspeakable relief. Now, what was the matter with that preacher? I can tell you in one word. He lacked manliness. No manly man will ever do a thing like that. Lack of manliness procures failure everywhere. My son, if you have not the manliness to stand up before your people and preach the gospel in your own words, you had better go to your closet and ask the Lord if he really called you into the pulpit. If you can't get along in the ministry without committing "homiletic piracy," you had better quit. You cannot be a true preacher unless you are a genuine man, and a genuine man won't commit piracy of any sort. I have heard, Timothy, that there are preachers in your Conference who palm off other men's sermons as their own. Such preachers should take a whole day off to ponder over Paul's question: "Thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal?"

In my summer reading I stumbled upon what seems to be a glaring case of "literary piracy." Did you ever see a book called "Georgia Scenes," by Judge A. B. Longstreet? The first "scene" in the book is entitled "Georgia Theatricals," and is a one-man rehearsal of a fist-fight. In reading the "Autobiography of David Crockett," to my great surprise, I found Longstreet's "Georgia Theatricals" imbedded in the body of the book. The only difference is that Crockett located the "scene" in Arkansas instead of Georgia. I am perplexed to know whether Crockett stole it from Longstreet or whether Longstreet stole it from Crockett, or whether both got it from some unknown redactor of past ages. As I can't solve these questions, I turn them over to the Higher Critics, as they seem to be specialists in that line of investigation.

I heard a sermon every Sunday during my vacation period. A connectional man on "The Cloud of Witnesses," taking the same old route all the way through; a Bishop on "We are no longer strangers and foreigners," etc.—a sixty-five minute sermon on a hot August day, and not as good as one I heard on the same subject from a connectional officer thirty years ago; an evangelist on "Tell me thy name," reaching after the conscience in every sentence and probing hearts like a poniard; a fifteen minutes sermon on, "God is in this place," following an introductory service of just one hour. All this shows how wonderful and varied is this "ministry of reconciliation!" God calls men of various talents, and the Church sends them out to do the greatest of all works—to turn men to God. I think a preacher's success lies in the fact that he realizes the responsibility the call lays upon him and resolves to meet it like a true man. I am not one of those who say, "The former days were better than these days." Some writers are constantly bewailing the low state of religion in the churches and wishing there might be a return to the "good old days of the fathers." If these writers would read closely the history of those times they would find the "fathers" sighing for a return of the "good old days of their fathers;" and so back through every generation to the time of Solomon. These writers ought to try to rid themselves of the Greek and Latin spirit, which located the "golden age" in the far past, and adopt the spirit of Christianity, which locates it in the present and declares it is brightening every day. No, Timothy, don't use the backward look too much. It is a snare. Cultivate the hopeful spirit which says, "the world moves and the Church moves, and Christ is on the throne, directing the whole movement."

A GRAND MOVE FOR PEACE.

By Rev. W. S. Harrison.

Our President has concluded with England and France the most important treaty of the ages. It needs only the sanction of the United States Senate to become law. This is the agreement to substitute arbitration for war.

This country and England having lived one hundred years without war, there seemed to be no good reason why they should not continue so to live. The time was ripe for a peace compact. To President Taft belongs the imperishable honor of bringing it about. It began to look like the dream of ages—that dream illuminated by the bright hopes and earnest prayers of saints and sages—is about to be realized.

Far back in antiquity the brightest of God's seers had the vision of universal peace. Micah and Isaiah both record the vision in glowing terms. Their language is practically the same, both probably quoting from a poem of older date: "And he (Jehovah) shall judge many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." (Micah 4:3; Isa. 2:4.)

These men lived at a time when war was almost the universal condition. It was given them by divine foresight to know that in "the last days" the world would be better and wiser; that peace and not war should be the normal condition in all the earth. Since then the Prince of Peace has walked the earth and expounded more clearly the principles of universal brotherhood, and how men can better live in peace and concord, than in war and strife.

The love of peace has grown and spread through the centuries. Of late years, the desire for peace has more than ever become intense. Peace societies have sprung up in all parts of the earth, and the advocates of peace have become more earnest and more hopeful.

Finally the munificent gift of Mr. Andrew Carnegie of $10,000,000 to promote the glorious cause was hailed everywhere by the lovers of peace as a new and mighty force working for the sensible adjustment of international differences. All these things show how powerfully the hope of peace has taken hold of mankind. Surely every thoughtful American must rejoice that the final movement to substitute arbitration for war by actual treaty among nations originated in our own country. What a thrill of joy ran through the world when the glorious compact was finally signed by the great powers!

Then what mortification, what humiliation we Americans felt when such a treaty met with opposition in the United States Senate! What a shame that the Senate finally adjourned without action other than a decidedly unfavorable report from the Committee on Foreign Affairs! The appeal is now to the country. Let the people speak in no uncertain terms. We suggest that every Conference, Quarterly, District and Annual, put itself on record as most decidedly favoring the treaty. Let us hope that our great sister Methodism will, through her many agencies, speak with a voice that must be heard. Why not all denominations come to the front, now that the issue they have been so long pleading and praying for is at hand? It seems to me that city councils and boards of trade throughout the country should speak out with compelling tones before the reassembling of the Senate in December.

A handsome new Methodist Church, built of stone and Gothic in architecture, has been erected in Princeton, facing the Great Presbyterian University. Such a house of worship has long been needed, as many Methodist students annually attend this renowned institution. The dedicatory exercises of this structure began on Wednesday, October 11, with a sermon by Bishop Berry and closed last Sunday.

The New York City Methodist Social Union gave a reception to the delegates to the Ecumenical Conference passing through that city en route to Toronto on Monday evening, October 2. A number of interesting addresses were made by representatives of the various Methodist bodies of the world. To one of these speeches the New York Christian Advocate makes the following reference: "Dr. K. A. Janssen, president of the Theological Seminary at Stockholm, Sweden, stated that while only thirty years ago one of his ministerial friends was imprisoned in a cell for eleven days with rye bread and water for food because of preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ, to-day Methodism has in Sweden 18,000 members, 150 church buildings, 10,000 Epworth Leaguers, 20,000 Sunday school members, 80 self-supporting churches, and raises its full missionary apportionment and 50 per cent additional in special gifts."

REV. SAM HUGH WHATLEY.

In 1869 an old superannuate itinerant found himself fast reaching his end. Calling his son to his bedside, he said: "My son, brush away your tears. For forty-five years I have been preaching up and down this land, and have shown you how to live; now I shall show how a Christian should die. Soon I shall be very happy in my eternal home." Then after a short while, remembering his far-away unsaved boy, he said: "Oh, Lord, have mercy on Sam Hugh and save his soul!" Then quietly he passed to his glorious reward. Thus died Uriah Whatley, for forty-five years an acceptable, honored itinerant in the hill country between Campti and the mouth of Red River (the Red River on the west and the Ouachita on the east).

On Thursday afternoon, October 5, 1911, at 3:25 o'clock p.m., this dying prayer was fully answered, when Rev. S. H. Whatley passed over to meet that glorified father. For twenty-seven years Brother Whatley had been an effective and acceptable itinerant, traveling over the same territory where his father from about 1825 to 1870 had sown the Word. Only ten years intervened between the death of the father and the call of the son, who was admitted into the Louisiana Conference on trial. Brother Whatley served the Rapides Circuit in 1880-81; Colfax Circuit, in 1882-83; Evergreen and Big Cane, the four years ending in 1887; Lecompte and Bayou Boeuff for two years; Caddo Circuit, 1890-91; Pleasant Hill, 1892-93; Prudhomme Circuit, 1894; Indian Bayou, 1895; Gros Tete, 1896; Girard and Colony, four years, 1897 to 1900; East Feliciana Circuit, 1901; Melville Circuit, three years, 1902 to 1904; White Castle, 1905; New Roads, 1906. His health failed from organic trouble, and he was forced to ask for superannuation at 61 years of age. For four years he has labored in and around Rayville, so far as his health would permit.

During his active ministry he wrought well and left behind three churches built during his pastorate. He had no educational advantages, as his school days came on during the Civil War. His residence was near Alexandria, and the whole country was in the stir and wreck of the armies marching and fighting around that city. For the educational opportunities of which he could avail himself, he did well as a preacher. During his service on circuits and in protracted meetings his ministry was rewarded by quite a number of conversions.

He came to his end in full assurance. He grew old without sourness, but happily, cheerfully accepted the providence of God that necessitated his superannuation because of disease. During the last two years he has had periods of great suffering, which were endured without complaining, and with strong, undaunted faith. Among his last words, a few hours before he died, were "Sweet Peace," partially quoting that beautiful song. What a welcome that father gave the son for whom his dying prayer was breathed out almost with his last breath! The father rested from his labors; the son took up the cry ten years after, and for seventy-five years the cry of father and son, "Prepare the way of the Lord," sounded forth through the Louisiana hills and valleys. Now the two rejoice forevermore in the estate of the Lord's blessed, whose death is precious in his sight.

With all powers at hand and availing himself of all opportunities that came his way, we can truly say "he hath done what he could" for his Lord and Master. He was in his sixty-fifth year, after twenty-seven had been lived as an itinerant minister. He leaves five daughters—three married, two single—and three sons—two married and one single. May the father's walk in faith (who has shown his boys how to live and die) be so impressive upon his family, that they may meet him on the other shore, as he already rejoices with his ascended father.

HEAR AND HEED!

Every Mississippian should read Brother Barbee's "Call to Arms," which appeared in a recent number of the Advocate. It would be a calamity for Mississippi to be transferred to the wet column. I hope that I shall not live to see it. I joined the temperance brigade in Alcorn County fifty-two years ago. At that time we had seven open saloons in the town of Corinth, and the drinking and drunkenness was a thousandfold greater then than it is now. Had the vote been taken then the county would have voted wet, two to one. I think at this time they would vote the dry ticket five to one. The change for the better has been wonderful, and how any man who cares for the welfare of humanity can advocate a return to the saloon regime, I cannot understand.

Five years ago we had saloons in Tunica, and blind tigers all over the county, and from forty to sixty prisoners in the jail. Now we have no saloon, but few blind tigers, from two to six prisoners in jail, and one of the best temperance counties in the Delta. And in the town of Tunica a number of brick business houses are being constructed, and it is prospering as never before. Yes, let us fly to arms, and never surrender the great State of Mississippi to the whisky ring.

An interesting incident occurred at the third annual meeting of the State League of Municipalities and Sheriffs' Associations of Mississippi, which convened at Vicksburg on the 10th inst. During the proceedings fifty of the American Boy Scouts of the Hill City filed into the convention hall, and Master Edward Nelson, a bright boy in uniform, by permission, made an eloquent plea for a juvenile reformatory in the State, advancing the view that it would save many youths from becoming criminals and make men of them. His remarks greatly impressed the assemblage, and he was assured by the members of the convention that the full measure of their influence would be exerted upon the next Legislature to bring about the establishment of such an institution. That it is urgently needed, there is not the slightest doubt.

The trial of James B. McNamara, who, with his brother, John J. McNamara, and several other parties, is accused of having blown up the building of the Los Angeles Times with dynamite on October 1, 1910, began in the city of Los Angeles on the 11th inst. Twenty-one men lost their lives when the structure was demolished, and those implicated are charged with murder. The noted criminal lawyer, Clarence S. Darrow, of Chicago, is chief counsel for the defense, and every point in the course of the legal proceedings will be hotly contested. The McNamaras are members of the labor union, and that organization throughout the country, as well as locally, is manifesting a keen interest in the trial. Indeed, the Los Angeles branch of this order has been charged by some with responsibility for the destruction of the Times building—an accusation which its members indignantly resent.

The United Confederate Veterans of Louisiana met at Lake Charles in their annual reunion on October 10. The attendance is reported to have been large, and the occasion a most enjoyable one in every respect. The meeting declared for several amendments to the pension laws of the State: (1) that all veterans over 70 years of age be pensioned regardless of their financial worth; (2) that pensions be allowed the widows of Confederate Veterans, without respect to the date of marriage, and (3) that the law regulating the admission of soldiers in the State Soldiers' Home be so modified as to admit a veteran and his wife. The Mississippi Veterans were also in session last week at Gulfport, where interesting exercises were conducted. The ranks of these heroes who wore the gray are fast thinning, and our State legislatures should deal generously with them and seek to make peaceful and comfortable their declining days.

In an address delivered at the banquet of the Army of Tennessee at Council Bluffs, Iowa, on October 11, Archbishop Ireland strongly opposed "the iniative, referendum, and recall," characterizing such measures as "the madness of democracy." Among other things the distingulshed prelate said: "May we not, it is asked, trust the people? Yes, we trust the people as the framers of the Constitution trusted them, and as they trust themselves when interests other than political are at stake, remitting those interests to men expert in such matters. With the initiative and referendum legislative bodies become mere bureaus of registration and exchange for popular views and opinions. All exclusive authority is lost to them. But the worst is the recall. Stability and independence in office for a fixed time are essentials. Liable to recall, the official is continually watching public opinion, which it is to his interest to placate and hold in check. The perils of the recall are shown when it is extended to the judiciary. If ever independence from popular clamor is imperiously demanded, it is when men are bidden to speak in the name of supreme justice, regardless of consequences to persons or parties; when absolute calmness of mind and the deepest study are prerequisites to a decision." With this utterance of Archbishop Ireland, we are in heartiest sympathy. To make our government an unbridled democracy, without judicious checks and restraints, is to repudiate the teachings of Washington and Jefferson, and to abandon the Constitution, which for more than a century has been the wonder and admiration of the best statesmanship of the world.

Concerning Missions.

Dear Fellow-Workers: October is here, and with it comes the realization that this month ushers in the last quarter of our fiscal year. Because of the change which was made by the Board of Missions our year's work will end January 1, instead of March 1, as formerly. This change has, as you know, given us twelve months' work to do in nine months.

It is to be hoped that every auxiliary has had a full report for the quarters already passed; but if it has not there is much work to be done. Let each member of every auxiliary look into the matter and make it of personal interest to see that her auxiliary is paid up in full. We have given our word of honor to pay the pledges made by our delegates at the Conference. Let's make good our word if we have to wear our last winter's suits and trim over last winter's hats. We need to make some sacrifices, as does the missionary who is leaving home and loved ones to follow her work.

There is another reason, too, for paying up our pledges in full—this is the Lord's work. It requires immediate attention. The needs of mission work are growing daily; the line of workers is growing longer. If several auxiliary pledges are left unpaid, some faithful laborer somewhere is handicapped and perhaps has to fall out of line. Let us each resolve that our auxiliary shall not be a hindrance to this cause, if we can help it. And we can help it if we will. We can pay our own dues and pledges; then if there is some one to whom misfortune has come and she will not be able to pay her part, let several others, clubbing together, make a special effort and pay it for her.

October is important for another reason, too, as most of you know by this time. It is the month when the campaign for new members is to begin. This movement is interdenominational; but Methodist women should not only join in the work, but if possible take the lead. If another denomination has taken the lead in your town, then join in, but if no campaign has been launched it is time for you to lend out. There are several leaflets I know of that will be helpful in explaining this work. Two of these I will mention: "Why the Campaign?" published by the Board of Missions, of the M. E. Church, South. There is also the "Bulletin for the Campaign to be Undertaken by the Woman's Board of Missions During October," issued by the Central Committee on the United Study of Missions. Both can be ordered from our Board in Nashville, Tenn. If you have not received these leaflets already, order them and organize the campaign in your town as early as possible.

While you are seeking members find subscribers for the "Missionary Voice" and the "Young Christian Worker." We must make an extra effort to swell the subscription lists of these papers, upon which we depend for missionary news.

Some auxiliaries forget and let the Week of Prayer slip by unobserved. Does yours ever do that? It is to be hoped that it does not. But, "lest we forget," let us think now and plan for observing in November the week which has been set apart for that purpose. Let your thank offering fund begin to grow now, if it didn't begin long ago, in order that when all funds are put together the special work to which this offering is to be given may prosper.

Those of you who were at the conference in Jackson know that Miss Jessie Mounger was to enter the Scarritt Training School this fall, but perhaps did not know that Miss Olive Lipscomb, daughter of our conference president, is attending this school, too. Reports from these two missionary candidates are that they are happy in their work.

The money for Miss Mounger's expenses is coming in fairly well, so I am told; but there are auxiliaries that have not contributed to this fund. See if yours has, and if not, urge that the money be sent immediately to the secretary of your district.

Yours for the work, MRS. O. S. LEWIS, Press Superintendent.

Brandon, Miss.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE OF MISSISSIPPI.

Mississippi Prohibitionists are Organizing for Self-defense.

Rev. G. W. Eichelberger, D.D., recently appointed State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in Mississippi, reached Jackson last week and is now at work. Dr. Eichelberger comes from Forth Worth, Texas, where he has been three years District Superintendent of the League, his district being 600 by 200 miles in size, and still not including one-fourth of the State.

He says: "The Anti-Saloon League is non-partisan, non-factional and interdenominational. It belongs to no one church or party—not even to the Prohibition party—but it belongs to all churches and works through all parties. It is the Church in action against the liquor traffic. It has but two aims: (1) the destruction of the saloon; and (2) the elimination of the illegal sale of liquor." The Anti-Saloon League is the blind tiger's deadliest foe. From all over Mississippi letters have been pouring into headquarters asking that the League organize this State to keep it from going back to local option and to the saloon, like Alabama.

The headquarters called on Mr. Eichelberger to come to Mississippi and take charge of the work. He says he did not like leaving Texas just now at this stage of the fight there; but the call was so urgent that he yielded to the superior judgment of the higher officials in the League, and he is now getting the situation in hand.

His first purpose is to organize every county in the State and every voting precinct, and thus have a chain of committees for "Law Enforcement." This law enforcement will play an important part in the work of the League, being handled by trained men. This organization accomplishes several purposes: (1) it puts the Mississippi liquor seller in jail or at work on the county farm; (2) it creates a moral sentiment for high citizenship; (3) it engenders a healthy political condition; and (4) it brings pressure to bear on legislation for wholesome laws. Just now Mr. Eichelberger says, one law will help Mississippi very much—a law making it a felony, with from one to three years in the penitentiary, for selling booze. He says prohibition surely does prohibit in first-class style where this felony law is in vogue.

The League's headquarters will be in Jackson, and the Jackson people are taking hold of the work with a determined purpose. Concerning the new superintendent, Rev. Dr. J. H. Gambrell, the State Superintendent of the League in Texas, says:

"Speaking for my associates and myself, we exceedingly regret to lose Dr. Eichelberger's services in Texas. He is well equipped, has a clear understanding of Anti-Saloon methods, and is wholly trustworthy. I wish to bear testimony to his industry, faithfulness and efficiency. All the pulpits in the State ought to be open to him without hesitancy."

Rev. S. L. Rieves, Presbyterian pastor, Fort Worth, Texas, says: "I am a member of the Anti-Saloon League trustees and also a member of the executive committee, and therefore know of Mr. Eichelberger's work. He is conservative, yet aggressively bold. In law enforcement, in creating and solidifying public sentiment for prohibition he has no superior within the range of my knowledge. He is rated among the very best and is in great demand in Texas. In the pulpit he is conservative and spiritual, and on the platform a terror to saloons and law violators."

Rev. F. P. Buchanan, a Methodist pastor, says: "From start to finish during his one hour's address, he pelted the liquor traffic; yet no one became offended, so considerate was he of other men's views."

Dr. Eichelberger says a concerted move on the part of the churches of Mississippi will soon silence the threats of the liquor dealers in Cincinnati, St. Louis and New Orleans to so over-run Mississippi with beer and whisky that the people will get tired of prohibition.

He quotes from a paper published in the North last week, as follows:

"Liquor Men at Work in Mississippi."

"It is said that a movement is being quietly placed on foot to start an agitation for the repeal of the state-wide prohibition law in Mississippi. It is said the measure contemplates wiping out the statute enacted four years ago and a return of the local-option system. The prohibition forces of Mississippi will immediately get in readiness for the contest, and if the matter is stirred up it will be done by outside liquor interests."

Mr. Eichelberger says that Mississippi prohibitionists have smelled powder before, and that there is in their veins the blood to meet this enemy on the field and drive him into the Gulf, and help to preserve the South from the greatest iniquity ever known to mankind. He starts this week organizing the counties and doing other work looking to the elimination of the blind tigers, and the routing of the booze sellers. His permanent Post Office address is, Anti-Salcon League, Jackson, Miss.

PROHIBITIONIST.

DR. TALLEY AND THE MISSION TO THE CHOCTAWS.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

In the last issue of the Christian Advocate (Nashville), some one, writing under the caption, "Methodist Missions to the Indian Tribes of the South," contributes a paragraph on the work of Dr. Alexander Talley among the Choctaws. The writer states that Dr. Talley was appointed to this work at the Conference of 1827, which we find, according to Jones' History of Methodism, was held in the city of Natchez. The writer further states that "six hundred members were reported at the end of the second year," and that at the time of the moving of the tribe to the Indian Territory there were 3,000 members in the Mission. Inasmuch as the Grand Council of the Choctaw Nation met in 1828 to discuss the removal of the nation to the Indian Territory, which resulted in the "Treaty of Dancing Rabbit" in 1830, we conclude that these figures apply to the work among the Indians up to that period. In his History, Mr. Jones says that at the Conference, which was held in Tuscaloosa, Ala., in 1828 four hundred Indians were reported, and that during the next year the net increase among the Choctaws was 2,843 (in addition to the four hundred returned at the last Conference).

Thus it will be seen that there is some discrepancy between the figures of the writer in the Advocate and our Conference historian. Inasmuch as the Rev. Mr. Jones was then a member of some years' standing in the Mississippi Conference, we are rather inclined to accept his figures, and thereby give to our Indian contingency a membership of 3,243.

Dr. Talley, the wonderfully successful leader in this remarkable movement, is represented as a "highly cultivated man, a minister and a physician, and reared among the wealthy and refined." At this time he had been in the ministry nineteen years, occupying the pulpits of stations, and for a term presiding elder. "All this," says the historian, "he exchanged for Indian wilds, often sleeping upon the ground, with no covering but a cloth tent, with coarse fare and coarser associations." From the record of this gifted man, it may be written of him as of Saul of Tarsus, that he was a chosen vessel to bear the name of the Lord to the Gentiles.

The hardships resulting from such exposure were too great for his strength, and at the end of 1834 he was compelled to give up his loved work. His last work was to establish a mission among the English settlers near the city of New Orleans, where his health broke completely down. Because of declining health, he set out for the northwest, but was taken violently ill before reaching Vicksburg, where he died after only a few hours, saying, as he was about to breathe his last: "My work on earth is done; I am going to receive my reward." And who can tell the glories of that reward! "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it unto me." Such was the service of Alexander Talley, the Eliot of the Southwest. Many names of men and places in our State have been given a greater permanency because of their association with this judge in Israel. In my boyhood at school, in the village of Sharon, in Madison County, I learned of Doak's Stand, the Robertson Road, Offahoma Postoffice, and Red Dog ferry, across Pearl River, all associated with that county, and in late years of the Yokanookana River, French Camps and the remarkable family of Leflores, from which one county in our State takes its name—these and others made immortal because of their association with the name of the apostle to the Choctaws.

The Rev. Mr. Jones, in his History of Methodism in Mississippi, says that he was buried in the old cemetery in the eastern part of the city of Vicksburg. "But no man knoweth his sepulchre unto this day."

A FITTING REPLY.

(The following is the copy of a letter from the agent of the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad Company, at Maxie, Miss., who also is superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school at that place, to a whisky house in this city. It throws some light on the business methods of the liquor dealers.)

Maxie, Miss., Oct. 10, 1911

United Liquor Store,
New Orleans, La.

Gentlemen: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your proposition of the 9th inst. to pay me one cent a name for a correct list of names, with their post-offices or R. F. D. numbers, of parties who buy whisky—you agreeing to pay me in cash, or merchandise, as you term it (I construe the latter to mean whisky). I desire to say for your information that I have received numerous letters of this type from different whisky houses, and possibly from you several before this one of the 9th inst.; and that without exception they have been passed into the wastebasket or stove and given no reply. I wish to state to you that I do not use whisky in any form; therefore I would have no use for the merchandise, as you are pleased to call it. If I should earn and accept the goods which you offer, I certainly could not give it to any brother who is in the habit of drinking intoxicants, since God's holy Word declares, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink and that putteth thy bottle to him!" And I want to be plain and say that I believe this applies to all of you saloon men (I mean owners and clerks combined), and that at the final judgment you will have to give an account for every drink that you have handed out to your fellow-men. And I want you to realize that, so long as I remain in my present state of mind, there is no use for you to put yourself to the trouble and expense of trying to get me to act as your local whisky agent. I have been agent at this place over eleven years and have never accepted a dollar of commission from any saloon as pay for soliciting for it. Yours very truly,

W. L. YEATES.

A STORY WITH A MORAL.

There is a story told of a chaplain in the army who, as he was going over the field after battle, saw a wounded soldier lying on the ground and said to him:

"Would you like me to read you something from the Bible?"

"I would rather have a drink of water."

The water was quickly brought. After he drank it he said:

"Could you lift my head a little higher?"

The chaplain took off his overcoat, rolled it into a pillow and tenderly put it beneath the man's head.

"I am so cold," moaned the man; "if I only had something over me."

The chaplain took off his other coat and spread it over the man. As he did so the suffering man looked up and said:

"For God's sake, if there is anything in that Book that will make a man do for another what you have done for me, let me hear it."

What the world most needs is witnesses and not advocates—men like the chaplain in the above story; men who are as ready to live beautiful principles as they are to talk about them.—Methodist Laymen's Herald.

THE NEW NEIGHBOR.

"Mamma," cried Louise, running in from play one day, "some one is moving into the big house."

"Is that so?" said Mamma Baker, smiling.

"Yes, and they have a little girl about my size, and I saw her sitting on the porch."

"Well, that is nice. You will have a little girl to play with now."

"Yes, but they are rich, and have such nice things, and the little girl has such a nice dress. I don't think she will want to play with me. I 'spect she's stuck-up."

"You must not say that, dear. You must not judge too soon," said mamma, gently. Mrs. Baker turned to her sewing and Louise ran out to watch the little girl at the big house.

Every day she had something to say of the new girl, but she did not like her any better than at first.

"Mamma, I just can't stand that girl," she would say. "She is so proud of her nice dresses and pretty playthings."

"You do not know her well yet. You will like her better when you know her," her mother would say.

"No, I won't. I don't think I will ever like her."

One day about a week later it had been raining all morning, and Louise had to stay indoors. But it stopped about noon, and she went out to see the pretty rainbow that spanned the western skies. Directly she came running in, carrying a pretty white kitten, which was very wet.

"Oh, mamma," she cried, "look at this pretty kitty! isn't it pretty? May I have it for my own, mamma?"

"Yes, dear, if you cannot find the owner. It may be some one's pet, you know, who wants it as much as you do."

Louise's face fell.

"I want to keep it," she pouted.

"Well, at any rate," said mamma, cheerfully, "you may keep it until it is dry, and then you had better take it to the big house. I expect it belongs to that little girl."

Louise had thought of that, too, but she would not say so, for she wanted to keep it. She made a nice warm bed for it by the stove, and every little while she would run back to look at it. Every time she looked at it she wanted to keep it that much more. But she knew she must obey her mamma, and so, when it was quite dry she put on her cloak, and, taking it in her arms, walked slowly and sorrowfully toward the big house.

An hour later she ran in, with hair flying and cheeks glowing. "Oh, mamma, I have had the loveliest time! The kitty was May's, and she was so glad to get it. She said it had been gone all morning and she just cried and cried because she could not find it. And, mamma, she is crippled and can't run and play, but has to sit in a chair all day. But she is just as sweet as can be and has so many pretty things, but she is not one bit stuck up."

"What did I tell you?" said mamma, smiling. "Did I not tell you, you would like her when you knew her?"

"Yes, mamma, and she said her uncle has some kitties just like hers, and she is going to get me one, and she wants me to come to see her every day. Mamma, I will never call anybody 'stuck-up' again."—Dixie Girl.

FAIR AND SQUARE.

By Sidney Dare.

"There they go! Just my luck!"

Robert, busy dusting shelves in the china store in which he was employed, turned with a dismayed face at the sound of a crash behind him. The sound had reached others, too, and Mr. Carter, his employer, came with an angry face.

"How did that happen?" he asked, sharply.

"I s'pose I piled 'em up in a hurry, and left them too near the edge of the shelf. I'm sorry——"

"What's the use of being sorry? This makes about five breakages you've had in the month you've been here, hey?"

"I guess it does," said Robert ruefully.

"Well, that's too many for me. It's a good thing these are cheap stuff, but it might have been fine china and it would have been just the same with you. I guess you'd better get work somewhere else."

It was hard on Robert, for he feared it would be difficult to find another situation; and this fear was justified as he walked weary miles without finding a storekeeper who was in need of a clerk.

One afternoon, as he passed by his old place, he saw, within, the proprietor of the store much interested in showing a lady a set of china displayed in a window. The interview seemed about at an end, for she soon came out and Robert was unable to judge whether she had or had not bought the set.

He walked slowly on for a few moments in deep thought; then he turned and made his way back to the store.

"Mr. Jackson, I just stepped in to tell you that two pieces of china in that set have little cracks," he said. "They don't show unless you look close, but there they are. I knocked two pieces together when I was moving them."

Mr. Jackson looked at the boy for a few moments before speaking. "Why did you come and tell me this?" he asked at length.

"Well, I thought I wouldn't at first. I thought it didn't make much difference to you, because likely nobody would see the cracks. But as I thought more of it, I thought it would make a difference to me. My father used to talk a good deal to me about always being fair and square. He said it was worse for the one that did a tricky thing than for the one you did it to."

"Then," as Mr. Jackson waited Robert went on, "some one who bought that set might see the cracks and blame you. Or you might have another boy and blame it on him, and that wouldn't be fair and square on him. So I thought I'd better let you know. When I get another job I'll pay the damage just as soon as I can."

"Walt," said Mr. Jackson, as Robert, thinking all was said that need be said, was turning to go. "What's the reason," he went on, half laughing, "that you can't keep those clumsy hands of yours in better order?"

"I don't know, I'm sure," Robert shook his head. "They have a way of going at things with a rush, and first thing I know they bring me into trouble. But I guess I'll have to train 'em down, and I mean to. Good morning."

"Stay," said the other. "I've had a good deal to do with boys and I wish they all felt as you do about the 'fair and square' business. They don't, more's the pity. But I think I'd rather run my risks on one of that sort, even if he does happen to have hands that seem all made of thumbs; so, if you want to come back, we'll try it again."—The Young Christian Soldier.

OUR LAYMEN ARE MARCHING ON.

(Air: Battle Hymn of the Republic.)

By Rev. J. F. Jernigan, Marked Tree, Ark.

All hail the laymen's movement, it's the coming of the Lord,
Proclaiming life, salvation, to a benighted world,
Diffusing light and knowledge, through the medium of his Word—
Our laymen are marching on.

Chorus—
Glory, glory, hallelujah,
Glory, glory, hallelujah,
Glory, glory, halielujah,
Our laymen are marching on.

The gospel ship is sailing on the waters, deep and wide,
With peace, good will, salvation across the surging tide,
And Jesus is our Captain—the ship he'll surely guide.
Our laymen are marching on.

His grace will be sufficient for every battle cry;
We'll take this world for Jesus, or in the fight we'll die,
And when the work is ended, we'll go home to God on high.
Our laymen are marching on.

So come along and join us, ye halting, doubtful men,
And do this work for Jesus, and do it to the end.
And when the task is finished, we'll hear the glad Amen.
Our laymen are marching on.

WHERE ARE YOU GOING?

No one is responsible for being on the public highway of life, but we are responsible for where we are going. We shall be held personally responsible for the point at which we shall arrive finally. I have often thought that if a young person could, at the very outset of his journey, get that idea firmly fixed in his mind, we would have fewer failures. Too many young people, I fear, just drift out aimlessly, as it were, and with the thought that somehow they will be taken up and landed at the haven of success. I have long ago come to the conclusion that the best teacher we have in our schools to-day is the one who can best impress upon the heart and the mind of the pupil the belief that he is somebody; that he stands for something, and that he can make the world respect and honor him; but that "it is simply up to him" to bring such a thing to pass. Never mind whether the teacher is a great scholar or not, if he (or she) possesses this one qualification of making the pupil realize what he is, and who he is; that he is headed along the highway of life, and that by his own course and action the success of life must come. "That we are the architects of our own fortune" is an old saying, but the idea is nevertheless the true one. "Where are you going?" "Quo vadis" (whither bound)? Let us sing that doctrine to the youth of the land. Let the preacher preach it; let the teacher teach it, and let the parents instill it into the hearts of our boys and girls. W. A. BELK.

OUR LOUISIANA MISSION PROBLEMS.

We devote a considerable part of this issue to a discussion of New Orleans and Southwest Louisiana as a mission field. We urge our readers to peruse carefully the excellent papers of Brothers Coleman, Drake, and Henry, and to reflect earnestly upon the facts and figures which they present. That we have here one of the most important and inviting opportunities for evangelical enterprise within the bounds of Southern Methodism, is true beyond question. There are thousands of people in New Orleans who are connected with no church, and our work among the 250,000 French-speaking people of Louisiana, though we are probably doing more than any other Protestant denomination, is pitifully small. Methodism cannot shirk the responsibility of doing her utmost to give the gospel to these unevangelized thousands who are easily within her reach. She is spending large sums of money in the Middle and Far West and in Southern Florida, and is pushing forward her battle line in many far-away fields across the seas. This is well—not by one jot or tittle would we have her abate her activity anywhere. "The world is our parish," and wherever the white harvest fields wave, it is our duty to put in the sickle and gather precious sheaves for the Master. But we should not have the far-sightedness which enables us to see only the distant open door. There are some who seem less able to discover the near-by duty than any other. For instance, they grow enthusiastic over missions to the negro in Africa, but care little for the spiritual destitution of the thousands of the black race beneath our own flag.

We desire to call special attention to that part of Brother Drake's article which shows that our work in the French mission field has been fruitful and successful. The spirit which is disposed to balk at the task of undertaking the evangelization of this element of our population is unworthy of the spiritual sons of Wesley, who have won triumphs for our Lord in all lands and among all races. We believe it is true of Louisiana to-day, as Hugh Price Hughes said it was of England, that a majority of the people belong to the Church that has the grit and grace to go after them.

But the mission problems of this State are, as we have said before, too large to be handled by a single Annual Conference. They belong to the whole Church. The General Board of Missions has recognized this fact and has been giving assistance for some years. But a vastly larger movement needs to be projected if we are to even remotely measure up to our opportunities. We are, therefore, glad that we are to have with us next week a Commission from the General Board of Missions to inspect this field with a view to seeing what can be done to expand the work here. We trust that out of this conference there will be evolved plans that will mark the beginning of a new era for New Orleans Methodism, and which will ultimately extend our missionary activities to every part of the commonwealth of Louisiana where the gospel has not already been carried.

THE FOURTH ECUMENICAL METHODIST CONFERENCE.

This body, which met in the Metropolitan Methodist Church, Toronto, Canada on October 4, according to announcement, and which adjourned Tuesday of this week, was a truly great gathering. Practically all of the five hundred appointed delegates were present at the opening of the Conference, which was evidence of the deep interest felt in the meeting, since the representatives had to bear their own expenses, which, in many instances, amounted to a considerable sum. The Central Christian Advocate estimates the cost of travel to reach the Conferenece and that of entertainment while there at $95,000, and the average expense of the Western delegates at $100, and that of those from the Eastern section at $250. That the body embraced many men of renowned scholarship and conspicuous ability, needs not to be said. No other branch of the Christian Church surpasses Methodism in the learning and eloquence of its ministry and the intelligence and moral worth of its laity. In the Toronto assembly there were preachers, educators, journalists, financiers, lawyers, and public men who rank with the best to be found anywhere. The personnel of the body, in point of intellectual equipment, would compare most favorably with any national parliament in the world.

The sitting of the Conference covered a period of approximately two weeks. Three sessions were held daily; all prepared papers were limited to twenty minutes and the set addresses to ten minutes. Each session was thrown open for a general impromptu discussion before adjournment, no speaker being allowed to consume over five minutes. So many brilliant and noteworthy addresses were made that we cannot begin to mention them. The opening sermon was preached by the Rev. Henry Haigh, of the British Wesleyan Church, whose text was Matthew 9:36-38. Of him and his effort the Northwestern Christian Advocate says: "Mr. Haigh is not an orator as that word is understood with us; he talks as man to man, and talks well. His voice is light, but it is clear and carries well, and his pronunciation is clean-cut and musical. In appearance and delivery he is not altogether unlike Mr. Roosevelt; that is, if one can imagine a gentle, refined, and idealized Mr. Roosevelt."

No delegate attracted more attention or impressed the Conference more than Dr. W. H. Fitchett, the distinguished preacher, author, and educator from Australia. The Daily Christian Guardian says that he was perhaps the most famous member of the great assemblage. On the second day he read a most striking and luminous essay on "The Place of Methodism in the Church Universal," and occupied the pulpit of the Metropolitan Church on the evening of the first Sabbath of the Conference. The terse, epigrammatic sentences for which he is noted characterized his utterances at Toronto, and are now being very generally quoted by the Church press.

Our own representatives acquitted themselves most creditably. Bishop Hoss delivered one of the addresses of welcome and carried the audience with him from start to finish, often evoking hearty and prolonged applause. Dr. Mann, of the Central Methodist Advocate, who is on the ground, says he also electrified the body in the extemporaneous discussions; that "he seemed to hold the first place among the representatives from our Church, and was one of the foremost figures of the whole Conference." Bishop Hendrix also made several addresses and produced a fine impression. The Christian Guardian thus refers to him: "Bishop Hendrix took Bishop Kilgo's place on the program Thursday morning at a very short notice and spoke most effectively, without a note, on a set subject. In appearance, voice and manner, he is every inch a Bishop." Bishop Wilson presided at the first business session of the Conference, and was complimented along with a number of other noted men with an honorary degree from Victoria University. Bishop Candler was down for one of the Conference sermons, but at this writing a report of his message has not reached us. Bishop Denny, Dr. DuBose, Dr. Ainsworth and other of our delegates participated freely in the general discussions, showing themselves to be fluent and effective off-hand speakers.

Of the developments of the great Conference, we cannot write now. It disclosed the fact that Methodists are yet essentially one in doctrine and spirit all around the world, and it showed unmistakably that its various branches are yet vigorous and bearing fruit. Still the note of warning was not lacking. In his address discussing the status of Methodism in the Western Section, Dr. H. K. Carroll pointed out the startling fact that, though Methodism in America is growing, it is with a diminishing ratio; that the gain in the decade ending in 1891 was 33 per cent; in that ending in 1901, 28 per cent, and in the last decade only 15 per cent. He declared that Methodism is still "Christianity in earnest," but with less emphasis on "earnest." Let us hope that the influence of the great gathering, just adjourned, may tend to restore that emphasis. Wesleyans everywhere would doubtless be profited if they would read and ponder well the following wise words of Bishop Hoss in his welcome address: "O brethren, while we need intellectual enlargement and social stimulus, and many other blessings, we need most of all the direct touch of God upon us, the vision of his uplifted Face, and the sound of his sweet, forgiving Voice. If this experience should ever become wanting or scarce, then we shall have no further justification for our existence as an organized body of Christians."

PLAGIARISM.

The statement of Dr. C. W. Carter, in his excellent article appearing in this issue of the Advocate, that while recently out of the State on a vacation he attended a religious service and heard a very prominent minister deliver a sermon which subsequently he discovered to have been taken from the Homiletic Review, is startling and humiliating. How one who claims to have been divinely called to the work of the ministry, and who affects to stand for what is highest and best in ideals and conduct, can stoop to the practice of such deception, is difficult to understand. Yet, if we are to believe what we hear, instances of this occur more frequently than we like to admit. Whether justly or unjustly, there are in nearly every Conference one or two men against whom such charges are whispered. Perhaps they do not know it; yet they continue to be talked about under cover. Our preachers need to exercise the utmost care as to how they use borrowed matter. No man can practice plagiarism and escape being caught. Perhaps at the very moment he feels most certain that no one suspects him, he is being generally talked about in secret. This offense is very grave, and no sort of specious reasoning should be allowed to blind us to this fact. Literary theft does not differ in moral quality from other kinds of stealing. The truth is, when a brother is found masquerading in borrowed plumage, he ought at once to be remonstrated with, and if necessary arrainged. This, of course, would be an unpleasant thing to do, but the moral standard of the ministry should be maintained, no matter what the cost. When one preacher bears himself unworthily, it hurts all who are engaged in the high and holy calling.

REVIVAL AT CARROLLTON AVENUE.

Rev. Abe Mulkey, the well known Texas evangelist, will begin a series of revival services at the Carrollton Avenue Church of this city on Friday evening, October 27. Mr. Mulkey is a revivalist of remarkable power, and has conducted some of the most successful meetings ever held in the South. God has been signally honoring his work for years, and he has led thousands to Christ. Like Sam Jones, Mulkey is unique and inimitable—no one else is like him. Those who hear him once, will be certain to hear him again. Brother Snelling and his worthy flock have been looking forward to this meeting for several weeks and getting things in readiness for it. We pray that they may indeed have a gracious season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. They extend a cordial invitation to the Christian people of New Orleans, and particularly to the Methodist pastors and congregations of the city, to attend the services and co-operate in the work of winning souls for the Master.

A CORRECTION.

In our editorial, "An Example of Moral Courage," which appeared in the Advocate last week, in referring to the course of the Mississippi Legislature toward Senator Lamar in 1878, we were made to say: "Disobeying the instructions, when the first phase of the question was passed upon, Mr. Lamar voted in the negative. Bruce voted for it, and this led the Legislature to adopt a resolution condemning Mr. Lamar." The last sentence is erroneous. What we wrote was this: "Bruce voted for it, and this led the Legislature to adopt a resolution conmending him, and by implication condemning Mr. Lamar." The body did not condemn Mr. Lamar, except in an implied manner. The mistake was due to removing the wrong line in making a correction.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Robert Downer, who has been spending some weeks at Barlow, Miss., has returned to Jackson, Miss., where he may now be addressed by correspondents at Well's Avenue, near North State St.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb began last Sunday a meeting at Lexington, Miss., for which he had made considerable preparation. He has with him the well known evangelist, Dr. A. C. Holder, of Shreveport, La.

Rev. E. C. Guice is pleased with the outlook on the Simsboro Circuit, Louisiana Conference. He says: "The work is progressing favorably, and I feel sure that we will have one of the best reports in the history of the charge."

Revival services are in progress at 25th Avenue Methodist Church, Gulfport, Miss. Rev. M. L. Burton is being assisted by local pastors. Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of North Mississippi, will take the lead in preaching this week.

Hon. T. M. Evans, District Lay Leader, held a Laymen's Meeting at Salem, Miss., during the camp meeting. The preachers at the camp meeting were Brothers Yeager, Bowman, Griffin, Roberts, and the presiding elder, W. B. Jones. The meeting lasted four days.

In a personal note to the publisher, Rev. H. T. Carley, who is now teaching in Centenary College, adds: "I like my work here very much. The college is full to overflowing, and Dr. Hill says the opening was better than that of any previous year. The outlook is most encouraging."

Dr. W. H. LaPrade, as is usual with him, is having a most successful pastorate at Central Church, Meridian. He is both a good pastor and an able preacher. As a helpful expositor of the Scriptures, he has few superiors in the Church. He will be the host of the Mississippi Conference this fall.

Mr. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., accompanied by Mrs. Bingham, attended the Ecumenical Conference at Toronto, to which he was a delegate. In a letter home soon after the great assembly began its work, he expressed himself as particularly pleased with the impression made by Bishops Hendrix and Hoss.

President A. B. Peters, of Mansfield College, was in the city last week, and paid the Advocate office an appreciative call. He represents Mansfield as having one of the best sessions in the history of the institution, and the outlook as exceptionally bright. The attendance is far in excess of that of last year.

Rev. J. W. Raper, of Byhalia, Miss., lets no opportunity pass to extend the circulation of the Advocate among his people. Every now and then he forwards us an additional name to be placed on our subscription list. He is rounding out a good year, and expects to make a creditable showing at Macon in December.

Rally Day was celebrated at the First Methodist Church, of Jackson, Miss., on October 8. This congregation continues to enjoy prosperity under the pastorate of Dr. A. F. Smith, whom no one names but to praise. The Sunday school, of which Brother J. C. Cavett is superintendent, is one of the largest and best organized in the State.

We are in receipt of a copy of the program of the Twenty-eighth Annual Convention of the Mississippi Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which opened its session at New Albany this morning and will continue through next Sunday. It presents an attractive order of exercises, and doubtless the occasion will prove to be one of much interest.

A letter from Rev. L. C. Cain, the pastor, brings the news of a fine revival at Baldwyn, Miss., where he had the assistance of Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of West Point. There were 21 accessions on profession of faith and 6 by certificate. A more extended account of this season of refreshing from Brother Cain's pen will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

Both the First Church and Rayne Memorial, of this city, observed "Rally Day last Sunday. Large audiences were present, and the exercises at both places were impressive and enjoyable. At Rayne the principal address was made by Prof. J. M. Gwin, superintendent of the public schools of New Orleans, who spoke on "The Qualities Necessary to Make a Good Man."

Rev. H. R. Singleton, of the Shreveport District, is magnifying his office. He preached 42 times during the month of August, and states that he expects to keep equally busy during the remaining weeks of the Conference year. He informs us that Bishop Mouzon has promised to spend Sunday, October 22, in Shreveport, and that plans are being formed to make his visit a memorable one.

Rev. Paul Brown, the popular presiding elder of the Alexandria District, is on double duty these days, since he is taking care of the Alexandria Station in addition to his work of supervision. This taxes him considerably, but he is used to hard work and enjoys it. It takes more than an ordinary man to fill acceptably an important district and a responsible pastoral charge at the same time.

Rev. N. E. Joyner occupied the pulpit of Parker Memorial Church last Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and delivered an interesting discourse from the text, "Let your light so shine before men that others may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in heaven." "Old Folks' Day" will be celebrated by this congregation next Sunday, when the Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor of Felicity Street Church, will preach.

Prof. W. H. Smith, of Durant, Miss., has resigned the presidency of the Mississippi State Normal College, to which he was elected a few months ago, giving as his reason that he feels it his duty to continue his present work as Supervisor of Elementary Rural Schools (on the Peabody Foundation). It is reported that there will be a large number of applicants for the position made vacant by Prof. Smith's resignation.

The Commission representing the General Board of Missions, which has an engagement to visit this city next week, is expected to arrive next Tuesday morning. It is composed of the following persons: Bishop Collins Denny, Bishop Mouzon, Dr. W. F. McMurry, Dr. John M. Moore, Dr. O. E. Brown, Miss Belle Bennett, and Mrs. R. W. MacDonnell. The meetings of the Commission will be held at the First Methodist Church.

Rev. J. T. Leggett, of the Brookhaven District, is not much given to chronicling his achievements, but he is a "doer" notwithstanding. The pastors associated with him in the work believe in him, and let no opportunity pass to commend his faithfulness and efficiency. We were pleased to hear Brother Leggett say some time since that the charges under his supervision are holding up well despite the ravages of the boll weevil.

Rev. J. A. Alford, of Selma, La., reports that the labor troubles existing in that section of the State have hindered the progress of the work in his charge somewhat, but that notwithstanding everything is moving on smoothly, and that he expects to be able to make a good showing at Conference. We are indebted to Brother Alford for some subscribers recently sent to the Advocate, for which we extend him our hearty thanks.

Though he has scarcely got his campaign under way, Rev. H. M. Ellis has already succeeded in securing $25,000 in cash and subscriptions for the Tri-State Methodist Hospital, which is to be located in Memphis. Brother Ellis is the right man in the right place, and we expect to see this needed enterprise go steadily forward under his efficient leadership. Let the brethren in the co-operating Conferences lend a hand to this movement as opportunity offers.

Our pastor at Hammond, Rev. R. S. Walton, reports a gracious revival at that place which closed on October 10. It was conducted by Rev. D. E. Kelley, evangelist of the Mississippi Conference, and profoundly stirred the community. There were 45 additions to the Church, ranging in age from 6 to 80 years. Brother Walton has kindly sent us an account of this most interesting meeting, which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but which will appear next week.

In a business note to the publisher, Mr. K. T. Moore, of Hattiesburg, says: "I notice that you recently spent a day with Grandma Catchings, at Georgetown, Miss. She is a dear lady. I stop there as often as I can; when drummers are at her table she always returns thanks when the meal is spread. I love her for that." Brother Moore is not the only one who appreciates piety and a recognition of God's goodness. Nothing is more winsome than a consistent Christian life, which exemplifies at all times the spirit of the Master.

Information has reached us of the illness of Col. J. M. Johnson, one of the leading citizens of Holmes County, at his home near Acona, Miss. Col. Johnson was a gallant Confederate soldier and has been a life-long Methodist, always ready to serve the Church and the Master's cause. He is past eighty years of age, which causes his friends to feel not a little anxiety for him at this time. We trust that he may soon begin to improve, and that his useful life may long be spared.

Through the kindness of Dr. I. W. Cooper, who has been in Toronto for several days attending the Ecumenical Methodist Conference, we have received the Daily Globe, of that city, which devoted considerable space to the doings of the great Methodist gathering. By means of this journal and the Daily Christian Guardian, the official organ of the Conference, we have been able to keep up pretty well with the proceedings. But we shall always regret that circumstances beyond our control forbade our presence at this world assembly, which is destined to become historic.

Sister Amos Kendall, writing from Houston, Texas, under date of October 13, says: "I expect to go to San Antonio next week, to which place please send the Advocate. My address there will be 633 Indiana Avenue, West End. It is my purpose to spend the winter in that city, and I do not want to be without my home paper. Through it I hear from my Mississippi friends, and what the preachers and Church are doing over there." With characteristic generosity, Sister Kendall enclosed a dollar to send the Advocate to some needy superannuate preacher or the widow of a superannuate.

Rev. W. H. Coleman, of Ruston, in a letter bearing date of the 9th inst., writes: "The Lord is with us in the work here, and every department is prospering and growing. I go by invitation to my former charge, Homer, to-day to deliver two missionary addresses—one to-night, and one to-morrow night. Next week I am to make addresses at four Sunday School Conventions: Shreveport, Monroe, Alexandria, and Lake Charles." Brother Coleman is one of the growing men of the Louisiana Conference, and we are not surprised that the brethren make requisition upon him for service outside of his own charge.

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation to the marriage of Miss Kathron Lee Foote to Mr. Charles Clark, which will take place in Saint James Episcopal Church, at Greenville, Miss., on Thursday morning, November 2, at 9 o'clock. Miss Foote is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Foote, of Greenville, where she has a large circle of friends and admirers. Mr. Clark is a son of the late Hon. Fred Clark, who was one of the first citizens of the Mississippi Delta, and a grandson of Gov. Charles Clark, who was chief executive of that State during the stormy days of the Civil War. Mr. Clark resides at Cleveland, Miss., where he is a prominent member of the bar. The Advocate extends congratulations and best wishes.

It gives us genuine pleasure to be informed that Chaplain John M. Moose, of the 20th Infantry of the United States Army, has been promoted to the rank of major. The Lieutenant Colonel commanding, in endorsing the recommendation, says: "Chaplain Moose deserves the promotion. He is a faithful, devout man of exemplary habits, and accomplishes much good. Industry and careful work make him a valuable chaplain. He is highly respected and loved by all, and I take pleasure in commending him." Brother Moose is a son-in-law of Dr. J. W. Boswell, formerly editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and an esteemed member of the North Mississippi Conference. His brethren will be much gratified to learn of this merited recognition of his faithful service.

Former Lieutenat Governor, M. M. Evans, of Mississippi, who had been in failing health for several months, died in the Jackson Sanitarium, at Jackson, Miss., on Saturday night, October 7, at 7 o'clock. He was born in Handsboro, Harrison County, July 5, 1850. He commanded the respect of all who knew him, and held a number of positions of public trust, all of which he filled with credit and distinction. He felt much interest in educational affairs, and was at one time a trustee of the University of Mississippi. He was a man of high character, and a communicant of the M. E. Church, South. Mr. Evans at the time of his decease was living at Mount Olive, Miss. The funeral service was conducted in the Methodist Church at Moss Point, and was in charge of the Rev. Robert Selby. The interment was made in the Griffin Cemetery, where his wife and other relatives are buried.

Judge E. O. Sykes, of Aberdeen, Miss., passed away at his home in that city after a week's illness on October 8. He had a stroke of paralysis about six years ago, from which he never fully recovered. He belonged to one of the most distinguished families in the State, and was a man of uncommon gifts and acquirements. He was a lawyer of solid attainments, and a brilliant speaker at the bar. He served twelve years on the bench as Circuit Judge, making an enviable reputation in that capacity. He enlisted in the Confederate Army at the outbreak of the Civil War, and served his country faithfully in that regrettable struggle. He was a war comrade and mess mate of Major R. W. Millsaps, who was strongly attached to him. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to which he was thoroughly loyal. His obsequies were conducted by our pastor in Aberdeen, Rev. J. T. Murrah, assisted by Rev. Frank W. Lewis, pastor of the Presbyterian Church.

A CORRECTION.

Rev. Philip Cone Fletcher is the name of the popular and much loved pastor of Winfield Memorial Church in Little Rock, Ark., and not Rev. P. C. Cole, as appears in my article on the Confederate Reunion in the Advocate of Oct. 5. Will the Advocate kindly publish this correction and oblige Brother Fletcher and myself?

The Sunday School.

SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTES.

Mr. T. V. Ellzey, the secretary of the Louisiana Sunday School Association, has arranged for a splendid course of Sunday school institutes in which Dr. Bulla, of our Sunday School Board, is to be one of the workers. These institutes afford a fine opportunity to our teachers and superintendents, as well as to pastors and others, to avail themselves of needed teaching and training. If the Sunday school is a school, then it must teach like any other school, and to hold the respect and following of the pupils who are taught by trained teachers in the secular schools, our Sunday school teachers must likewise be trained and capable of "causing the pupils to understand" to learn. One of the best ways of testing the real worth of a Sunday school teacher is to mark how eagerly he seizes every opportunity to equip himself for first-class work. However weak he may be at first, a first-class teacher may be known by his eagerness to learn through reading the best books on teaching, hearing addresses and attending institutes, and in every way trying to grow. In a worthy sense teachers are "made," more than "born," and when one refuses to use the means for the making of a teacher the only hope for the Sunday school that he represents is to get a new teacher. How he or the superintendent can afford to remain inefficient with the modern means of improvement, is more than I can see.

These institutes in their arrangement are such that they may be attended at a minimum of time and expense, and we trust that our pastors will aid in bringing large numbers of workers together (themselves taking the lead) at these central points for four days' instruction. Do it now!

Our own Sunday School Board has undertaken no institutes this year, preferring to give their co-operation to these interdenominational institutes, holding such denominational meetings at places and times as we may deem best under Dr. Bulla's leadership. So let our pastors and workers be out in full force, sending in their names ahead. The following are the places and dates: Shreveport and Monroe, Oct. 15-18; Alexandria and Lake Charles, Oct. 19-22; New Orleans and Baton Rouge, Oct. 23-26.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

Did you observe promotion day? Did you meet with difficulties? It is as impossible to maintain an organization in the Sunday school and yield to the caprice of childhood, as it is in the day school. No child is permanently lost to the Sunday school by a kind, yet firm adherence to a wise policy.

The Sunday school at Broad Street, Hattiesburg, Rev. J. L. Neil, pastor, and Brother W. P. Meador, superintendent, is in a flourishing condition. Recently, two rooms have been added to the church building for Sunday school use—one eighteen by twenty feet, the other twenty by twenty-four feet. These rooms are divided by curtains for separate class-room work. The school has been graded, organized on the departmental plan, and the graded literature introduced. Three departments are included in this organization: the Beginners—three classes—with Mrs. J. L. Neil, superintendent; Primary—two classes—superintendent to be appointed; and Junior—two classes—superintendent to be appointed. This is a great move forward, and means much to the church. The superintendent of this school has also inaugurated a class in his Sunday school for heads of families. This will enlist the fathers in Sunday school work, and develop that which in many homes is a lost art—family religion.

NEWS AND NOTES.

"Children have more need of models than critics."

A fine class of young ladies use this motto: "No girl can belong to this class six months without coming into the Church," and it is said the motto truthfully applies.

The Oakland, Miss., Sunday schools have made large gains in membership and methods lately, and were expecting a splendid Rally Day service for the first Sunday in October.

Through the Waste Material Department of the International Sunday School Association, over 1,300 schools or classes are now in touch with many points in the mission field, furnishing them with Sunday school material free of charge.

The Alpha Wesley Class, of Tupelo, Miss., is preparing an anniversary entertainment for Oct. 6, 1911. This splendid class has done a great work along all lines, and this entertainment will be quite up to and above their high-water mark of excellence.

Men may have more wages and fewer hours and still be as bad as ever; streets may be clean, but hearts still impure. Social service is an old-as-the-race new discovery; but it can never, never take the place in saving the world of the only perfect remedy, the gospel of Christ.

In the new Standard of Service, every Adult Class must have several members enrolled in the Sunday morning or week-night training class, and this is the best month to begin. It requires time to select and enthuse prospective pupils, secure a teacher, mature plans and decide on hour and place and course of study. Do not let any discouragement force you to abandon this means of help.

* * *

Put a high estimate on your Rally Day attendance, work up to it, and prepare to hold every new member coming within your welcoming doors and tastefully decorated auditorium. Not only will you be building up your school and the great Sunday school cause; but also putting bricks into the model Sunday school building to be erected in the mountains of North Carolina, which is designed to promote the work throughout the connection. Fine reports are coming in from many schools and larger returns are prayerfully and believingly looked for.

RHEUMATISM
A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as those who have it know, for over three years, and tried almost everything. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial, I will send it free. Address,

RIPLEY AND BLUE MOUNTAIN.

Dear Brother Meek: I closed my last protracted meeting on the evening of the first Sunday in October. I was ably assisted by the following brethren: Rev. S. A. Brown, at Blue Mountain; Rev. A. N. Goforth, at Falkner, and Rev. W. L. Graves, at Ripley. Each of these brethren greatly pleased and profited their hearers by their earnestness and eloquence, fully sustaining their reputation as strong pulpit men. The faith of many was quickened, their hopes brightened and zeal intensified. Some joined the church on profession of faith; others by certificate. We have all the societies prescribed by our Discipline for a well organized church. Our Sunday schools are doing fine work. Ripley and Blue Mountain is an excellent charge. The present incumbent and family have spent a delightful year. The preacher assigned here next year may feel that the lines have fallen to him in pleasant places and that his is a goodly heritage. Many hearts are sad in contemplating the fact that Brother Jaco is closing the last year of his quadrennium as presiding elder of the Corinth District. He has wrought well, and doubtless this year the district will make the best report in its history. Brother Jaco is worthy of the highest consideration from our Bishops when he assigns the preachers to their charges. Mr. Editor, all our people who read the New Orleans Christian Advocate are charmed with the paper.—Eugene Johnson, P. C.

A faith that has no courage in it, that must see all as clearly and as coldly as a sum in algebra—why, you wouldn't insult me with such a faith as that; and I'm sure you wouldn't offer it as a religious service to your God.—Alexander Mackennal.

Make Money This Winter Sawing Lumber

After the crops are all harvested, why not work the wood lot for the money that's in it? Fall is lumber time—the time to cut your timber into lumber for your own use or to sell. Buy an "American" Saw Mill, which cuts the most lumber at the least cost, and run it with your farm engine. The price of a carload of lumber will buy an "American" Mill that will cut a carload a day. Ask for our book, "Making Money Off the Wood Lot." It explains a money-making proposition for the farmer. Write our nearest office.

Mistaken Diagnosis --- Doctors Guess Wrong Again.

About five years ago I wrote to you that I had been a terrible sufferer from kidney and bladder troubles, and that my physician informed me that my left kidney was in such condition that there was no hope for my recovery. I was advised to try your Swamp-Root as a last resort, and after taking four fifty-cent size bottles, I passed a gravel stone which weighed ten grains. I afterwards forwarded you this gravel stone. Have had no return of any trouble since that time and cannot say too much in favor of your wonderful preparation, Swamp-Root, which cures, after physicians fail. Very truly yours,

Epworth League Department.

DEVOTIONAL.

Our theme to-day (Oct. 22) is "Intelligent Warfare." Our first reference is Proverbs 24:5-6. Our second one is Proverbs 3:13-23.

What is said in other parts of this department to-day bears directly on the theme of this hour. In the great task of "the evangelization of the world," the need of the Church is not more money. Our Church people are spending now on trifles, not to speak of luxuries, what it would take to do this work. There isn't a pastoral charge in Methodism that isn't financially able to quadruple its contribution to missions. No, our people have the money. That isn't the need. Nor are we describing accurately the need when we say it is consecration. We need that certainly. But we have to-day many consecrated people who are not doing what they ought for this cause. Even religion isn't everything. It seems to us that the need is "intelligent consecration." Our people need to know.

Why is it that "Home Missions" is more popular than "Foreign Missions?" It is because our people are next-door neighbors to these needs. They know about them! What we need to do is to bring the further away needs closer to them. To our minds the ordinary missionary sermon is too fleeting in its effect. Its influence is as spasmodic as the sermons themselves are. The visit of a foreign missionary to a charge never fails to intensify the missionary spirit. But these can't be to every church and very rarely to any.

It would seem then that mission study is supplying a very great need. The Church is very wise in insisting that its laymen and its ladies have their own course of study in missions, and to our minds it never made a better investment. Among our young people this provision is especially wise, as it means the harnessing of the Church's vigor and youth to this great cause, not for to-day, nor to-morrow, but for all the years to come. We sincerely hope that out of to-day's study there will spring a large number of mission study classes. Do it now.

Use the Advocate League column to report these circles.

The current issue of The Epworth Era has a great many expressions from prominent workers relative to the value of mission study. From these we quote the following:

Mission Study, a Substitute for Personal Knowledge.

Not all the trouble with the world is due to ignorance. Socrates taught humanity many true lessons, but he was in error when he believed that all sin was due to ignorance. While we cannot follow the great teacher at this point, it must be evident that information is one of the greatest awakeners of interest. Scarcely any Christian man has ever visited a mission field without a deepening of his interest in the work of God among other peoples than those of his own race. Few of our people have the opportunity to visit the mission fields. One of the substitutes for such a visit is to be found in the Mission Study Classes. I have no sort of doubt that systematic mission study will rouse the interest of every intelligent Christian and will deepen the spiritual life of everybody who engages in it. All the heroes are not dead. Many of them are living and working to-day in other lands. I have only words of commendation for the Mission Study Classes.—Collins Denny.

A Testimony to the Fruits of Mission Study.

I desire to say that in my judgment the systematic mission study which has been carried on through the Epworth League and the educational department of the Board of Missions for the last seven or eight years has been of inestimable value. Wherever I go throughout the Church I can see the fruits of it. The conviction was long ago borne in on my mind that the one thing needed to render our people more enthusiastically cordial in the support of missions was accurate information concerning the various mission fields. It is only where ignorance prevails that indifference to missions manifests itself. An acquaintance with the situation inevitably issues into a deeper and more rational interest. Keep up this work by all means. You can do nothing that will be more serviceable to the cause. While I am writing I desire to say how much pleased I am with your general work on the Era. May the Lord give you strength and wisdom for the great tasks that you have in hand!—E. E. Hoss.

Systematic Mission Study.

It has been well said that "there can be no permanent or productive missionary sentiment without intelligent ideas on missionary subjects." Having read at various times a miscellaneous assortment of items on missionary work, important though such items are in their place, does not constitute an intelligent knowledge of the subject of missions, for in mission study, as in all other lines of research, the same principle holds true: that the only way to gain the knowledge sought for is to go after it in a systematic way. Nothing worthy can be accomplished in the line of mission study by picking up information in scraps. We all want our efforts in "the King's business" to be productive, but we give aimlessly when we contribute to the cause of missions without enlightenment in that branch of Church work; and without some knowledge of the difficulties to be overcome and the labors and oftentimes discouragement of the toilers in the harvest field, those of us who can be only "intercessory missionaries" cannot even pray a definite prayer for the extension of God's kingdom.—Evelyn R. Price, Lake Charles, La.

NOTES.

Remember that Christ said, "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields, for they are white already unto the harvest!"

We heartily believe that no pastor should be satisfied without several circles of systematic mission study. Order a copy of "Advance in the Antilles" and begin at once in the League.

Do you know that nearly every Sunday our great dailies have in them very plausible and well written articles against foreign missions? How shall we prepare our people to resist these arguments except by an intelligent study of the facts in the case? Our mission study circles supply this need!

Many of our people give to missions through sheer loyalty to the Church. Consequently they give as little as they can and still be loyal. How much better a motive is a knowledge of the needs they are trying to meet. "Now," say they, "we give not because the pastor 'assessed us,' but because we saw the world's need of our Christ!"

Bishop W. A. Candler has prepared for use in connection with "Advance in the Antilles" a supplement on "Our Mission in Cuba." This pamphlet will be furnished free of charge with each copy of the textbook. In connection with this course it is urged that every League shall make a special offering for Cuba. This is according to the plan of the Epworth League and Mission Boards. Write us for further information about this offering.—Editor of Department.

The editor of this department was, by error, made to say last week, that Christianity had few "absolute" teachings. What we did say was that it has few obsolete teachings. In all of its essentials it has been the same from its beginning.

GENERAL LEE AND CHILDREN.

In Lippincott's Monthly for January, Mrs. Pickett, wife of the famous general who led the magnificent charge at Gettysburg, writing of General Lee, the hundredth anniversary of whose birth has just been celebrated, says:

Lee was very fond of children. Mine idolized him. Coming in one day, General Lee found the children building block houses.

"Is this the house that Jack built?" he asked.

"No, sir," said Corbell; "that's the house that George built, and this is the house that Corbell built. Jack didn't build any houses down this way.'

The noted philantbropist, Mr. Peabody, was at the springs that summer, a feeble old man with some of his old-time faculties left save the power of sympathy and the ability to help those in trouble. As he signed his papers with a trembling hand Corbell watched him with deep interest.

"Your hand trembles with the thought of the good it has done," he said.

"Your little hand does not tremble."

"It doesn't tremble, but I can't write my name with it, and if I could write, I couldn't write it to money to do good with."

"You would rather have it as it is than to have it trembling and be able to write your name with it, wouldn't you?"

"No; I would rather have it tremble if I could write my name to money and do lots of good to people."

A little while later General Lee came to see Corbell when he lay very ill in Richmond. He sat beside him, holding the trembling little hand, and Corbell said:

"My hand trembles, and I can write with it now, but I can't write it to money to do good to people."

"The dear little hand has done far more good than it could by writing your name to money," said the general tenderly. "It has written love, and that is the best thing that was ever written."

Then the general knelt beside the bed and prayed for the little boy.

It was my last sweet memory of General Lee, for I never saw him again.

One of the great lessons of life is to learn not to do what one likes, but to like what one does.—Hugh Black.

THE INFLUENCE OF RELIGION.

"It is true that religion develops those qualities of character which make the ideal citizen. That is tho practical, the assured and the proud result of the principles laid down in the Old and New Testaments. He must be a bold critic of social evolution who ignores the Mosaic and Christian religions as factors in the problem of progress. Nothing short of a reckless audacity—born of prejudice that fails to apply the very axioms of fair criticism—will attempt to account for modern civilization on grounds wholly independent of religious life and faith. The religion which gives rise to innumerable charities, which fosters a public opinion that is healthy, wholesome, vigorously in favor of justice and valiantly opposed to injustice, which calls for the abolition of laws that bear oppressively on the multitude and demands an educational system that will give the poorest a fair show in the struggle of life, must have a very intimate relation to good citizenship, and is the strongest ally of sound political economy.—New York Herald.

A man who lives right, and is right, has more power in his silence, than another has by his words. Character is like bells which ring out sweet music, and which, when touched accidentally even, resound with sweet music.—Phillips Brooks.

Try This Famous Pinex "Pint of Cough Syrup"

A Family Supply for 50c, Saving $2. The Surest, Quickest Remedy You Ever Used or Money Refunded.

A cough remedy that saves you $2, and is guaranteed to give quicker, better results than anything else, is surely worth trying. And one trial will show you why Pinex is used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

You will be pleasantly surprised by the way it takes right hold of a cough, giving almost instant relief. It will usually stop the most obstinate, deep-seated cough in 24 hours, and is unequalled for prompt results in whooping cough.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, makes a full pint of the best cough remedy ever used. Easily prepared in five minutes—directions in package.

The taste is pleasant—children take it willingly. Stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both excellent features. Splendid for croup, hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, and a highly successful remedy for incipient lung troubles.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a pint bottle, and it is ready for use.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

DALLAS, TEXAS

A SUNDAY SCHOOL MISSIONARY ABROAD.

It was the writer's pleasure in keeping his commission from the Sunday School Board to spend a week on Pecan Island, a peculiar formation of land about fifteen miles long and only a half-mile wide at the widest points, as I remember the dimensions. Being about fifty miles from Lake Arthur, and a little further from Abbeville, and only reached by water, it was designated by our party as a "foreign shore," and thus we considered ourselves "abroad." In reaching the island we traversed in a gasoline boat, in practically an all-day trip, portions of Lake Arthur, Mermentan River, Grand Lake, Colligan Bayou, Colligan Lake, the Intercoastal Canal, Alligator Lake, Turtle Lake, White Lake, and Pecan Canal, about fifty miles in all. The boat used was Captain J. D. Morgan's boat, "Gracie." Here and there we passed a fisherman's houseboat, and at a few points on the higher shores among the marshes, little houses, some with palmetto roofs, occupied by fishermen and trappers, mostly, if not all, French people. At Chenier Dufont (meaning "an oak grove in a marsh, or low place") several families lived in houseboats and "thatched cottages," and being on half-way ground is the place on this "Morgan line" for passengers to take on coffee, which is served from a French houseboat, and of the blackest type, so we were told. One of the passengers, having missed his regular morning coffee dope, hailed this station with great comfort, as up to that time life had to him been miserable. This type of coffee drinkers are as much addicted to a drug habit (though not so serious) as opium eaters or consumers of intoxicants.

Here at Chenier Dufont were twelve children without school or civilizing influences, with nothing but traps and fishhooks to break the monotony of life, with their parents. Among the men one yellow-skinned man was pointed out as an opium-eating wreck, who is said to have formerly belonged to the French aristocracy, but who is now joining with others in this life on the water. Pecan Island is nothing more nor less than a long bed of shells, with a very rich soil deposit on top. The wells are dug through solid beds of shell about twenty feet, and where the roads are old enough to have the tops worn off they are all shell roads. The land is very rich and pecans, oranges, cane, cotton, corn, etc., grow in great abundance. Cattle do well in the marshes on either side, and in every direction many kinds of wild animals abound, denning in the high grass in the marshes, making trapping the winter occupation. And mosquitoes and snakes! Some of the people are screening against the mosquitoes, but a snake passes without note or comment, one man going so far as to declare against killing them, as they must have some mission or else they would not have been created! We quoted Gen. 3:15 to him. One peculiarity of the island is the mounds, here and there, some ten feet high, made of shells, apparently carried from some distance, judging by the ditches left. These mounds were used as the burying places of the aboriginal settlers. They find the bones of the dead sometimes in layers with dirt between, and sometimes in sitting or standing posture. The people were large, judged by the bones examined and compared with the size of modern men.

We went on our mission by invitation of and in company with the pastor, Rev. R. M. Walker, and Miss Gosset, the organist at Bell City. The neat little church, some five or six years old, had just been furnished with a good organ and screened; and in all there were some dozen and a half "Revival Praises," but, having no musical instructor, the people only knew the few songs taught them by the pastor. Since the boat only makes one trip a week, we had of necessity to stay that long, so we began with the organist to teach music, without which the Sunday school would be weak. We used the blackboard and taught the notes some, had a children's choir for several days, sang some duets and got the people generally to sing as never before. As a result, a splendid interest was developed in all Sunday school and Church work, and a good spirit was felt, and some evangelistic services held.

In the Sunday school work Mr. Mortimer Morgan was secured to assist Mr. Lewis Roberts in superintending; Miss Florence Vincent was elected Cradle Roll Superintendent, and Mrs. Josephine Morgan, Superintendent of the Home Department. Plans were made for organizing two Bible classes—a Young People's and an Adults'. A teachers' library was started, and $12.35 was raised to furnish the school with needed additional literature, including the "Visitor" and the "Boys and Girls" and graded literature for the beginners, to be taught by the public school teacher—a Catholic.

Attracted by the new organ and the singing, the people turned out en masse, Catholics and all, and the Sunday school is in the beginning of better things.

How to Get Rid of Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way, and it Costs Nothing to Try.

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive, home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty six years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of these. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased mucous membranes and arrests the foul discharge, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not poison the system and ruin the stomach as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you by return mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal headaches, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet. Write him immediately.

THE THING TO DO.

When you hear of good in people—tell it,
When you hear a tale of evil—quell it.
Let the goodness have the light,
Put the evil out of sight,
Make the world we live in bright,
Live to make the big world right.

Unsolicited Praise

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

"I have read and thoroughly enjoyed MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE. A long and tedious railway journey was made pleasant because I had this book with me. I have re-read it since that time, and have gained new inspiration from it. The chapter on the Spirit of Prayer I found especially helpful. It is such a readable, understandable, Spirit-filled book."—Reader in Carthage, Texas.

A TOUCHING TESTIMONIAL is this from St. Alham, West Virginia: "I have read and re-read the book, and then I sent it to my cousin who is an invalid. He had his back broken in a coal mine and has not left his room for ten years. He was delighted."

COMO, MISS.

I was with Brother J. B. Randolph at Como last Sunday and Monday. We had an unusually good day Sunday. The Sunday school has overflowed the church, and Sister Randolph has a Bible Class in one room at the parsonage, where she moved out the furniture and the class furnished the room with chairs. She has a large and growing class of men and women who were not in Sunday school before. Monday morning, at the business session of the quarterly conference, there was a building committee appointed to locate and build a new, modern church, and there was not a dissenting voice. The general talk is that they will need a house to cost from $15,000 to $20,000. Randolph is in high favor with his people. The finances of the church are nearly up, and never came easier.—W. M. Young, P. E.

NOTICE TO LOUISIANA LEAGUERS.

Dear Brother Meek: Please give me space in the Advocate for a brief notice. I desire to assist the pastors and Epworth Leaguers in advancing the work in our State, either by a visit or correspondence. By now they have doubtless re-elected officers for the coming year. I trust the pastors and presidents will see that their secretaries send the names and addresses of the officers of both Junior and Senior Leagues to me at once, as it is necessary that I should have them.

MRS. SUDIE J. LINGLE,
Field Secretary of the Louisiana Conference Epworth League.

SOME COMMENT ON A SERMON.

Mr. Editur: If our presidin' elder didn't skin some of us amen corner saints not long ago, then your Uncle "Observer" don't know a skinnin' when he sees and gits it. What he done fer the long tongue sisters wus plenty. It sot me to ruminatin', and as I allus ruminate best in r'ime, I hand you the followin' pome fer publication in our Conference orgin.

TOO MUCH TONGUE.

T. E. J. is 'bout as big as Mandy's last year's gourd,
But when he mounts the sacred stand, he wields a two-edged sword.

Last Sunday night, he told us folks our tongues wus all too long,
And that the way we used them wus a sad and grievous wrong.

To sit in judgment on our friends belongs to no mere man,
For only God can judge the heart, and none but God e'er can.

He told us ne'er to criticise the way the parson preached,
For such will make impossible that boys and girls be reached.

He said: Good Sisters, hear me now, for I to you am talking:
The Gospel ne'er can do its work with all your senseless squawking.

The choir-folks in this church have fussed for twenty years or more;
Unless you quit, and in sack-cloth sit, the Devil'll git you shore.

Just close your mouth for one short hour, your busy tongues keep still;
If you survive this new ordeal, 'twill be a miracle.

The test of all true greatness is to see the good in others;
Most any sort of last year's loon can prate of faults in brothers.

Now whether you be Peter's friend or Joe's confederate,
You ain't got all the brains chucked down in your little squash-shaped pate.

And all who say that "I am it," are seventeen sorts of fool.

Now learn this lesson, Sisters, dear, and keep your tongues from waggin',
And angels soon will come to earth, and take you home a-braggin'.

"OBSERVER."

A REMEDY OF THREE GENERATIONS.

For nearly a century Gray's Ointment has been the standby of thousands of families. Your mother will tell you her mother always kept it in the house. She knew that it was absolutely the best remedy for Boils, Bruises, Cuts, Carbuncles, Fever Sores, Felons, Rheumatism, etc. Follow her example and equip your medicine chest with Gray's Ointment. 25c per box at drug stores, or write Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 804 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., for a free sample postpaid.

Mr. Parmelia Crow, Aberdeen, Texas, writes: "Send me four boxes of Gray's Ointment. My father and grandfather used it, and we can't do without it."

Tell Us

No Matter where you are, whether you are a man or a woman, twenty years old or seventy, living in town or in the country, all you need do is to tell us that you want it and it will be sent right out to you. You don't need to write a long letter. don't need to fill out any tiresome blanks, don't need to give any references or send any money or stamps. Simply tell us to send it. It makes no difference what your trouble is, whether you are sick in bed or just not feeling right—we don't ask your trouble and you need not write a word about it. All you need do is to tell us your name and address and we will send it to you, without a penny from you. This is how we are offering Bodi-Tone to every reader of this paper who is ailing or in poor health, this is how over a quarter-million sick people have already tried it. We are glad to send it to you, glad to give you a chance to try it, to learn what a great medicine we have made, to learn how chronic diseases can be cured with the right kind of medicine, containing the right ingredients. If it benefits you as it has benefited thousands, pay us a dollar for it. If you are not satisfied, don't pay a cent. We leave it all to you. We won't ask for pay afterwards or dun you. We know you will gladly pay for real benefit, for real health, real vigor, strength and comfort.

Bodi-Tone does just what its name means—cures disease by toning all the body. Bodi-Tone is a small, round, compressed tablet that is taken three times every day. Each box contains seventy-five tablets, enough for twenty-five days' use, and we send you the full box without a penny in advance, so you can try it and learn what it is, so you can learn how it cures stubborn diseases by helping nature to tone every organ and part of the body. Bodi-Tone is not a patent medicine, for its ingredients are not a secret. It contains Iron Phosphate, Gentian, Lithia, Chinese Rhubarb, Peruvian Bark, Nux Vomica, Oregon Grape Root, Cascara, Capsicum, Sarsaparilla and Golden Seal. Such ingredients guarantee its merit and explain why it cures. Bodi-Tone contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs, nothing your family doctor won't say is a good thing. It does not excite the body with alcohol, but it tones the body and cures it disorders with the remedies nature intended to tone and cure the body. Thus, Iron gives life and energy to the Blood, Sarsaparilla drives out its impurities, Phosphate and Nux Vomica create new nerve energy and force, Lithia aids in the Kidneys, Gentian does invainable work for the Stomach and Digestive forces, Chinese Rhubarb and Oregon Grape Root promote vigorous Liver activity, Peruvian Bark raises the tone of the entire System, Golden Seal soothes the inflamed membrane and checks Catarrhal discharges, Cascara gives the Bowels new life in a natural way, and Capsicum makes all more valuable by bettering their quick absorption into the blood. A remarkable combination that does wonderful work for health.

You Need It If you are tired of continual dosing without results, you need Bodi-Tone right now. If your local doctor has done you no good, if the ordinary medicinal combinations he used have failed, give this modern scientific combination of special remedies a chance to show and prove what it can do for you. Its greatest triumphs have been among men and women with chronic ailments who had tried good physicians without lasting benefit, and for this reason all chronic sufferers are invited to try it at our risk. If there is anything wrong with your Kidneys, Bodi-Tone helps to restore tone to the Kidneys, helps to set them right. If there is anything wrong with your Stomach, Bodi-Tone helps to tone the Stomach, helps to set the wrong right. If there is anything wrong with your Nerves, your Blood, your Liver, your Bowels or your General System, the health-making ingredients in Bodi-Tone go right to work and keep on working day after day, producing results of the kind sufferers appreciate. If you have Rheumatism, Bodi-Tone helps to drive the Uric Acid from the system while it restores tone to the Kidneys, Stomach and Blood, thereby stopping Rheumatic poison and putting new activity into muscles, nerves and joints. Bodi-Tone should be used by all women suffering from Female Ailments, for its toning properties have been found especially valuable in such ailments.

Indigestion and Bowel Trouble

LONGTOWN, S. C.—Since using Bodi-Tone I am in better health than I had for ten years. I have taken medicine from five different doctors and I can't tell the different patent medicines for Constipation and Indigestion, but none of them gave me relief for more than a few days. I felt the effects of Bodi-Tone in three days, and the benefit stayed with me. My life had become a burden to me, but it has been a pleasure since I took the first box of Bodi-Tone. I wish all who suffer as I did would take one box, for they would then know the happiness it has been to me. My return to health has given me comfort in my old age. MRS. M. J. WHITE.

Dropsy, Liver and Kidney Troubles

ASBURY, N. J.—I was taken with Liver, Kidney and Bladder trouble in the fall of 1902, and the Kidney trouble caused Dropsy. I tried everything far and near, but nothing gave me more than temporary relief. I also took X-ray treatments for six months and was very much disappointed, as it was supposed to do wonders. Since I took the first box of Bodi-Tone I have felt better than from anything I have tried in these seven years. I have used three boxes, and it has made me an entirely different man. I am 65 years of age. HENRY C. MOYLE.

Had Rheumatism and Lumbago

GRAND LEDGE, MICH.—I have been afflicted over six years with Muscular Rheumatism in my arms. It finally settled in my back and the doctor called it Lumbago. Then a year ago my left knee swelled up so I could not get around and I suffered intense pains at times all winter. I could scarcely walk. I took patent medicines with no results. Then I sent for a trial box of Bodi-Tone. From that time on my improvement has been remarkable indeed, and I can now walk better than in years. MRS. TAYLOR HANCE.

We Take the Risk—You Cannot Lose

Bodi-Tone cures conditions which are totally unlike, all in the same way, for the body in health has but one way to act—it goes to all the body and makes it well. It makes up and repays for past sickness with a strong and virile health that is often better than the sufferer knew for a long time before sickness began to trouble, for it makes the body right, with its maximum of strength, vigor and vitality. Bodi-Tone works what seems a miracle by putting tone where tone was needed. Write today, telling us you want it, get a box of Bodi-Tone promptly and try it. We take all the risk.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 58—No. 43. "Prove All Things; Hold Fast That Which is Good." WHOLE No. 2906.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1911 CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

SAYINGS AND DOINGS AT THE ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

The opening hymns were most appropriate. They were,

"O for a thousand tongues to sing
My great Redeemer's praise," and
"See how great a flame aspires, Kindled by a spark divine."

The theme of the opening sermon by the Rev. Henry Haigh, president of the British Wesleyan Conference, was "The Ready Harvest: The Unready Church." It was generally adjudged to be a scholarly and able discoure, worthy of the man and the occasion.

Dr. Gross Alexander: "If, by the grace and blessing of God, the deliberations, discussions, and exercises of this great Conference should result in a return of the people called Methodists throughout the world to the teachings, the standards, and the example of John Wesley, it would make a new epoch in the history of Methodism and of the world and of the kingdom of God on this planet."

* * *

Among many other striking things, Dr. Fitchett said: "Of all Christ's Churches, Methodism is the one that cannot be pessimistic. Methodism has forgotten its history, and is false to its origin, if it loses hope. 'The Lord hath done great things for us;' that is history. And what God has done is the pledge to faith of what he will do. Faith in the unexhausted purpose of God as to our future is what we need."

* * *

One of the most interesting sessions was on the afternoon of the seventh day. Bishop E. R. Hendrix was in the chair, when the Business Committee reported a resolution approving the Arbitration Treaty between Great Britain and the United States. Rising from his seat, Bishop Hendrix moved its adoption in a stirring speech; it was ably seconded by Rev. Henry Haigh and Sir Robert Perks, of England, after which it was enthusiastically adopted by a rising vote, and the Conference joined in singing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Bishop Candler occupied the pulpit of the Metropolitan Church on Sunday, October 15, and delivered a sermon that made a profound impression. His text was Ephesians 1:15-23, and his subject the "Power of Sonship." We quote a single statement: "I have been surprised at the surprise of the Christian world over the book, 'Twice-Born Men.' If you will go to Wesley's old Arminian Magazine you will find more instances of that sort than Begbie ever knew. They have been going on all these years."

One of the speakers at the Metropolitan Church on the first Sabbath afternoon of the Conference, when the subject of the Church's duty in relation to modern industrial and commercial life was under consideration, was Ex-Vice President Fairbanks, who closed his address as follows: "We shall, indeed, have fallen upon evil times when religion is taken out of industry and commerce, when the rule of avarice and the power of might and greed are enthroned supreme, instead of the power of the Christian religion."

As a popular orator, the palm was borne off by Bishop Quayle. Of him the Christian Guardian says: "He unites in himself in a most unique fashion the qualities of the artist, poet, essayist, humanist, philosopher and orator. His speeches betray in quick succession his many-sided gifts." The following are a sample of his pithy, pointed sayings: "We want to Christianize, not to socialize." "When you get religion you will buy soap and rub it on." "Do not yield to the persuasion that the youth of the present day are degenerate. There ought to be no surprise if they do ill—we are their daddies."

Dr. S. Parks Cadman: "There are many who mistake a disturbance in their own minds for a world movement." "When visiting in England, I met a man, apparently a clergyman. I was in private dress. The good brother said, 'Do you live in America?' I said, 'Yes.' He said, 'How's the Church in America?' I said, 'She is very well.' 'How many priests have you in the Church in America?' 'We have no priests, but ministers.' He said, 'What Church do you belong to?' I said, 'To the Methodist Church.' He said, 'That is not a Church.' I replied, 'My dear sir, we are talking about the United States of America and not about your town pump.'"

The movement to unite the Canadian Methodists with the Presbyterians and Congregationalists of the Dominion was not popular with the followers of Wesley from other lands. On this point the Christian Guardian (which more than once felt impelled to come to the rescue of the sause) says: "Canadian Methodism has a contract on its hands when it seeks to overcome the disfavor with which the idea of its union with other Christian bodies is received by the representatives from other countries. The thought that the word "Methodist" may drop out and its distinctive features be lost in a new order of things appears to be a great worry."

Bishop Hoss: "Our sole stock in trade is our religion. When that goes we shall be the most poverty-stricken people on the face of the earth." "I began my ministry more than thirty years ago by preaching a sermon on this subject, in which I laid down the broad, general doctrine, a doctrine to which I have adhered by the grace of God to this good night, that no man has a moral right to engage in the promiscuous sale of ardent spirits as long as he can make an honest living by stealing." "We have not had much help from the politicians (in the fight for prohibition). They remind me of the boy whose mother made his trousers, and when he was a hundred yards away, you could not tell whether he was coming to you or going from you."

* * *

The breeziest session was perhaps when the higher critics undertook to parade themselves and their views. Dr. E. G. B. Mann says in the Central Methodist Advocate: "Prof. A. S. Peake, D.D., of the Primitive Methodist Church, England, brought Higher Criticism into the open field in an able paper, which, in his absence, was read by another. The paper was the entering wedge to a spirited discussion on Bible criticism, which stirred the whole Conference, and thoroughly aroused the secular press. The higher critics seemed to have been prepared for the fray, and for some hours swayed the Conference, rushing in one speech after another, like the rapid firing of big cannon. But after a while Dr. A. Carman, the giant of Canadian Methodism, Bishop E. E. Hoss, of our Church, and Drs. Elliott and Gilbert, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, got the floor, and settled the great audience back again. The echoes of the discussion were heard through two or three following sessions, but it is within the bounds of truth to say that higher criticism got such a drubbing as it has not had lately. As the slang phrase goes: 'It may get over it, but it will never look the same.' Among other striking things, Bishop Carman said: 'When I hear such papers read (as those that had just been brought before the body) I feel like an adaptation:

'Ye fearful saints, fresh courage take;
The clouds ye so much dread
Are dark enigmas and shall break
In riddles on your head.'"

Perhaps the most important action taken by the Ecumenical Conference was the creation of a permanent "Ecumenical Methodist Commission," composed of representatives of the various Methodist bodies of the world. The resolution adopted authorizing this Commission is as follows: "Believing that the advantage of our common Methodism of the periodical Ecumenical gatherings may be wisely and helpfully conserved and extended in the interest of the decennial meetings, through the appointment of a business committee to continue the relations between the various branches of Methodism, we recommend that a commission, to be known as the 'Ecumenical Methodist Commission,' be appointed by the several churches, consisting of fifty members for the Eastern Section and fifty members for the Western Section, an equitable division of members to be made to the various churches. The two sections shall unite to organize a Methodist International Commission, with such officers as may be found necessary. The function of the commission shall be to gather and disseminate information concerning the conditions, progress and problems of the various Methodist Churches, to promote closer relations between them, to unite in furthering the great moral causes for the peace and welfare of our respective countries and to make arrangements for the necessary organization of the next Ecumenical Conference. Until such time as the commission shall be constituted by the concurrent action of the churches, this Conference recommends that the present Ecumenical Commission serve provisionally and secure the appointment of a permanent commission, which shall serve ten years and shall have power to act and to report. The business committee recommends also that Dr. Carroll shall be the secretary for the Western Section and Dr. James Chapman for the Eastern Section."

Indian Terms

Neither the personal words of Jesus, nor the genius of the gospel, as it finds expression in the apostolic scriptures, lead us to look for any certain or steadfast ecclesiastical unity, except that which is to be derived through the successive doors of unity in spirit and unity in faith. And with these the experience of the historic Church agrees. Mere conformity is not unity, much less is it a guarantee of spiritual life, as the Christian world has sadly learned. Forced accommodations are as impossible to the teachings of the evangel, as they are repugnant to the spirit of human justice.

Such rational divisions as to-day exist in the ranks of Christendom are, therefore, not matters for unqualified condemnation, but are such as find tolerance under the charter of Christianity. Under this charter all the churches of Christ enjoy equality. Neither priority of organization, nor antiquity of traditions, can enhance churchly claims. The Christly spirit and the Scriptural test of order and doctrine are the final marks of catholicity. Clearly, then, organic Christian unity is a matter which must wait upon time and history. The Scriptures logically and properly place spiritual unity in the foreground of attainment. Consent of mind and heart must precede material alliances. This is the order of thought and history. When elemental Christian grace prevails, Judah and Benjamin may be wedded in heart, but confessions and theologies are things which are to be written when you can, and not when you will. When written at all, dogmas should be written sparingly, and with a view to their ultimate elimination.

The fullness of time is the fullness of human assent. The yoke of conformity without unity of spirit is the yoke of bondage. An agreed spirit begets a unified body, but a body held together by canons and legal restraints begets a mischievous diversity of spirits. And here is wisdom. While the forces of spiritual fellowship are in play as preliminaries of a larger and more literal unity, we need give ourselves no concern about the details of official unity, nor need we trouble the theological waters in the interest of an agreement of doubtful utility. Certainly, for the present age, which is one of incubation and organization in evangelism, the larger bodies of Christianity would better continue to occupy their historic ground and maintain their traditions. The necessities which gave them existence have not wholly passed away.

It would be well, however, if subtending communions and controversial offshoots from the great theologies could be drawn back into their parent bodies, thus simplifying the task of the several representative branches of Protestantism. Indeed, it will at last be found that the certain path to unity lies in this direction. The Cedars of Lebanon must needs be truncated by the axes of the woodmen before they can be aligned as pillars in the earthly temple of Jehovah.

But while the case of organized Christian unity stands thus, inquiry into the possibility of a larger concert and a more general agreement is both lawful and desirable.

Haply, by the tokens of this hour, we are to come upon the beginning stages of Christian coalescence. The occasion is not one of opportunity only, but of duty. Men to whom the task of dividing the cosmos falls, will not shrink nor falter.

As a rule, the words of St. Paul stand us always in stead: "Endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace * * * till we all come in the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God to a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Jesus Christ." These are the ideal conditions of Christian unity out of which, as out of a matrix, is to come the perfect Christian manhood, "the manifestation of the sons of God."

What is the unity of the spirit? It is not necessarily theological agreement, but it is fraternal tolerance. It is ability to see eye to eye what is the true sphere of the kingdom of Jesus Christ, and to labor together for its perfect coming. Spiritual unity is also somewhat more than theological tolerance. It is a wholesome silence concerning our doctrinal differences. Being at one upon the urgent and saving truths of the gospel, let us make a truce concerning the tithing of anise, mint and cumin. Let us leave to private judgment the matters which do not violate the general and sensitive conscience of spiritual Christendom. In this atmosphere of charity and silence our differences will die much sooner than we think.

What advance has the Church made in achieving unity in the Spirit? Much, very much. The most significant chapter in the annals of the last half century is the story of this rapproachment. What further advance is now possible? Frankly, it must be said, none except that which follows the path already trodden. Experiments and bizarre attempts at organic Christian union are to be dealt with cautiously.

What is unity of faith? When I say that corporate, or even jurisdictional, unity in Christianity is dependent upon theological agreement, I at once declare such unity to be, for the present age at least, an impossibility; but when I say that a large and working unity in faith has already been attained, indeed has always existed, and that a larger is still in prospect, I but affirm what is here known to be true.

The essential and irreducible conditions of unity in Christian faith I believe to be correctly stated thus:

1. The miraculous birth and divine-human personality of Jesus Christ.
2. The vicarious and perfect merit of the atonement made in his blood.
3. The resurrection and ascension of his body.
4. The inerrancy and sufficiency of the revelation contained in the Canonical Scriptures.

Belief in these doctrines is Christianity. It is not correct to say that all that lies beyond is nonessential, but it may be safely admitted that in interpretation in that field there is room for honest and tolerable differences. In dealing with these differences is the prospect of a final and complete unity of our universal Christian household. Brethren, in the hope of this unity, and in the name of our common Lord and Savior, bear back to your constituencies the love and greetings of the whole Methodist world.

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S CHAIR.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

I didn't go to do it. Did you ever say that while all your thoughts were engaged by the vision of an old-fashioned, orthodox switch in maternal hands? I dropped off at "Wayside," where my family were resting under the shade of the Tennessee oaks, to preen my oratoric plumes for Nebraska audiences, when a band of clerical vigilants laid hands on me and unanimously elected me president of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, at Jackson, Tenn. When Saul was made king they had to hunt for him "among the stuff;" when Chrysostom was made bishop they had to look him up—the first and last example of that kind. I accepted, and here I am.

It required nerve. Under the most favorable circumstances, the church college is up against it. With a clearer understanding of its place and work, its task will be easier; but the increasing efficiency of State schools and the secular trend of public sentiment makes it a serious problem now how to maintain a distinctively church college. But in our case the difficulties were peculiar. The report went out that the Institute would not re-open. It was like a ship without captain or pilot, slowly drifting on the rocks. The ominous sound of the breakers could be heard. No time was to be lost and no mistakes made, if the ship was to be saved. I say it required nerve to take charge of a ship given up for lost, get her on a new course, pump her out, clean her up, throw her pennant to the breeze, and carry her into action.

But we have done it. She looks bran-new, and is bounding over the waves as if she had Cardiff coal in her furnace. Her friends, who feared the worst, now say her brightest days are ahead. She has made seventy trips, and this is her seventy-first. Our faculty is simply unexcelled. We were exceedingly fortunate in getting experienced teachers. The music is in charge of Signor Severio D'Auna, of Palermo, Italy. Our lady principal, Miss Mitchel, comes to us from Chevy Chase College, Washington, D. C.—a Virginia lady of the highest type, who could easily organize and run a college herself. She belongs to the Mitchels of Abingdon, and her family were warm friends of my youth, long years ago. Miss Anne H. Augustus comes to us from Mississippi, where she has had large experience in the Institute at Columbus and the University at Oxford. And so on through the whole list. They are a congenial faculty. There isn't a crank among them. A man in Jackson said: "Steel, every one of your teachers looks like a thorough-bred." Amen. What do I want with scrubs!

I thank you for printing the letter about the Confederate Room in the College. By the way, our newest contribution is a "Library of Confederate History, in 12 volumes, written by distinguished Southern men and edited by Gen. Clement A. Evans, of Georgia." This valuable donation came from Mrs. S. E. English, of Phoenix, Arizona. I have the promise of other interesting contributions. Our girls will know the truth of that period of our history. And it is understood here that any teacher who speaks of the war as a "rebellion" is an "undesirable citizen," and must move on. I will have none of that while I am in charge.

I am often asked what has become of Dr. A. B. Jones, the former popular president of the Institute. He is living here in Jackson, is a member of the Memphis Conference, and expects to take a charge at the meeting of the Conference. His health is excellent, and while he is getting on in years and not as vigorous as when he stood in the storm of minnie balls and exploding shells at Murfreesboro fifty years ago, he is game yet. His old pupils all love him, and their name is legion. He says when the Conference accepts the offer which the citizens of Jackson will make when it meets, and takes possession of the Institute as its own, one of the great ends for which he has worked will be achieved. There is little doubt that the Conference will do this. It does not intend to be behind the most advanced column in the work of Christian education. One of the healthy signs of the times is the renewed interest the Church is taking in the work of education. Every pastor would do well to send to Nashville and get the literature furnished by the Board of Education, particularly the address of Dr. Snyder, President of Wofford College, on "The place of the Church school in the general system of education," read it himself, and get his people to read it.

I don't know how I am going to like the "president's chair." So far I am well pleased because it gives me an opportunity to get acquainted with my family! I like them. My wife, who is still my sweetheart, in spite of the ukase of the connectional junto of the 18th century, seems to have been born for the position she now fills. Whether the joke is on her, or me, or Mr. Steel junior, I will not say; but they took her for his wife! I feel highly flattered—so did he!

Oh, yes, I made the Nebraska Chautauquas, and Iowa, too. I'll tell you, Meek, it mortifies me to think that from Cairo, Illinois, to the Gulf, there are only two Chautauquas—the one at Crystal Springs, Miss., and the one at Citronelle, Ala., the latter largely maintained by winter tourists from the North. In a territory of that extent north of the Ohio there are perhaps more than a hundred assemblies every summer. Can't you wake them up? The fact is, I have traveled so much in the North that I find it is hard to adjust myself to some of our Southern ways. After fifty years of the public school, we ought to make a better showing. Something is wrong. Neither the darkey nor the boll weevil can excuse us. It is high time for us to awake from our sleep and catch the step of the columns moving forward. Ring out the old—ring in the new! Salute the old fogies, and let them go to the rear!—not that I endorse all that bobs up now. Never! I cling to ancient truth, but want it in modern garb. I grow more exacting in my demand for fidelity to the faith of our fathers, and more impatient with the conservatism that enslaves the spirit to the letter. Increase of forms indicates a decline in principles. Ritual substitutes experience, and character easily readjusts itself to the liberal sentiment of a material age. "You are a liar and a thief," thundered an irate man to a Jew who had got the best of him in a trade. "Vel, Colonel," replied the complacent Jacob, "outside of that aint I a pretty good fellow!" Just so. Outside of that!

The Roman Catholic Church has lately created the new Diocese of Des Moines (Iowa). After Italy, the United States is said to have the largest Catholic hierarchy of any nation in the world.

The Wesleyan Methodist Church has expended nearly $25,000,000 in building and improving churches in the home land within the past ten years. This shows that our Mother Methodism is yet vigorous and active.

The Primitive Methodist Church (England) claims a membership of 211,000, a half million pupils in its Sunday schools, about $25,000,000 worth of church property, and the largest theological seminary among the Free Churches of England.

The Daily Christian Guardian says: "Five out of every seven services in the Wesleyan Church, England, are held every Lord's day by local preachers. There are 26,000 of them, while British Methodism receives the free services of about 40,000."

It is stated that in Australia the minimum salary of a Methodist minister has been increased from $1,000 to $1,100, and that of a preacher on probation from $600 to $650. This is a far better showing than the Methodism of the United States can make.

The figures reported at the Ecumenical Conference for the Methodist Church of Japan are as follows: Members, 13,718; Sunday school pupils, 25,826; baptisms for the year, 1,476; amount contributed for the work, 66,882 yen. (The yen is slightly less than fifty cents in United States money.)

The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church will meet in Oklahoma City on October 31, when the assignment of the Annual Conferences to be held next spring will be made. The Home and Foreign Mission Boards of this Church will meet in Denver in November, and during the same month the Freedmen's Aid Bureau will meet in Pueblo.

During the triennium from 1707 to 1910, Australasian Methodism increased from 137,410 to 147,981, a gain of 10,571, or 7.66 per cent. There were on probation in 1910, 11,235. During the same period the adherents of the Church increased by more than 38,000. In this land one person out of every nine is a believer in the Methodist faith. The church members are allowed to elect the members of the quarterly conference, but it is said that they seem to care little for the privilege.

The only United Presbyterian Church in Mississippi, located at Starkville, has been officially disorganized, and church letters issued to the few members who for years have been struggling to keep it up. This church was first established as a Secession church and so remained for a considerable time; but later became connected with the United Presbyterian organization, and belonged to the Southern Illinois Presbytery. Its leading spirit for many years was the lamented Col. W. B. Montgomery.

It is announced that the Methodists in Rome will soon establish a college for men. There is said to be a general demand for such an institution, much of it coming from leading Italian families. "The serious lack in Italy's present public educational system," says Dr. B. M. Tipple, the Methodist pastor in Rome, who recently landed in New York," is a moral one. This lack is now demanding the attention of educators. The Italian draws a fine distinction between instruction and education—the one mental, the other ethical. Methodists have the reputation in Italy of having created in their schools for girls a healthful moral atmosphere."

TO THE LOUISIANA METHODISTS.

I am pleased to state that the returns from "Work Day" of 106 of the 305 Sunday schools of the State bring to our Orphanage approximately $2,000. When we hear from the other 119 Sunday schools we feel quite sure we will have secured the $5,000 expected. Please let the brethren send in the money right away.

With the money we now have in hand, and in sight, we can reduce our indebtedness to $4,500. If our friends will all help us during the next month, we believe we will raise the amount needed to pay off the entire debt and meet our running expenss until Conference.

We want to secure fifty men in the State who will give us $100 each. Send us your name, or send us the name of some party who is able and willing to join this fifty. I now have two of them, and will secure more right along. Help us so we can come to Conference unencumbered. "We can do it, and we will," by the help of God. Cordially,

R. W. VAUGHAN,
Superintendent Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.
Ruston, La., Oct. 21, 1911.

CONCERNING THE ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Meek: When I wrote home that I was "particularly pleased with the impression made by Bishops Hendrix and Hoss," they were the only two of "our men" who had spoken. Subsequently each of those two great Bishops added to the impression already made on that great gathering. Every one of our delegates who was on the program or who spoke under the five-minutes rule gave a good account of himself. Our men stood up with the foremost of them. I greatly enjoyed the meeting, and the more I reflect on it the greater and deeper becomes the impression. Of all the gratifying features of the Conference, that which is most distinct and most satisfactory to me is the fact that world-wide Methodism faces the future. Proud of a glorious history, we are not living in the past. This is as it should be.

Delegates from Canada, New Zealand and Europe bore testimony, in public and in private, to the character and usefulness of Bishop Galloway. This was surprising to no American, but was none the less gratifying. Yours truly, J. R. BINGHAM.

Carrollton, Miss., Oct. 20, 1911.

WISDOM IN A NUTSHELL.

The mayor of New York is certainly an extraordinary man, and like most extraordinary men has peculiar eccentricities. There is no man who can surpass him in saying much in little or in expanding at great length. He has received a letter from California in which the writer informs him that he once deceived the mayor, to the detriment of another person, but now has got religion and feels it a duty to undeceive him. The mayor responded in the following letter:

"Dear Sir: Your letter is at hand. You state that some years ago you were a witness before me when I was a judge, and a false witness, and deceived me so that I decided the case wrongly, and that you make this confession to me because you have become a Christian, and want forgiveness.

"According to my views you have to do more than this to be forgiven. You have to make amends. Mere talk does not purchase forgiveness. Where anything is stolen or got unjustly it must be refunded before forgiveness can be expected, if the sinner is able to refund.

"That is the way I understand it. So you had better tell me what the case was, so that I may look it up and see what loss the defeated party sustained, and then you must restore his money to him or make good his loss. If this be not your view, I fear you are in error in supposing that you have got religion and are a Christian."

TOO BRAVE.

"We knew a little newsboy who is too brave and manly to smoke cigarettes. Sometimes he has to face the taunts and jeers of his companions, the kind of boys who think it is smart to smoke cigarettes, and will come up to him and ask if he can 'inhale.' This little newsboy is not afraid of the weapon of cowardice—ridicule. He would say (using his own language), 'Say, kid, cut it out; you think I'm going to burn my brains out just because you do?' And he would stand his ground and have what he called a scrap rather than let any boy induce him to smoke a cigarette."

Most of the grand truths of God have to be learned by trouble; they must be burned into us by the hot iron of affliction, otherwise we shall not truly receive them.—Spurgeon.

South Carolina is gradually becoming a white State. In the decade from 1900 to 1910 the white population increased from 557,807 to 679,162—a gain of 121,355, 21.8 per cent. During the same period the colored population advanced from 782,509 to 836,238—an increase of 53,729, 6.8 per cent. The small gain in the number of blacks is attributed both to emigration and to the death rate.

Rear Admiral Capps, who was sent to Havana to inspect the destruction of the Maine and report as to the cause, has informed Secretary Meyer that the condition of the wreck is such that it is impossible to determine the cause of the initial explosion. Apparently it will never be known until the end of time what sent the famous battleship to the bottom of the sea.

A correspondent of the London Express, in a communication to that journal, declares that the marksmanship of the Italian gunners in bombarding Tripoli was wretched, and that only three persons were killed during the entire attack. The Italians, however, say that it was their purpose to take the city with as little loss of life as possible, which certainly is to their credit. If we must have wars, it is worth something to see those waging them manifest a humane spirit. The flag of the Red Cross floating where armies contend unmistakably attests the influence of Christ among the nations, though it is not yet strong enough to sheathe the sword and hush the cannon's roar.

The Chinese in the United States and Canada are said to be generally in sympathy with the revolutionists in the home land, and to be forwarding considerable money to assist them in the struggle. A dispatch from San Francisco tells of $500,000 being sent, and it is stated that the Chinese Free Masons in Victoria, B. C., sold their building for $50,000 and devoted it to this purpose. Doubtless the Orientals who have come into touch with Western civilization realize the necessity of a more progressive government for the great Chinese Empire. "The Sleeping Giant" is evidently awakening, and it may be that before many decades shall pass there will be a modern China, which will be a mighty factor in all the important affairs of the globe.

Augustus C. Anderson, deceased, bronze medal to father and $250; died trying to save boy from drowning at Jackson, Miss., May 4, 1909, (a student in Millsaps College).

Andrew E. Fleming, bronze medal and $2,000 for education; saved a girl from drowning at Covington, Ky., Feb. 5, 1911.

John G. Walker, bronze medal and $500 towards buying a home. Walker (colored) rescued Edward W. Butler, mayor and lawyer; Green Thomas, laborer; Wm. G. O'Bear, quartermaster general, State Militia of Georgia; Legare H. O'Bear, and Julia H. O'Bear, from a runaway at Madison, Ga., June 27, 1909.

Marcus E. Benson, bronze medal, attempted to save two young women from drowning at Clover Bend, Ark., Aug. 29, 1909.

FULL COLLECTIONS URGENTLY NEEDED.

Mr. Editor: The note of warning sounded by Rev. C. B. Carter in a recent issue of the Advocate concerning what he terms the "minor collections" is a timely one.

It seems to me that if any disparagement is made between the assessments, it ought to be in favor of the more modest in their demands. If there is any distinction in the importance of the various claims represented by these collections, it is surely fully enough recognized in the difference between the amounts assessed, and should not receive further emphasis in the diversion of the amounts collected. It should be kept in mind that the work of the Church is one, and that the division of that work into different departments is, after all, merely for the sake of convenience and efficiency.

We believe that the greatest need of our Conference is an enthusiastic effort on the part of our preachers and people to raise these "conference collections" in full. We feel that they have never been adequately brought before our people and laid upon their consciences. In some way our people must be gotten to realize how vital every one of the interests represented by these collections is for the very existence of the Church.

Last year we reported a deficit of $12,408 on all these claims, having collected $26,027. The assessments last year amounted to $38,455, or about $1.14 per capita. The 33,621 members of our Church within the bounds of the Louisiana Conference paid about 77 cents per capita to all these claims. Who can doubt that the amount of the deficit last year was spent many times over by our people upon mere trifles? Our assessment this year is $46,357, or about $1.34 per capita. When we consider the great interests represented by these claims, this does not seem to be an over-assessment, as some are claiming.

If our people would only give to the various boards into whose hands these great interests are committed the amounts for which they ask, what a great work could be accomplished by our Church during the year 1912! Such a consummation would revitalize our whole work and usher in a new era in the history of Louisiana Methodism. So important are these collections and so urgent are the needs of the causes which they represent, that we believe that every pastor and presiding elder and official within the bounds of our Conference can well afford to make this a matter of chief concern between now and the meeting of the Annual Conference.

Are there not members of our Church in Louisiana whom God has blessed with an abundance of this world's goods, who can be persuaded to give in large sums, over and above the assessment on their churches, to be applied to the assessment of the Conference as a whole?

We can but feel that such large deficits in our collections is a serious reflection upon the quality of leadership in our ministry. In the event of our usual failure to report these collections in full at the approaching session of our Conference, surely the Conference could not spend some of its time in a better way than to inquire prayerfully concerning the cause of our failure, and to plan thoroughly for full collections during 1912. Let the various boards get together upon a broad and comprehensive policy, and feel that it devolves upon them, not only to levy these assessments, but also to adopt a plan to help the busy pastor in collecting them. We thoroughly believe that it ought to be done, that it can be done, and devoutly pray that it may be done. Let everybody say amen!

NOTES FROM THE ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

Brother Ledbetter has been lending himself to Texas and Arkansas in revival work. We fear that some of these brethren have envious eyes upon this useful Louisiana itinerant.

A little stranger has made its advent into the parsonage at Trout. Since its arrival, the pastor, Brother Sheppard, is reported as "preaching like a Bishop." Reports from this charge show it to be in a healthy condition.

Brother Harper, at Natchitoches, is absorbed in that new church enterprise. We are hoping that some day the Methodists of Louisiana will awake to the great importance of our work there in its relation to the whole State.

Brother McCoy has recently matriculated in Centenary College. He has felt the call of the day for an educated ministry and is determined to equip himself. He has done a faithful work on the Tioga charge under many adverse conditions.

Brother Hoffpauir has been able to perfect the organization at Rochelle. Here he had the assistance of brothers Turner and McCoy. The district has had a goodly number of new organizations placed to its credit during the last three years.

* * *

Rev. G. A. Morgan, who has the anomalous position of being junior preacher on two pastoral charges, has had several successful meetings among his churches. He has been assisted by Bros. Harper, Moore and Alford. His people say that Morgan is a "growing man."

* * *

Brother Ledbetter has recently been successful in organizing a church at Oakdale, with twenty-six members. That this has been successfully accomplished in the heart of the labor disturbance shows that the kingdom of God advances in spite of disheartening obstacles.

* * *

Rev. P. A. Swan is having his first experience as pastor up and down the banks of the great Atchafalaya River. The Methodist folk are few in number, but choice in spirit, in this region. It isn't a "dying," but a living Swan that sings the gospel on the Melville Circuit.

Our district is rich in the number of Methodisms presented within its bounds. No less than five branches of the great Methodist army are at work among the people. Counting the colored churches would swell this number to eight. We are glad to say that, in the main, peace and harmony prevail.

Brother J. A. Alford is closing his second year on the Selma charge. This little station, with its less than two-score members, will report everything in full at Conference. The pastor and people have a mutual admiration socety, and hope the Bishop will let them alone in December.

* * *

Rev. Wilson Moore, since coming from under the skilled treatment of our "beloved physician," Dr. McGehee, of the Hammond Sanitarium, has been abundant in revival work. He is now installed as pastor of the Glenmora charge, and will doubtless be able to give a good account of his work at New Orleans in December.

The influence of Freeman's great revival at Bunkie abides. The Bunkie saints are dreaming and talking of that beautiful brick church which they are going to build. Here is another charge where people and preacher are justly proud of each other. They are enough so to make a certain former pastor, who is nothing but a presiding elder now, "sorter jealous.'

Brother Purcell, as usual, is in the lead of his brethren in the number of accessions and conversions. Under his faithful ministry, the church within the Harrisonburg charge has grown by leaps and bounds, and is doubtless now in better condition than at any other time in its previous history. Valuable assistance in revival work has been rendered by Sisters Bartlett and Perdue and Brother Ledbetter and Bogan. The two former are lady-evangelists connected with the Methodist Protestant Church.

When we find a town which has fifty Protestant residents, all told, and has four Protestant Churches over against a united Catholicism which numbers its members by the thousands, we wonder if there ever will dawn a day of a united Protestantism in this great Catholic State. Here is a fruitful field of thought, to which we invite our wiser heads and more skillful pens.

The preachers of the Alexandria District feel keenly the loss of Dr. F. N. Parker from their ranks. We shall miss his safe and godly counsel and his brotherly sympathy. His ministry has left an aroma in the First Church of Alexandria that will not soon pass away. The Louisiana Conference has made no mean contribution to the Church's work of Christian education, in Carter, Carre, and Parker.

Rev. Robert Brown, that indefatigable toiler, is putting things in good shape on the Boyce and LeCompte charge. He has been making full proof of his ministry in doing much of his own revival work to the great satisfaction of his people. His brother, H. N. Brown, of Morgan City, has been with him recently in a meeting at Boyce. Here is another charge that will be saying to the Bishop, "hands off," in December.

Some of the people want Brother Montgomery, of the Marksville charge, to be furnished a flying machine to get over the territory of his charge, which meanders over three parishes. In spite of much sickness in his family and many other difficulties, he is able to report fifty conversions. Here is "French mission" work for our Board of Missions to look after. The Baptists have recently seen the open door here and put a French missionary in this field.

The new church at Jena has recently been supplied with beautiful pews. Considerable improvement has also been made on the interior of the new parsonage at Jena. The pastor, Brother Cargill, was assisted recently by his brother of the Presbyterian Church. The people were delighted with his preaching. Our Brother Cargill has recently assisted Brother Bennett in a meeting at Longville, of which the pastor reports in jubilant notes.

* * *

Rev. G. C. Taylor is winding up his fourth year as supply on the Oakdale and Fullerton (alias Dry Creek, Sugar Town, Hopewell, etc.) charge. A new church at Hopewell on this charge will be completed before Conference. Brother Taylor has largely supported himself and family by the "labor of his hands" while he has preached to the people during these four years. He has had many trials and triumphs, but will be with his brethren at Conference with a heart full of joy.

Brother H. W. May, of the Columbia charge, has been abundant in revival labors this summer on his own and neighboring charges. He reports having preached more than fifty times in one month, but seems to fatten on it. By the way, May has the largest circuit in the Louisiana Conference, from the standpoint of ministerial support. The progress of our work in that section under his leadership is peculiarly gratifying to those acquainted with the difficulties of the field. The beautiful new church at Columbia is now surrounded with a splendid wire fence and approached by a paved walk. Those Columbia Methodists don't do things by halves.

One of our leading preachers said to me the other day, Reames and Opelousas are a perfect fit. Verily, he spoke the truth. This "returned prodigal" from Montana knows how to shepherd the flock, like David, with "integrity of heart and skillfulness of hands." And oh, those chickens which Brothers R. and George know just how to raise and Sister R. knows just how to cook when the "elder comes around!" By the way, if anybody wants a delightful evening's entertainment, let him send for Brother Reames and his illustrated lecture on the "Wonders of the West." Everybody who has heard the lecture and seen the pictures pronounce them superb.

Last, but by no means least, in this account of the prophets of the Alexandria District, occurs the name of our Brother D. C. Bennett, of the Longville and Merryville charge. Faithfully he has toiled under circumstances that were trying in the extreme, but his is the faith that overcomes the world, and he positively refuses to strike anything else but a jubilant note. There has been some precious fruit to his ministry among the people, and in many homes his name is as "ointment poured forth."

And now, Mr. Editor, I must close this rambling sketch of the work and workers of this district. I would that time and space permitted mention of the faithful stewards, Sunday school superintendents and elect women, of whom there are not a few. We verily believe their names are recorded in the Lamb's Book of Life, and their record, which doesn't see the light of newspaper mention here, will shine with an effulgent brightness in the great day of His coming. God bless every one of the four thousand members of the M. E. Church, South, within the bounds of the Alexandria District!

REPORT OF JOINT BOARD OF FINANCE.

Mississippi Conference.

I have received the following this year for Conference Claimants:

Brookhaven District	$787.40
Hattiesburg District	412.25
Jackson District	672.50
Meridian District	328.00
Newton District	337.50
Port Gibson District	236.75
Seashore District	482.00
Total	$3,256.40

I have paid in full the first two quarters, amounting to $5,175. We had $1,100 left over last year, leaving a balance due me of $818.60, which I have advanced. Won't the pastors try and send in their collections at once; so we can remit for the third suarter by November 1? Brethren, some of the claimants need their allowance. Won't you help us?

S. A. TOMLINSON, Treasurer.
Gulfport, Miss.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

To the Preachers of the North Mississippi Conference.

Brethren: Please send me your money for Bishops, Conference Claimants, Minutes and Superannuate Endowment Fund. Do not wait until Conference, but do it at once, or as early as you can, not later than November 25. Send any way most convenient to you.

Your prompt attention and remittances will be greatly appreciated.

P. T. CALLICOTT,
Treasurer Joint Board.

GOD'S DAY.

Daisy is a little girl. When she comes down to breakfast on Sunday morning it is with a more winsome smile than usual on her rosy face; and her voice is always more soft and sweet, it seems, than on other days.

"I wonder how it is, mamma," said papa one morning, "that our Daisy is always so much happier on Sundays than on week days?"

Then Daisy spoke out bravely:

"You see, papa, Sunday is God's day, and I want to make it as nice for him as I can."

"Bless you, dear," said the father; "it is right for you to do so, and everybody likewise, should try to do the same."—Christian Intelligencer.

BOYS WE LIKE.

The boy who never makes fun of old age, no matter how decrepit or unfortunate or evil it may be. God's hand rests lovingly on the aged head.

The boy who never cheats or is unfair in his play. Cheating is contemptible anywhere and at any age. His play should strengthen, not weaken, his character.

The boy who never calls anybody bad names, no matter what anybody calls him.

The boy who is never cruel.

The boy who never lies. Even white lies leave black spots on the character.

The boy who never makes fun of a companion because of a misfortune he could not help.

The boy who never hesitates to say "No" when asked to do a wrong thing.

The boy who never quarrels.

The boy who never forgets that God made him to be a joyous, loving, helpful being.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

OPPORTUNITY.

There is a pretty Indian legend of a good spirit who, wishing to benefit a young princess, led her into a golden cornfield and said:

"See these ears of corn, my daughter; if thou wilt pluck them diligently they will turn to precious jewels; the richer the ear of corn the brighter the gem. But thou mayest only once pass through this cornfield, and canst not return the same way."

The maiden gladly accepted the offer. As she went on, many ripe and full ears of corn she found in her path, but she did not pluck them, always hoping to find better ones further on. But presently the stems grew thinner, the ears poorer, with scarcely any grains of wheat on them; further on they were blighted, and she did not think worth picking. Sorrowfully she stood at the end of the field, for she could not go back the same way, regretting the loss of the golden ears she had overlooked and lost.

To each of us are golden opportunities offered; let us redeem the time by giving our hearts to Jesus now, for we cannot return again to the days of childhood after we have once passed through the journey of life.—Apples of Gold.

ANTONIO, THE LITTLE SCULPTOR.

Long ago there lived in Italy a little boy named Antonio Canova. His home was with his grandfather, who was a stone cutter by trade, but very poor indeed.

Antonio was not a strong little boy. He couldn't romp, and jump, and run with the other boys in the village, but he loved to go with his grandfather to the stoneyard. While the old man was busy cutting and shaping the great block of stone, Antonio would play among the chips. Sometimes he would make a little statue of soft clay, sometimes he would take his grandfather's hammer and chisel and try to cut a statue from a piece of rock. Then when they went home in the evening his grandmother would say:

"What has our little Antonio been doing to-day?"

"He has been trying to make figures of stones. The boy will be a sculptor if he grows to manhood."

Now, there lived in the same town as Antonio a very rich man, a count. He often gave grand dinners for his rich friends, and he would send for Antonio's grandfather to go up to the great house and help with the work in the kitchen, for Antonio's grandfather was a fine cook, as well as a stone cutter.

One day it happened that Antonio went with his grandfather to the count's house. Antonio could not cook, of course.

Everything went well until it came time to set the table for dinner. There came suddenly a crash from the great banqueting hall, and a man rushed into the kitchen, very pale and trembling with fright, and holding some bits of broken marble in his hand. He had broken the wonderful marble statue which was to have stood in the center of the table.

"What shall we do?" cried all the servants.

Little Antonio left his pans and kettles, and went up to the frightened man.

"If you had another statue for the center of the table, would it be all right?" he asked.

"Surely," said the man, "if it were of the same height and length."

"Will you not let me try to make one?" asked Antonio.

The man laughed.

"Stuff and nonsense!" he cried. "Who are you that you can carve a statue at a moment's notice?"

"I am Antonio Canova," said the lad.

"The boy can but try," said the servants, who knew Antonio.

On the table in the kitchen was a huge lump of golden butter. It weighed over two hundred pounds, and it had just come in from the count's great dairy in the mountains. Antonio took one of the kitchen knives and began to carve and shape this butter. In a few moments he had finished his statue, and there, before the wondering eyes of the servants, crouched a wonderful lion—mane, great limbs and head, complete.

"How beautiful!" they cried. And the lion was carried in and put in the center of the banqueting table.

When the count and his friends came in, the first thing they saw was the great yellow lion.

"My friends," said the count, "this is a surprise to me as well as to you." Then he called the head servant and asked him the name of the artist.

"It was a little boy in the kitchen," said the servant, "who carved the lion."

Then the count bade the servant bring the little boy in.

"My lad," he said, "you have done a piece of work of which artists would be proud. Who are you, and who has been your teacher?"

"I am Antonio Canova," said the boy, "and I have had no teacher save my grandfather, the stone cutter."

All the guests crowded around Antonio. They were, many of them, famous artists, and they knew the little lad for a genius. When they seated themselves at the table they insisted that little Antonio have a seat with them, and the dinner was made a feast in his honor.

The next day the count sent for Antonio to come and live with him. The most noted artists in the country were sent for to teach the little lad, and instead of carving butter, he cut and shaped marble and became one of the greatest sculptors in the world.—Carolyn Sherwin Bailey, in What to Do.

THE TRIUMPH OF EVIL TEMPORARY.

(Wired to the American Advance of Chicago, a prohibition weekly, when Maine went wet.)

Short is the triumph of evil, long is the reign of right;
The men who win by the aid of sin, the trickster, the knave, the thief,
May thrive for a time on the fruits of crime,
But their seeming success is brief.

We know that the truth shall triumph, that evil shall find its doom,
That the cause of right, though subdued by might, shall break the strongest tomb;
That wrong, though it seems to triumph, lasts only for a day,
While the cause of truth has eternal youth, and shall rule o'er the world for aye.

—CLINTON N. HOWARD.

TWO SIDES OF NIGHT.

Clara Trotter Shaw.

It is midnight, and throughout the city great
Pandemonium breaks loose.
All Christian folk to bed have long retired,
Putting their time to better use.
But Demons of Darkness, with foul and loathsome glee
Wreak their vengeance on him who might,
For some purpose of pleasure or of business beat,
Be out this time o'night.

Doors that throughout the day on passers-by
Are locked and fastened tight,
Now open wide, and through their portals pour
The inhabitants of Night.
The city wakes, and the erstwhile quiet streets
Take on malignant form.
Evil stalks rampant, and sin and shame and crime
Walk together arm in arm.

The night is hideous with the din and noise,
The quiet stars above quake,
And twinkling out of sight, their faces hide
From humans now awake.
Methinks the pitying Christ looks down in agony
And sheds great drops of blood,
As, watching o'er the world He died to save,
He bathes it in a penitential flood.

But the scene changes. Now, come to where a meadow fair
Is bathed in pure and lucid light.
The shimmering moon from her lofty throne on high
Laughs and dimples at such a sight.
All Nature sleeps; the quiet lambs and all God's fold
Lie down until the day,
Knowing that He who watch o'er Israel kept,
Would keep them all the way.

A time for meditation, and to walk with God;
A place to hold communion rare;
A time and place to taste of purest joys
And feel we're nearer to Him there.
Under the midnight stars in such a place,
'Tis quiet, holy; and the day
That filled the soul and mind of man with anxious care
Fades swiftly as the mist away.

Two sides of night, these pictures hold to me.
In each, a monarch reigns supreme.
The one, the Devil stalks and shows to man
All that is loathsome, hellish, mean.
The other, a Jesus walks with man alone,
And in His presence pure and sweet,
All baser thoughts and evil we may feel
We lay repentant at His feet.

Editorial.

AN INDEPENDENT METHODISM NEEDED.

There is in this day much talk of church union; of the wiping out of denominational lines and bringing together in one body all the Protestant Christians of the world. If we are to judge by what they say, some think that with this accomplished, the powers of darkness would be all but vanquished and the dawn of the millennium would be at hand. That narrow sectarianism is an evil and that it has done much to hinder the progress of the divine kingdom, we think there is little doubt. The lack of fraternity among the followers of Christ and small congregations of different names in wasteful competition with one another, have long been a reproach; and, in our opinion, it is unquestionably desirable that such a state of things should cease to exist. We even go a step further and concede that perhaps there are too many denominations, and that where their beliefs are sufficiently in accord, some of them might find it advantageous to unite, and that such action might strengthen the general cause of Christianity. But that it would be wise and helpful to merge into one all of the different Christian bodies without any alteration of their variant views, we are far from being convinced. On the contrary, we think such a union would prove a source of discord and weakness and delay rather than hasten the world's evangelization.

Would it help the cause of Christ for Methodism to lose its identity as an organization and become merely an unrecognizable fragment of a vastly larger body of Christians? We do not think so. It is true that the Methodist Church holds many doctrines in common with the other Protestant evangelical denominations; but there are some things for which she has stood and upon which she has placed emphasis that the Christian world could not lose without being immeasurably impoverished. It has been her glory ever since she has had an existence to proclaim a universal atonement; the freedom of the human will, and the consequent responsibility of every man for his own destiny; a conscious salvation, unmistakably witnessed by the Holy Spirit; and a victorious Christian life, free from the guilt of sin. If the voice of Methodism were hushed, what other Church would teach with equal force and clearness these precious truths? There is not a denomination in existence that would do so.

But might not individual Methodists continue to teach them, notwithstanding the fact that they were no longer banded together in a separate organization? To some extent they might, but not with the same authority and insistence. The peace and harmony of a body made up of members of conflicting views would demand that only points of agreement should be stressed and that their differences should be hidden out of sight. A minister, Arminian in his belief, would find it difficult to teach that Christ died for all men and that all may be saved, if half of his congregation were Calvinists. He would be apt to stir up a hornet's nest if he were to state to an audience, embracing Baptists and Presbyterians, the Methodist position that those in heathen lands who live up to the light they have will be saved by virtue of the atonement of Christ, though they may never have had preached to them the illuminating truths of the gospel.

Let those who are disposed to think it would be well to merge the Methodist Church with other denominations in the foreign fields, and to unite it with almost any other body of Christians seeking an alliance in the home land, consider carefully what such a course would involve. It would mean that those primary truths of Christianity which Wesley re-discovered, and by the proclamation of which he set England aflame, and which have since enabled his followers to set in motion spiritual influences that have reached around the globe, are no longer to be made prominent. For these doctrines to cease to be taught with emphasis and urgency, would immensely weaken the world's lifting religious forces. And all the other churches of Christendom would in consequence suffer loss, for there is not one of them that is not strengthened and enriched by the teachings and works of Methodism. It took Methodism to revive a formal and dying Christianity in the eighteenth century, and Methodism is needed to keep Christianity vitalized and aggressive in the twentieth century.

The Methodist movement began inside of another ecclesiastical organization. But it was soon discovered that "the old bottles could not contain the new wine." Strong churchman that he was, Wesley sought to restrain the centrifugal tendency which it early began to manifest, but his efforts in this direction were in vain—so finally he loosed it and let it go. And now it has crossed all the seas and established itself in all climes. Its temples of worship rear their spires in every land, and its multiplying votaries are singing their songs of triumph on every shore. Nor does it yet evince any signs of weakness. Every day sees its "far-flung battle-line" still further extended, and its life-giving influence widens with each passing year. We cannot sympathize with those among us who think they have "a higher mission than to make Methodists," for to be a good Methodist is to be a Christian of the noblest type—spiritual, fraternal, and useful. Possibly in the course of the ages there may arise a Christian organization with teachings that will produce a higher order of piety and saintliness than those of the Methodist Church, but as yet such a body nowhere exists upon the planet. From the hour of its birth, its deep note of spirituality has been the distinguishing characteristic of the Church of Wesley. And let us hope that with unwaning fidelity it may continue "to spread Scriptural holiness" over the earth until the end of time.

A TREMENDOUS TOILER.

In seeking to account for the remarkable achievements and far-reaching influence of John Wesley, it is usual to place emphasis upon his splendid intellectual training and equipment and his spirituality and complete consecration. That these contributed substantially to his success is unquestionably true; but another important factor which must not be overlooked in summing up his elements of strength was his tireless energy. Perhaps no man ever wrought more incessantly than he, or husbanded his time more carefully. He knew its priceless value, and not a moment did he waste. Every hour was made to count.

It is estimated that after his return from Georgia Wesley preached 42,400 sermons, an average of more than fifteen a week, and that he traveled, mostly on horseback, 250,000 miles, an average of 4,500 a year. His correspondence was immense and his literary labors were prodigious. He wrote, translated, or edited not less than two hundred miscellaneous publications. He met the classes and official boards whenever opportunity offered, and "every public movement for the improvement of society, such as the Sunday school, the abolition of slavery, the circulation of tracts, charitable associations, and popular education, moved his sympathies and occupied his thoughts." His genius for details was most extraordinary, and nothing worth while escaped his attention. Tyerman, his well known biographer, says of him: "Looking at his traveling, the marvel is how he found time to write; and looking at his books, the marvel is how he found time to preach." Referring to his indefatigable industry, Dr. Fitchett says: "Wesley never wearied, never faltered, never doubted, never turned aside. His comrades lagged behind him; his friends forsook him; a world of angry controversy eddied about his name and character. None of these things affected Wesley. The clear flame of his zeal burned long, burned undimmed, burned still, when even the fire of life turned to ashes."

These interesting facts concerning the habits and methods of this greatest of modern preachers teach a most important lesson, namely: that there is no substitute for hard work if we desire to aid effectively in establishing the divine kingdom on earth. The lazy, easy-going minister is a reproach to the calling. No matter what one's equipment may be, only faithful, active effort can bring success. Toil and achievement are inseparably linked together in this, as in all other realms. Absolutely inexorable is the law of the harvest: "He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully."

KANSAS AND PROHIBITION.

The advocates of the licensed saloon are ceaselessly proclaiming that prohibition will not probibit; that more intoxicants are sold where prohibition prevails than where it does not, and that the suppression of the liquor traffic retards prosperity and progress. The following extract from an address on this subject delivered at the Ecumenical Conference by Dr. Claudius B. Spencer, of the Central Christian Advocate, of Kansas City, is well worth reading and reflecting upon:

"Sir, I have been asked what prohibition has produced in Kansas. And I can answer that question in this way: In Kansas the population has increased from 996,000 in 1881 to 1,700,000 in 1910, and though that is a doubling of the population almost, the prison population has fallen off from 724 in 1880 to 668 in 1910. I am proud to bear witness also that but 17 per cent. of the population in the prisons are natives of the State. In 1896, in the 105 counties in Kansas, there was not a single inebriate, and in 57 of those 105 counties in Kansas there was no one in a poorhouse—no, not one; and those poorhouses which are empty have been lent to the State to be experimental stations, and are now called 'Prosperity Farms.' It is a fact that prohibition does not always prohibit in Kansas, and in that particular it bears some similiarity to the Ten Commandments; but the fires of Zion still blaze in that State, and the law is proportionately executed, according to the testimony given to us by those in the State, as thoroughly as any other laws."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The semi-annual meeting of our Bishops is scheduled to begin in Dallas to-day.

The Mulkey meeting will begin at the Carrollton Avenue Church to-morrow (Friday) night.

Rev. J. W. Campbell was booked to preach at the Rankin Street Church, Jackson, Miss., last Sunday.

Mrs. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. James A. Duncan, at Athens, Ala.

Keep in mind the date of the Woman's Jubilee in New Orleans. It is November 3 and 4. The occasion promises to be an interesting one.

Mr. Henry Haller, of New Orleans, has donated $1,000 to the Home for Incurables, one of the most deserving benevolent institutions of the Crescent City.

Bishop W. B. Murrah and Mrs. Murrah arrived in Yokahoma on August 19. The Bishop is writing to the Nashville Christian Advocate a charming series of letters concerning his trip.

The annual revival of the Young Men's Christian Association of Millsaps College will be conducted this fall by the Rev. H. W. Bowman, of Amite, La. It will embrace the fourth Sunday in November.

Dr. George H. Corneison, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of this city, who has been absent for several months because of ill health, will return and enter upon his pastoral work by November 1.

The Travelers' Aid Society, of New Orleans, made the following report as to persons assited last month: Union Station, 361; Louisville & Nashville, 102; Terminal, 95. The relief agent aided 102 travelers.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, carried his class in geology to Byram (near Jackson, Miss.) on Saturday, October 14, to do some field work. The students report that they had a pleasant and profitable day.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, of the Osyka and Liberty charge, sends an interesting report of his work, which will appear next week. The Lord is using him in his present field, and the interests of the Church are being carried forward.

Rev. D. Scarborough, who has charge of the South McComb and Fernwood churches, sent us a nice remittance for renewals a few days since. We are grateful for his good work in behalf of the Conference organ. He serves a good people.

Read Dr. W. C. Black's discussion of "Pastoral Opportunities." The subject is an important one, and it is admirably handled. Dr. Black excelled both as a preacher and pastor when he was in the active work, and writes out of a large experience.

We print this week a highly interesting communication from the brilliant pen of Dr. S. A. Steel. We have long regarded Dr. Steel as perhaps the most charming letter-writer in the Church. Everybody reads what he has to say; indeed, if they look at the first line, they can't help going on to the end.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt, than whom Mississippi Methodism contains no choicer Christian gentleman, continues to open the way for the Advocate into the homes of his parishioners in the cultured city of Brookhaven. We thank him for interest and kindness.

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, the pastor, calls attention to the fact that we have failed to note that New Albany station (North Mississippi) is on the Honor Roll. We apologize to our faithful brother and his worthy flock. That they have achieved this distinction, does not surprise us.

Success continues to attend the labors of Rev. W. A. Bowlin on the Smithville charge, North Mississippi Conference. He wrote a few days since: "The work is growing, and this promises to become one of the best appointments tbat we have. We hope to secure a good parsonage before the end of the year."

Dr. F. N. Parker did not attend the Ecumenical Conference, to which he was a delegate, but sent a paper on "Ideal Evangelism—Formative and Reformative," which was read by Dr. F. M. Thomas, of the Louisville Conference, and which produced a fine impression. We hope to reproduce it in the Advocate soon.

Rev. K. P. Foust, our pastor at Sherman, Miss., writes: "Bishop Wilson will dedicate the new Methodist Church at this piace at 11 o'clock on November 1. All are given a cordial invitation to be with us on that day." Brother Foust further adds: "Everything is in fine shape up here; we are moving to the front."

Rev. W. J. Johnson, pastor of the First Methodist Church, of Galveston, is at the bedside of his father, Col. J. M. Johnson, who, as was reported in the Advocate last week, is seriously ill at his home in Holmes County. We regret to state that our latest information concerning Col. Johnson's condition is far from reassuring.

The Epworth League Union of Memphis held its monthly meeting with the Leaguers of the Second Methodist Church on Friday night, October 20. There are nine Leagues in the Bluff City, and they are represented as doing a fine work. Rev. Robert A. Clark, pastor of the Second Methodist Church, of Memphis, is the president of this Union.

Three books were ably reviewed by Prof. Thomas Carter in the last number of the Methodist Review, and the volume, "The Basal Beliefs of Christianity," by James H. Snowden, D.D., LL.D., was discussed in an interesting manner by Dr. F. S. Parker. The Louisiana Conference has a right to feel proud of her gifted sons at the "Hub of Southern Methodism."

In a business letter to the office, Rev. L. E. Wicht, of Washington, Miss., adds: "My work moves on very well, all things considered. My youngest son is convalescing from an operation for adenoids and tonsilitis." We regret to know that Brother Wicht has had affliction in his family, and we trust that his son may soon be restored to perfect health.

At the third quarterly conference of the Washington Street Church, Vicksburg, Rev. W. H. Saunders reported 48 accessions during the year, the attendance upon Sunday school doubled, and a Senior League organized with 23 members, and a Junior League with 11 members. The people of this congregation are reported to be much pleased with the outlook for the future.

"Old Folks' Dey" was obsehved at Parker Memorial Church last Sunday, and was a pronuonced success. The church was tastefully decorated, and there was a fine attendance of aged people, many of them coming from the Fink Home, the Shakespeare Almshouse, the German Protestant Home, and the Home for Incurables. The sermon, which was an eloquent and touching message, was delivered by Rev. W. W. Holmes.

Rev. M. L. White, of Prentiss, Miss., was in the city Tuesday of this week and favored the Advocate office with a call. For some weeks he has been making occasional trips to New Orleans to have his eye treated, spending the time while here at the Touro Infirmary. We are gratified to know that he thinks his sight has been much improved. Brother White brought with him three subscriptions to the Advocate, for which he has our hearty thanks.

Various meetings have recently been held in the city in the interest of the Men and Religion Movement campaign, which will be conducted here November 13-20. This is well. The success of this undertaking will depend largely upon the extent to which the local forces swing into line. Let prayer be made that both the team of workers from a distance and the pastors and laymen of New Orleans may be strengthened by the Holy Spirit for this season of special effort.

Under date of October 19, Rev. J. T. Murrah, of Aberdeen, Miss., writes: "Rev. J. T. Felts received a message from his father this morning that his younger brother, who has been an invalid for some time, was very near the end of his life. Brother Felts left immediately for Fulton, Ky., the paternal home. May we all remember this faithful servant of the Church in our prayers!" Brother Felts will have the sympathy of his numerous friends in North Mississippi and elsewhere in this hour of trial.

It is good news which our pastor at Hammond, La., Rev. R. S. Walton, sends out through the Advocate this week. It is most heartening to receive a report of such a revival. It attests the fact that God is still ready and willing to save when people turn to him and trust him. Brother Walton has received 81 members since the Annual Conference, and under his leadership ours has become the leading Protestant Church of the city. It is enough to make him happy to see the Lord's work thus prospering in his hands.

In a personal note to the editor, written from Toronto, Canada, on the 18th inst., Bishop E. E. Hoss, in referring to the Ecumenical Conference says: "We have had a good time, and our folks behaved admirably." Of the Bishop's part in the proceedings, Dr. E. G. B. Mann says in the Central Methodist Advocate: "The two who have been most frequently heard have been Rev. George Elliott, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Bishop Hoss, of our Church, and they have made some magnificent speeches. Bishop Hoss is a versatile man, and ready on his feet."

Under date of the 20th inst., Rev. H. W. Bowman, of Amite, La., writes: "We have closed a most successful revival of two weeks' duration. We would have continued another week, but for the inclement weather. All seemed to regret that it was thought necessary to terminate the services. The work was principally in the church. I do not know how many were converted—this I feel that I never know. But I know that the church was greatly blessed, and that we are on high ground here. I have received this year on profession of faith 32, and by certificate 15, making a total of 47."

In an urgent appeal sent to the pastors and officials of the Alexandria District to raise the Conference collections in full, Rev. Paul Brown recently said: "Over 60 per cent of the total amount assessed to the district will be used within the bounds of the Louisiana Conference. The future success of Louisiana Methodism depends largely upon our response to these claims. These assessments represent the very minimum amount necessary to meet the obligations of the Church. The assessment amounts to about $1.25 for each of the 4000 Methodists in the Alexandria District.

In a personal note to the editor, written a few days since, Rev. W. M. Young, the presiding elder, says: "The outlook in the Sardis District is good so far. The people have practically quit selling cotton, and we cannot tell how much this will affect the finances of the Church. I have some misgivings as to the outcome unless the price of cotton advances." We trust that in the midst of the present unfavorable conditions our people will do their best to see that the interests of the Church do not suffer. Short collections impose hardships upon those who are dependent upon them, and tend to check the progress of the work generally.

From Jackson, Miss., on October the 20th, Rev. J. R. Jones wrote as follows: "Brother H. E. Carter, our pastor at Monticello, Miss., and his wife, lost by death to-day their little daughter, Olive. They brought her to Jackson for treatment yesterday, but she died a few hours after their arrival, in spite of all that could be done. May God bless these bereaved parents!" Our heart goes out in deepest sympathy to this stricken father and mother, and we pray that he who alone can give comfort in such an hour may be consciously with them. Our loved ones who sleep in Jesus are only "lost awhile." Soon we shall be with them again in the Father's house.

Of matters at Starkville, Miss., Rev. W. E. M. Brogan, our worthy pastor there, writes: "I have had a pleasant year here. I am sure that you will join me in saying that no more splendid and loyal people than these are to be found anywhere. The attendance of the A. and M. College boys upon our Sunday school has been larger this year than in any previous year of our history. The school has outgrown our ability to handle it in one house, and so we have organized another school at the old United Presbyterian Church, this property being available by reason of the official disorganization of this band of worshipers by the retiring pastor, Dr. R. E. Wilkin. The new school opened with an attendance of 124, and bids fair to rival the 'mother' school in a short time."

Friday and Saturday, the 20th and 21st of the current month, the Women's Home and Foreign Mission Societies of the Greenville District held an interesting and helpful conference at Greenville. A number of delegates from the various auxiliaries in the district were present and participated in the proceedings. The presence of several of the Annual Conference officers of the societies gave an added interest, and their several addresses formed a distinct feature of the occasion. Among these were Mrs. S. M. Thames, Mrs. W. W. Scales, Jr., Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Evans. The conference is reported as having been full of interest from first to last, and was specially blessed in the presidency of Mrs. E. T. Clark of Cleveland, who is a most capable and accomplished presiding officer.

Of the meeting now in progress at Lexington, Miss., the Advertiser of that city says: "Dr. A. C. Holder, who is leading the evangelistic campaign at the Methodist Church, is fully measuring up to all that was expected of him, both as a powerful preacher and an earnest Christian worker. From the first sermon, on 'Old-Time Religion,' which melted all hearts last Sunday morning, on to the sermon last night, on 'Flee to the Mountains, and Look not Back Lest Thou be Destroyed,' the interest has been deepening and the blessing of God has attended the Word preached. Seven for the Presbyterian Church, four for the Baptist, and about thirty for the Methodist have given their names as in repentance for sin and trusting Christ as their Savior, desiring church membership. The meeting will continue until the motto, 'Lexington for Christ,' shall in as large measure as possible have been realized."

We are pleased to note that the temperance forces are becoming aroused in Mississippi, and that Dr. G. W. Eichelberger, formerly of Texas, has been chosen Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in that State. Dr. Eichelberger comes highly recommended, and he should have the hearty co-operation of our pastors and people in the prosecution of the work committed to his hands. Of him, Dr. Rankin, editor of the Texas Christian Advocate says: "I take pleasure in speaking a word in behalf of Rev. G. W. Eichelberger, the newly appointed Superintendent of the State Anti-Saloon League of Mississippi. I have been associated with him for years in prohibition work in Texas, and have always found him an indomitable and fearless worker in the cause. He has had large experience in doing this sort of work, and with us he has been successful. In our recent State campaign he rendered valuable service in counsel and upon the hustings as a campaigner."

We regret to chronicle the death of Mr. Chas. E. Chalmers, the father of Brother C. O. Chalmers, the Publisher of the Advocate, which occurred at his home in this city last Thursday morning at 4 a.m., after a brief illness. The deceased had lived a long and useful life, being in the 86th year of his age. Brother Chalmers will have the heartfelt sympathy of a host of friends in his bereavement. May God comfort him, the aged widow, and all others touched by this sorrow!

The daily cost during the past year of maintaining a United States soldier in the different localities where troops are kept is represented as follows: In the States, 22.75 cents; in Alaska, 38.89 cents; Hawaii, 29.10 cents; Porto Rico, 28.72 cents; Philippines, 24.56 cents (native soldiers, 14.57 cents); aboard transports, 22.52 cents. Chicken has been wholly eliminated from the army menu; turkey will be served only on Thanksgiving and Christmas Days, and what is called "field bread" has been substituted for hardtack. It is estimated tbat these changes in the army rations will result in a yearly saving to the government of $52,000.

HELP FROM ABOVE.

"Mary, what do you do when you feel cross and naughty?" asked a lady of a little girl only five years old.

"I just shut my lips and eyes tight and think a prayer to Jesus to come and make me feel right," answered Mary.

Mary is a wise little girl. She knows that when she is tempted she needs help from above to keep her from falling into sin.

Let us all remember that in every time of temptation we need the help of the Lord Jesus Christ to keep us from doing wrong. So, when we feel our tempers rising, let us lift up a little prayer to Jesus, and he will surely hear and answer us.—Little Ones

Little HELEN JOSEPHINE, aged 2 years, 2 months and 16 days, and the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. N. O. Holloway, of Bartlett, Miss., was called to her heavenly home September 16, 1911. Little Josephine was the best and sweetest child I ever knew, and a favorite with everyone. For four days before she died, she suffered the most poignant pain from an affection of the brain, but young as she was, she was the most patient sufferer I ever knew. Her death was the first in a family of five children, and it was very hard; but they sorrow not as those without hope, for they know that she is with God and other pure spirits like hers. Good-bye, little Josephine, for a while. May we all meet you "over there," where sorrows come no more.

HER COUSIN.

On October 8, 1911, the messenger of death visited the home of Wiltz J. and Bertie Barr Burkett and claimed their precious little WAYNE, the idol and joy of their home. Wayne was one of the brightest and sweetest of children. He had a bright smile and a sweet look for everyone, he was so interesting in his little ways. How we will miss his welcome little voice! We all loved him so much, but God loved him best and took him. He loaned him to us only two years and seven months. He took the tender bud to bloom and blossom in the bright forever. How my heart goes out for those almost broken-heated parents! It is hard to give the dear ones up, but we know that God never makes a mistake. We must submit to his will. Our earthly chain is broken, but let us live so as to compose an unbroken chain in the sweet by and by. GRANDMA.

Campti, La.

Mrs. EMALINE SPARKMAN, whose father was a Methodist preacher of pioneer days, was born April 15, 1828. She joined the Methodist Church when very young and was a devout member until death, which occurred Sept. 3, 1911. She was married Oct. 24, 1850, to Mr. Thomas Slay. Thirteen children were born to them; six girls and five boys still live to mourn the death of their dear and precious mother, who was so fond of her home, music, and beauties, and perfectly devoted to her children. She was in bad health for some time, and for several years prior to her death was not privileged to attend church worship. It is so very hard to give up mother, but Jesus, who loves more tenderly than a mother, said: "Let not your hearts be troubled; I go to prepare a place for you"—a place where mothers and children who are prepared may reunite in singing praises that will not have to end. She sleeps. Dear children, prepare to meet her God.

A. M. BROADFOOT.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. ALETHA ROSELLER COWART, was born near old Washington, Green County, Miss., December 23, 1837. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Moody. She was dedicated to the Lord when an infant, and was converted and baptized with the Holy Spirit, and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early youth. She was married to James J. Cowart Nov. 27, 1858, who died and left her May 4, 1875, with thirteen children to rear and educate, all of which she did. She taught them both by precept and example to love the Lord, whose blessed Spirit made her life so pure and noble. She died Oct. 15, 1911, in her home near Cross Roads Church, where she had been domiciled for the past seventeen years. We laid her remains to rest in the Cross Roads Cemetery, Oct. 16, 1911. It was my pleasure to be her pastor for two years, during which time she convinced me of the fact that she was a child of God. In the death of this good woman, God's Church on earth lost one of its best members, the State one of its best citizens, the family a precious mother.

G. G. YEAGER, pastor.

JOHN EVANS DE LOACH, son of J. C. and Mrs. Susan De Loach, was born at Abbeville, Miss., April 14, 1877, and passed away at Lamesa, Cal., Aug. 17, 1911. John was always a good boy. He was never robust in body, and on that account was compelled to quit school before he had finished. Despite the handicap of poor health, he was active and energetic. John knew the art of making friends, and he held them with hooks of steel. His heart was full of good impulses, and his life of kind deeds. Selfishness found no place in his generous soul. At the early age of twelve, he joined the Methodist Church at Grenada and was a consistent member to the day of his death. In his religious life, as well as in his struggle to regain lost health, he was optimistic, but not visionary. He made no great ado about religious matters, just as he uttered no complaint about his physical sufferings His devotion to his relatives was beautiful. Called to go because of failing health to the far West, he never forgot his relatives at home. Love with him was a passion. In the spring of 1904 he was happily married to Miss Mignon Taylor, of Webb, Miss. Two little girls blessed this union, who, with their mother and other relatives, are left to mourn their loss. For one so young to die, seems tragic, but God's ways are not as our ways, and he makes no mistakes. John no doubt was ready when the summons came. He confidently expected "to see his Pilot face to face when he had crossed the bar." His remains were laid by those of his father in the cemetery at Grenada to await the resurrection of the just. E. S. LEWIS.

On the night of March 30, 1911, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Peacock and took from it one of its brightest jewels in the person of little LOUISE. She was born Aug. 17, 1908. Though she was permitted to stay only a few short years, she had grown into the hearts of all who knew her. As we stand and gaze on those of our loved ones who are so cold and still, we are made to realize the wonderful power of death, and we stand mute when we look on the silence he has wrought in a human life. We can only gaze and creep with a broken heart under God's promises, which we know are constantly overshadowing us. We then see a ray of light, as through the darkness we peer. We can see, not only our loss, but their gain, and with the Psalmist say, "Blessed be his holy name, for it is only a little while and the load shall drop at the pilgrim's feet, when the steep and thorny road of earth merges into the golden street." A. S. RAPER.

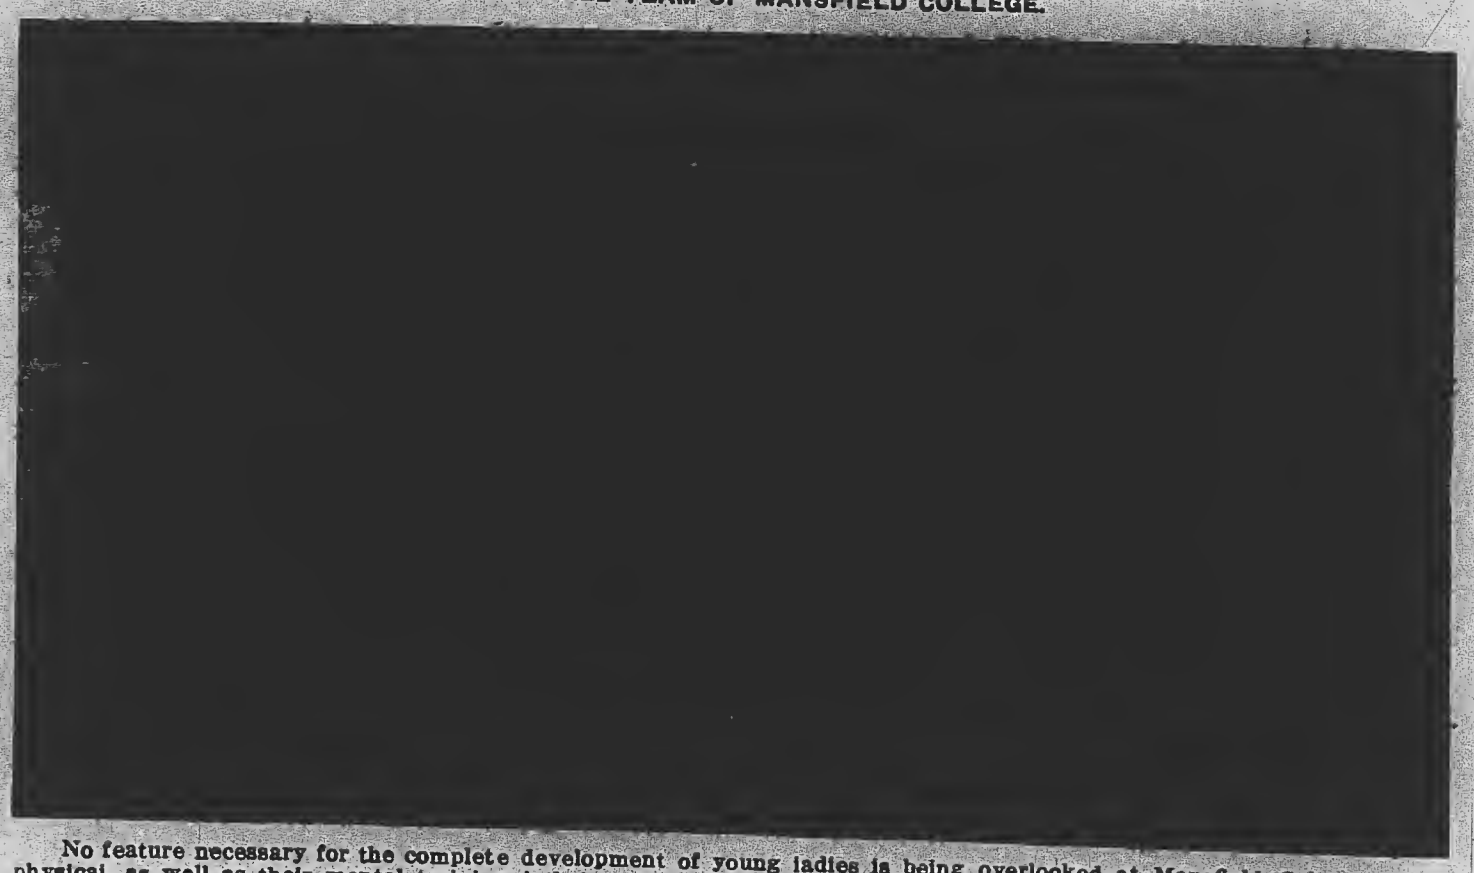
BASKET BALL TEAM OF MANSFIELD COLLEGE.



No feature necessary for the complete development of young ladies is being overlooked at Mansfield College. Their physical, as well as their mental training, is being given the most careful attention. Tennis and basket ball teams have been organized, and the school also has an excellent gymnasium, and indoor games are encouraged. This department is under the efficient direction of Miss Elaine Grimn. A course in domestic science has also been started recently.

Tidings From the Field

Clear Creek Church (Mississippi):

Having been a reader of the Christian Advocate so long, I feel that it will afford me much pleasure to write a few words for its columns. I am now fifty-four years old, and have been a constant reader ever since I was a young child. My father (Wm. Lofton) was a reader of this dear paper as far back as I can remember. Until the protracted meeting season we had one of the best Sunday schools I ever had the pleasure of taking part in. We have a very faithful set of teachers and a fine secretary. They are very punctual. We re-organized last fourth Sunday. We hope our work will soon be as it was before we dropped it. I have always loved the Sunday school. My sweetest memories are of the days I spent in this blessed work. I hope that, if it be the Lord's will, I may be spared longer that I may do more in this field of service than I have ever done in the past. I have been a teacher in the Sunday school many years. A good Sunday school means much to a community. Let every one strive to make our Sabbath school the best in our country. Our pastor, W. E. Dickens, is laboring faithfully here at Clear Creek Church. He is loved by all who know him. We always look forward with much pleasure when we can have him in our home. We are planning to have a Rally Day. We have enrolled about forty-five pupils. MRS. M. E. BOTT,
Superintendent of the Clear Creek Sunday School.

Slate Springs Charge:

We are now closing our second year on the Slate Springs Charge, and we are thankful to our Heavenly Father to be able to say that it has been a good year. The Lord has been good to us. A beautiful new church has been erected at Old Bethlehem. This church would be a credit to any neighborhood. We began our protracted meeting there the second Sunday in August. The pastor did all the preaching. We had a good meeting; received 10 members on profession of faith, and hope to get more before Conference. Cross Roads is also on the upgrade. We began a meeting there the first Sunday in August. The pastor also did the preaching there. We had an old-time revival of religion and received 5 members. Starting the first Sunday in September, we supplemented this meeting with a three days' meeting, and the Lord was with us in great power. We had 8 more additions to the church; five family altars were erected, and a weekly prayer meeting and Sunday school organized which are now doing fine work. They also have nearly enough money in cash and subscriptions to paint the church. We hope to see the work complete by Conference. The Slate Springs Church is also rejoicing over the good meeting we had here. Brother Shearer, of Morehead, was with us. He did some effective preaching. The meeting resulted in a revival in the church and in some backsliders being reclaimed. We have also painted the Slate Springs Church, put down new matting and bought new lamps. Our meeting began at Spring Hill the fourth Sunday in August, with Brother J. J. Garner to do the preaching. Brother Garner won the love of all the people, as he is a true preacher of the gospel. We had a good meeting, with 6 additions to the church. The preacher who comes to Slate Springs next year will have a good place. I do not mean by this that he will find no work to do, for there is plenty of it here. It would not be a good place if there were no work. The people of this charge are a noble people. They have big, generous hearts, and are not afraid to let their pastor and his wife know it. On our return to begin the second year's work, they gave us a hearty welcome, and on New Year's Eve they opened up their hearts and purses and gave us a big pounding. All Methodist preachers and their wives know how we felt on these occasions. The pastor is now busy getting up his Conference collections and rounding up for Conference. He hopes to bring up a clean balance sheet again this fall. May God bless the Advocate and its editor.—Mrs. J. C. McElroy.

Epworth League Department.

(Conducted by Rev. H. B. Watkins, Magnolia, Miss., to whom all communications concerning League matters should be addressed.)

Our topic to-day is "Abstinence and Prosperity," based on Jeremiah 35:1-11. The lesson as read aloud should include the entire chapter.

It would be interesting and profitable that some one should be prepared to give a brief sketch of what is gleaned from the Scriptures with reference to the Rechabites, a tribe who appear only in one memorable scene in Scripture, their history before and after lying in some obscurity. We shall in this study however confine ourselves to the facts and lessons of this chapter.

1. They were a nomadic people, possessing no property, dwelling in tents, until being endangered by the besieging armies of the Chaldeans; they were at the time of our lesson dwelling within the city of Jerusalem, when, at a time of license and debauchery, God used them as a splendid example of sobriety and temperance to his people. See verses 7 to 11.

2. They were a people of deep reverence for the customs and commands of their forefathers, one of which was that they should absolutely abstain from wine. This is the kind of honor to parents God wants, and in return for which he promises our days shall be long in the land. How much better off our young people would be if, when they go out for themselves, they would go with a profound reverence for what father and mother taught them about right and wrong. They may have known less than we do about electric cars, autos, wireless telegraphy; things have changed so. But they knew just as much about right and wrong, and the principles they taught never change. See verse 6.

3. In order to teach his forgetful people a great lesson in abstinence, Jeremiah is bidden to go into their house, invite them into the Lord's house, and set wine before them, which he does. It seems to me that their firmness in Jerusalem with the tempting pots of wine placed before them is as profitable to us as Daniel's firmness in Babylon, "purposing in his heart not to defile himself." See verses 1 to 6.

4. Out of their firmness and faithfulness God teaches his people a lesson, and threatens them with all the disasters that so speedily came upon them. In all the causes that hastened their long captivity we may count, certainly as not the least, drunkenness; and of all the forces that to-day bind men and carry them away captive, we may count this same evil. Notice that the practice of total abstinence for which we are pleading to-day had God's endorsement hundreds of years ago. See verses 13 to 18.

5. Notice that in the wake of such faithfulness to right prosperity follows, and God promises them they should never lack a man (douhtless a minister) to stand before him. See verse 19. And doesn't disaster of every kind follow intemperance? How quickly it dulls the mind, debauches the body, ruins the character, curses the home, dissolves the marriage relation, curses the children, and ruins life generally! But in the path of temperance is health, prosperity, happiness, love, peace, and all things worth living for!

The following from the Epworth Era should be carefully read by every man and boy in our land:

Alcohol and Degeneracy.

Prof. F. Martins, director of the Rostock Medical Clinic, said at the Congress of Internal Medicine, 1905, in an address on "Predisposition and Heredity," that alcohol causes a certain receptivity for other diseases, and that it affects the generative as well as other organs of the body, and that this is the main factor in degeneracy. This subject of degeneracy is one in which undoubtedly the most far-reaching investigations of all have been made. Prof. C. F. Hodge, of Clark University ("Physiological Aspects of the Liquor Problem"), found that only 17.4 per cent of the progeny of his alcoholized dogs were able to live, while 90.2 per cent of the progeny of the non-alcoholized pair were normal. Prof. Demme, of Berne, found almost the same proportion of normal and abnormal offspring in the descendants of ten alcoholic families (17 per cent) and ten temperate families (88.5 per cent) whose histories he followed. Dr. T. A. MacNicholl, of New York, found that of the 3,711 school children whom he studied over 70 per cent of those whose parents or grandparents had been drinkers were dullards. Of the children with abstaining parents and grandparents, only 4 per cent were dullards. Prof. G. von Bunge, of Basle, found from an extensive investigation that a very large proportion of the women who were not able to nurse their children were daughters of drinking fathers; that, in fact, the proportion of women unable to nurse increased with the degree of the alcoholization of their fathers. That the inability in question was accompanied with other indications of degeneracy was shown by a greater prevalence of tuberculosis and a greater proportion of bad teeth in the descendants of the drinker.

In the light of these facts, is any course but that of abstinence open to the man of reasonable sanity?

At one point in particular warning needs to be sounded loud and long. Abstinence forbids the use of all "patent medicines" containing alcohol. Many are victims of alcoholism who have been brought to their sad plight by the innocent use of these nostrums

TOPIC LIGHTS.

By Paul B. Kern.

"His Christian character hung on no perilous edge of doubtful practices." Can this be said of your Christian character?

He conquers who conquers himself—thus runs an old Latin proverb. It is just as true in English. Masters of men are first masters of self.

Christ should emancipate us from selfishness by the filling of our lives with service. The man who is in bondage to selfishness knows the depth of slavery. Christ alone can lift him.

"Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory." Here is the secret of our freedom. Let none of us think that emancipation from the power of evil can come by our own motion. "By grace ye are saved."

Has Christ set you free so that you can catch the vision of what he is doing in this old world? Do you ever hear distinctly the call of the people afar off? Sometimes the petty prejudices of ignorance keep out the world conception of Christ and his kingdom.

When Paul and Silas were in the jail at the midnight hour with songs upon their lips and chains upon their feet, the world, looking on, would have said: "Poor, deluded prisoners." But what were stocks and chains to men who knew "the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free," being strengthened with might in the inner man?—Epworth Era.

BALDWYN, MISS.

We closed a good ten days' revival at Baldwyn last night. The meeting was held under a large tent. There were 21 additions by baptism and 6 by certificate. Brother Dorsey did most of the preaching. He was spiritual and at his best in the pulpit. His sermons were direct and forceful, and he won the hearts of the people of that enterprising and growing town. Brother Duke, the pastor of the Prairie Circuit, had charge of and led the music the first week. He has a splendid voice, loves to sing, and was greatly missed when he had to leave Saturday to fill his appointment on Sunday. I go with the tent to Saltillo next Sunday. Am trying to make up the time lost during primary election, and yet be able to carry best report ever made from this charge to Conference. But I have, of course, to fight against the army worm and low price cotton. I must say, you are giving to the Church a very fine paper.

Knees Became Stiff

Five Years of Severe Rheumatism

The cure of Henry J. Goldstein, 14 Barton Street, Boston, Mass., is another victory by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This great medicine has succeeded in many cases where others have utterly failed. Mr. Goldstein says: "I suffered from rheumatism five years, it kept me from business and caused excruciating pain. My knees would become as stiff as steel. I tried many medicines without relief, then took Hood's Sarsaparilla, soon felt much better, and now consider myself entirely cured. I recommend Hood's."

Brightest, Strongest and Best

You need the most powerful and reliable light you can get when loading the wagon for market in the early morning.

Rayo lanterns are the most powerful and reliable lanterns on the market.

They do not flicker, but burn with a steady, brilliant light. They will not blow out. They are economical, because, besides being moderate in price, they give you the greatest light value for the oil they burn.

Rayo lanterns are made in numerous styles, sizes and finishes, to suit any use. Best material and workmanship. Simple in construction, yet reliable and strong.

All Rayo lanterns are equipped with selected Rayo globes—clear, red or green, as desired. Wicks inserted in burners, ready to light.

THE BLESSING OF THE HUMBLE.

I think if I were a little bolder the Lord would have some amazing surprises for me. I wish I could be something like Samuel Rutherford was with John Gordon, that wealthy laird who was getting a little wrong in his spiritual life. In one letter he said: "Read over your life with the light of God's daylight on it. Be humble, man; walk softly. Down, down, for God's sake, with your top-sail. Stoop, man, stoop; it is a low entry at heaven's gate" (Matt. 5:3).—Rev. J. H. Jowett, M.A.

A GRACIOUS REVIVAL AT HAMMOND.

Our church at Hammond, La., has just closed the most successful revival in its history. Rev. Dan Kelley, the Conference evangelist of the Mississippi Conference, came to us September 30, and on October 1 began a series of meetings which closed on October 10. The morning services were held at 8 o'clock, and although at a very unusual hour for our people, they were attended by large congregations. The very first eight o'clock meeting brought the quickening power of the Holy Spirit. Men and women at this service reconsecrated themselves to God and went forth as laborers in his vineyard. On the third night of the meeting there were manifestations somewhat similar to those of the revival that swept over Tennessee and Kentucky in the early part of the 19th century. One young lady arose before the sermon was closed, came forward and sought to unite with the Church. At the conclusion of the sermon a score or more of people stood for prayer. Some, coming forward, surrendered to the Lord, and some of the brethren, thrilled by the sight of victory, raised a shout of praise—something very unusual in these parts. The results of this meeting can hardly be expressed in words and figures. Eternity alone will be able to tell the complete results.

But as seen at present: The community as a whole was stirred; the church as a congregation was revived; backsliders were reclaimed; many sinners were converted and 45 were added to the Church, ranging in age from 6 to 80 years. One dear old lady 80 years old was converted and united with the Church.

Brother Kelley, by his deep piety and zeal, soon endeared himself to our people. All without hesitation trusted him as a leader, and now we are praising God for the victories won through his leadership. Dr. J. E. Scott, of the M. E. Church, and Rev. Thompson, of the Christian Church, attended regularly and rendered valuable assistance.

The revival meeting has left our people very much encouraged. Three or four years ago, our church here had quite a struggle. We had but a few members, and there were nine other Protestant congregations.

Some of these denominations were much better established than we were; but at present our congregation outnumbers any Protestant congregation in Hammond. Since Conference we have received 81 members and our membership now numbers about 175. To the Lord of Hosts be the praise for the growth of Methodism in Hammond.

R. S. WALTON, P. C.

PURVIS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: In looking over the last issue of the Advocate, I expected to find a report of our last protracted meeting, but did not see anything about it. I suppose the sending of it was inadvertently overlooked. And now, if you will permit, I desire to say a few words about it, as it was a memorable meeting in many respects. Our pastor, Brother Anders, some time ago announced that a protracted meeting would begin here on the last Sunday in September, and that he had succeeded in securing the services of Brother R. W. Tucker, presiding elder of the Ruston District, Louisiana Conference, but that he could not reach Purvis until the following Tuesday. Brother Anders himself conducted the services until Brother Tucker arrived, which he did promptly on time. There was much interest manifested from the beginning, and it steadily increased to the very end. It is true there were no accessions, but there was a healthy revival among church members of all denominations. Brother Tucker is not a revivalist in the sense we usually understand the word, but the consensus of opinion here is that he is one of the strongest preachers that has ever come among us. He is logical, clear and convincing. His English is faultless and his argument strong and conclusive. Many wish they had a copy of his powerful sermons for leisure study, especially his last one on Immortality. I wish I had time and space to give you a synopsis of this wonderful presentation of that subject. The meeting closed on Wednesday night, Oct. 4. The spacious church was literally packed, and no sound was heard but the voice of the gifted speaker. At the close of the service, I think every person in the house heartily shook the preacher's hand, and bade him godspeed. Some may think the meeting a failure because there were no accessions, but not so. Professing Christians were strengthened and greatly revived, backsliders reclaimed, and many outsiders resolved to live the higher life. Our community will doubtless be greatly benefited as a result of this meeting. Yours in Christian love.—C.

Effect of One Bottle.

Crandall, Tex.—"After my last spell of sickness," writes Mrs. Belle Teal, of this city, "I remained very ill, and stayed in bed for eight weeks. I couldn't get up, all this time, and though my doctor came to see me every day, he didn't do me any good. I had taken but one bottle of Cardui, when I was up, going everywhere, and soon I was doing all my housework." Cardui helps when other medicines have failed, because it contains ingredients not found in any other medicine. Pure, safe, reliable, gentle-acting—Cardui is the ideal medicinal tonic for weak, sick women. Try it.

HEALTH BRINGS HAPPINESS-
BULL'S HERBS AND IRON
BRINGS HEALTH

THE CAUSE To properly treat any disease, it is first necessary to ascertain the cause, to get at the root of the trouble. The cause ninety-nine times in a hundred is poisoned blood, for every part of the body receives its nourishment from the blood; therefore, if you have impure blood in your veins, those impurities are distributed throughout your whole body, causing sickness and disease.

THE EFFECT Sluggish, impure blood is the most disastrous thing the system has to contend with. It breeds disease; retards digestion; causes constipation; heart palpitation; dizziness; headaches; nervousness and wrecks the whole body generally. It produces that tired, indifferent, good-for-nothing feeling, brings on the blues and makes you feel as though life were not worth the living.

THE CURE W. H. Bull's HERBS and IRON is an ideal combination of medicinal herbs and Pyrophosphate of Iron, which makes it invaluable in all cases of liver, kidney and stomach troubles, and is especially recommended to women suffering from female weaknesses in any form. W. H. Bull's HERBS and IRON makes pure, rich, red blood and strengthens heart action. Invigorates the nerves and restores the organs to normal health; cleanses the bowels and insures perfect digestion; creates a hearty appetite and eliminates uric acid from the blood. Mrs. T. Dilworth, Aberdeen, Miss., writes: "I have tried your Herbs and Iron and can vouch that it did me a great deal of good, especially in cleaning up my system and in putting new life and energy into my body."

THE GUARANTEE W. H. Bull's HERBS and IRON is sold by all druggists. Here is our Guarantee. Get a bottle, take two-thirds of it, and if you are not satisfied that it is improving your health, take the remainder back to your druggist and he will refund your money—every cent of it. If your druggist's supply is exhausted ask him to order it for you from his jobber.

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

"I have read and thoroughly enjoyed MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE. A long and tedious railway journey was made pleasant because I had this book with me. I have re-read it since that time, and have gained new inspiration from it. The chapter on the Spirit of Prayer I found especially helpful. It is such a readable, understandable, Spirit-filled book."—Reader in Carthage, Texas.

A TOUCHING TESTIMONIAL is this from St. Alham, West Virginia: "I have read and re-read the book, and then I sent it to my cousin who is an invalid. He had his back broken in a coal mine and has not left his room for ten years. He was delighted."

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The Texas Avenue Church in Shreveport had an excellent Rally Day program, in which the children were did well. They were trained by sister Rousseau, the pastor's wife. Eleven dollars was received as an offering, in connection with work day for the orphanage.

Mr. William Town, of St. Francisville, once the superintendent, is a regular Sunday school attendant, at past ninety years of age. At this rate there would be but a limited field for the Home Department, so far as the time limit is concerned. Surely to him, "thy word is sweeter than the honey and the honeycomb." He is still the honorary assistant superintendent, and usually leads the public prayer.

* * *

Brother Booth, of one of the New Orleans Presbyterian churches, reports that before Rally Day in his Church the roll of members was divided among the officers and teachers of the Sunday school, who made a personal canvass for attendance on Rally Day and for enlistment in Sunday school work with fine results. Such a rally is more than a name, and will rebuke many of us who surrender our task as impossible, when in fact we only need some generaling and a great deal of faithful work.

On Sunday, the 8th inst., an Adult Bible Class was organized at Bossier City, with Miss Hattie Woodyard president, and Mr. W. A. Biles teacher. There were seven live young ladies enrolled as charter members and one young man, and they chose as their name, "The Progressives," and as their class motto, "watch us grow." Their 25 cents was forwarded with an application for a charter, and they were thus enrolled in the great Wesley Adult Bible Class fraternity.

In the recent revival at Hammond, in which Rev. D. E. Kelley, of Mississippi, assisted, there were about 48 additions to our Chruch, and 45 of these were from the Sunday school. The question arises as to how much has come from the labors of a few faithful members working in the Sunday school to bring about this result. Besides the fact of the value of the conversion of so many is but the little less important fact that they are taught converts and ready for training in useful service.

The Sunday School at St. Francisville is putting special emphasis on the Elementary Department, with Miss Crichlow, one of the public school teachers, as superintendent, and upon the Teachers' Training Class with Mr. Crichlow, the High School principal, as teacher. Both of these are capable and consecrated young people, and can render a valuable service to the Church in thus assisting the regular faithful Sunday school workers during their stay in St. Francisville. The Adult Bible Class teacher is also planning to work the organized features and ultimately to "swarm" into two classes—a young people's and an adult.

On Sunday, October 8, the Wesley Adult Bible Class of the Shreveport Noel Memorial Church completed its organization by electing Mr. Emmett Shaw, president; Mr. M. E. Williams, secretary; Mr. Earnest Houston, treasurer, and Mr. C. O. Beachamp, reporter. The class is also divided into five groups, over which Mr. Porter, Mr. Beachamp, Mrs. V. W. Cain, Miss Ada Martin, and Miss Edna Stutzman preside. When Mrs. H. R. Singleton took charge of this class, in June, there were 22 members, and now there are 100. She is still the teacher and the active leader of the class, and we may look for one of the livest classes in our Connection, given time and the new building now in course of construction.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Mrs. Helen Porter, wife of the late lamented (Gilderoy) Porter, has a good and growing Adult Class at Boyle.

Mrs. J. J. Garner has a Wesley Class at Lula—small now, but she is looking for larger and better things as the days go by.

* * *

Brother McCafferty has two good classes of grown-ups at Leland. Mr. A. K. Mathews has charge of the class of young people and will make a great success.

Latest reports give Mrs. Wadsworth, Winona, 75 fine men in her growing class, and the prospect is good for many more. This since March, 1911.

The Clarksdale Sunday school is progressing finely, and Brother Lewis is greatly interested in all Sunday school work in the fullest acceptation of the word and work.

* * *

Mrs. Elam, Greenville, has taken charge of the Cradle Roll, and will give much of her time to making this department of Sunday school work a beautiful success.

* * *

In Brother Woollard's splendid Greenville District there is much extensive and intensive Sunday school interest being taken and work done, and great results are confidently anticipated.

Mrs Mason, Benoit, has a fine class of boys, who bring their Bibles on Sunday and can quickly find references, as well as recite the Ten Commandments and many other choice bits of Scripture.

* * *

The Adult Bible Class develops the very best in every member who even half tries to do his duty; but for the man who goes into it heart and soul and with his hand in God's, the task becomes a superlative blessing.

* * *

Brother Bradley, Rosedale, has a fine Sunday school superintendent, Mr. H. D. Chaney, who has labored long and conscientiously in this fertile field. He has good teachers and a better prospect for 1911 than ever before.

* * *

Brother Bachman is a fine Sunday school worker himself. He has all the latest and best books on this great subject, and will get what you want very quickly and very gladly. It is a real joy to see him at Sunday school institutes, always busy, interested and zealously prayerful for the great cause.

The capable, consecrated and progressive class president of one of the largest Wesley classes in Methodism teaches the class well when the teacher is absent, has a rose garden in his factory yard from which he personally gathers roses daily for sick and shut-in friends, and on Sunday for the class room. He leads the class in all ways up the fine path of duty, and is a visible demonstration of the fact that a class president is the officer of great importance in this great brotherhood work. So many who ask what must a class president do besides presiding on Sabbath morning, may find here a valuable example or good suggestion.

* * *

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, Greenville, has a promising Adult Bible Class of 40 or more, with Judge Percy Bell, who is a man of splendid personality and erudition, as president. Brother Lagrone is teaching this class himself. He has a Study Circle of some 15 members also. His consecrated superintendent, Mr. Reid Dunn, has wrought marvels in his Sunday school. He used Dr. Hamill's beautiful and impressive "installation service" for his teachers and officers on Sunday, Oct. 7, thus impressing upon them the dignity, joy and honor, as well as the keen responsibility of their mission. Mr. Dunn uses the graded lessons successfully.

WINSTON COUNTY AND ELSE.

Dear Dr. Meek: I write this after a short call to assist Pastor Worley, of the Mashulaville charge. This is a section of many good homes, and of big cotton, with also some noble types of true and tried Methodist Christians. It was good to be among them. The well-kept Christian home is a constant means of grace, and, next to the Christ himself, is the corner-stone upon which rests the fabric of national greatness, and of the Church.

The meetings were well attended—especially so at one point. Brother Worley has reached the people with good success. He was this year both planter and preacher, and came out ahead upon each horn of the dilemma, but thinks his churches and family must have his time henceforth. Winstonville, known also as Fern Springs and "the skillet," was passed in the going. The springs and the skillet did not appear, but the village had a non-malarious and healthy look. Altogether, my Winston experience was rich and refreshing and entirely without hurtful incident personally. The congregations heard attentively, but the "Lo, I am with you," is needed many times by the pew just the same as by the pulpit.

We have had good revival services in my own charge; 40 additions to the church were reported at the latest quarterly meeting. Revs. J. E. Thomas, R. H. B. Gladney and R. J. S. Worley have each taken part more or less in these services, greatly to the help of the congregations. Individually, I have stood in the "gaps" and spoken some of the time in all of the meetings and all the time in some of them. We finished at Shuqualak Sunday evening, Oct. 1, with a good congregation. Brother Thompson, minister of the Baptist Church, aided at times with his presence and prayers, as also did Brother Newsom, the resident superannuate. Twelve names were announced for membership in this church, making 52 the total to date, 32 of whom were received by baptism.

A Newspaper Advertisement Probably Saved His Life.

In December, 1905, I suffered severely with pains in my kidneys and could not sleep nights on account of backache. I became run down, fell off in weight and was at that point when I thought I would have to stop my work as saw filer at the Cedar Creek Saw Mill Co.

I had used about everything and had called in my doctor, but all to no avail. After seeing your advertisement in the newspaper, I made up my mind to try Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root as a last resort. After three months' treatment, I passed a gravel stone and at the end of one year's treatment, I was positively cured of all kidney troubles. After taking the first bottle, I could sleep at night.

Now I am perfectly healthy and I honestly believe Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root to be a thorough cure for kidney trouble.

I will allow you to publish this where it may aid others who are suffering and in closing I wish to thank you for my present good health.

Yours very truly,

Prove What Swamp-Root Will Do For You.

Send to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. It will convince anyone. You will also receive a booklet of valuable information, telling all about the kidneys and bladder. When writing, be sure and mention the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles for sale at all drug stores.

Mrs. John Drew Better.

McLeansboro, Ill.—"About five years ago," says Mrs. John L. Drew, of this place, "I was afflicted with pains and irregularity every month. I suffered continually, was weak and despondent, and unable to do my housework. I took Cardui, and in one month, I felt like a new woman and worked hard all summer. I am now in perfect health, and recommend Cardui to all suffering women." Every day, during the past 50 years, Cardui has been steadily forging ahead as a result of its proven value in female troubles. It relieves headache, backache, womanly misery and puts fresh strength into weary bodies. Try it.

CHRISTIANITY CONQUERING.

How futile have been the efforts of men to overthrow the Christian religion! Nothing stands out more conspicuously upon the pages of human history than the failures of infidelity. For instance, Girard College (Philadelphia) was founded with a provision that no minister or priest should ever be allowed to come within its grounds or buildings; but it is now stated that three-fourths of its professors are religiously inclined. By a kind of irony of Providence the strength of Christianity is to-day made manifest in places where famous unbelievers lived and wrought. Thus, as is pointed by "Truths of the Bible," "In Gibbon's Hotel at Lake Leman is a room where Bibles are sold. The printing press from which Voltaire's infidel works were issued has been appropriated to printing the Word of God. Chesterfield's parlor, formerly an infidel clubroom, echoing with profanity and railery at the Christian religion, is now a church vestry, where the groans and prayers of the penitent go up to God."

Nor have the builders of philosophic systems succeeded any better in their efforts to eliminate God from human thought and affairs. Dr. W. L. Watkinson, the brilliant Wesleyan minister, says: "Our system makers find it difficult to get God out of their philosophy; when they think they have expelled him by one door, he comes in again at another; and certainly they cannot keep him out of their own personal thought and experience." The Christ whom we worship is an increasing Christ. Every passing year finds his influence more widely extended, and his name more largely honored. More and more the planet is coming beneath the sway of his scepter, and it is already true that

"From North to South, the princes meet
To pay their homage at his feet;
While Western empires own their Lord,
And savage tribes attend his Word."

IS THIS TRUE?

A writer in the New York Christian Advocate of October 5 says: "The highly educated minister shrinks often from the uncultured and vicious. The well educated man grows cool and self-possessed. He naturally represses and fastens down the safety valve of emotion. The general efficiency of not a few scholarly men would be enhanced if they would, now and then, climb down where men and things are strenuous."

This is quite a striking statement, and is well worthy of consideration. Can it be possible that education may hinder rather than promote ministerial efficiency? Such is the suggestion of the writer quoted. Of course, if of the right kind and turned to a proper account when acquired, it cannot but immensely increase one's power for usefulness. But if it should make a minister phlegmatic and unemotional, it would certainly take from him a most important element of strength. Preaching is quite as much a matter of the heart as it is of the head. The man who would make others feel, must feel himself. A passionate, sympathetic soul is the first requisite of a great orator. A person, endowed with that, may be lacking in presence, voice and gesture, but notwithstanding, when he speaks he will make an impression. A susceptible emotional nature is a valuable possession, and the preacher who, under a mistaken conception of propriety, seeks to get rid of it, to that extent weakens and unmakes himself. Tears, affected, excite a feeling of disgust; but if they spring from the heart and are genuine, there is in them a tremendous power.

But the intimation that education may make a minister "shrink from the uncultured and vicious" suggests the possibility of an even greater mistake than that of cultivating a phlegmatic disposition. Whatever else education may do, it ought to enlarge one's capacity for service—not simply for tasks that are easy and fastidious, but for the world's rough and difficult work. The equipped minister should not ask exemption from hard places. On the contrary, he should recognize the doctrine of noblesse oblige. Having greater strength than his brethren, he should insist upon being allowed to carry the heavier burdens. The Church has a perfect right to expect more of college-bred men in the ministry than any others. By virtue of their training, they ought to make better pastors, better preachers, and better evangelists than those who have had few advantages. If a theological education does not make them such, it fails to accomplish what should be its supreme aim. If the only result of attending such institutions is to enable one to command a better place and secure a larger salary, they are of but little value. The training that counts is not that which capacitates us to do more for ourselves, but more for humanity and for God. Learning, sought as an end, in itself is a snare that calls a preacher away from his true work; but if sought as a means of increasing his efficiency in winning men to Christ and building them up in him, it makes him vastly more potent for the accomplishment of good.

Let it not be thought that the ministry needs less education. On the contrary, it needs immensely more. Ignorance is a source of strength to no cause. When a pastor ceases to read and study, no matter what his age, the "dead line" is not far away. The importance of preparation for this most needed and difficult of all work is not being over-emphasized; indeed, it would be well-nigh impossible to do this. But let us insist that the instruction given shall not be of a character to so soften and refine as to unfit one to "endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." Their increased weight of obligation should be laid upon the hearts of those who are favored with exceptional opportunities. They should be made to see that "ability means responsibility," and that the Master will require much of those to whom much is given. Every life that is great in the highest and truest sense must have as its mainspring a profound sense of duty to others. The substitution of an ideal of self-culture for that of an unselfish evangelism to the lost and needy is, we think, undoubtedly one of the perils of the Christian ministry in this age.

A REGRETTABLE TENDENCY.

Apparently, in all the Churches there is a tendency to shelve the older ministers. The disposition of the people generally is to insist upon having a pastor who is young and active, claiming, of course, that he is more effective in arousing an interest and carrying forward the work. But careful observation will show that this conclusion lacks much of being correct in all instances. Youth has its elements of strength, and so has the man of mature years. The one has physical vigor, enthusiasm, and magnetism; the other has experience, discretion, and larger intellectual reach. A deeper spirituality also generally comes with the lapse of time. It takes discipline and growth to produce majestic character and saintnood. The ministry of the old preacher may not be as aggressive and opulent in visible results as that of his younger brother, but the choicer, rarer fruits of the Spirit are more apt to be discovered where he dispenses the Word.

Let the people strive to become more appreciative of the men in the itinerancy who have long borne "the burden and heat of the day." They may not be as alert as they once were, and their voices may not ring and their eyes flash as in the days agone; but the service that they have rendered and the fact that they bear in their bodies "the marks of the Lord Jesus," should tend to silence criticism and compiaint. Moreover, the extent to which the more youthful pastors surpass them in efficiency is liable to be overestimated. The methods that are noisy and showy do not always produce the most abiding results. Some one has said, "Power hath not one-half the might of gentleness," and it is far truer in the spiritual than in the physical realm that "things are not always what they seem." The following lines, recently quoted in Zion's Herald by Dr. Daniel Steele and credited to Dr. Potts, are suggestive and well worth pondering:

"A doctor, like wine, is better for age;
A preacher, like bread, must be new;
A welcome is given the medical sage,
The clerical gets the adieu.

"How strange that the cure of a physical ill
Demands the ripeness of years,
While sickness of spirit is hopeless until
A youth in the pulpit appears.'

The school authorities of New York City have decided that hereafter women teachers in the public schools shall receive the same pay as men for the same grade of work. It is estimated that this ruling will make the maintenance of these schools cost the additional sum of $3,500,000. But no matter what the increased expense may be, this action is just and proper. To discriminate against lady teachers on account of sex is a procedure that is wholly without justification. New York has set an example that the entire country would do well to follow.

Fame is the scentless sunflower,
With gaudy crown of gold;
But friendship is the breathing rose,
With sweets in every fold.

THE MEN FOR PUBLIC OFFICE

[illegible]

Because this world includes one of all the people that ever were or ever will be, and because it embraces the whole of time, it is the theatre of innumerable and varied interests, events of every kind and variety of value.

The God of Israel and the Lord of Israel speaks to us in these words, "He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God." 2 Sam. xxiii. 3.

The ruling of the Scriptures is the highest government in existence, that of God. St. Paul writing to the Christians constituting in the city of Rome said: "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Will thou then not be afraid of the power? Do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same: for he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil. Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience' sake."

These are strange words, coming as they do from a man who was born and spent a long life in the days of the most corrupt governments the world ever saw. But these words contain the germ of all true ideas of government. Government is for the protection and improvement of the moral, social, and spiritual life of the citizen. The ruler is the minister of God for good to the people and the minister of God for wrath to the evil. This is the essence of government. It is God ordained, and is derived from God. Now the plain inference from the statement is this: If government is ordained of God, then it is right, and God expects men to obey the rules put over them by the government officer. This does not mean that God will call out armies and navies to enforce it, but the moral sense of mankind will recognize it as right, and the man who disobeys it will be punished by the moral sense of the community. Therefore, it is important that men who are called to public office should be men who fear God and who will rule in the fear of God. I Sam. xxiii. 3.

Public officials must fear God or they will not rule in the fear of God.

"Such as fear God."—There are many passages of Scripture which set a special emphasis on this qualification. "He that rules over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God." Hence it is said that the judges themselves are not the men, but the Lord, who is present with them in the judgment. "And he charged them, saying, Thus shall ye do in the fear of the Lord faithfully and with a perfect heart." Now the word "fear" in these and like passages does not mean "to be afraid of," but it means "to have a reverence for" God. Reverence for God as the Supreme Ruler acknowledges Him, not as a mighty but capricious tyrant, but as a righteous ruler, one of the relations existing between the Supreme Ruler and the subject. God as the "Good Ruler" over all men and all things is the acknowledged source of all good government. This great truth was recognized in the foundation of our government and is recognized to-day. It was this truth that led the early rulers of the people to call upon God in the Supreme Ruler to witness their oath that they will administer the affairs of their office in the fear of God. Reverence for God as the Great Ruler should be one of the chief characteristics of a public official. There is another thing having direct force in this reverence for God. The man who reverences God will have a proper regard for his fellow-men. The man who has no fear for God cares for no fellow-man, and he is not to be trusted to observe his oaths of office. Jesus Christ has put these two things together and they cannot be separated. He says: "There was a certain rich man which feared not God, neither regarded man." A public official who has no regard for his fellow-men cannot make a good officer. And yet this regard for man is conditioned on reverence for God. "A man who has no fear and reverence for the Divine Being, why should he pay any regard to man?" In a government like ours the first requirement in our public officers is a proper fear and public officers are the servants of the people, but the people always put a premium on those who serve them, and a man is more than a match for his fellow-men who is not afraid of God. The idea of being the servants of the people has no place in their minds. You recall the fact that as far back as Shakespeare's time they talked and ridiculed at the "tenure of office." The reason for this insolence is found in the lack of reverence for God. The man who does not fear God will not rule in the fear of God, and he will not rule for the benefit of the people.

[illegible]

true men—men whose speech and actions are not under the absolute dominance of truth—is to start in public affairs a process of disintegration which will crumble to atoms the foundations of the strongest government. Solomon, the wisest and most successful ruler the world has ever had, sums up his experience and observation on this subject in a unique comparison, which everybody here to-day knows to be true. He says, "Confidence in an unfaithful man"—that is an unreal man—"is like a foot out of joint." You can't walk with a foot out of joint. You can't trust that foot. It is out of its proper relations, and if you trust it you will be painfully disappointed. No more can you trust an unfaithful man, whether he is in public office or in private life. In public affairs we want men whom we can trust, in whom we can repose implicit confidence—men true to the principles of truth—men true to themselves and true to their fellows—men true to the great interests of organized society and to the organic principles upon which this great and free government of ours is built. God's Word recommends for public office that sort of men—"men of truth."

The last qualification for public office which the Word of God enumerates is this: "Hating covetousness." The very mention of this qualification brings us up against the darkest page in the history of government. Until within a recent period human history has confined itself almost exclusively to recording the needs and sayings of public men, and all along that record we note the blots, even in the best governments, caused by this dreadful thing which the Scripture has named "covetousness." What is it? It is the illicit desire for that which belongs to another, and it is the bane of social life and the greatest hindrance to the advance of all good causes, and it is this very day eating away with its insatiable jaws the foundations of our national and state governments. A man has only to read the daily papers to see how widespread is its influence and what devastation it works wherever it is cherished. It is the most insidious and wary force with which a man has to deal. It comes to a man under the guise of a desire to improve his circumstances, and the first thing he knows there is standing in his heart a horrid specter, with arms long enough to clutch the world in their embrace. It corrupts the affections. It blinds the inteliect. It perverts the judgment. It dulls the understanding. It clouds the imagination. It transforms man, made in the image of God, into a beast only greedy for gain. Its moving impulse is gain. Its motto is gain—gain at any price—at any cost. There is nothing too low for it to stoop after—nothing too sordid for it to pass by—nothing too degrading for it to neglect—nothing too despicable for it to attempt. It converts the human heart into a charnel-house filled with dead, noble principles. It enters the home, and its chilly breath freezes up all the pure and beautiful domestic affections. It comes into the social circle, and a withering blight falls upon all its cherished hopes and fond aspirations. It enters into public affairs and speculation and embezzlement and fraud spring up on all sides. Just look over the daily papers for a week and what do we see? Embezzlements of private funds, bank defalcations, frauds on the government, great corporations "watering" their stocks, municipal governments on the brink of bankruptcy because of officials, burglars robbing railway trains and petit larcenies, and so the record goes on and on and on ad infinitum. What does the dreadful record mean? What is it that is back of all this horrid outcome? Nothing but covetousness. What is the prime mover in all these robberies and stealing? This inordinate love and desire for money—for the money that belongs to somebody else—is the direct cause of the rascality and scoundrelism that are made public in the daily papers. Is it any wonder that Jesus Christ should sound an alarm that comes ringing along down the ages to warn men of this deadly foe? He lifted up his voice and cried to all the world, "Take heed and beware of covetousness!" Everywhere in the divine Word it is denounced as man's bitterest and deadliest enemy, sapping the life out of all noble principles and reducing men to the level of the hyena ravening for his prey. And yet it spreads its influence further and grows stronger until it has come to be a byword that "every man has his price." There are men and women in our town and in every other place into whose lives the dreadful virus has been injected and it is eating away their manhood and womanhood, and they don't know it. And why has it come to spread so widely and to exert such a dreadful influence? Because men will not believe what God says about it. The Word of God declares in plain terms that "the love of money is the root of all kinds of evil," that it "leads men into many foolish and hurtful lusts," that it "drowns men in destruction and perdition." It is repeated over and over, iterated and reiterated all through the Book that no covetous man can enter the kingdom of heaven, and yet there are covetous men in the churches, and they are dreaming of going to heaven when they die. What does the Word of God say as to that? It says: "Go to, ye covetous men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are moth-eaten. Your silver and gold is cankered and the rust of them shall be a witness against you and shall eat your flesh as if it were fire." That is the haven they will reach.

And yet, in spite of these terrific forecasts as to its final results, covetousness runs through society like a contagion. Infectious and contagious, it has well-nigh become a universal epidemic, and so much so that there are millions of people to-day who believe that every public man and every man in private life can be bought, if you are willing to pay the price. What a comment on our civilization, on private honesty, on public integrity, on our social morality, on our religion! But I do not believe it is true. To believe such a thing is to abandon all hope and deliver the family and society and the Church and all governmental affairs over to thieves and robbers.

Brethren, what are we confronted with to-day? Look at the national government and see the great postal frauds, and other national scandals! Look at the great cities of our country and see how the "boodlers and grafters" swarm and flourish. In many of the smaller cities and towns we see the same bad things in vogue! Oh, it is enough to sadden every soul and make the angels weep! Who is responsible for this state of things? Somebody started it. There is responsibility for it somewhere. I stand here to-day in this sacred place and lift up my hand to heaven and call the angels above and this audience of sensible men and women to witness that I charge all these wicked abominations to the spirit of covetousness. That spirit is winning individual manhood and despoiling the purity of womanhood! That spirit is weakening the peace and beauty of homes and saturating society with the withering miasm of death! That spirit is debauching the integrity of the legislator and staining the ermine of the judge! That spirit is throttling the honesty of puhlic officers and filling the precincts of the courts of justice with the stench of moral putrefaction. That spirit, not in a quiet way, but with an insolent blare of trumpets, has invaded politics, and men fawn and cringe and lay their manhood in the mire! That spirit has insinuated itself into the holy place of the Church, and her benevolent enterprises are impeded and checked to satisfy the insatiableness of its greedy maw! That spirit is beginning to enter the hearts of our young men and young women and is blighting all their holy aspirations and quenching all their laudable ambitions, and is taking all the sunshine out of their lives! I charge it all to the spirit of covetousness. This greed of gain—this inordinate love of money for its own sake—is running riot in the hearts of men and making havoc among the nobler impulses of their natures. No savage warrior, with his uncounted legions of ferocious barbarians ever left in the track of his march such devastation and degradation as marks the awful path of this foul spirit. Is it any wonder that God should warn men against it? Is it any wonder that Jesus Christ should cali men to beware of it? Is it any wonder that the apostles should thunder against it? Whence came this foul spirit? From the infernal regions, assuming the insinuating address of the Prince of Darkness and breathing the hot hreath of hell, it comes to our fair world to desolate and destroy. There is not one mitigating feature to offset its horrible repuisiveness, and the world will never be secure until it is driven back to its original home and confined there hy the strong hand of the Almighty God. The qualification is "hating covetousness." It deserves to be hated with all the soul, mind and strength. Now, you voters put the men in office who "hate covetousness" with a perfect hatred, and all your public finances will be safe.

"And thou shalt provide out of all the people men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness, and place such over them to be rulers." Can any sane and sensible man object to characters made up of these qualities? Here is a combination which is indeed beautiful to behold. This combination makes "the highest style of men." Here is a manhood worth striving after.

The men that are true and strong and wise and brave are the men for public service. In such hands the public interests are safe, the well-being of the people is promoted, the progress of improvement along all legitimate lines is secured and the great ends of free government are attained.

Now, you have in brief outline the chief characteristics of the men whom the Bible recommends for public office. God knows all about government, and when he speaks about the qualifications of the men who are to carry on governmental affairs, there is nothing more to be said. What God says is the final word on the subject. If we align ourselves with him and work up to his ideal, we will best promote the interests of our commonwealth.

DR. CARTER'S COMMUNICATION COMMENDED.

In the Advocate of Oct. 19 there is a timely article from the pen of Dr. C. W. Carter, written to Timothy, which, in my opinion, deserves a wide reading. He calls things by their right names, and I trust that every one who is thus guilty will act as "becometh" men who are called to preach the gospel. In my comparatively short itinerant life, I have heard some few men start out in a sermon "soaring aloft," and suddenly drop to themselves, or drop altogether. From a great man, and a minister, I once heard these words, "Begin low, and then go on up." There are reading people in almost every audience, and while the minister may feel that he can, at times, presume upon the ignorance of his congregation, yet sooner or later, some one will note the fact that he is "borrowing" or "stealing," if he continues to misappropriate the thoughts of other men. When I was serving my people on my third pastoral charge, there was a minister—not a Methodist, however—who preached a sermon from the text, "Adam, where art thou?" and it was Moody's sermon on that text, published in his twelve select sermons. Dr. Carter, while not in the "effective" work, is most assuredly rendering the Church "efficient" service in these writings. We honor him and bid him god-speed, and our only regret is that he does not find it convenient to write oftener.

LAID TO REST.

Dear Brother Meek: Yesterday, assisted by Brothers Paul D. Hardin and Dan Scarborough, we buried here little Olive, the eleven-year-old daughter of our Brother and Sister H. E. Carter, of Monticello, Miss. While this was an adopted child, having been taken from the Methodist Orphans' Home at the age of four years, yet we doubt whether her own parents could have given her a greater wealth of love than was poured into her little life. Her going away was very sad, indeed, and this bereaved home will have the sympathy of our entire Conference. Yours cordially, H. B. WATKINS.

We take the following from The Wesleyan Christian Advocate of October 27: "Bishop Wilson preached at the Wesley Memorial Church, this city, last Sunday morning, and made a talk at night on the recent Ecumenical Conference and what it showed. On Monday morning he left for Oxford, to visit his daughter, Mrs. Weber, and on Tuesday he and Bishop Candler left for the October meeting of the Bishops, to be held this week at Dallas, Texas. That does not look much like our 'senior' Bishop is doing 'light' work."

Mr. Yone Noguchi, writing on "The Truth About Intellectual Japan," in the New York Independent, refers to "the present faithless age from which we moderns do not wish to escape." Notwithstanding the fact that this son of the Orient seems to be proud of his skepticism, it is reported that the Emperer of Japan is contemplating issuing an edict making Christianity the official religion of the empire. Perhaps the Mikado, like Napoleon, is wise enough to know that the foundation of a State must be laid in something more solid than the negations of infidelity.

Concerning Missions.

A PROFITABLE MEETING.

The district meeting of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Baton Rouge District was held at Wilson, La., Oct. 21-22, 1911. There was a good program arranged and it was carried out to the letter. The president, Mrs. B. E. Eskridge, called the meeting to order at 3 p.m., Saturday. Reports were received from Amite, Baker, Baton Rouge, Franklinton, Gayden and Pine Grove, Hammond, Jackson, St. Francisville, Zachary, and Wilson.

There was an excellent paper on "Our Missionaries," prepared by Mrs. C. C. Miller, of Hammond, and read by Mrs. J. C. White. Miss Mattie Hooper had a good paper on "Home Missions in the Southland." Mrs. C. C. Devall, of Baton Rouge, represented the prison reform work. Miss Richardson, of St. Francisville, had a good paper on "Our Scarritt Bible and Training School." At 8 p.m., all enjoyed a reception at the home of Mrs. G. A. Steadman. Sunday, at 11 a.m., after devotional exercises conducted by the pastor, Mrs. A. P. Holt, of Crowley, gave us a good talk on the woman's work in general. In the afternoon we were entertained by recitations, drills, music, and another talk by Mrs. A. P. Holt, on "Our Young People's Work." At 7:30 Rev. H. G. Hawkins, D.D., from Port Gibson, preached us a good sermon on "Go ye into all the world." Thus ended a good and profitable meeting. May God's blessings ever rest upon our good women in their work!

RESOLUTION OF THANKS.

(Adopted by the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Durant District, in its recent session at Pickens, Miss.)

The cycle of time has wheeled the revolutions of another year, bringing together the Home Mission Society of the Durant District in its fourth annual session; therefore, be it resolved:

First—That we praise God, from whom all blessings flow, for his merciful kindness and guidance.

Second—That we extend thanks to the dear people of Pickens for their cordial greeting and abounding kindness; and to the gentlemen for so courteously extending us the use of their automobiles. You have made us feel that the chain of love binding us has received an extra cementing with links unbreakable.

Third—To Brother T. W. Dye, the pastor, and the visiting ministers for their encouragement and the kindly service rendered.

Fourth—To the organist and choir for their beautiful songs that have inspired us to discharge more perfectly the sacred duties for the performance of which we are united as a band of workers.

Fifth—To the committee on decorations for their lovely offerings of roses, lilies, ferns, and other flowers—the least of which bear to us a message of Christ's love.

Sixth—To Mrs. Fannie White for the royal hospitality shown in opening wide the doors of her home for the reception given by the ladies of Pickens in honor of the occasion.

Seventh—For the earnest and instructive words of Brother W. M. Williams, Mrs. Walter Campbell, Mrs. S. M. Thames, and Mrs. Walter Trotter, who greatly helped us, and whom we cordially invite to be with us in our fifth annual meeting in 1912.

Signed: Mrs. C. T. Carnes, Mrs. Mary J. Williams.

Senator LaFollette is said to have expressed great admiration for Col. Robert G. Ingersoll in a recent magazine article. The Chicago Advance does not think this declaration is calculated to strengthen him as a presidential possibility.

The number of students at Harvard University is 4118, a gain of 99 over last year. The college proper has in it 2253, and the entrance class numbers 744, the largest in the history of the institution. The registration in the divinity school decreased from 49 to 43.

The annual session of the Association of American Universities met at the University of Chicago on October 26. Among the other subjects of interest discussed was that of college athletics. It is announced that Dr. Butler, the head of Columbia University, remains firm in his view that football is an undesirable game, and that a number of other college presidents have now assumed the same attitude.

The Chicago publication, "The World To-day," which has been edited by Dr. Shailer Matthews for several years, because of a lack of patronage, has changed hands. This periodical was the successor to a weekly, known as "Christendom," which was also a financial failure. It is stated that William R. Heart is the controlling factor in the company which will take over the unfortunate magazine. This is regrettable, since the standard of journalism maintained by Mr. Hearst is by no means an exalted one.

Dr. Cook, who won notoriety by his fraudulent claim to have discovered the North Pole, visited Copenhagen a few days since, and had to be protected from the indignant crowd by the police. It will be remembered that the Norwegians were the first people to honor the Doctor when he returned from the far North with his wonderful tale of discovery, and it is not surprising that they should feel outraged by the deception which he practiced upon them. It is stated that Dr. Cook has abandoned his European lecture tour. He fully deserves the treatment which the public has accorded him.

It is claimed that the city of Baton Rouge has reduced the number of fires 80 per cent within the past two years by providing for a careful inspection of the flues in all buildings and requiring the defective ones to be reconstructed and made safe. The Rating Board of Texas is reported to have kept this year a record as to the causes of fires occuring in that commonwealth, and it is stated that the number is 3,182, of which 15.6 per cent had their origin in faulty flues. The amount of property swept away by flames every year is enormous, and the efforts which are being made to guard against such losses are needed and timely.

A press dispatch from Seattle, on October 22, stated that five carloads of hair, imported from China, had been shipped from there to New York, to be used in making curls and puffs. It is said to have been easy to obtain this large amount because of the imperial edict in China to cut off queues. That American women are willing to purchase and wear hair procured in the Orient, when it is known that numbers of cases of leprosy have resulted from this, is somewhat surprising. Many despotisms have been shattered by modern progress, but the tyranny of fashion seems not to have been much shaken. The slavery which it imposes may yet be observed in all lands.

Mr. Henry George, Jr., of New York City, who represents the Seventeenth District of the Empire State in Congress, had an engagement to speak at the First Unitarian Church of New Orleans last Thnrsday night, but was prevented from meeting his appointment by a delayed train. Mr. George is a firm believer in the single tax theory made famous by his distinguished father, and in an interview given out while here claimed that this plan of taxation is gaining in popularity in the United States, especially in the Northwest. Mr. Henry George, Sr., was probably one of the most original thinkers that America has produced, and his works are yet widely read. His "Progress and Poverty" is really a great book.

The Philadelphia Press affirms that the Oklahoma law taxing state banks to guarantee the deposits in them has been far from satisfactory. The numerous failures of such banks is said to have incited many of the more solvent of them to take steps to become national banks, which would give exemption from the assessments to make good the losses of depositors in the institutions which are recklessly managed. It may be well to require banks to guarantee the deposits made in them, but it is contended that this should be done by an indemnity bond, or in some other way that would make every bank stand on its own merits. It seems scarcely just to require the cautious, conservative banker to make good the shortages of those who are slipshod in their methods and take all sorts of chances.

From The Presbyterian (Philadelphia) of October 18 we take the following: "Inquiries have been numerous as to what the government has done concerning the acceptance of the silver tray designed for the battleship Utah. It will be recalled that there was widespread protest against this piece of silver becoming the property of the Utah, because it bore a design of Brigham Young, and of the Mormon temple, both thoroughly antagonistic to patriotism. Last week, those opposing the acceptance of the original tray offered Secretary Meyer a substitute for it. The new tray is a facsimile of the other, except the offending designs have been replaced by a feminine figure, typical of the State. The Secretary of the Navy now will decide between the two."

Postmaster General Hitchcock, who has set his heart upon reducing the expenses of the Postal Department of the Government, is still running amuck of difficulties. He recommended to Congress that magazines be required to pay for the transportation of pages made up of advertisements at a higher rate than those filled with reading matter; but Congress did not see fit to adopt his suggestion. So lately the Postmaster General has undertaken to classify the second-class mail matter, sending heavy periodicals by fast freight trains, and light matter by passenger trains as heretofore. But this has displeased the publishers of the Review of Reviews, who have gone into court to defeat this ruling of Mr. Hitchcock. We have been generally in sympathy with the protests of the various publications of the country against an increase of postal rates, but it would seem that there ought to be some limit to the extent to which a periodical is allowed to send advertising matter through the mails at the rate given papers that are supposed to be educational in their influence. We are inclined to think that Mr. Hitchcock's position has much to commend it.

OUR COLLEGES.

Dr. Henry Churchill King has asked: "Is religion of really fundamental importance, or can we easily dispense with it? Is the real trend of the scientific, educational and ethical life of the world away from religion or toward a deeper recognition of it? Is religion something external, to be merely tacked or pasted on to life, or is it absolutely fundamental to life, touching every part of it?" No questions can be more important than these questions; the answer to none concerns us more deeply.

What is the relation of religion and education? I think it might be said that the ultimate aims of religion and education are the same, or at least they work hand in hand. Education seeks to bring out the whole man in his highest harmonious development. Of course, education does not always come up to this high aim. But educated in all the wisdom of Egypt, with his religious life developed, Moses was enabled to choose the right, and it will enable the young men and women of the twentieth century to choose the right, and choosing the right, or the ability to use one's full powers in a wisely chosen way, is an important part of education.

We are sometimes confronted with a sneer at church colleges, as though they were feeble and ineffective, while in fact the church colleges have been the pioneers in the field of higher education. Harvard was founded in 1636 by the Congregational Church, with special reference to the education of ministers. Yale, founded in 1701, was designed to inculcate a more orthodox Christianity than Harvard was supposed to represent. Princeton was established in 1746, and was intended to supply the Church with learned and able ministers. The church colleges multiplied until every Church was represented, and people in every section were reached. In spite of the great State universities and largely endowed private institutions, the Church continues her educational work, and reaches through her colleges thousands who could not be reached in any other way. The Methodist Church has a record for education of which we may well be proud. But let us say in a whisper, our Methodist people do not always stand by and give their loyal support to these colleges. Does it pay to support our institutions? Yes. No church can rise above her colleges.

Let us glance for a moment at some of the men who have been educated in these colleges. We find by reference to "Who's Who" that two-thirds of the members of Congress in 1905, who were worthy of being mentioned by "Who's Who," were educated in denominational schools. Eight of the supreme justices of the United States were college-bred men and seven of the eight were educated in denominational schools. Eighteen of the presidents of the United States were educated in college, and sixteen of the eighteen were educated in denominational schools. Of the twenty-six masters of American literature, eighteen were educated at college, seventeen of the eighteen in denominational colleges.

What shall we as preachers and members of the Methodist Church in Louisiana do, in view of these facts? Dr. F. R. Hill, president of Centenary College, and President A. B. Peters, of the Mansfield College for Women, are giving their time and thought to this work—shall we not hold up their hands and do our part in this important work, in maintaining and carrying it forward?

May not Louisiana boast as great as any other sister State?

"We can, if we will." Let us make it, "We can, and we will."

MEN NEEDED.

By Rev. John Tillery Lewis.

David used the following words in his last charge to Solomon: "Be thou strong therefore, and show thyself a man." David's powers of observation had enabled him to discover that it takes as strong a character to maintain a nation in an exalted position among other nations as it does to put a nation among the leading world powers; hence his advice to Solomon. The position of king, to which Solomon was about to fall heir, was not then, nor is it now, a place for one who is less than a man. Such high positions cannot be successfully filled by weaklings. Poor David had experienced the humillation of the absolute and complete disgrace of his son, Absalom, because of the manifestation of an unmanly spirit on his part toward David. In view of the shameful life and ignominous death of Absalom, and the great responsibilities to which Solomon was about to fall heir, David could but have a feeling of deep solicitude for Solomon. His whole heart went out to Solomon in those words: "Be thou strong," etc. And well did Solomon's latter days prove the wisdom of those forceful words. As long as Solomon proved himself possessed of a manly spirit, just so long did he conduct the affairs of Israel upon a noble basis. But when he ceased to be a man, and sunk to the level of a mere animal by stifling the higher instincts of his soul and giving free play to his physical senses, he then set in motion those hellish forces that not only accomplished his own undoing, but also wrecked the throne of Israel and tore the nation asunder. But the time for Solomon's taking hold of the reins of the government of Israel is not the only time nor place where men have been needed in the history of the world. It is the predominance of the animal spirit over the soul of man that has caused the wreck and ruin of every nation in all the sad history of the ages past. It is the hellish principle, put into operation by selfish-minded men and sets of men, that "might makes right" that is responsible for the bleaching bones and groaning souls that mark the pathway of civilization. Generally speaking, the world has heretofore been controlled by personalities who dress like men and walk like men, but who, in their conduct toward the helpless, act like demons.

What is it for one to "be strong and show oneself a man?" In the higher meaning of that word, is he a man who holds the world's championship in the pugilistic field? Not if that is all that he possesses by which to measure himself. The body of man, no matter how strong and beautiful it may be, is only the house in which man lives. As one has wisely said, we have a "double nature, namely, we have that in us which links us with the animal downward, and we have that in us which links us not less certainly with God upward." That person, male or female, who cultivates the fleshly desires and animal passions is constantly becoming more and more selfish and arbitrary in his disposition. Such a person, no matter how beautiful or strong, is not a man, but a brute—a hog. On the other hand, the person who cultivates the God nature in himself and seeks to obey the "golden rule"—"as ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them"—is a man in the true sense. The Greek word for man is "anthropos," which means "he who, or that which, looks upward." So you see the writer, in his definition of man, has gone back to first principles. Having defined man, let us look into the needs of the world and see if there is a place for such a being.

As we look upon the needs of the world, it is our opinion that should God voice the greatest need of the world to-day he would speak in thundering tones: "Men are needed."

We need men in the private walks of life. What is it that brings into existence and fosters the liquor, gambling and red-light districts of our larger towns and cities? Is it the moral welfare of the younger generation that is causing the toleration of such hell holes? Does the world think that by the presence of such evils the world is made happier? Is their presence tolerated for the common good of mankind? Every sane man will say, "none but a fool would seriously ask such questions." True, but friend, if these places of evil are not tolerated for the moral uplift of the younger generation, nor for the common good of mankind, then pray tell me why are they here? There is but one answer: They are here because of the private financial gain to individuals who are so far lost to the true spirit of man, that for the sake of dollars they will sacrifice lives and set traps for the damnation of souls; yea, they will run the risk of consigning their own sons and daughters to lives of shame, that thereby they may rake in the almighty dollar. What the world needs is men who obey the golden rule. But, says some one, to live such a life means sacrifice and self-denial. True, but the glory of manhood lies in the ability to make sacrifices for the advancement of the world. No person who runs from sacrifices can boast of manhood. The world needs men who consider the moral well-being of the younger generation before their own private affairs—men who are too near akin to God to traffic in the bodies and souls of the young for the sake of a few paltry dollars.

We need men in the political world. There are two classes of individuals that are a curse to the world—the machine politician and the demagogue. The one feeds upon corrupted ignorance, while the other grows great upon prejudiced ignorance. The one plays upon the harp of gold, while the other plays upon the harp of hate. Neither of them are men. One seeks for political preferment by the promise of graft, while the other feels the pulse of the masses and then throws himself at their head as the leader of their passions. Oh, how badly we need men in public life! We need men who get their thoughts from God and not from the masses. Gladstone was such a personality. Disraeli, on the other hand, was a politician. The two were contemporaneous, and were leaders of opposing forces in the House of Commons; but Gladstone is considered as perhaps the greatest statesman the world has ever produced, while Disraeli will go down in history as only a shrewd politician. Why the difference? Gladstone got his thoughts from God, while Disraeli was controlled wholly by the opinions of those whom he sought to please. The world needs more men like Gladstone and Lamar.

We need men also in the Church. Now and then we hear that there are political rings even in the Church, and some tell us that it often happens that capacitated men are kept down for the sake of the preferment of less capacitated men, because of the personal relationship of the latter to the "powers that be." How true these charges are, this writer cannot say. However, if there be truth in them, then I would be false to the purpose of this article should I refrain from exposing the diabolical spirit of such characters. If there is a place upon earth where the designing political spirit should have no existence, that place is the Church of God. How in the name of heaven are we to reform the world, if we descend to the level of the world? As long as the Church is dominated by men who listen to the call of ambition, that feeds upon material similar to that of the world, we can never hope to raise the world far above its present mode of life. If the ministry be composed of men who think more of their advancement than they do of forwarding the kingdom of God, then how can the Church expect to lift the world to any great height? If ministers occupy themselves with the task of preaching great sermons, that thereby they may be classed with the thinkers of the day, rather than with the business of earnestly seeking to be the mouthpiece of God, how can the Church help the world away from those diabolical principles which have so long been the curse of the world? Yes, we need men in the Church—men like Martin Luther, who, though possessed with qualifications for great advancement in the Romish Church (which he might have had by falling in with existing conditions), chose rather to speak the truth, even though the Pope of Rome was condemed thereby. Yea, rather than prove false to God and the trust committed to his hand, Luther would have welcomed death.

Then, gentle reader, whatever place you fill in the world, whether in private life, state or church, "Be thou strong therefore, and show thyself a man."

Clarksdale, Miss.

AN URGENT APPEAL.

To the Preachers and People of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: From the postal cards issued by the Joint Board of Finance, asking information as to collections for the worn-out preachers, we have practically an estimate as to the result in every district. Now the Board wishes to place the following facts before the preachers and people:

1. This fund is the most popular of all, and if placed on its own merits, will be in full.

2. The Board knows that the old preachers' fund is a stimulus to all the other collections.

3. Some of the districts are working with all their might, knowing it will be a double honor to come up in full in times considered hard, and live presiding elders are pushing and will succeed.

4. Let every man do his best to geth the collection in full. If our old preachers suffer, it will be our shame. We cannot afford to let them suffer. Let our slogan be: Collections in Full for the Old Preachers. Hard times demand resourceful men and tireless efforts. The Church is looking to every man to do his duty.

Signed by: J. M. Morse, president; Nolan B. Harmon, secretary.

WHAT THE SKEPTIC SHOULD DO.

When the keen scrutiny of skeptics has found a place on this planet ten miles square where a decent man can live in decency, comfort and security, supporting and educating his children unspoiled and unpolluted; a place where age is reverenced, infancy respected, womanhood honored and human life held in due regard—when skeptics can find such a place ten miles square on this globe where the gospel of Christ has not gone and cleared the way and laid the foundations and made decency and security possible, it will then be in order for the skeptical literati to move thither and ventilate their views.—James Russell Lowell.

A loving trust in the Author of the Bible is the best preparation for a wise and profitable study of the Bible itself.—H. C. Trumbull.

A MESSAGE TO MOTHERS.

(We publish this article at the request of a friend, which we are glad to do. Of its author our friend says: "This dear woman is bedridden—has been confined to her bed for two years; but not a day during this time has she failed to do some good deed—something in the service of her Master. She is bright and happy, though often suffering, and a visit to her bedside is a benediction. All her life—now far spent—she has been a consecrated Christian, devoting herself and her means to the accomplishment of good to others, often denying herself things necessary that she might be able to help the needy—visiting the sick, the poor and prisoners, always carrying comfort to them in some form. She wrote this "message" since being confined to her bed, and has sent it out as a leaflet to many, but she desires to have it reach more generally the mothers of our Southland.)

Perhaps you will think it very presumptuous in a single woman to write this letter. But I am not trying of my own judgment to give you counsel, but only to bring you a message which I seem to myself too slow in delivering. Ten years ago this message came to me, and I have from time to time spoken of it to Christian mothers of my own acquaintance, and asked them to bring the subject to God in secret prayer. But now I must try to send it as far and wide as I can, and beseech every mother who reads it to take it, not as a word from another woman, but as a message from God, as I truly believe it is. It is simply expressed in the two words in which it was set before my mind—"Mothers' Prayer Meetings," not mothers' meetings, justly famous for their good and earnest work; not mothers joining in the precious prayers and services of their churches, but mothers shutting out all the world beside and meeting together to "take hold of God" for their own and each others' children, pouring out their hearts before God for the care and protection and spiritual blessings of their children.

In a long life-time I have known of mothers' prayer unions, and of answers sent by a prayer-hearing and a prayer-remembering God, some of the answers coming long after the mothers who offered the prayers had entered into rest. I have known of prayer unions of Christian women, and of answers following their petitions so distinct and manifest that none need doubt that God was setting the seal of his approval upon united prayer. But I believe that these "Mothers' Prayer Meetings" have something more to offer, that only mothers can find out in seeking to accept this divine invitation and drawing close to God, bringing their children on their hearts to him. There never was a day in the world's history when such fervent and united prayer was more needed. There is no part of the world where it is more needed than the State where I am writing, beseeching mothers to draw near to God, "take hold on God" in united prayer for the children.

Now, however weakly, I have delivered my message. Oh, mothers who will read this, go with it to some other mother, and, kneeling together, take this letter to God and ask him to lead you! And may he "who is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think," open all the treasures of his grace to praying mothers and their children. And in that day, when it is asked of you, "Where is thy flock, thy beautiful flock that was given thee?" may you be able to answer with great joy and thanksgiving: "Behold I, and the children whom God hath given me!" Will not any dear mother who adopts my suggestion pray for heathen and unbelieving mothers, and for the motherless everywhere?

THE INFLUENCE OF A MOTHER'S PRAYERS.

More than thirty years ago, one lovely Sabbath morning about eight young men, students in a law school, were walking along the banks of a stream that flows into the Potomac River, not far from the city of Washington. They were going to a grove, in a retired place, to spend the hours of that holy day in playing cards. Each of them had a flask of wine in his pocket. They were the sons of praying mothers. As they were walking along, amusing each other with idle jests, the bell of a church in a little village not two miles off began to ring. It sounded in the ears of those thoughtless young men as plainly as though it were only on the other side of the little stream along which they were walking.

Presently one of their number, whose name was George, stopped, and said to the friend nearest him that he would go no further, but would return to the village and go to church. His friend called out to their companions, who were a little ahead of them: "Boys! boys! come back here; George is getting religious; we must help him. Come on, and let us baptize him by immersion in the water." In a moment they formed a circle around him. They told him that the only way he could save himself from having a cold bath was by going with them. In a calm, quiet, but earnest way, he said:

"I know very well that you have power enough to put me in the water, and hold me there till I am drowned; and, if you choose, you can do so, and I will make no resistance; but listen to what I have to say, and then do as you think best.

"You all know that I am two hundred miles away from home; but you do not know that my mother is a helpless, bed-ridden invalid. I never remember seeing her out of bed. I am her youngest child. My father could not afford to pay for my schooling; but our teacher is a warm friend of my father, and offered to take me without any charge. He was very anxious for me to come; but mother would not consent. The struggle almost cost her what little life was left to her. At length, after many prayers on the subject, she yielded and said I might go. The preparations for my leaving home were soon made. My mother never said a word to me on the subject till the morning when I was about to leave. After I had eaten my breakfast, she sent for me, and asked me if everything was ready. I told her all was ready, and I was only waiting for the stage. At her request, I kneeled beside her bed. With her loving hand upon my head, she prayed for her youngest child. Many and many a night I have dreamed that whole scene over. It is the happiest recollection of my life. I believe, till the day of my death, I shall be able to repeat every word of that prayer. Then she spoke to me thus:

"'My precious boy, you do not know, you never can know, the agony of a mother's heart, in parting for the last time from her youngest child. When you leave home, you will have looked, for the last time this side of the grave, on the face of her who loves you as no other mortal does or can. Your father cannot afford the expense of your making us visits during the two years that your studies will occupy. I cannot possibly live as long as that. The sand in the hour-glass of my life has nearly run out. In the far-off, strange place to which you are going, there will be no loving mother to give counsel in time of trouble. Seek counsel and help from God. Every Sabbath morning, from ten to eleven o'clock, I will spend the hour in prayer for you. Wherever you may be during the sacred hour, when you hear the church bells ringing, let your thoughts come back to this chamber, where your dying mother will be agonizing in prayer for you. But I hear the stage coming. Kiss me—farewell!'

"Boys, I never expect to see my mother again on earth. But by God's help, I mean to meet her in heaven."

As George stopped speaking, the tears were streaming down his cheeks. He looked at his companions. Their eyes were filled with tears.

In a moment the ring which they had formed about him was opened. He passed out and went to church. He had stood up for the right against great odds.

They admired him for doing what they had not the courage to do. They all followed him to church. On their way there, each of them quietly threw away his cards and his wine-flask. Never again did these young men play cards on the Sabbath.

From that day they all became changed men. Six of them died Christians, and are now in heaven. George is an able Christian lawyer in Iowa; and his friend, who wrote this account, has been for many years an earnest, active member of the church. Here were eight men converted by the prayers of that good Christian woman. And, if we only knew all the results of their examples and their labors, we should have a good illustration of a mother's prayers.—The Presbyterian.

A contemporary wonders why Alfred Austin has ceased to perpetrate a poem on every conceivable occasion. Perhaps he is growing more merciful as the years pass.

CONCERT PIPE ORGANIST.

Miss Beulah Margot Herring, of Corinth, Miss., will be open for dates this fall and winter as a concert organist. Church recitals and sacred concerts a specialty. Write her for terms. Miss Herring is a graduate of the University of Arkansas, also the American Conservatory of Chicago, under the famous organist, Wilhelm Middieschulte.

The Daily Corinthian says: "The First Methodist Church had standing room only last night with which to accommodate the large and critical audience that greeted Miss Beulah Margot Herring at her organ recital. She was not only happy in her selection of the numbers, but in the rendition as well. Her technique is flawless, and her pedal work really wonderful. Her interpretation of the great music masters was par excellence."

A FORWARD MOVEMENT FOR METHODISM IN NEW ORLEANS.

The Commission appointed by the General Board of Missions to visit New Orleans with a view to inspecting the field and formulating plans for a forward missionary movement in the city, met at the First Methodist Church on Tuesday morning, October 24. The following members were present at the opening session: Bishop E. D. Mouzon, Dr. W. F. McMurry, Dr. John M. Moore, Miss Belle Bennett, and Mr. R. W. MacDonnell. Bishop Denny, the chairman of the Commission, was delayed in reaching the city by a belated train, but arrived in time to participate in all the more important deliberations of the body. Dr. O. E. Brown was not present.

The Commission held a brief morning session, after which the members, in automobiles, visited the several churches and missions of the city. They then lunched together, and in the afternoon had an extended executive session. No formal statement was given out as to the conclusions reached, but we are reliably informed that it was decided to embrace First Church, St. Mark's Hall, and Mary Werlein Mission in a single charge, under a superintendent pastor, who is to have associated with him an assistant or junior preacher. There is also to be given to this united mission a full corps of assistant workers, including an increased number of deaconesses. Appropriations will also probably be made to one or two other churches, but no new ones will be established. It is likely, however, that mission Sunday schools will be planted in such places as may be deemed advisable as the work progresses.

The Commission was most emphatic in the declaration that its purpose is not to relieve the churches New Orleans of any of the responsibilities which have heretofore been resting upon them, but to inaugurate a general forward movement. Though the salaries of the superintendent and assistant pastor of the united mission and the other workers connected with it will be paid by the General Board, the members of First Church will be required to raise $2,500 (the amount now paid the pastor) every year to be applied to their church debt, besides taking care of their current expenses, paying the presiding elder and raising their usual pro rata of the Conference collections. The Commission also prescribed as one of the conditions of carrying out the proposed program that the Louisiana Conference (through its Mission Board) shall contine to appropriate as much for the work in New Orleans as it is doing at present. The new plan formulated will, of course, not take effect until after the next session of the Annual Conference.

It is scarcely needful to say that we are much gratified that the General Board of Missions has seen its way clear to provide for this additional expenditure of $10,000 annually to promote the interests of Southern Methodism in this city. We doubt whether there is a place in the connection where it is more urgently needed. The arrangement contemplated will give our Church here, besides the presiding elder, twelve active ministers and a number of capable workers; and we confidently expect it to mark the beginning of a new era in the history of New Orleans Methodism. The activity of the Home Department of the General Board of Missions, under the aggressive leadership of Dr. J. M. Moore, doubtless means that many movements of this kind will be projected within the next few years.

Nor is it the city of New Orleans alone to which the Mission Board is lending a hand in this State. It is appropriating $600 a year to the work in Natchitoches and $1,400 to the French Mission field. This disposition of our leaders to aid the cause in our territory should spring the Louisiana Conference to do its utmost to utilize this favorable opportunity. Particularly does this apply to the situation here in the city. Apparently the open door to a larger service for which we have long been clamoring is about to be set before us; and we soon must show whether we are equal to the task of measuring up to greater things, or whether, in the face of favoring circumstances, we shall let others outstrip us and take from us our crown.

We were about to forget to say that the Commission is reported to have been unanimous in the conclusions reached, and that every member manifested a profound concern that Methodism should do her full share toward evangelizing the unchurched masses of this growing municipality and the country surrounding it. We are most fortunate in having the general interests of the Church committed to the hands of officials who are so wide awake and zealous to extend the Master's kingdom.

"KEEP YOUR DAUGHTERS AT HOME OR GO WITH THEM."

Under this caption, the Wesleyan Christian Advocate of October 27 contains an editorial giving to parents some most wholesome advice. Thinking it may accomplish some good, we reproduce it below. If the reader will substitute the word New Orleans where the word "Atlanta" occurs, the discussion is quite pertinent to conditions hereabout:

"It would be a wise thing for mothers outside of Atlanta to accompany their daughters, who are in the habit of making frequent visits to the city. Some girls need no chaperone, others do, and mothers may know whether their daughters belong to a class that avoid all places of danger and all people who tempt to evil, but as a fact, mothers are sometimes mistaken in this matter. Therefore, for the good of both mothers and daughters, it ought to be said that the places where drinks are served—near-beer saloons, locker clubs or anywhere else—are dangerous for girls. Let no one think there are no such places in Atlanta, or if they are here there is no danger of their daughters going to these places. Not long since a wise man said to the writer that he was surprised and grieved to see two girls under twenty years of age coming out of a club room after night with young men with whom the girls had only a railway acquaintance. These girls belong to good families in the town where they live. It is time to call a halt in girls going away from home to be out after night alone, both in the city and out of the city."

BISHOP GALLOWAY'S PORTRAIT.

We publish in this issue a program of the exercises arranged for the unveiling of the portrait of Bishop Charles B. Galloway in the chapel of Millsaps College, at Jackson, Miss., on Wednesday, November 22, at 11 o'clock a.m. It is pre-eminently fitting that a likeness of this distinguished minister should adorn the wall of the main building of this growing young institution, where every morning the eyes of the students will rest upon it. It was Bishop Galloway's stirring eloquence and matchless leadership, along with the noble generosity of Major Millsaps, that brought this promising college into being, and it was most fortunate, indeed, in having his guiding hand upon the helm in the opening years of its history. In doing honor to the memory of this majestic man, the Methodists of Mississippi honor themselves. He shed luster alike upon the State of which he was a citizen and the Church of which he was a member, and went to his grave in the meridian of his fame, mourned by thousands, and leaving behind a record that can never be forgotten. We trust that the day designated for the unveiling of this picture will be a memorable occasion, as it well deserves to be. Every Methodist preacher and layman who can, should make it a point to be present and co-operate in honoring this foremost son of Mississippi Methodism. To behold his face, even though it be upon canvas, and reflect upon his example and service cannot fail to give blessing and inspiration.

CALLED TO HIS REWARD.

We are pained to announce the death of the Rev. Jesse W. McGee, chaplain of the State Penitentiary of Mississippi, which occurred at Parchman, in that State, on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 22. Brother McGee's decease was due to paralysis, with which he had been afflicted for some time, having had the first attack about five years ago. While preaching to the students at Millsaps College in a revival last April, he had a second stroke of this dread malady, and since that time had been unable to occupy the pulpit, though we are informed it has been his rule to go to the farms and do such personal work for the Master as he could. According to the press dispatches, however, he tried to preach on the 22d ultimo, and just as he was finishing the service at one of the camps, was fatally stricken and in a few hours breathed his last.

Brother McGee was a member of the North Mississippi Conference, having joined that body in 1899. He was possessed of a strong will and many noble traits of character. Soon after his entrance into the ministry he felt the need of better equipment for his work, and though he had a family to support, he moved to Jackson and by industry and frugality managed to meet his expenses and take a course at Millsaps College. The circumstances considered, this was a remarkable achievement. Brother McGee was a man of unwavering faith, deep piety, and tireless zeal. He commanded the respect and confidence of all who knew him. The prison authorities of the State had great regard for him, and kindly continued his pay during the time that he was unable to work. As a Christian minister, he walked worthy of his high vocation, wrought faithfully as long as strength and opportunity were given him, and fell at duty's post. His remains were carried to Starkville, Miss., his former home, for interment. May our gracious Lord bless the bereaved widow and children and watch over them until they shall meet the husband and father in the glorious home above!

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. E. Duke has been transferred from the North Mississippi to the West Texas Conference, and stationed at Smithville, in the Austin District.

Rev. H. W. May is conducting a meeting at Columbia, La. He is doing the preaching himself, and the Christian people are giving him their assistance.

Rev. A. S. Raper, our promising young pastor at Taylor, Miss., has our thanks for several names to be continued on our subscription files and a check to correspond.

Rev. S. A. Brown is taking care of the interests of the Conference organ in his good charge at Booneville, Miss. That we appreciate his kindness, needs not to be said.

The First Methodist Church will be headquarters for the Woman's Missionary Jubilee in this city. The opening service will be held next Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Rev. K. W. Dodson, of New Iberia, in a personal note to the editor, adds: "Everything is moving on well." It generally does when Brother Dodson's hand is on the helm.

A revival is in progress at the Twenty-Ninth Street Methodist Church, of Gulfport, where Rev. J. T. Abney is the preacher-in-charge. He is being assisted by Rev. R. F. Witt, of Long Beach.

Our worthy pastor at Shubuta, Miss., Dr. B. F. Jones, forwarded to the publisher a list of eight subscribers a few days since. We are grateful for this good work done for the Conference organ.

Information reached us a few days ago of the serious illness of Mr. Robert McKeown, a son of Rev. L. A. McKeown, at his home at Leland, Miss. We trust that ere this he is well on the way toward recovery.

Bishop A. W. Wilson will dedicate the South Side Methodist Church, of Corinth, Miss., of which the Rev. A. N. Goforth is the popular pastor, on Sunday, November 5. A great treat is in store for the Corinthians.

We are pleased to state that Rev. A. W. Turner, our pastor at Mansfield, La., has sufficiently recovered from his recent operation to be up and around the house. We hope that his health and strength will soon be completely restored.

We are indebted to Rev. Wm. Schuhle, of West Monroe, La., for a list of subscribers recently sent in. This charge is having a good year under the capable leadership of Brother Schuhle, who is one of the best-furnished men in the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. J. W. Booth, pastor of the Algiers Church, this city, is assisting Rev. R. M. Brown in a meeting at Lecompte, La. He went to take the place of Rev. J. C. Rousseaux, of Shreveport, who had been engaged to conduct the services, but was unexpectedly called home.

The Douglas Park Sunday School, at the corner of Fourth and Willow Streets, had a rally service last Friday night. The officers of this school are Mr. R. E. Toal, superintendent; Mrs. T. L. McKnight, superintendent of the Primary Department, and Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor.

The Main Street congregation of Biloxi will soon be worshiping in their beautiful new auditorium. The pastor, Rev. W. L. Linfield, is pushing the work forward to completion, and his people are giving him their hearty co-operation. Brother Linfield is reported to be preaching to large audiences.

Among those who lately have been giving attention to the circulation of the Advocate in their charges is Rev. F. L. Applewhite, of Benton, Miss. We assure him of our hearty appreciation of his kindness, and we pray that our paper may prove helpful to him and his people in their work.

At the recent session of the West Texas Conference, Rev. C. W. Perkins, who is well known in North Mississippi, took a superannuate relation. Brother Perkins has been a most useful itinerant, and we regret to know that his health is such as to require his retirement from the active work.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate met in the Advocate office last Thursday, October 26, with a full attendance. The present publisher and editor were each re-elected for a term of four years. A fuller account of the proceedings, from the pen of Rev. H. S. Spragins, will appear later.

The meeting recently conducted for Rev. M. L. Burton at Twenty-Fifth Avenue Church, Gulfport, by Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of West Point, Miss., is reported to have greatly quickened the membership. Brother Dorsey's preaching was much enjoyed. Brother Burton is having a good year in this important pastorate.

Rev. L. A. Darsey, Rev. Robert Selby, Rev. W. B. Jones, and Rev. W. T. Griffin, assisted the pastor, Rev J. M. Lewis, at the New Prospect Camp Meeting. They had one of the best meetings that has been held at this place in years. While the services were in progress, on Saturday at 3 p.m., Hon. T. M. Evans, of Gulfport, held an interesting laymen's rally.

We acknowledge the receipt of a bulletin of the Fourth Avenue Methodist Church, of Louisville, Ky., of which Dr. Richard Wilkinson is the gifted pastor. The report made to the Annual Conference shows that this church had last year 103 accessions, and a net gain of 78. The total amount raised for all purposes was $19,804; the salary paid the pastor was $3,000. Dr. Wilkinson begins the new year with encouraging prospects.

Rev. J. E. Sampley writes as follows from Lorman, Miss.: "Yesterday (Sunday, Oct. 22) was a good day with the Cane Ridge Sunday School. It was Rally Day, and the exercises were both enjoyable and profitable. Rev. W. Fred Long, of Jackson, was present and contributed much to the success of the occasion. Our school now has on the roll, in all departments, 132. That's fine for this section. We are closing a good year on this charge."

The Louisiana Sunday School Association held a successful institute at the Felicity Street Methodist Church last week. An afternoon session was held, at the conclusion of which luncheon was served, and following this the exercises were continued until about 9 o'clock p.m. One of the prominent speakers at this gathering was Dr. C. D. Bulla, of Nashville, Tenn., superintendent of the Adult Bible Classes of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who delivered an impressive and helpful address.

Rev. W. Winans Drake, of Lake Charles, was in the city last Thursday to attend the meeting of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate. He was looking exceptionally well, and appeared to be in fine spirits. While here, Brother Drake delivered an interesting talk on the "Boy Problem" at the Sunday School Institute, which was in session at Felicity Street Church. He expects to begin soon a meeting at Lake Charles, in which he will have the assistance of Rev. H. B. Watkins, of Magnolia, Miss., and Rev. C. N. Guice, of Summit, Miss.

The Sunday school at Maxie, Miss., took a collection for the "model Sunday school building" (which is to be erected at Waynesville, N. C.) on Sunday, October 22. Brother W. L. Yeates, the faithful superintendent, carefully explained the matter to the school, reading an editorial in the Sunday School Magazine and dwelling upon the importance of the enterprise, after which the offering, which amounted to ten cents per capita, was taken. In doing this, the school at Maxie has set a good example, which we hope will be generally followed.

Rev. O. W. Bradley writes as follows concerning Rev. J. E. Cunningham, who is winding up his quadrennium on the Oxford District, North Mississippi Conference: "Brother Cunningham is closing out the best year of the four. He has been sick for two months—up and down—but is in good shape for the final work of the fall campaign." We are sorry to know that this faithful worker has been physically indisposed, but gratified to learn that he is again vigorous and able to lead the Methodist hosts in the territory under his supervision.

In a note written on October 25, Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, of Scooba, Miss., says: "The death angel visited the parsonage at DeKalb, Miss., on October 23, and claimed for his victim the little daughter of Brother and Sister W. F. Baggett. Her death was quite a shock to them; for, though she had been ill for some time, no one was alarmed about her condition. May God bless these bereaved parents!" Our heart goes out in deepest sympathy to this stricken father and mother, and we pray that divine grace, in rich abundance, may be granted them in this trying hour.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, writes as follows: "Bishop Mouzon's visit to this city was an inspiration to our Shreveport Methodism. At Noel Memorial Church, his sermon in the morning and conference with the official members in the afternoon were very helpful. At the mass meeting at First Church Sunday night, it was decided to build a new church at once in the southern end of the city, among the factories. A building committee was appointed, three lots secured, and several hundred dollars raised for this purpose."

Rev. H. S. Spragins who was down to the meeting of the Publishing Committee, of which he is a member, last Thursday, brought along with him a number of subscriptions to the Advocate. Brother Spragins is the beloved pastor at Greenwood, which is perhaps the most hustling town in Mississippi. The Methodist Church there is one of the handsomest houses of worship in the State, and the congregation believes in keeping busy in the Master's service. If we mistake not (we write from memory) this church has given the Orphanage at Jackson more than $1,300 this year.

Rev. W. M. Young, the energetic presiding elder of the Sardis District, under date of October 25, writes: "The prospect in this part of the field is flattering for a successful rounding out of the year's work. I learn that the wife of Brother Carlisle, of the Wall Hill Circuit, has been sick for several weeks with typhoid fever, but is now convalescing. Brother Baley, of the Eureka charge, has also had much sickness in his home. His babe was recently dangerously ill." We regret to be informed that these brethren have had affliction in their families, and we pray that the stricken ones may soon recover.

At a meeting held on Tuesday evening, October 24, the Committee of a Hundred having the matter in charge canceled the engagement for the campaign which the Men and Religion Forward Movement were scheduled to conduct in New Orleans, Novem- 13-20. This action is stated to have been prompted by the fact that the National Committee had informed the local workers that the date given them would have to be changed, and that the one offered as a substitute was unsatisfactory, because a number of the churches would at that time have had other work on hand, and, in consequence, would have been unable to participate.

The Gulf Coast Mission is prospering under the superintendence of Rev. W. T. Griffin and his corps of faithful assistants. A committee, composed of Dr. J. M. Moore and Mrs. R. W. MacDonnell, of Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. G. H. Thompson, and Dr. A. F. Watkins, of Hattiesburg; Rev. C. W. Crisler, of Vicksburg, and Rev M. L. Burton and Rev. W. B. Jones, of Gulfport, met in the last named city last week to plan for the work during the coming year. After a free and full discussion, it was decided to continue to operate along the same lines as heretofore. A more extended account of the work of this mission will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

The Trustees of the Mississippi State Normal College, which is in process of establishment, elected Professor Joe Cook to the presidency of that institution on October 17. Prof. Cook is a graduate of Vanderbilt University, and one of the foremost educators of the State. He has for a number of years been superintendent of the city schools at Columbus, and has filled the position with great acceptability. He is also regarded as a superior business man, and is at this time president of the Bank of Artesia. Mr. Cook is an active member of the M. E. Church, South, and a gentleman of recognized Christian character. We congratulate the Trustees upon the selection that they have made.

In the death of Mr. Clifton R. Sykes, which occurred at his home in Aberdeen, Miss., after a very brief illness, on October 26, North Mississippi lost one of its foremost citizens. He was widely known as a man of worthy character and large business capacity. He was respected and honored by all who enjoyed the privilege of acquaintance with him, and had a numerous circle of devoted friends. Mr. Sykes was in the forty-fourth year of his age and unmarried. He leaves a sister, Mrs. Edward P. Peacock, of Clarksdale, Miss., and a brother, Mr. Eugene Lanier Sykes, of New York City. The deceased was a prominent member of our church in Aberdeen, and only a few days since gave the pastor, Rev. J. T. Murrah, a $1,000 contribution toward the construction of the new house of worship now being erected in that city. May the Heavenly Father comfort and sustain those bowed beneath the weight of this great sorrow!

WILL RUN A SPECIAL.

Dear Doctor Meek: Please say that I am arranging a special tourist sleeper from Shreveport to New Orleans to carry delegates to the Annual Conference. It will leave Shreveport Monday night, Dec. 4, and for the return trip will leave New Orleans Monday night, Dec. 11. The price of berths will be $1 each way. Parties desiring accommodations on this sleeper should engage them through me right away. There are 32 berths—16 lower and 16 upper.

Yours truly, H. R. SINGLETON.

THE POWER TO SEE.

There are to be found to-day men and women to whom Christ is as real as though they held his fleshly hand and looked into his sweet human face. They are as sure that heaven is around them as that their hearts beat within them. They know that God loves them as certainly as if he awoke them each morning with a kiss.

Some time ago I met with a picture representing two women in great sorrow. Standing behind the chairs on which they were sitting there appeared the figure of Christ stretching out his hand over them. They could not see him, because their eyes were dim, but he was none the less present with them. He was near in all his effulgent brightness, with all his helpful power. At the foot of the picture this verse was written:

"Unheard, because our ears are dull;
Unseen, because our eyes are dim;
He walks on earth—the wonderful—
And all great deeds are done for him."

What we need is the power to see—to see chariots and horses on the mountains; to see God all about us; to see the strong right arm of the Almighty stretched out to help us; to see that the darkest clouds and most threatening surroundings are under the all-controlling power of the everlasting Father. And seeing this, we shall have the prophet's hope and the prophet's faith and the prophet's trust that they who are with us are more than they who are against us. The prayer, then, which befits our lips day and night continually is: "Lord, we pray thee open our eyes that we may see."—Walker Jubb, in Christian Advocate.

It is announced that a new code of laws for the government of the Roman Catholic Church throughout the world will be issued next year. Forty of the Church's most learned canonists and a Commission of Cardinals have been addressing themselves to this task for eight years, and it is said that Pope Pius X expects the publication of this work to be the greatest achievement of his pontificate. According to report, the new code will sweep away some of the impediments to matrimony now existing (for one thing, allowing third cousins to wed), and that the American Bishops will be permitted to handle independently many matters which they are now required to refer to Rome.

In spite of the fatalities occurring, progress is being made in aerial navigation. In 1910 there were 397 aeroplane flights of over one hour's duration; in the first seven months of 1911 there were 677.

We never know's wot's hidden in each other's hearts; and if we had glass winders there, we'd need to keep the shutters up, some of us.—Martin Chuzzlewit.

A SOMEWHAT ITINERANT.

Dear Advocate: Since my return from the West, through the good providences of God and the courtesy of the brethren, I have been a somewhat itinerant, helping in protracted meetings and filling vacant pulpits.

In the early pioneer days, the chinks, or cracks, in the log cabin of the pioneer were sometimes filled in or chinked with small pieces of timber, plastered over and then whitewashed, thus making a more inviting and comfortable dwelling. Chinkwood occurs to me as a significant and not inappropriate name for the superannuate or retired preacher. As such, he may be of service to the Church and still do something for his Lord—standing in the open ways, and filling in the vacant places. Pretty good name, isn't it? Twice I have occupied the pulpit of our Starkville pastor, Rev. W. E. M. Brogan. Brother Brogan is alert, cultured, and a good preacher, whose forebears date back to the Emerald Isle. He is a generous and efficient helper to neighboring pastors in their revival meetings.

On the third Sunday in July I was with Rev. W. A. Bowlin at Antioch, one of the four churches of the Smithville charge. Brother Bowlin is serving this work for the third year. He is a good worker, an effective preacher and a "good mixer" with his people. He has wrought well. Antioch is an old appointment, having now a new house of worship in a new location. Brother J. B. Stone, when a youth of eighteen years, was a class leader at the old Antioch Church. The meeting continued from Sunday until the close of the Friday morning service. The house was crowded at night, and the morning services were profitable to a responsive membership. Lasting good, we trust, was acomplished in the addition of members to the church and the spiritual uplift of believers. Brother Bowlin was a willing coöperer in his own meeting, and did not expect the visiting brother to do all the work, but was ready at any time to preach or do any other part of the work. I preached eight times during the meeting. I think it well for every pastor to take a full share in the work of his revival meetings.

Antioch is six miles east of Amory, in the midst of a beautiful farming country, and is supported by a loyal and hospitable Methodism. But there are other isms in the country round about—more than I have found in any like community. They have in the neighborhood the Seventh Day Adventists, Hardshell Baptists, Campbellites, Missionary Baptists, Presbyterians, and "stumbling stones." For some account of this last named religious sect, I must refer the reader to our Antioch pastor.

I was kindly entertained, when going on my return trip, at the pleasant home of Brother Bowlin in the town of Amory. Here I met Brother J. B. Stone and Brother K. M. Harrison, honored veterans of the North Mississippi Conference. With both these brethren in the days gone by, I have been a co-laborer in our Lord's vineyard, and have enjoyed delightful fellowship with them. Brother Stone looks much like the "Joe Stone" of his prime, but is feeble, and I think rarely, if ever, attempts to preach. Brother Harrison looks ruddy and vigorous, but is not strong. He still, however, closes a chink at times in Aberdeen and perhaps some other place where the regular postor is absent, and oftener in his home town.

I had the pleasure also of greeting Rev. R. O. Brown, our popular preacher at Amory and Nettleton. He was interested in a church building enterprise at Amory. One good brother, giving a tenth of his income, as I understand, has promised $7,500 ("may his tribe increase") on the condition that the church should give as much more for a $15,000 building. This same brother had expressed his willingness to increase his subscription to $10,000 if the church would erect a $20,000 house of worship. With such a starter as this Amory contribution, Brother Brogan might erect the new and modern church which he wishes to see in Starkville. But this letter grows apace, and I must put off for another time some report of other itineraries enjoyed during the summer-tide.

SOME FOURTH QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

Dear Brother Meek: I held six quarterly conferences last week, beginning with the Coldwater Conference, at Love's Monday morning. I had an unusually good day with Brother Babb and his people there on the Sunday preceeding. All finances for this charge are coming up. One would not expect anything else from the Coldwater charge. From Love's I went to New Salem on the Mt. Pleasant charge, for quarterly conference Tuesday, where I met a splendid congregation. Brother Williams had an excellent report. The collections were all in hand but a few dollars, and that was subscribed. The salary lacked but little of being paid, one church had overpaid by twenty dollars. This report, in the face of low-priced cotton, and the fact that most people are holding cotton, is much more than ordinary. W. R. Williams is doing perhaps his best work this year, which is his first year on this charge. The beautiful new church, at Cockrum was built under his administration last year, it being his fourth and last year there.

From here we went to Olive Branch on Wednesday, and held forth with Brother R. W. Evans and his good quarterly conference. All the salary for this charge was paid but ten dollars, and one church paid twenty dollars over. Brother Evans is doing a noble work among this good people. Then we held forth at Pleasant Hill with Brother J. A. Biffle, and went thence to the Cockrum charge, at Green Leaf, where I met a great congregation on Friday, and a sumptuous dinner was served on the ground. Brother R. I. Collins is in great favor with his people, but the finances are much behind. Cotton not sold, is the claim of the people. Saturday and Sunday we were with Brother E. H. Rook and the Tyro Quarterly Conference, at Free Springs. The finances are much behind; but the promise of all these charges is that they will come up. Some of these charges have had good revivals.

Packers of the Justly Famous Paris Sugar Corn

Tidings From the Field

DeSoto, Miss.:

Things are going on well on the DeSoto charge. The people at the various churches seem to be in oneness with their pastor. We have very good congregations at our monthly appointments, and thus far I can say that the Master hasn't failed to meet with us from time to time in our preaching services. I am also glad to say that many souls have been wonderfully blessed in our meetings this year. On the 11th inst., Brother G. P. O'Neil and Brother Ben Johnston, of Hopewell Church, got up a wagon-load of corn between themselves for their preacher. It took me somewhat by surprise, as O'Neil came driving up to the parsonage with a fine load of corn for me, or rather for my horse. I want to say for the benefit of Rev. T. J. O'Neil, the popular presiding elder of the Newton District, that his home church (Hopewell) is one of the best little country churches that I ever preached in. I have found some energetic men and women at this church, and not at this one alone, but at all of the other churches on my work. On the 14th inst., to my surprise, in came another wagon-load of fine corn from Salem Church, presented by Bro. Clarence Evans. The good people are determined that their pastor shall not buy any corn for his horse. I certainly appreciate this on the part of my people. The good ladies of the Woman's Home Mission Society here at DeSoto, in their last monthly meeting, decided among themselves to clothe one of the little girls in our Orphanage at Jackson. I am so glad that the good women thought of doing a thing like this. May the Spirit of the Master be with every man, woman and child on the charge as he is doing service for the King, day by day. —Hilary Westbrook, pastor.

Senatobia, Miss.:

Three years have almost gone by since we first came to Senatobia, and we feel that the "Friend of friends" has been with us. While much, very much, remains to be done, a great deal has been accomplished. The Sunday school, prayer meeting, and church services are well attended, and much interest is manifested in each. The influence of our young men's class is being felt. Besides giving quite generously each Sunday to the Conference benevolences, they have cared nicely for the church lot during the summer, keeping the lawn mowed, etc. Prof. Slappey, our new public school principal, is the teacher of this class. Our Women's Societies have never been so active, and better still, so prayerful as now. As Dr. Meyer says: "We are trying to get to the point where we will not ask God to help us in our work, but let us help him in his work." Brother Duncan, of Batesville, was with us in a meeting a few weeks since, and we certainly were helped by his preaching. His sermons on "Sowing and Reaping" and "Christ as a Teacher," were especially helpful. Senatobia, as you know, is near Memphis, and we sometimes think how easy it would be some bright October day to slip back West. The call of the West gets into the blood and will come back, when once you have been there. We left Wagoner, Creek Nation, Oklahoma, a station of about 5,000 then, and came to Hebron, North Mississippi, twenty miles out from Macon, our first circuit, eleven years ago. The demand for young, capable, energetic men for the large, growing western towns is great. We had never served a circuit before. It was a novel experience in a way, but there was a great deal of pleasure connected with it. We were unfortunate in being placed on the river, however, as the health of the family suffered (we had left Wagoner on that account). The past few years have been more fortunate in that particular, and we have had unusually good health. The novelty of the circuit also was off and we became fully initiated, serving circuits and half stations for the next seven years. The time draws near for our Annual Conference to meet again, and I pray God's richest blessings upon each servant engaged in the King's business. —S. L. Pope.

Holly Springs, Miss.:

On last Sunday at 11 o'clock, our pastor, Rev. O. W. Bradley, preached an unusually able sermon from the double text, "For herein is revealed a righteousness of God," Rom. 1:17, and "And unto you that fear my name, the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His wings," Malachi 4:2. Sunday night he likewise gave us another strong sermon from the text, "I thought on my ways and turned my feet unto thy testimony," Psalm 119:59. I do not wish to be fulsome, nor do I wish to appear to be trying to "boost" my pastor, but I am of that number who believe with the wife of Lew Wallace when she said: "If you have a flower for me, give it to me now, while I can enjoy it, rather than place an entire wreath upon my coffin lid." Rev. O. W. Bradley came to us here two years ago. He has "made good." He has the happy faculty of taking a text and of then getting his sermon from that text. You know Sam Jones said: "I always take my text and then stick to my audience." Bradley takes his text and sticks to it. I regard him as one of the clearest reasoners and one of the best sermonizers to-day in the North Mississippi Conference—and that is putting it rather strong. Then, too, he is a man that "wears." He is not gushing and obtrusive; but is modest and firm. His judgment is excellent, and withal he is a man that can be counted on "one day in and out" as doing the right thing. He makes no attempt at oratory, but yet he never fails to impress his sermons upon his hearers. The real "Englishman" occasionally crops out so plain that a stranger might discern it. He is a clean, strong-minded, able and convincing preacher. Then, too, he is improving daily. He is a student, and a man of God. I believe a great future awaits this young man. W. A. BELK.

Little ROBBIE REDDING, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Redding, was laid to rest in the beautiful cemetery at Hernando, Miss., July 26, 1911. This precious little girl had not lived out quite two years of her life, and yet she had lived long enough to entwine about her life the heartstrings of mother and father, and in fact all who knew her. How it broke our hearts to give her up! What a comfort the religion of Jesus Christ is to the dear ones in the hour of their grief! Their only hope of seeing the precious little one again is in the glorious teaching of the good Book, which tells them that though baby cannot come back to them, yet they can go to her. God will take care of little Robbie and keep her safe till the happy meeting bye and bye. Little Robbie was a frail, delicate child. The parents did everything in their power to prolong her life, but the frail body could no longer hold prisoner the sweet soul. The earthly home was brightened by her presence for only a few months. To those who loved her so much, heaven is more interesting than ever before. Our loved ones make earth a happy place to us. How bright heaven seems when we realize that those we loved so well and who loved us will make heaven the happier to us when we meet them on the other shore! May the Heavenly Father cheer the hearts of father and mother and dear little sister, till the happy reunion in the eternal home.

W. D. WENDEL.

Mrs. MARY THOMPSON ELLZEY was born in Pike County, near Holmesville, Miss., Oct. 7, 1832, and died near the same place, Aug. 3, 1911. On Dec. 22, 1853, she was united in matrimony to Brother Rankin C. Ellzey, who yet survives her. This union was blessed with two sons, Hugh Nelson, and Clifton, who developed into splendid manhood and have been permitted to live to care for their parents in their even-tide, and to be with mother through "the last days." In 1854, she gave her heart to Christ and united her life with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Topisaw Camp Ground. It was the writer's privilege to be blessed by knowing her over a year before her death. Though nearing her 79th birthday and her husband in his 83d year, they always attended church. An inspiration she was. Easter Sunday, 1911, she left her monument of testimony of her acceptance with Christ. And to-day she rests with the Christ whom she loved and witnessed for here. May God comfort and sustain her companion who must soon greet her across "the river of life," and may her two sons and theirs, meet her around the great white throne. Though dead, this mother, yet speaketh! The funeral services were conducted on Friday morning, Aug. 4, at the Holmesville Methodist Church, by Rev. J. W. Thompson and the pastor, after which her remains were placed to rest in the Holmesville Cemetery.

J. LOYD DECELL, pastor.

G. W. TODD was born March 20, 1825, in Monroe County, Ga. He lived there until he moved to Newton County, Miss., in the year 1846, where he has since resided, having lived to the ripe old age of 86 years. He was a very active member of the Congregational Methodist Church, having been in the organization of a church in Monroe County, Ga., and after moving to Newton County, Miss., assisted in organizing a church, using his own home as a meeting place, and afterwards locating the Mount Zion Church in this County. He was always in deepest sympathy with every educational and elevating influence, and assisted in upbuilding the schools of his County, having taught a number of years during his life, and having been a member of the Board of Trustees for the High School in his home town a number of sessions. He was the father of thirteen children, ten of whom survive him. His first wife was Miss Mary Phinizee, of Monroe County, Ga., who preceded him to the tomb. His present wife was Miss V. Caroline Jones, of Jasper County, Miss., who is living at their home at Hickory, Miss. His family speak well for the father and mother, as all are professed Christians and influential citizens in communities where located. I would speak a word of tender sympathy to the bereaved family in this sadness and encourage each to remember that his departure from their midst takes him into a land of blissful delight, and that each heart can be there reunited and God shall wipe away all tears and pain, and sorrows shall be no more. He is at rest, and in each sad hour when our thoughts drift to his memory, may we not be consoled to know that God doeth all things well? To mourn is so natural, but let us not "sorrow as those who have no hope."

With tender sympathy,

A FRIEND.

CRISSY ISABELLA BAILEY, an aged saint, who died in the home of her son, C. T. Bailey, near Lexington, Miss., Sept. 27, 1911, was born in Anderson County, N. C., June 27, 1831. She was truly converted at the age of twelve, and moved with her parents to Mississippi in 1847, settling at Sharon, then an educational center in Madison County. She was married Dec. 9, 1863, to David J. Bailey, to whom she had been engaged during the years of war, and their union was blessed with five children, four of whom now live in Holmes County, and all of whom are showing themselves worthy of their godly parentage. Sister Bailey was above all things else a Christian, and her life was characterized by great unselfishness and helpfulness toward others, and by constant devotion to Christ as her Lord and Savior. It was my privilege, as her pastor, to visit her time and again in sickness, and a finer example of the sufficiency of God's grace to meet all human need and to flood a human heart with peace and joy and hope in believing, I have never seen. "She walked with God," is the testimony of her stricken and devoted husband, himself a devout local preacher of the Methodist Church. Her children, with one voice, "rise up and call her blessed," and a sorrowing neighborhood bear testimony that her life was indeed a benediction to all who knew her. She died in the full triumph of faith, her last act, before a fall which resulted in her death, being to engage in family prayer with her children and grandchildren; and her last words being, "Bless the Lord, O my soul," and "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want." Interment was in the Oregon Cemetery, Sept. 28, at 3 p.m. No nobler legacy could she have left to the loved ones who mourn her departure than the life she lived, the death she died, and the influence she exerted and which her memory will continue to exert upon all who knew her. God give them grace to follow on in the good way in which she has gone before them, and may they be at last a united family in heaven!

The Sunday School.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

The Sunday school at Lumberton, has introduced the new graded lessons.

Brother Pastor, if you have not yet observed "Rally Day," and taken the collection asked for the model Sunday school building at Junaluska, please do not fail to do so. What a source of gratification it will be to feel you have had a part in this great forward movement. It is not yet too late to act.

* * *

The Broad Street Church, Hattiesburg, has already realized an increased interest in Sunday school work among the scholars since introducing the new graded lessons. Mrs. J. L. Neil, the superintendent of the Elementary Department writes: "The pupils are doing well, some of the books showing careful home work, and an increased interest has been manifested by the children!

* * *

In the October issue of Everybody's Magazine will be found a fine article on "The Insurgent Sunday School," by George Creel. After giving a brief account of the rise of the Sunday school movement, under Robert Raikes, in 1780, he traces the development of the Sunday school idea through its successive stages to the present so called "New Graded Lessons." This is the plainest, most satisfactory presentation of the subject we have ever seen. It will do all our Sunday school workers good to read it.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Miss Elle Willingham's Morris Class, Eupora, Miss., has enrolled the seventieth man under her enterprising management.

* * *

Adult Bible classes should not forget that there is one thing worse than failure, and that is never attempting anything. Success is always ahead; therefore, it cannot overtake that class which sits down to wait for it.

* * *

Three eighty per cents: Eighty per cent of the Church members come through the Sunday school, eighty per cent of the Sunday school scholars do not come into the Church, eighty per cent of the Church members are not in the Sunday school.

* * *

Commence now on your Thanksgiving program for general Sunday school work, as well as special class work. It is a graciously beautiful season of the year, a time for genuine Thanksgiving, and should be an accented note all over the Sunday school world.

* * *

It is so fine to lead older boys and girls into service for younger boys and girls. To save these older ones to Christian service, with the same stroke which gives the younger ones an acceptable leader, may be called genius or common sense. Yet how painfully lacking it has been in our Bible school work!

* * *

The present measure of failure of our Sunday school arises not from lack of numbers, but from a lack of a sufficient corps of well-equipped teachers and officiers. This is an imperative need, and our schools and colleges should send out young men and women trained for Christian leadership.

* * *

A clever young maiden asked very patheticaily not long since, "Why don't somebody understand girls? We ought not to be such awful problems and we need help so." Teacher of the teen age, won't you, on your knees, with your Bible and the best teen age text-books, try to understandingly help these heart-hungry girls!

Four studies, at least, are essential in the preparation of the Sunday school teacher: (1). The Bible should be studied in its outline as a history, in its characters, in the message of its books, and in its essential teaching; (2) some knowledge of psychology, especially in regard to the growth and development of the child in relation to religious teaching; (3) an outline of the teachings of the new education in regard to religious pedagogy; (4) a study of the modern Sunday school as an institution—its organization and management.

* * *

One man in an Adult Bible Class, in Mississippi, has made one day happier for some mother's boy, down and out, by taking him home, giving him a suit of clothes, a good brotherly talk, and a Testament, marked at the verses where men could be most helped. A softened, bettered man, with a compass in his pocket over his heart, went out to face a busy, heartless world. Still another Adult Bible Class man gave his breakfast (and a big, hearty fellow he was) to a young tramp, and in his big-hearted way tried to help him on and up. These are just autum leaves blown off the tree of masculine goodness—and they are for "the healing of the nations." A chapter of just the daily kindnesses of an Adult Bible Class, in its full acceptation of the term, would make a book, beautiful and helpful in the extreme.

A REMARKABLE HONOR.

In 1840, 7 members of Congress from North Carolina, 94 members of the State Legislature, and the Mayor and 42 leading citizens of Raleigh, N. C., united in presenting a petition to the Director of the Medical Bureau of the United States Navy, which closes with the following words: "While all can testify to the high reputation this medicine sustains in the respective counties we have the honor to represent, many of us know, by happy experience in our own families, its efficacy; therefore, we can with much propriety, and do with great pleasure, give Dr. Gray our names in support of his truly valuable ointment."

For three generations Gray's Ointment has held first place in the treatment of boils, carbuncles, chronic sores, festering cuts and wounds, and in the prevention of blood poisoning. Free sample on request or 25c at your druggist's. Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 807 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

They Are Closely Observing Public Health Conditions.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that the reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of applicants do not even suspect that they have the disease.

He states that judging from his own experience and reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has probably been more successful in relieving and curing these diseases than any remedy known. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of cures.

We find that Swamp-Root is strictly an herbal compound and we would advise our readers who feel in need of such a remedy to give it a trial. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes—fifty-cents and one-dollar.

However, if you wish first to test its wonderful merits, send to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle, absolutely free. When writing, be sure and mention the New Orleans Advocate.

A STRANGE STORY.

Argyle, Mich.—Mrs. Wm. H. Carson, in a letter from Argyle, says, "I was almost wild with pain in my head, and other severe pains, due to womanly troubles. Cardui gave me great relief at once. Further use of Cardui raised me from my bed of agony. Cardui saved my life, and I can't be thankful enough for what it did for me." Whether seriously sick, or simply ailing, take Cardui, the woman's tonic. As a general tonic for women, to improve the appetite and build up the constitution, Cardui is in a class by itself. Those who have used it say it does the work; it relieves, it cures. Try it. Your druggist has it.

MISS KILPATRICK IN THE DELTA.

Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, the accomplished field secretary of the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference, recently conducted a campaign in the interest of her work in the bounds of the Greenville District, appearing at Lula, Clarksdale, Boyle, Leland, Rosedale, and Greenville.

That she accomplished much good needs not to be said, for her winsome manner and sympathetic approach, reenforced by a thorough technical and practical knowledge of her subject, attracts and holds the attention of her auditors, impress their understanding and inspire them to enter enthusiastically upon the high service which promises and yields such an abundant harvest for the Master.

Of Miss Kilpatrick's two appearances at Greenville, too much cannot be said. She occupied both the morning and evening hours at the Methodist Church on Sunday. At the morning service she taught the lesson for the day to a fine body of men in the presence of the entire congregation. Her exposition of the text was both novel and luminous. From the lesson she went directly into an explanation of the Wesley Aduit Bible Class, its work and possibilities. At the evening hour, she presented the Sunday school work as a whole.

Pastors could employ no more wholesome aid than the services of this capable, consecrated and devoted lady. A METHODIST.

MAY BE COUNTED.

Dear Dr. Meek: Having heard from several of our preachers that votes would not be given with their subscriptions, I wrote the Tour Editor of the Picayune, and received the following communication:

"We have at hand yours to Mr. Tobin concerning subscriptions from ministers, and while in the first instance it was decided by the Picayune managers that they could not allow votes on these subscriptions on account of the half rate, we are pleased to inform you that they have changed their decision in this matter and have decided to allow full votes on all ministers' subscriptions."

With the above explanation I am sure I will have a number of renewals and new subscriptions to both the Daily and Weekly Picayune.

Very truly yours,
MRS. C. C. WIER.

OSYKA AND LIBERTY CHARGE.

We have passed our fourth quarterly conference and are looking toward Meridian. While we keenly feel our mistakes and see many things now that we ought to have done, yet, as a whole, the year on the Osyka and Liberty charge has been "a good year." One young man has been licensed to preach and is now in Millsaps College. There have been 17 accessions to the church on profession of faith and 11 by certificate and vows, a total of 28 accessions for the year. Eleven infants have been baptized. Our revival meetings were good. Rev. P. D. Hardin did the preaching at Osyka; Rev. J. C. Ellis, at Muddy Springs; Rev. Jasper Smith, at Glading; Rev. D. E. Kelley, at Liberty, and Rev. H. E. Carter, at Holmesville. Brother John Kelley rendered valuable assistance in the meeting at Liberty by leading the choir and by his personal work. Our work is a splendid combination of good churches. Many of the people are loyal and true. The Osyka people have furnished the parsonage there with new and comfortable furniture. The financial status of the work, we think, is well in hand; at least the Conference collections are, and ere Conference, we believe the salary will be in full. Most of our people are tillers of the soil, and, of course, we are more or less affected by crop conditions. The people are steadily adjusting themseives to the issue of "no cotton." As we hasten on toward the close of the Conference year, with a consciousness of acceptance with him, our heart can sing.

"The Lord of Hosts is with us,
The God of Jacob is our refuge."

WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD.

Abingdon, Va.—Mrs. Jennie Mc Call, of this place, says, "I had been troubled with female complaints, for over ten years. I could not walk or stand on my feet, and had been almost confined to the house, for a long time. I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic, and now I can walk anywhere I want to go. Cardui is worth its weight in gold." This is a high estimate on a plain, herb medicine, yet there are thousands of women who would gladly pay this price for a remedy to relieve their suffering. Cardui has helped others. Why not you? Try it. Your druggist sells it, in $1 bottles.

RHEUMATISM

A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as those who have it know, for over three years, and tried almost everything. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial, I will send it free. Address,

Try This Famous Pinex "Pint of Cough Syrup"
A Family Supply for 50c, Saving $2. The Surest, Quickest Remedy You Ever Used or Money Refunded.
A cough remedy that saves you $2, and is guaranteed to give quicker, better results than anything else, is surely worth trying. And one trial will show you why Pinex is used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.
You will be pleasantly surprised by the way it takes right hold of a cough, giving almost instant relief. It will usually stop the most obstinate, deep-seated cough in 24 hours, and is unequalled for prompt results in whooping cough.
A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, makes a full pint of the best cough remedy ever used. Easily prepared in five minutes—directions in package.
The taste is pleasant—children take it willingly. Stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both excellent features. Splendid for croup, hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, and a highly successful remedy for incipient lung troubles.
Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a pint bottle, and it is ready for use.
Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

DEVOTIONAL.

Our theme for November is Christ and Prayer, and for to-day is: "Christ as a Man of Prayer;" or, as I take it, "Christ as an Example of Prayer," for there may be a vast difference between one's doctrine and one's practice of prayer. One of the inspirations of our Lord's life lies in the fact that his teachings are so splendidly enforced by his own divine life. If he bade us take up our crosses, he bore his own even to Calvary itself; if to pray for our enemies, he did for his own, even among the agonies of his cruel death. If it is well, then, to preach prayer, it is even better to teach it by example, to lead the people by personal practice into the joys of the prayer life, where we find a listening God. I have many times heard sermons on prayer, but never could see that these men did a great deal of it; but, then, I have seen a praying preacher and found his example his best sermon. The very best lessons our Lord ever taught in prayer were given not in exhortations nor words about prayer, but were given when his disciples came up on him alone earnestly engaged in prayer, and with their hearts stirred by his example, they said: "Lord teach us to pray." To impress this point, have some one read Luke 11:1: It seems to me that his kneeling form made more impression than any sermon could have done. Our good fathers and mothers have taught us best to pray in no form of words, but in their daily approach to the throne of grace.

Let us notice a few instances of our Lord's habit of prayer. Read, now, Mark 1:35, and notice Jesus in an early morning private prayer. To my mind there is no better picture anywhere of sincere worship. Hypocrites may pray in public, but I don't believe they do much of secret prayer. Our Lord was calling for real prayer when he said: "When ye pray, enter into your closet." Did you ever notice that when our Lord was baptized he was praying, and that it was while he prayed that the heavens were opened and the Spirit descended upon him? Read Luke 3:21. Do you not suppose that if the baptismal scene were more often a scene of earnest prayer that it would more often be characterized by the heavens opening and the Spirit's descent?

Notice now that it was while he prayed that he was transfigured. Read Luke 9:28-36. He didn't go into the mountain to be transfigured, but to pray, and his marvelous vision and his celestial visitors were the answers of a watchful Father to his prayers. Here, with his heart overshadowed with the approaching cross, and with his unbelieving disciples, he earnestly appealed to heaven, and what followed must be viewed from that standpoint to be appreciated.

Oh, what peace we often forfeit,
Oh, what needless pain we bear,
All because we do not carry
Everything to God in prayer."

Have some one read Luke 6:12 to notice that on the night previous to his choosing his Twelve, Jesus spent the entire night in prayer on the lonely mountain side, suggesting to us the folly of undertaking any event or beginning any day without prayer. May it not be true that prayer is a larger element in success than we ordinarily think? Notice also his prayer at the raising of Lazarus. It would be well to notice his prayer on the night before his trial and death in John, the seventeenth chapter, but space forbids here.

Notice his prayer in Gethsemane and call attention to its intense earnestness growing out of the great suffering he was undergoing. After all, earnestness must measure the value of any prayer, rather than its length or eloquence. Surely nothing shows us our Lord's humanity like his prayer life, and in nothing does he so effectually lead us to the great source of all help as in his prayers. Just as his humanity made him pray, do our human needs drive us to the great Father.

NOTES.

Your pastor can pray for you, but he can't do your praying for you.

• • •

If Jesus needed to pray, can you and I live well our lives if prayerless?

• • •

The man who prays most in private will lead most effectively in the public prayer.

• • •

Jesus did not teach his disciples to preach, but in teaching them how to pray he did both.

• • •

Jesus used sometimes a long, sometimes a short prayer, but he was always intensely earnest.

• • •

If we knew our needs better our prayers would be more fervent. For we all have need enough to grow fervent over. Fervency is not created but out of conscious need.

• • •

The various attitudes used in prayer may all plead Scripture to justify their use, but fervency or earnestness forgets attitude in a desire for the answer of its petition.

• • •

We know of several saloon keepers who will not employ a man who drinks. How terrible! If your own employes are incapacitated for their work, whose men ought to drink it? What workmen are made more efficient by it?

The great railroad strike is on now. In several Mississippi towns there have been troubious times. Notice this, that Governor Noel has warned the express companies that at this time no liquors must be brought into these towns. How significant! Would that Governor Noel had power to keep it out of his State at all times! Tell us when is it a good time to ship liquor into a State?

Mrs. Sudie J. Lingle, of Louisiana, who is field agent for Louisiana Leagues, had a splendid article in a recent number of the Era on "My Pastor and I," which should have a thoughtful reading, and from which we take the following clipping:

"The pastors and I are great friends in the League work which I am now engaged in, 'All for Christ.' How helpless I would be without their superior judgment, although I study constantly to know the best methods by which I may reach the most adverse conditions! I always want to know that the pastor is going to be present, especially when I visit a new field; not that I doubt my calling, but that I am working under him in this work of organizing the young people in the Church in the training school for service of the Church at that critical age, as we take the young men and young women for the Senior League, the boys and girls for the intermediate League, and the children for the Junior League.

"The most prayerful consideration must be given such a move in any church, for each step taken will raise a monument for time to come.

"To the pastors in the Louisiana Conference who may read this I will say that I am at your service to aid you in organizing or reorganizing your Leagues or creating a new interest in the work among the young people. Call upon me; I am ready to go."

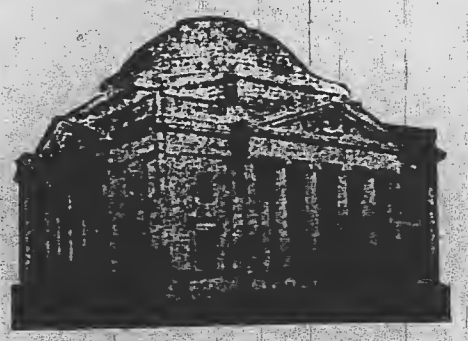
One of the World's Most Beautiful Buildings.



Girard Trust and Banking Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Occupying one of the most valuable plots of ground in the city of Philadelphia, completely surrounded by towering skyscrapers, this one-story structure is the dominant architectural note in all its vicinity. Its chaste whiteness, its stately columns that sweep upward to almost the full height of its front facade, its gracefully rounded dome as white as snow, makes it easily the most conspicuous building in the city, and one of the most beautiful in all the world. The new Girard Trust Building marks the beginning of a new era, if, indeed, it is not the era in itself. In all America there is no building used solely for one business to equal it, and it is doubtful if all Europe has one like it.

Before commencing the work, the question of the material of which the building was to be constructed received most serious attention from the Officers and Managers of the company, as well as the Architects. The first suggestion was to build of granite, but the Architects strongly advised in favor of the beauty of marble for such a structure, and it was finally adopted. Next, the question as to the kind of marble to be used was given consideration. The Northern marbie is soft, white and beautiful, but, on the other hand, it readily absorbs the smoke and dirt of the city, and it is doubtful if it is fitted to withstand the ravages of the frosts of this latitude. The Georgia Marbie is of a harder and more crystalline nature. It is very non-absorbent, and does not seem to be so readily stained by the impurities of the city.

Therefore, this magnificent structure was constructed entirely, interior and exterior, of Georgia Marble, from the quarries of the Georgia Marbie Company, Tate, Ga. This is the most superior American marble, having a crushing strength of upwards of 10,000 pounds per square inch, and will withstand heat to upwards of 1,000 degrees, Fah. It is beautiful beyond description, and can be had in any size pattern, without a flaw. This marbie is also being used extensively by the United States Government in its fine buildings, and for monumental purposes. It simply has no equal. If you are contemplating a building or monument of any kind, ask to see samples of Cherokee, Creole, Etowah and Kennesaw Georgia Marbie, and if your dealer can't supply you, drop a card to the Georgia Marbie Company, Tate, Ga., and they will put you in touch with a nearby dealer who can.

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 58—No. 45. "Prove All Things; Hold Fast That Which is Good." WHOLE No. 2998.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1911. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

"The blowing winds are but our servants
When we hoist a sail."

The editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate makes the following pertinent observation: "A city church found itself hemmed in by a foreign population. Whereupon the congregation sold the property and sent the proceeds to the foreign mission field! And nobody saw the humor of the situation."

* * *

It is better to be rich in faith and character than in money and real estate. Spiritual wealth abides and its possessor takes it with him into eternity; material riches are liable to take wings and fly away, or at best they must be left behind in the hour of death. The wise man lays up treasure in heaven where it can never be wrested from him.

* * *

The Christian Guardian notes the fact that a boy correspondent of the Michigan Christian Advocate requested that paper to ask all ministers to so preach that the boys can understand them. Is not this occurrence somewhat suggestive? That plain and simple preaching is most effective, there is little douht. This is true of its influence upon the older as well as the younger people.

* * *

Dr. W. B. Palmore, who recently worshiped at the City Temple in London, thus contrasts the preaching of Dr. R. J. Campbell, the present pastor, with that of the brilliant Dr. Joseph Parker, who made this pulpit world-famous: "Here in other days we enjoyed the virile preaching of the leonine Dr. Joseph Parker and the seraphic singing of his queenly wife. Higher criticism in the pulpit is very unsatisfactory diet in any of its stages, but when it begins to evaporate into ethereal speculation or latitudinarian nothingness it is nauseating. * * * Parker's preaching was like rich, nourishing and strengthening chicken soup. The present incumbent's preaching is the soup made by hanging the chicken high and boiling its shadow."

The Christian should honor the Holy Spirit and seek his guidance in all things. There is no Scriptural warrant for the oft-heard statement that the Divine Spirit testifies to sonship and nothing else. Let those who hold this view re-read the Book of Acts and note how the early disciples wrought under the immediate direction of the Holy Ghost. Some insist that this view, that one may be taught and led of the Spirit, is dangerous and opens the way for all kinds of spurious revelations; but not necessarily so. The Holy Spirit does not add to the written Word, but merely interprets and applies it and ever acts in harmony with it. It is a tremendous mistake because of a fear of fanaticism to lose sight of the precious truth that God has given us the Holy Ghost to instruct and direct us. It is as true to-day as it ever was, that "he is the faithful guide, ever near the Christian's side."

THE PREACHER'S WORK.

There are few people who have anything like an adequate appreciation of the complex and exacting duties which devolve upon a pastor in this day, when the work of the Church has become so varied and extended in its scope. Indeed, there are some who seem to think that the average minister is a gentleman of almost absolute leisure; that he has little to do during the week and that the preaching of two sermons on Sunday is a comparatively trivial task. The truth is, however, that preachers are the most overworked and underpaid class of men in modern society. This fact is not often recognized by the secular press, but the Richmond Virginian of October 31 contained an editorial which deals with this matter with such clearness and force that we take the liberty of reproducing it:

"Dr. Shannon, pastor of the Metropolitan Church in Washington, D. C., the most important Methodist church in that city, has resigned his pastorate. The sole reason he assigns is insomnia. This is the third time Dr. Shannon has been forced to relinquish his work because of a nervous breakdown, and he says, 'I am never going to take an important pulpit again. Insomnia has ousted me from the work for the last time.'

"Our great city churches have so extended their activities and so multiplied their demands upon the preacher that the conscientious endeavor to meet the situation upon his part subjects him to a fearful drain upon his mental and physical resources. Many are failing victim to resulting nervous disorders. He is under the necessity, first of all, of preparing and delivering at least three stated discourses during the week. He must be fresh and suggestive and attractive. He constantly faces the fearful strain of holding and helping the congregation that hears him week after week and year after year. He feels, if he has a deep sense of his responsibility, the burden that is upon him to restrain by giving forth his very best to those who would be lured away by the attractions of this pleasure-loving age. In addition to the demands of his own pulpit, which in itself is no inconsiderable task, the popular preacher of our city churches is frequently invited and urged to address all sorts of gatherings and expected to attend all sorts of meetings.

"Then he is a pastor. He must minister to the sick, the sorrowing, the needy. He must visit the strangers. He must maintain friendly social relations with his own congregation. He must marry the living and bury the dead. He must hold himself always at the call of his community's need.

"And he is the executive head of what has come to be a great institution with multiplied activities and diversified interests. He must plan and organize and inspire and lead the hundreds into aggressive endeavor. He must push forward the lagging hosts and hold back the too impetuous and enthusiastic. He must harmonize conflicting elements and settle individual grievances. He must hear patiently the theories and plans of every visionary and hear graciously the criticism and complaint of all those who fancy themselves neglected or aggrieved. He is charged with the task of advice, admonition and discipline. Upon his shoulders rest most heavily the burden and responsibility of the financial obligations of the church. In addition to all this and greater than all this, if the minister be wholly consecrated to his mission, he carries as the constant companion of his waking hours the care of the souls committed to his charge—a responsibility and a sympathetic concern that has alone crippled many a strong man.

"The preacher's task is no small one. Be considerate, be sympathetic, be appreciative. Help hold the load that bears him down. Indifference and inappreciation but make it heavier."

AN IMPORTANT MEETING.

The National Conference on the Interstate Liquor Traffic, which is scheduled to meet in Washington City, December 12-14, promises to be a meeting of unusual interest and importance. The call was signed by many of the first men of the nation, including supreme judges, members of Congress, governors, bishops, and distinguished editors. The clear disclosure of the fact that the Federal Government is in league with the liquor dealers by its course toward the recent Brewers' Congress has aroused the leading prohibitionists of the country, and they feel that the time has come for a general movement to secure favorable legislation at the hands of Congress, and, if necessary, to contend for an amendment to the Constitution of the United States. They are weary of having licenses issued by the Federal authorities in prohibition territory, and of seeing the whisky interests take refuge under interstate commerce laws. It is not improbable that the Washington Conference will mark a new era in the history of prohibition in this country. Dr. Eichelberger, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Mississippi, requests us to state that all interested persons in that commonwealth who can and will attend this gathering, will be appointed delegates if they will send their names to the Anti-Saloon League, Box 30, Jackson, Miss. Dr. Smith would no doubt be glad to perform a similar service for persons in Louisiana if they will communicate with him on the subject. We sincerely hope that this section will be well represented at this important council of prohibition workers.

JUBILEE A SUCCESS.

The Woman's Missionary Jubilee which was held in this city last Friday and Saturday was a marked success. The public services were held at the First Methodist Church, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion, and many of the subsidiary meetings were conducted at private residences. A large number of distinguished missionary workers from a distance were present, and many instructive and stirring addresses were made. The attendance upon the exercises was good, and the interest from beginning to end was well sustained. In addition to the meetings, in which all the Protestant churches participated, denominational rallies were held Saturday morning. That of the Southern Methodists assembled in the Rayne Memorial Church, and was presided over by Mrs. W. W. Carre; the principal addresses were made by Miss Daisy Davies and Mrs. A. P. Holt. It was stated that the offerings made at these Jubilee gatherings held throughout the country have reached the handsome sum of $900,000, and it is expected that the amount will go beyond the million mark before they are ended. The offerings in New Orleans footed up $2,500. The Methodists led with $1,508, and the Episcopalians came next with $590. The general feeling is that the missionary cause was greatly helped and strengthened in New Orleans by this Jubilee celebration.

IDEAL EVANGELISM—FORMATIVE AND REFORMATIVE

By Rev. F. N. Parker, D.D.

This paper was written for the recent Ecumenical Methodist Conference, and in the absence of Dr. Parker was read by Dr. F. M. Thomas of Louisville, Ky.

Effective evangelism is one of the indispensable functions of a spiritually vital church. A church which does not evangelize has fallen out of the true apostolic succession, for where apostolic power exists there souls will be added to the company of those who believe. The primary work of the Church is seeking and saving the lost. A lukewarm or apostate church is both indifferent and ineffective in soul winning. Bringing souls into the experimental knowledge of faith in Christ must precede their integration and training as members of the household of faith.

This first work of the kingdom is not merely a recruiting movement. It aims at something more than numbers added to the rolls of the churches. The after life of the convert bears the impress of the first work. In a large extent the evangelist and his message types the faith and character of the convert. It does signify in what way Christ is preached. It is a matter of profound concern to the Church whether those who come into her fellowship have fully believed that gospel which was first believed in in the world. Conformity to the essential type is the law of its preservation and propagation.

Professional Evangelists.

We have no hatred evangelists of a certain sort. For years past professional evangelism has had many recruits, especially in America. They have multiplied exceedingly. They have devised methods, sought them out artificial manipulations, published song books, and numbered many professed converts in the course of their operations. That there have been notable exceptions is unquestioned. But in many instances certain types of evangelism have been followed by a singular spiritual sterility and religious apathy in the churches which compels the conclusion that the work was inherently defective in both message and method. For this reason both methods and results are the subject of legitimate criticism.

Any movement which aims to propagate a faith or create and develop a society is liable to perversion and error. Evangelism has suffered from false or inadequate emphasis in doctrine and positively vicious methods of work. An ideal evangelism will maintain a steadfast course, following the precedents of the great typical and formative ministries, whose work has reformed nations, wrought righteousness in the earth and penetrated society with a sure and certain consciousness of the presence of God.

The fundamental fact in evangelism is the substance of the evangelical message. An ideal evangelism will, first of all, be true to the divine call to men to repent and believe the gospel. It is the proclamation of a faith as well as a call to repentance. It is the declaration of a law as well as an offer of pardon. It affirms historic and objective fact as the foundation of its appeal, and presents distinct and articulated doctrines to the moral reason of men.

Apostolic Evangelism.

The evangelism of apostolic days was rooted in profound convictions created by the events and teachings of our Lord's life and ministry. There were things most surely believed. These men were persuaded that they had not followed cunningly devised fables or created a system of beliefs upon value judgments and hypothetical stories containing the nucleus of a divine revelation. These men were witnesses of certain divine facts, facts which wrought a profound change in their own characters and gave them an entirely new outlook on the world. St. Paul's example bears witness to the tenacity of early evangelism upon the fundamental facts of the gospel. He delivered that which, first of all, he had received, that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures, and that he appeared unto Cephas, then he appeared unto the twelve, then he appeared unto above five hundred brethren. To Jesus for men Christ is presented Jesus Christ is the historic manifestation of God for the world's salvation. For Jew or Gentile the historic objective gospel was the power of God unto salvation. Whatever challenges the authority of Jesus Christ or evades emphasis concerning the central truth, we have concerning the life of God's Son is the penalty for effective evangelism. Paul affirmed the unique preeminence of Jesus as the risen Lord; he set for his ministry to offer the Resurrection as the supreme ground of his evangelical appeal. He had not merely a philosophy or ethical system to proclaim. His call to repentance came from Jesus Christ, who had done certain things and was still doing them.

The Central Power of Evangelism.

The central power of a great evangelism is its consciousness of the power of the living Christ. It is animated by intense loyalty to Christ, not to the Christ of remote power and universal significance. A merely institutional movement or ecclesiastical organization cannot be evangelistic, because it interposes a priesthood or social order between Christ and the souls of men. An evangelized man is not one who has been swept into an organization or drilled into acquiescence to a creed. He has been brought by inward renewal and spiritual elevation into a definite experience of the saving power of the Son of God.

Nevertheless, the Christ of the gospels is not simply a transcendent religious personality. He is a being sustaining relations to the moral universe. His relation to God must be exhibited in rational terms. His relation to man must be stated in terms of sufficient precision to be clearly apprehended by the religious consciousness of men. This is to say, that evangelism must be doctrinal. It cannot effectually move men by mere appeals to religious sentiment. The gospel of power should never be confused with the emotional or psychical phenomena which have been incidentally manifested in connection with certain types of religious experience.

It Must be Doctrinal.

The great evangelism of the past has been clearly and persistently doctrinal. Such great doctrines as the universality of sin, justification by faith, regeneration and the witness of the Spirit, have been the truths which have searched the moral consciousness of men in all ages. And these truths have been sealed in the crowning work of our Lord's vicarious suffering and death, and the sending forth of the Spirit of life by the power of his resurrection and ascension to the right hand of God. There has been no real evangelism apart from this fundamental gospel. Indeed, it may be said that the touchstone of a true evangelism is the atoning life and death of Jesus Christ. The holy of holies of every great revival must have its Gethsemane and its cross. The streams of living water arise at the altar. Here the incense of prayer ascends, and the broken and contrite heart is fused into newness of life by the power of a love revealed in suffering and death.

The doctrinal content of Methodism has been the basis of its mighty appeal to the world. It is the great evangelistic theology, and has justified itself by its influence on the world in creating an evangelism unsurpassed since apostolic days. It has modified the beliefs and enriched the contents of the religious life of the Protestant world. Our greatest peril is the possible loss of emphasis upon our great doctrinal statements.

A want of precision in the statement of evangelical truth is followed by a lack of definiteness in religious experience. The moral judgment of men is not convinced by uncertain or vague presentations of religious truth, nor the will moved to definite action. The depth and permanence of a man's religious character is due to his experimental knowledge of God, and the knowledge of God is not mere sensation—it is a definite knowledge of moral and spiritual relations, and these cannot be expressed save in doctrinal terms. A man must be induced to think on his ways and the ways of God. Eternal things must be impressed upon a thoughtful heart. Jesus Christ is eternal, and his appeal is to the eternal in man. And we can do no less. Time does not change the essential truths of the gospel. The emphasis must fall upon the fundamental truths which strike at the center of the religious nature of men. As in Jerusalem, Antioch, Rome, the great evangelism won its converts to a faith having definite and eternal meaning, so in London, New York and Toronto, and the far reaches of heathenism, the evangelism that will be formative and reformative will be strong in the emphasis it places on the fundamental truths which inhere in the kingdom that cannot be moved.

The Evangelistic Program.

Next in importance to the evangelistic message is the evangelistic program and method. The evangel must be brought to the unevangelized. Agents and methods are as necessary as the gospel itself, for how shall the people hear unless they have a preacher? There is an ideal to be aimed at here. The work should not be left to self-constituted leaders of a misguided zeal. It would be a fatal error to [illegible] the ideal of the apostolic ministry was not wrought at Pentecost—the apostles were made to see how to organize in the power of the Holy Ghost and with the Word.

Because of this fact, the duty to the evangelization of [illegible] evangelists has been represented by men [illegible] have been the embodiment of a movement and the interpreters of the religious needs of their times. Paul, Luther and Wesley were evangelists who in their own peculiar way were constructive forces. Any evangelistic movement is right in its beliefs [illegible] in their fidelity to the [illegible] activity men will [illegible] with confidence. There is a day of decision when the ineffectual leaders of any church must give evangelism. There has been [illegible] in the form of [illegible] to the efforts of certain [illegible] to see sinners restored to God. It is one of the perils of a great and successful [illegible] that its leaders may become so absorbed in matters of administration as to lose their sense of evangelistic opportunity and service.

It is no doubt true that the [illegible] of men of exceptional ability in the field of evangelism. Nor should their work be underrated. The work of a Moody calls for [illegible] Still these occasional [illegible] however great in [illegible] have produced an ideal evangelism. An ideal evangelism must be the expression of the normal and continuous life of the Church. It is probably a mistake to identify revivalism with evangelism. The one contemplates a periodical [illegible] in the life of the Church, the other is or should be the Church in perpetual effort to save the world. In the very nature of the case this must be presupposed. The vital efficiency of the local church is dependent upon this everlasting idea. The pastor, the Sunday-school teacher and the young people's societies all exist to evangelize. There is no evangelism comparable in efficiency, pastoral and in some evangelism.

But the needs of evangelistic method require a more extensive survey of the work than we have yet taken. Ideal evangelism must be characterized by great adaptability.

An Intelligible Message.

A first requirement is the presentation of the gospel in terms which all men can understand. Perhaps the greatest need of our times is the power to express our great doctrines in terms which appeal to the modern mind. A great evangelism will not ignore the intellectual and social ideals with which it comes in contact, but will endeavor to find some fundamental relation, kinship of idea or sympathetic association. The evangelism of each age has expressed itself in the current ideas of the age, and has been formative because it has used the intellectual and social susceptibilities of the people for spiritual purposes. The gospel which prevails is the same, yet different. There is a sense in which it must become all things to all men.

The evangelistic message must address the intellectual needs and problems of the times. The primary condition of reaching a heathen or civilized man is to know what he thinks and how he thinks. His words must be mastered, his ideas of life, the range and content of his conceptions as they are related to God and moral responsibility. So to-day we must preach Christ's gospel as it is related to the thought of our time. Whatever of truth there may be in current religious ideas must be respected and utilized in the effort to persuade men to accept the lordship of Jesus Christ. It is true that the gospel must bring every thought into captivity to the obedience of Jesus Christ, and Christ must be offered to men as the vital and determining fact in their thinking on life, its meaning, its obligations and destiny. It must speak with authority, for no evangelism will have force without it. But this authority comes from the sure conviction that Christ has a claim, his coming has created an obligation, and his truth has a right to challenge the immediate submission of all men. Much modern evangelism is defective because it refuses to recognize its obligation to deal with the intellectual needs of the times. It presumes to ignore the large results of a clearer knowledge of its own history.

The past twenty-five years or more have been marked by a constant effort to restate the person and place of Christ in the thought of the world. This has partly been the result of a needed defence of the Christian position, but it has been largely the answer of the Church to an intellectual need which the world has felt. Probably no other movement has exercised so large an influence upon the character and subject matter of our preaching. This is but an example of the working principle which must determine the method of evangelistic effort. It must appeal to some inherent moral and intellectual want which is characteristic of the times.

Recognition of Social Forces.

There is another requirement for a great evangelism, and that is its recognition of the social forces at work.

Individualism is not the sum of the gospel. It deals with man as social. It must so address him, and utilize social forces to propagate itself. A careful survey of early Christianity brings out the fact that social forces were a large factor in the evangelization of the Roman Empire. Great names and conspicuous doctrinal contests naturally stand out more prominently than the more unobtrusive social forces which bound man to man. But the work of Jesus was largely social in its method. The person first dominated the society and ministered to a great social unrest and a profounder social distress. The fundamental social problems stand out in the history of the apostolic Church. Our Lord fed the multitudes incidentally that he might bring them into the kingdom of God. There is no separating the social order from fundamental religious beliefs. They must blend. Religion comes to man as social, and it must strike him in the plane of his social life. The Incarnation and the collateral truths of that tremendous event must operate upon men as social, and reach them through the channels of social help and sympathy. Men will not be godly in isolation. An ideal evangelism is not simply the voice of one crying in the wilderness, but it is as the sound of many voices proclaiming a common faith and fellowship, and announcing with divine assurance to weary, sin-stricken men that there is a community of souls, a city of God, a commonwealth of the holy, whose fellowship is with the Father and with his Son, Jesus Christ, and that this evangelizing ecclesia is the home of the souls of men; that here is a living faith, a fellowship of worship and service whose work is the abolition of sin and death, and helping men into the inheritance of faith and hope here on earth, and the future blessedness of the city of God. It is for this cause that an ideal evangelism takes knowledge of the social needs of the day. It approaches men in that social situation, and takes knowledge of their sicknesses and infirmities, their poverty and their ignorance. So it comes with social power because it reveals the higher social sympathies of the new life in Christ Jesus. It presents the truths of Jesus in relation to the social sins and needs of men. It is in this way that a true evangelism has ever been formative and reformative in influencing the social conscience. It needs hardly to be said that Jesus Christ is the creator of the true social conscience. For it is this very fact which makes every great evangelistic movement a mighty factor in the reformation of manners.

Every Christian an Evangelist.

An ideal evangelism will be the work of the whole Church, as has already been intimated. We shall have an ideal evangelism when every professing Christian becomes an evangelist. The great power of evangelism is its result in making every convert an evangelizing agent. Every Christian is, or should be, a potential evangelist. The business of the Church is to train this tremendous social force upon the world. It remains for men in every walk in life to feel the call to personal service in the world's evangelization. These times and all times need the united work of all who are united in Christ Jesus.

But what power is sufficient to fuse into life the unused forces of the Church of Christ? We have an eternal gospel, a vast organization and an accessible world. What remains? Precisely the power which animated the Church at the beginning. It is the leadership and power of the Holy Spirit which gives the evangelism that we need. And need we doubt that it is the Holy Spirit that has stirred the lay conscience of the Church in recent years? Can we doubt the source of the missionary movement which has awakened the intelligence and started the liberality of the laymen? Who indeed is it that is shifting the sense of responsibility for the world's salvation, so that now we ministers feel that our brethren of the laity are beginning to share a burden which neither we nor our fathers were able to carry alone? A perverted sacerdotalism has failed to evangelize the world, a reformed and devout ministry has made slow progress because of its isolation. But we do believe that a universal Church, animated by evangelistic zeal and empowered by the Spirit of Pentecost, and fully persuaded that the world is its parish, will surely hasten his coming who still moves among the churches, and whose Spirit still cries in the Church: "The Spirit and the bride say, Come. And he that heareth, let him say, Come. And he that is athirst, let him come: he that will, let him take of the water of life freely. * * * He who testifieth these things saith, Yea, I come quickly. Amen. Come, Lord Jesus."

MY FIRST CHARGE AND ELSE.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.
No. 2.

After preaching at Hickory Grove, Monday and Tuesday were rest days, which I spent getting acquainted with my people. Wednesday morning I went to Red Creek Church and talked to a good week-day congregation. Preachers were scarce in that section of the country fifty years ago. If I mistake not, I was the only pastor in all that region outside the coast towns. There were two local preachers in the bounds of my work by the names of Heartfield and Stanford; but they did little preaching and both joined the Baptist Church afterwards because some Bishop would not hunt them up and ordain them.

At Red Creek, one Brother Smith was the principal man in the Church. His home was a welcome shelter for the preacher and his horse. I was more concerned about how my horse fared than I was about myself. I could get along somehow on short rations for a time, but my horse must needs have plenty to eat, if it was at all practicable. Many times have I dismounted, when not pressed for time, and let my faithful "Jenny Lind" graze awhile, when I doubted her having been well fed the night before. When at Brother Smith's both the preacher an his horse fared well. Brother Smith had a nice family and (this time being before the war) a few slaves, who enjoyed as much freedom as he did, if not more.

There lived in Red Creek neighborhood one Mr. Spikes, a clever man, but not a Christian, not even a church member. I enjoyed the hospitality of his home just a little. Mr. Spikes could not read. In fact, it was no uncommon thing to find in those days people who could not read. He had a son, a young man about grown, who could read just a little. Mr. Spikes bought a Bible, took it home and called for his son to read to him from the Psalms of David. Young Spikes, being as ignorant of the Bible as his father, if not more so, looked through the book from start to finish, but failed to find Psalms. He told the old man "Sams" was not in his book. He found a I. and II. Samuel, but could not find "Sams." The old man was disappointed and vowed that he would not have a Bible that did not contain his favorite book. A neighbor called in and told him he could find Psalms, and did so. Young Spikes did not know how the word was spelled. How patient and kindly we ought to deal with the ignorant and erring!

From Red Creek to my next appointment, Wolf River, it was nearly 30 miles, with but few settlements along the road. The woods were a virgin forest of yellow pine. The dull, rough road consisted of three paths of equal distance apart, one for the horse and one for each cartwheel. Ox and mule teams were unknown in that country at that time. Nearly every man had a pony and cart, a two-wheel vehicle. My father lived in that country five years, and it was quite a while after he moved into a more enlightened community before he disposed of his cart and pony and got a wagon and ox team.

It took me from six to seven hours to ride from Red Creek to Wolf River, and it was seldom I saw a house or human being along the route. There were plenty of deer, turkeys, and small game. The streams seemed to abound with nice fish. Gad Bell and I caught 175 nice perch in three hours' time on one occasion.

At wolf River I preached in a private house owned by a Brother Crothers. It was a real treat to get in his home after so long and tiresome a ride, if we did have to cook, eat and sleep in the some room.

On one occasion, while waiting for my congregation, I sang one of the good old songs of "long ago," beginning,

"Hail, ye sighing sons of sorrow,
Learn with me your certain doom."

There was an old man in the congregation I had never seen before. He sat quietly, looking straight at the young preacher. I think it was while I was singing the fourth verse that the old man wept profusely. It runs thus:

"Former friends, how oft' I've sought them,
Just to cheer a troubled mind.
Now they're gone like leaves of autum,
Driven before the dreary wind.
When a few more days are wasted,
And a few more scenes are o'er,
When a few more griefs I've tasted,
I shall rise to fall no more."

I never saw or heard of the brother afterwards. I trust the singing of that song helped him as it often helps me.

When at my Wolf River appointment I was within 20 or 25 miles of Bay St. Louis, formerly called "Shieldsboro." My next preaching place was at Allen Hudson's, ten miles from Wolf River in the direction of Handsboro. Alien Hudson was a member of the Christian, or Camphellite Church. His wife was a staunch Methodist and a good Christian woman. She was formerly a Miss Stanford. At this home preachers were held in high esteem and got the best of entertainment. Brother Hudson lived well. He was industrious, economical and a good manager. He knew better how to raise fruit than he did to get the best prices for it. The preaching service was held in his home, and he usually fed the whole congregation. Several members of his family, including himself, joined our church during my pastorate there in 1858. One of his sons is now a local preacher in, I believe, the Hattiesburg District.

OLD TIME CONSECRATION AND PASSION.

While Methodism has gained much, especially in wealth and social standing, every student of its history knows that it has lost the distinguishing qualities which gave it unique power in its earlier history. We are entirely and painfully clear that the loss is greater than the gain, and of much more value, when judged by New Testament standards. The old-time consecration, sacrifice and passion have gone out of our ministry. This is of more value than all we have gained, for those qualities made our ministry unique, and gave it unusual and unquestionable power with God and men. We must be frank and specific. We have become professional and conventional ministers, with no more evidence of divine call and spiritual passion and power than the ministers of other denominations. We are just as anxious for the non-essentials of the ministry—salary, good church, leisure, vacation, place, popularity—as any clergymen. We suffer as little if our churches are fruitless, and the cry of the seeker for personal salvation is not heard. There is no "Woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel," no vicarious struggle for the conversion of individual souls, no agony in the closet until the morning hour, no unmistakable heart cry, "Give me Scotland or I die!" The people of our churches do not see in their ministers the irresistible love-passion that always fills churches and throngs altars. There is no use in longer disguising the facts. We have become a professional ministry rather than a passionful ministry, and we are reaping the natural and blighting results.

At the same time the people are hungering, as we have never seen them, for the preaching of the clear and fundamental truths of the New Testament. Never, in our day, have we seen the time when the people were so ready for and responsive to the spirit and passion of Methodism, as revealed in our earlier experience. The fields are white for the harvest as we have never seen them.

What is wanted is a radical swing back to our old-time spirit and consecration. We have been making secondary and non-essential things supreme. We need to get back to the ideals of Jesus, of Paul, of Wesley, and the Methodist fathers. Self-searching with more searching of the New Testament—a complete shift in ministerial ideals—is absolutely essential.

We enforce what we have said by republishing the following paragraph from the New York Sun of Sept. 22, which exploited the instance because it regarded it as so unusual and remarkable:

"Rev. Alexander C. Stevens, for six years pastor of the First Methodist Church, one of the wealthiest congregations in the city, has resigned, and will carry the Gospel to the mission fields of South Dakota. Bishop Robert McIntyre has appointed Dr. Stevens general superintendent of missions in the Black Hills Conference, where he will have charge of thirty-two missions. Last January Dr. Stevens announced his probable move into fields where the work is more strenuous. He had built up his church until it now has a property worth $100,000, and a membership roll of more than 500. His salary in the new field will be one half the $3,600 that he now receives, and he will have hard work before him, where energy will count in the building up of new churches."—Zion's Herald.

The Ladies' Home Journal recently published a poem from the peu of Rudyard Kipling, which The Independent thinks is a blow struck at woman suffrage. The war between Italy and Turkey appears to be taking on a more serious aspect. The Turks are said to regard this conflict as a renewal of the struggle between the Christians and Mohammedans, and are reporting to be rallying and fighting with great bravery and some success. The Italians may yet find that they have undertaken a larger task than they dreamed of. Whatever else may be said of the Moslems, it must be conceded that they liave a good record as fighters.

The Cotton Conference which was held in New Orleans, October 30-31, was attended by a number of leading business meu from several States and five governors—Colquitt, of Texas; O'Neal, of Alabama; Mann, of Virgina; Noel, of Mississippi, and Sanders, of Louisiana. The situation was carefully reviewed and various things suggested as a means of advancing the price of tbe fleecy staple. An estimate obtained from Mr. Philander C. Knox, Secretary of State under the present national administration, showed there was demand during the year 1910-11 for 13,739,916 bales of American cotton, and that last year's crop was inadequate to supply this need. Steps were taken to try to bring about a 25 per cent reduction in acreage in 1912. The plan is for each governor to appoint a representative in each county, who is to secure an assistant in each voting precinct, and these appointees are to try to commit the farmers in writing to cut down the amount of cotton planted by one-fourth. Louisiana was highly praised for the diversification of her products, and her example was was recommended to the other commonwealths of the South.

All Saints' Day (November 1) was generally observed in the Crescent City, and the street cars were crowded with people, with hands full of flowers, on their way to the cemeteries to decorate the graves of their dead. This festival is a very ancient one, probably extending as far back as the fourth century. Boniface introduced it into the Western Church, in the beginning of the seventh century, and the time of observing it was changed from May 1 to November 1 by Gregory IV in 834 A.D. It is really to the Roman Catholics what Decoration Day in the spring is to the Protestants. In the State of Louisiana All Saints' Day is a legal holiday.

The revolution in China, as far as can be judged by the dispatches, has proven a success, and apparently the question now is, whether by liberal concessions the present Emperor can save his throne, or whether it will be overturned and the reins of government taken wholly from him. The Manchu dynasty was founded in 1644, and the present boy ruler is the tenth of this succession. Truly, wonderful things are happening in these opening years of the twentieth century. The spirit of democracy is abroad everywhere, and hoary despotisms are being undermined by it. May we not hope that it means the dawning of a brighter day for the oppressed millions whose rights have long been trampled under foot?

The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that the amendment to the Louisiana Constitution adopted in 1908, which provides that if any corporation doing business in Louisiana shall seek to remove a lawsuit from a State to a Federal Court, it shall thereby forfeit its right to do business in the State, is unconstitutional. The ground of the decision is that if a person or corporation has a right to transfer a case to the Federal Courts, it is wholly beyond the province of a State, by any method whatsoever, to take away that right. It is not Louisiana alone that will be affected by this decision. If we are not mistaken, Mississippi and some of the other Southern States have enacted similar laws, which will be rendered nugatory by this pronouncement of our highest judical tribunal.

Mr. Frederic J. Haskin recently stated in an article in the Times-Democrat that it is estimated that the persons who die every year in the various countries of the world from insect-borne diseases would make, if massed together, a city as large as New York. Dr. L. O. Howard, of the United States Bureau of Entomology, has expressed the conviction that malaria alone costs our nation $10,000,000 annually; and he thinks it is probable that the damages inflicted within the bounds of the republic by all disease-carrying insects amount to enough to support the American army and navy. Manifestly we have devolving upon us no more important duty than that of conserving the health of our citizeuship, and our legislators, state and national, should make liberal appropriations for this purpose. No money voted out of our public treasuries is more wisely or profitably expended than that which is thus applied.

Mr. Joseph Pulitzer, one of the most widely knowu of American journalists, died on board his yacht, The Liberty, in the Charleston (South Carolina) harbor (whither he had gone on his way to his summer home on Jekyl island, near Brunswick, Ga.), on October 29. He was born in Hungary in 1847, and educated there; he came to the United States in 1863, enlisting immediately in the Union Army and continuing in the service until the close of the Civil War. He founded the Post-Dispatch in 1878, and purchased the New York World, then a small paper, in 1883. Mr. Pulitzer had been blind for several years. He was philanthropically inclined and gave liberally to the cause of education. One of his benefactions was the donation of $1,000,000 to establish a school of journalism in connection with Columbia University. We regret to say that we do not think the two periodicals owned by Mr. Pulitzer have of late years been conducted upon a very high plane.

A GOOD REPORT.

If what I said in a former article about superannuates giving account of themselves prompted my good Brother Armstrong to send in his report, etc., I am glad I made the suggestion. The Advocate of Sept. 28 contains a good report from him. I read with interest everything I see in our Advocate from him. Yes, Brother Armstrong, I am, so some people say, somewhat advanced in age; and yet I lack 874 years of being as old as Methuselah was when he was drowned in Noah's flood.

Yes, I am a pretty good beef and chicken eater, provided they are young, tender and well cooked. The fact is, I, like most, if not all preachers, and not a few who are not preachers, eat more at times than is best for my stomach. Brother Armstrong may be an exception.

Yes, I have a large family connection, and a pretty good sized family of my own; including children 17 (sons and daughters-in-law included), 39 grand and great-grandchildren, making 56 in all. Read 128 Psalm. I travel around some, but never go where I am not invited: In fact, within the last month or six weeks I have failed to attend three camp meetings and four or five other meetings where I was invited. So, you see.

I am glad Dr. Sam Keener and Brother Paul Brown were thoughtful enough to give Brother Armstrong something to do. Three Sundays in each month and five sermons a month does fine for a superannuate. Wish all our honored brethren were able and willing to do as well. I am glad the people where he goes treat him so well—he deserves it. Enjoy it? Of course, he does; who wouldn't? I am glad he has a cow and calf. I presume he gets plenty of milk and butter. I am glad he has a wife. So many men have—well—things that keep late hours, wear "hobble skirts" (abominable things), and then they wear something like—I don't know what—about their head. I am glad he can walk rapidly. In that he has the advantage of me. I weigh 175 pounds; will soon be 76 years of age; my days of activity are past. I walk a mile or two nearly every day. My father's large family of eleven children are all gone except three, two sisters and myself. I am the only one of seven brothers living.

The same Advocate that contained Brother Armstrong's report had in it good reports from Brothers Sandell and Downer, two superannuates in my Conference. May God continue to bless Brother and Sister Armstrong, and give them plenty to eat and wear, and a good home.

CHURCH DEDICATIONS.

Our new church at Fernwood will be formally dedicated on Sunday, November 26, at 11 a.m. The house of worship at this place was totally destroyed by fire last year. We began at once to rebuild, and within four months we worshiped in the present building, which is larger and more beautiful than the one burned.

On Sunday, December 3, our La Branch Street Church here in McComb will be dedicated at 11 a.m. All former pastors of these two churches are hereby cordially invited to attend these dedication services.

METHODISM ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

It is not my intention to say anything that would in the slightest degree wound the feelings of my friends out here. It is home, but I must say that the "Golden State" with its lovely climate, by the efforts of the Church, seem very never will be forgotten by me.

It was only a few days after I arrived here before I was invited to preach in the Southern church, and in the meantime I was regularly attending the Methodist Church. Both times I was most cordially received, and listened to one of the best of preachers, though the small size of the congregations was astonishing to me. For a time I thought I might be wanting in appreciation, but with the return of the bright days and perfect conditions for attendance, church there was little, if any improvement. The Southern church is located in a part of the city much given to the "Chinese," and is in the middle of the block, with a theatre on the rear end. One of the Bishops said a sermon then of a recurring value, and he did not see how it could serve with such unpleasant surroundings. I attended Epworth Church a few times after, in a circular. It is a most imposing edifice. I have never entered it, so am unable to say anything about the size of their congregations. Another thing there is no prayer meeting in the Southern church, and I fail to see how any spiritual life can be maintained without this splendid aid.

What I say about the services applies only to the Methodist Church South. One day I inquired of an old man who is pastor of the small congregations here characteristic of this church only. He replied that all had the same complaint, and added that "people out in the West do not attend services like they do in the South." I remembered the splendid audiences that greeted Bishop Burgis at Travis Park, and Bishop W. F. Harrison at the church in San Antonio. In that latter town was usually a premium every Sabbath in each church. Recently I considered to attend services at a Congregational church one night when there was to be "special" services at the Methodist church, and also at the Southern church. To my surprise, I found the large house full, very full. The service began exactly on time, and in less than half an hour the pastor was on his feet. He preached a topical sermon nearly fifty minutes out, and no one seemed tired. The sermon was in no more than I had been accustomed to at the Methodist churches, and was much longer. The fine attention and good feeling apparent all over the church, and among the departing crowd, at once attracted my attention, and I looked for the cause therefor. It was not hard to find, if every one was attended like the writer. I leave the thought with you, and any other preacher who wishes to hear what keeps people from church.

The short service that preceded the sermon did not tire one out, and so the mind was receptive, and the sermon impressive. No one who endures three or four "hymns," and a long, tiresome preliminary service is in a frame of mind to hear a sermon. It would be a glad and happy day for the Church if the singing was confined to the hymnal, or to sacred songs—simple, sweet, and musical. Vocal gymnastics are out of place in "God's house." At the great Sunday School Convention it was announced that there would be a grand concert and chorus of 1000 trained voices (sopra, Alto and Tic, according to hospital). Of course, I went, and paid Tic for a seat in order to hear the singing, as I supposed it would be real music. What was my disgust when there was nothing on the program but masses, and that class of alleged music! A young lady sang for an encore "The Last Rose of Summer." That was real music, and one of the sweetest renditions I ever heard. I left before the program was two-thirds completed, as there was nothing on it I wished to hear again. "Classic" music may be fine, but it is very dull and unmusical to me. How that splendid choir of 1000 voices could have thrilled the immense audience, if the leader had only made better selections! As it was, many left when I did. It convinced me that long preliminary services are not conducive to large crowds in this section, and I have found that people are much the same all over the world. I heard a young man from Mississippi, named Edson, sing a simple, sweet little gospel song that thrilled an entire audience as no mass of "classic" ever could. Knowledge puts it to proof of Edson.

But I will return. This is the big a subject to which I refer, and there is another point I wish to mention. In the American revision of the Bible I notice that the expression "Feed me" is often applied to the "Good Master" and when we remember that our Lord is not dead from the dead, and was feeding one of his feeble sheep simultaneously with the disciples on the shore of the Sea—as far as we know the very last written account of the ministry—he said to Peter three times "Feed my sheep," "Feed my lambs." John was at the tomb when he wrote these words, and we can imagine how vividly that scene came before his eyes. It was as real to him—the open tomb, the bright morning sunshine, the rough men, and the gentle form of the "Teacher" breaking the bread and feeding them—it is no wonder that of all the many things he said, John would have chosen the most tender and beautiful that could be uttered. "Feed," "feed"—how we do hunger for the "bread of life," and how often we are disappointed and unsatisfied. I wish to make this observation, and it can be verified at any time. The more I get into my own people like the free dispensing of the bread of life. The old world is hungry for the words of "eternal life," and God has called men to dispense it. It is in "the foolishness of preaching that we persuade men," and since this is God's plan, we are foolish to try to improve on it. Thanks be to him the old Methodist churches are trying to carry on his divine plan in spite of opposition.

Nineteen years ago I heard Bishop Granbery preach at Conference in Natchez from the text, "Feed the flock of God." The memory of that will remain with longer and feeds my soul after all these years. Brethren, as a Bishop, let me beg of you to remember that in every audience there are many in need of spiritual food, and be not slow in dispensing it. One good, rich thought, a word yet from eternity is usually sufficient.

In conclusion, let me say that while the outlook does not seem very bright to me especially for the Southern Church, still it is not hopeless. The preachers are doing their part amid discouraging conditions. It seems to me that with a shortening of the preliminary service—to enable the preacher to get in a word before the people are too tired to listen—a return to hymnal singing, and a thorough warming and ventilating of the churches there would be improvement all around. LOYALTY AND THE HONOR ROLL

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

No incident connected with the last session of our National Congress has received wider comment, and nothing has done more to bring the brilliant Senator from Mississippi into public favor than the case of Jim Jones opposed by Senator Heyburn, and championed by John Sharp Williams. As is known to all, it was affirmed by Mr. Williams to be simply a case of sentiment and sympathy. Jim Jones had been the faithful body servant of President Jefferson Davis, and after the war of secession had secured a place in the employment of the Senate of the United States. Because of his age (eighty-two), it was proposed to discontinue his services and secure another more active. There was no pension attached to the position which Jones had filled, and such action would be to cut off a trusty servant without adequate support. Though Mr. Heyburn, in his hate for the South and his love for the negro, may be classed as a loyal follower of John Brown, there was no pity for Jones, and it fell to Mississippi's big-hearted representative to speak for the aged black man, who had given the strength of his young manhood to the service of his country. If my memory recalls correctly the burden of the Senator's appeal it was consideration for his age and his loyalty to every task assigned him, and upon that he won by an overwhelming majority, securing the retention of the faithful old veteran.

Loyalty is a big subject in the Bible, and there is another word I wish to mention. The Home Circle

AWAY TO SCHOOL.

Hurry! hurry! is the rule
On the days we go to school;
Just as soon as breakfast's done,
'Round about the house we run,
Looking here and looking there,
Finding things 'most anywhere.
Father, walking to and fro,
Hurries Jack who's always slow.
Mother, glancing at the clock,
Smoothes out Mary's rumpled frock;
Tells us children to make haste,
Says there isn't time to waste;
Goes down with us to the gate;
Says she hopes we won't be late.
Then away we hurry fast,
Off to school again at last.

A BOY WHO OBEYED ORDERS.

It was on a wet, cold October evening that a boy trudged wearily into the seaport town of Chatham, England, a bundle on his shoulders. He was covered with mud, and from under the long black locks that fell on his forehead two big eyes stared out at the world, and his thin cheeks were pinched with cold and wet with rain. He met a sailor as he entered the town outskirts, and stopping him said:

"If you please, which way to the docks?"

The sailor directed him, and he went forward, down the narrow streets till he came to the water side. There he wandered around for a time without anyone, for it was supper-time; but presently he came upon an old man, and asked:

"Are those ships out there warships?"

"Aye," replied the man, "they be, sure enough, lad! Be ye a goin' to the wars?" And he grinned.

"Yes, but I don't know how to get on board," said the puzzled boy. "Where do their boats land?"

"Right here," and the old man waved his pipe at the landing-stage before them. "See, yon is one a-comin' now."

Sure enough, a boat was rowing swiftly in. It drew up to the landing-stage and an officer stepped out. The boy approached the officer, and touching his cap, said:

"Please, sir, can you tell me how to get on board the frigate Raisonnable?"

The officer looked down, and staring at the thin, pale face with its big eyes and firm mouth, replied:

"Why, that is my ship. But what do you want on board of her?"

"Please, sir, I want to join. Her commander, Captain Suckling, is my uncle, and I want to report to him."

The officer looked again at the boy. "Well, in that case, I can take you aboard when I return. But you look cold and hungry, my lad; have you had supper?"

"No, sir; I left home early this morning, and have not eaten anything since."

"Bless 'em! Here, you have reported to me; I am a lieutenant on board, and so come up and have something to eat with me. Why didn't you stop in town as you came?"

"Well, you see, sir," replied the boy, "I promised father that I would come straight to the ship and report for duty, without stopping in town, so I couldn't very well."

"Good boy!" cried the officer. "If you obey orders as well in the navy, you should get on capitally. What is your name?"

"Horatio Nelson, sir."

And the man who, as a boy, had learned to obey orders unflinchingly later became the great sea-hero of England, Horatio Nelson.—Boyd's World.

ROSETTA POPE'S SCHOOL.

"What are you doing?" It was Rosetta's uncle who asked the question.

Rosetta looked up with a little laugh. "I'm playing school," she said.

Uncle Leonard came near, and gazed at her row of pupils first in wonder, then with an amused smile.

"You have some very famous scholars," he observed.

A dozen or more "Author" cards were ranged on chairs before her, and each card pictured the face of a man or woman prominent in literature.

"Is Tennyson at the head or the foot of the class?" he inquired, his eyes twinkling.

"Oh, at the head!" Rosetta answered. "I don't know what other people think, but I rank them just as I like them; and then if they don't recite well, they have to go down."

"Pray, what do they recite?" her uncle asked. "Spelling and geography?"

"Of course not! They recite from their own works. Here are the lessons," and she laid her hand on a big pile of books at her side.

"Do you admit visitors?"

"Oh, yes, sir! Mamma often comes in. That's the visitor's seat," pointing to a great armchair.

So from the other side of the room Uncle Leonard watched the small teacher and her renowned scholars.

"Lord Tennyson will please recite his New Year's poem beginning: 'Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky.'" Whereupon Rosetta selected a book from the pile, and, keeping her finger in the place, recited the lines with very little hesitation.

"Well done!" praised her uncle.

"Thank you," said Rosetta, blushing.

The next card bore the face of Alexander Pope, and the teacher said, "Mr. Pope, you may recite two lines from your 'Essay on Man,'" and again Rosetta spoke for her pupil:

"Honor and fame from condition rise;
Act well your part, there all the honor lies."

Then she turned to her uncle with a smile. "I can't understand much of this," she explained; "but seeing that our names are the same, I thought I'd have to put him in somewhere, and he's learned those lines so well that he stays up near the head."

Uncle Leonard burst out laughing, but was checked by Rosetta's warning finger.

"Mr. Cowper, please give us the first and last verse of 'John Gilpin.'"

Rosetta began bravely enough:

"John Gilpin was a citizen
Of credit and renown.
A"—

Suddenly she puckered her forehead, and then she said in a voice supposed to be stern, "Mr. Cowper, you may go to the foot!" adding to her uncle: "I never can remember that, but I like it."

"And how often do you have this sort of thing," asked Uncle Leonard.

"Oh, whenever I get lonesome. I guess I'd rather have you talk to me now," and with one sweep of the hand she gathered her famous pupils into a pack and tossed it on the table.

"Tell me about Cousin Maud, please," she coaxed.

"One thing about her is that she is lonely most of the time, and we live so far from neighbors. I think I'll buy a set of Author's on my way home and tell her about this school of yours."

"Oh, do!" cried Rosetta. "And then when she comes down here next summer we can play together. Mamma likes it because she says it teaches me so much."

"I should say so! I shall have to coach Maud at first. She doesn't know one author from another."

"Neither did I till I learned," said Rosetta.—Southern Presbyterian.

HER TEARS UNFASTENED.

Marjorie never cries when any little mishap befalls her, but the other day Araminta, her dearly loved and tenderly cherished doll, fell into the grate and received a contusion of the nose which was most unpleasant to contemplate. Marjorie winked very hard for a few minutes, and then running with her injured Araminta to her mother, she buried her head in her mother's lap, sobbing.

"Oh, mamma, I don't want to cry, but my tears have all come unfastened."—Christian Guardian.

The love of Christ is not an absorbing but a radiating love. The more we love him, the more we shall most certainly love others.—F. B. Havergal.

CONCERT PIPE ORGANIST.

Miss Beulah Margot Herring, of Corinth, Miss., will be open for dates this fall and winter as a concert organist. Church recitals and sacred concerts a specialty. Write her for terms. Miss Herring is a graduate of the University of Arkansas, also the American Conservatory of Chicago, under the famous organist, Wilhelm Middleschulte.

The Daily Corinthian says: "The First Methodist Church had standing room only last night with which to accommodate the large and critical audience that greeted Miss Beulah Margot Herring at her organ recital. She was not only happy in her selection of the numbers, but in the rendition as well. Her technique is flawless, and her pedal work really wonderful. Her interpretation of the great music masters was par excellence."

REPORT OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, representing the three patronizing Conferences, namely, Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi, held its annual meeting on Oct. 26, 1911, in the Advocate office at New Orleans under most pleasant auspices. Every member was present; all displayed a deep interest in the work in hand, and from first to last there was unanimity of purpose and action.

Rev. N. E. Joyner retired from the chairmanship of the Committee, and Dr. J. M. Henry, the capable presiding elder of the metropolitan district of Louisiana was elected in his stead, Brother Joyner taking the important post of secretary.

The publisher's report was submitted by Mr. C. O. Chalmers, and, after being audited by a sub-committee, was adopted by the Committee as a whole. Brother Chalmers deserves commendation for the excellence of the mechanical work done on the Advocate, which does so much to render it attractive and convenient to its readers. Due appreciation was shown of his services by the formal action of the committee, and by his re-election as publisher for a term of four years.

Dr. R. A. Meek, the gifted editor of the Advocate, presented a luminous report of his work, from which extracts are here quoted as conveying to the Advocate's constituency the best possible knowledge of the difficulties under which the editor labors, and which modesty would perhaps prevent his presenting in other form. Dr. Meek says in his report: 'I do not think there is any doubt but that the Advocate has grown in favor with its constituency and that its general influence throughout the connection has been increased. Many testimonials to this effect have reached the office, but we did not think it in good taste to allow them to appear in print, though they have greatly encouraged us. Whatever may be said of its quality, our paper now carries as much original matter as any Conference organ in the Church, only two or three of them equaling it in this respect. In my judgment, we are devoting more space to the work and workers in our own field than any other jonrnal in Southern Methodism. It has been, and is, my conviction that the primary purpose of our paper is to promote the development of the work in Louisiana and Mississippi. It scarcely needs to be said that the Advocate is yet very far below my ideal for it. I had it in mind to make a number of changes in it during the year, but various things have operated to prevent me from doing this Owing to failing health, Brother Carley, the assistant editor, left the city about June 1, and since that time the entire task of revising copy, keeping up the editorial departments, and seeing (with such assistance as the publisher could give) that the matter finally appears in proper form has devolved npon me. In addition to this, without a stenographer, I have had to conduct all the correspondence which relates to the editorial management. I am aware that there are those who think there is little work in editing a weekly journal, but the truth is, no task is more exacting than that of issuing with inadequate facilities a church paper that is creditable. It is a work that has no interims, and which must be conducted with painstaking care. It is a matter of regret to me that I have not been able to get out among the people more during the year, as I feel that the editor's personal contact with them would be worth something to the paper. Both the amount of work I have had to do in the office and Providential interference have hindered me in this. And, so far as Mississippi is concerned, the matter of expense is practically an insnperable barrier in the way."

It will thus be seen what a large task Dr. Meek is burdened with, and it is earnestly hoped that the knowledge of the true situation as here disclosed will stimulate all of the brethren in the three Conferences to do their utmost to increase the circulation of the Advocate, and by this means enable the Committee to provide a decent increase of the present inadequate salary which Dr. Meek is receiving, though he has made no demand for increased compensation.

Of Dr. Meek's editorial work too much cannot be said. No defense will be undertaken. It needs none. Accomplished, fearless, bold, yet tender, this brilliant writer has in his brief experience on the tripod challenged the attention of the entire connection, and he has been quietly assigned a place among the capable editors who have adorned and blessed the Church.

Specially noteworthy is his prompt and adequate defense of the theology and rights of Methodism in this day of compromise and non-resistance; and the editor's devotional writing has an irresistible charm.

Having commended his past work, the Committee re-elected Dr. Meek to the editorship for a term of four years, and they look with confidence to his growing influence and the wider circulation of the Advocate. Respectfully submitted,

H. S. SPRAGINS,
For the Committee.

Greenwood, Miss.

THE CONFERENCE COLLECTIONS.

As our Annual Conferences are only a few weeks off, it may not be amiss to write a few lines concerning the connectional claims for which an assessment has been placed upon every pastoral charge. Every cause represented in these apportionments is worthy, and a deficit on any one of them is detrimental to some important and necessary department of our Church work. Methodists should count it both a duty and a privilege to contribute to these funds—not to do so is to shirk obligation and to miss an opportunity to aid in the accomplishment of great good. In most of the charges the task of raising these collections devolves upon the pastor, and this is always a burdensome duty unless he has the hearty co-operation of the membership of the Church. We have known some persons who had promised a subscription to require a busy preacher to call three or four times to get it. Such action is most reprehensible. Instead of thus adding to the labors of the pastor, wherever it is practicable he should be relieved entirely of the task of securing these assessments, or if it is not deemed wise to take this work out of his hands, he should at least have the sympathy and assistance of his people in his efforts to perform it. Let every member of the Church who reads these lines, who has not already done so, make it a point to see the preacher and hand him a contribution to these benevolences. It will cheer and encourage him if you will do this. Nothing possible should be left undone in any charge to meet these obligations in full, since the money is so urgently needed. Few give as generously to these connectional interests as they ought. Liberality is yet the neglected grace, and is all too rare among us.

REV. WILSON MOORE DEAD.

In a note written from Jena, on the 31st ult., Rev. E. L. Cargill says: "I hereby hand you a notice of the death of Rev Wilson Moore of the Louisiana Conference, our pastor at Glenmora, which occurred on Saturday, October 28, at 11:30 p.m. He was buried Monday afternoon, the writer officiating." We regret exceedingly to chronicle Brother Moore's decease, which to us was most unexpected, as the latest information we had from him was that he was in good physical condition and happy in the work. At the last session of the Annual Conference at Homer, Brother Moore was assigned to the Fullerton and Oakdale charge, but later in the year his health failed and he was relieved of that appointment and went to Hammond, where he took a course of treatment at Dr. McGehee's Sanitarium at that place. Here he steadily improved, and several weeks ago, when Rev. J. N. Hall surrendered the Glenmora Circuit, Brother Moore was appointed to succeed him. As to the circumstances attending Brother Moore's death, we are wholly uninformed. A more extended account from the pen of some one acquainted with the facts as to his closing hours and also the career of the deceased will, we trust, be furnished the Advocate at an early date. We extend our most profound sympathy to the bereaved loved ones, and pray that God may be consciously with them in this trying hour.

Since writing the above, we have received a letter from Rev. Paul Brown, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, which gives the following additional information concerning Brother Moore's death: "He died at the parsonage. The end came suddenly. None of his ministerial brethren were able to be with him, but the little flock at Glenmora were abundant in helpfulness and kindness to his family in their sad hour. After twenty-six years of faithful service in difficult fields, our brother has gone to his reward. We had no purer Christian character in our ranks than Wilson Moore. He leaves a wife and three sons to monrn his departure."

A VALUABLE PUBLICATION.

The "Working Manual" for Sunday school leaders which Mr. J. R. Pepper has just issued is a magnificent piece of work. Its mechanical make-up is well-nigh perfect, the binding, printing, and paper, all being of a most superior quality. The illustrations are appropriate and of an unusually high order. And it is also brimful of useful information, admirably arranged, from the first page to the last. In other words, this work is a thing of beauty, and if preserved, as it deserves to be, will prove a joy for many days to come. Brother Pepper in bringing out this publication has performed for the Church a needed and distinguished service. He has our hearty thanks for a copy of this attractive and valuable "Manual."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The latest information is that Maine remains dry by a majority of 758 votes.

Brother Pastor, in winding up the work of the year do not forget the claims of the Advocate.

A revival meeting is in progress at the Louisiana Avenue Church of this city. The services are reported to have opened auspiciously.

How about your subscription to the Advocate? If you have not renewed it, will you not please kindly have your pastor to do so at once? We do not desire to lose a single subscriber.

Dr. S. H. Werlein, we regret to state, has recently been somewhat indisposed. He was unable to fill his pulpit last Sunday week, and Rev. E. N. Evans preached in his stead.

Rev. A. A. Bernard, our pastor at Covington, La., was an appreciated visitor at our office Tuesday of this week. He was in fine health and spirits, and spoke encouragingly of his work.

Rev. Paul Jones, of Meridian, Miss., who is holding a meeting for Dr. Hines at the St. Charles Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, favored the Advocate office with a call last week. The editor regrets having missed him.

Through the kindness and activity of Rev. J. M. Wyatt, subscriptions continue to reach us from the classic town of Brookhaven, Miss. We are pleased to have our circulation extended in this choice community.

The Methodist churches of New Orleans, as has been their custom for some time, will hold a union Thanksgiving service this year. It will be held at First Church, and the sermon will be preached by Rev. A. G. Shankle.

Rev. W. M. Williams, Manager of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss., in a letter dated Nov. 6, says: "Our 'Work Day' receipts have gone over $4,000, and are climbing toward the $5,000 mark. All our large family are well. We have a fine school with excellent teachers."

Rev. R. H. Wynn is closing out a pleasant and profitable year at the First Methodist Church of Monroe. This is one of the foremost Methodist congregations in Louisiana, and Brother Wynn is in high favor with this worthy flock. He is said to excel both as a pastor and preacher.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. W. Booth, it was the editor's pleasure to preach to his congregation in Algiers last Sunday at 11 a.m. He was greeted by a good audience, who gave him an attentive hearing. We enjoyed worshiping with these Wesleyan disciples across the river.

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, of the Wall Hill charge, North Mississippi Conference, has lately remembered us with a nice list of subscribers, accompanied by a remittance to correspond. He has had a pleasant year, notwithstanding the sickness in his home, and the Lord has graciously blessed his labors.

The Lafayette District has a safe and judicious leader in the person of Rev. J. E. Denson, who is ever ready to stand up for Methodist doctrine, and who confidently believes that the gospel is still the power of God unto salvation. The work is going forward at many places in the territory under Brother Denson's supervision.

The New Orleans District is fortunate in having Dr. J. M. Henry on it at this time when a general forward movement is being contemplated. Dr. Henry has carefully studied conditions in and about the city, and is a wise and resourceful leader. He has done much to interest the General Board of Missions in this important field.

The communication from Senatobia which appeared in last week's Advocate, in the "Tidings From the Field" Department, signed "S. L. Pope," should have been signed Mrs. S. L. Pope. It was well enough written to have appeared over Brother Pope's signature, but we believe in giving credit to whom credit is due. We regret the error.

The Alpha Wesley Class of the First Methodist Church of Tupelo, Miss., celebrated "Drummer's Day" last Sunday, November 5. Mrs. Victoria T. Hoyle delivered the address on this interesting occasion, which is a guaranty that it was a message well worth hearing. This Adult Class is one of the largest and most active in Mississippi.

Captain John J. Bradford, of Wingate, Miss., announces the marriage of his daughter, Miss Carter Wingate to Rev. Robert P. Fikes, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Richton, Miss. The wedding will take place on Decemher 14, in the bride-elect's home town, Wingate, Miss. The Advocate extends in advance congratulations and best wishes.

Writing from Jackson, Miss., under date of October 31, Rev. H. P. Lewis says: "I spent Sunday, October 22, with friends in Warren County, and preached twice at old Redbone Church, which was built fifty-six years ago. It is a substantial building, and has had a new roof put on it within the last two years. The Redbone members, though few, are a loyal set of Methodists."

Rev. C. C. Miller, the capable presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, has lately been ill. He was not able to be present at the quarterly conference of the East Feliciana Circuit which was held on Saturday, October 29. We trust that this faithful worker will soon be restored to perfect health. Most of the charges under his supervision will make a creditable showing at Conference.

We regret to learn that Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of Macon, Miss., who is to be the host of the North Mississippi Conference this fall, has been suffering for some time from malarial troubles. We trust that he will soon recover and regain his usual strength, since he has so much work ahead in the near future. Brother Gladney is having a successful pastorate in his present charge.

Rev. H. A. Gatlin, who for some time has been in charge of the East Feliciana Circuit, has been transferred to Missouri, and stationed at Appleton City. He left for his new field of labor on November 2. Brther Gatlin did excellent work while serving in the Louisiana Conference, and we heartily commend him to the brethren among whom he has cast his lot as a faithful and promising young minister.

We were pained to learn that the younger brother of Rev. J. H. Felts, of the Aberdeen District, whose illness was reported in a recent issue of the Advocate, has since died. It is gratifying, however, to know that he fell peacefully asleep in Jesus, cherishing the confident hope of a blissful immortality. We pray that the loving Father above may comfort and uphold all who bave been made to suffer by this bereavement.

Dr. T. B. Holloman's fourth quarterly conference, at Port Gibson, Miss., which was an interesting occasion, has been held. Referring to the presiding elder, Dr. H. W. Featherstun, Brother Holloman says: "He made kindly remarks about the condition of the work and the spirit of the people. We are closing a delightful year in this good charge." Every years is a good one where Dr. Holloman labors. He has a habit of succeeding.

Mr. T. L. Boswell and his accomplished young wife, of Nashville, Tenn., who were married a few months ago, recently spent several days in New Orleans, visiting various places of interest in the city and mingling with their friends hereabout. Mr. Boswell is a son of Dr. J. W. Boswell, formerly editor of the Advocate, and naturally feels at home in this office. He dropped in to see us, and was accorded a most hearty welcome.

Rev. W. Marvin Langley, than whom there is no choicer spirit in the North Mississippi Conference, has wrought most successfully on the Jonestown and Belen charge during the present year. Among other achievements, he has succeeded in erecting a neat and attractive parsonage, which has long been urgently needed on this work. No interest of the Church suffers in Brother Langley's hands. It is his habit to do conscientiously his best in every field to which he is assigned.

We have received a handsomely printed invitation which reads as follows: "Rev. and Mrs. W. M. McIntosh request the pleasure of your company in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, Saturday, the eighteenth of November, from seven until eleven o'clock, Seldom Inn, Iuka, Miss." We congratulate these valued friends upon the approaching silver anniversary of their marriage, and we trust that the occasion will in every respect be a happy and memorable one.

The General Board of Education (Rockefeller), through its representative, Dr. Wallace Butterick, has promised the Southern Methodist University at Dallas a donation of $200,000 to be applied to the endowment fund. This together with the $300,000 donated by the city of Dallas and $100,000 subscribed on "Education Day" at the State Fair, brings the pledged endowment of this institution up to $600,000. Besides this, the University owns 700 acres of very valuable land in close proximity to the city.

Under date of the 2d inst., Brother J. L. Neill of Hattiesburg writes: "Sister Mary Traylor Meador, wife of Rev. W. P. Meador, who is the faithful superintendent of the Sunday school at Broad Street Church, died Tuesday morning, October 31. She had been confined to her bed for months. She was buried on the afternoon of the day of her death. An obituary will be sent you later." We regret to hear of the death of this elect lady, and we extend sympathy to the bereaved and pray that the Heavenly Father may comfort and sustain them.

In a business letter to our office on the 1st inst., Rev. G. W. Bachman adds: "I go to Sardis in a few days to spend some time in circulating our books and papers, and I expect to attend the Memphis Conference, which will convene in Memphis on November 15. I hope to have all collections in full soon." Let the brethren who are concerned cooperate in enabling Brother Bachman to carry a clean balance sheet to Macon. One who toils as faithfully as he does deserves a large measure of success.

A recent number of the Columbus Commercial (Mississippi) contained a most complimentary notice of a sermon preached at the First Methodist Church of that city by the pastor, Dr. H. G. Henderson. From the account given we quote briefly: "Dr. Henderson since assuming control of the pastorate of the First Methodist Church last December has delivered many fine sermons, and those who heard him last Sunday morning had the pleasure of listening to an unusually forceful, virile, and cogent discourse." The theme which Dr. Henderson discussed was the "Lord's Prayer."

Rev. R. A. Clark, who about a year ago was transferred from the North Mississippi to the Memphis Conference and was stationed at Second Church, Memphis, is having success in his new and important field. He has had (without holding a special revival) over a hundred accessions during the year, had made more than 1,500 pastoral visits, has married about 40 couples, and officiated at a large number of funerals. Brother Clark finds little difficulty in securing the assessments for the connectional claims, and will report everything in full when the Annual Conference convenes next week. Second Church now has 675 members, 350 enrolled in the Sunday school, and 150 in the Epworth League.

From Mansfield, La., on November 1, Brother R. B. Thomas writes as follows: "Rev. Walt Holcomb is conducting another union revival at this place. Four years ago he held the greatest meeting here in the history of the town. The most prominent men were converted and joined the Church. The saloons were voted out and the pool rooms closed up. Since that meeting the Methodists, Baptists, and Presbyterians have erected new churches. The converts of the former campaign are taking the lead in the present campaign. Mr. Holcomb will rest for a month after his engagement here, and his singer can be secured for a meeting. Any pastor needing a singer may write Mr. Holcomb at Nashville, Tenn."

The following committees have been appointed to get things in readiness for the approaching session of the Louisiana Conference, which will assemble in this city at the Parker Memorial Church on Wednesday December 6: Entertainment—Rev. W. W. Holmes, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, and Rev. A. G. Shankle; Worship—Dr. J. M. Henry; Rev. C. D. Atkinson, and Rev. S. H. Werlein; Outing—Rev. A. F. Vaughan, Rev. J. G. Snelling, and Rev. J. L. Sutton; Publicity—Rev. H. H. Ahrens. Luncheon will be served daily by the ladies of the several churches, as follows: Wednesday, Parker Memorial and Carrollton Avenue; Thursday, Felicity Street and Louisiana Avenue; Friday, Rayne Memorial and Epworth; Saturday, First and Second Churches.

News has reached us of the distressing accident which happened to Master Coleman Carlisle, the twelve-year-old son of Rev. W. C. Carlisle, pastor of the Second Methodist Church of Columbus, Miss., on October 31. While playing during an afternoon recess at the Franklin Academy, the little fellow was run over by a street car, and his legs were so crushed that it was found necessary to amputate them both below the knees. Master Coleman is said to have faced the ordeal of the operation with great bravery and manliness, and though his condition was considered serious when we last heard from him, hope of his recovery was entertained. Brother and Sister Carlisle, as well as their unfortunate son, will have the sympathy and prayers of a host of friends in this time of trial and solicitude.

The revival meeting which has been going on for the last ten days at the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church came to a close last Sunday night. There was a large audience present and Rev. Abe Mulkey preached a powerful sermon on the subject, "The Last Call to Repentance." Rev. J. G. Snelling, the pastor, is much gratified with the meeting, and thinks that the preaching of Mr. Mulkey will have an abiding effect in the hearts of those who have attended the series of services. While the visible results are not what was hoped for, it is believed much good was accomplished by the inspiration which the members of the church caught from the earnest preaching of the evangelist, and the soulful singing of his good wife. After a few days' rest the Rev. Mr. Mulkey and his wife will leave for Florida, where they have an engagement to conduct another protracted meeting.

CONCERNING CONFERENCE ENTERTAINMENT.

To the Preachers and Lay Delegates of the North Mississippi Conference.

Between the 15th and 20th of this month, a card will he mailed to each preacher and lay delegate giving the name of his host. Should any preacher or delegate find it impossible to attend the Conference, please write to me at once and let me know you cannot attend.

The Methodist people of Macon are doing their utmost to make this a memorable occasion in every respect.

R. H. B. GLADNEY.

Macon, Nov. 4, 1911.

AN URGENT CALL.

The trustees of Mansfield College have instructed me to call for the payment at once of the amounts subscribed at the Conference in Homer for Mansfield College. These amounts were pledged with the distinct understanding that they would be paid in May, 1911. The trustees assumed that these pledges could be relied upon and gave their personal notes for the entire amount in order that the college might not be hampered. Half of the subscribers have not redemed their pledges. This failure has been a burden to the trustees. They have had to borrow money and pay 8 per cent interest because of the failure to meet these pledges.

These pledges were made in open Conference and after careful and detalled explanations had been made. Will you not redeem your pledge at once?

N. E. JOYNER,
For the Board of Trustees.

FREE CARS FOR ORPHANAGES.

Orphanage Free Cars on N. O. & N. E. R. R. will be run from Picayune to Hattieshurg, Nov. 14, and from Hattiesburg to Meridian, Nov. 15. The local train will carry the cars. Anything to eat, to wear, or that is serviceable, will he received. Brother L. E. Prentice, of Poplarville, Miss., is managing the car. Write to him for any information, circulars, etc.

Free Car from Hattieshurg to Jackson Nov. 28th, on G. & S. I. R. R. The local train will carry this car. Rev. L. F. Alford and Zeno Wall, of Mount Olive, are managing this car. Write to them for circulars.

Let all the Hattleshurg donations be sent to depot and loaded Monday the 27th. Talk up the Orphanage and its needs and get every one to contribute something: Corn, molasses, flour, meat, hogs, potatoes, pinders, all kinds of canned goods, notions, dry goods, made and unmade, top clothing and bottom clothing. In fact, everything that can be used.

These cars will bring things to both Orphanages; mark everything either Methodist Orphanage, or Baptist Orphanage.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

In the stillness of the night of Aug. 27, 1911, the angel of death entered the home of J. F. and J. P. Bush, and translanted to his heavenly home their sweet little flower, EMMA. She was born Aug. 31, 1907. She was barely four years old, but so bright and matured in mind for one of her tender years. She loved the Sunday school, and many Sabbaths found her with her class. She had a sweet, unselfish disposition, though petted and idolized by all in her home. Do not grieve, dear ones. She is only a link that draws you to heaven where she stands with beckoning hands waiting for you. AUNT MARY.

On Sept. 11, 1911, after a short illness, Miss WILLIE RUTH STOGNER passed from her earthly abode to her celestial home. She was born Aug. 16, 1893. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at Forest Hill when she was only 12 years of age. She was a faithful member, esteemed and loved by all who knew her. She lived a consecrated life until the Master said, "It is enough; come up higher."

"How well she fell asleep!
Like some proud river, widening toward the sea,
Calmly and grandly, silently and deep,
Life joined eternity."

Her place is now vacant and our hearts are sad; yet we know that our Lord has promised that we shall live again, and death will only be a short, dreamless slumber, when we shall awake and again be with friends and loved ones, to sing through the ceaseless ages of eternity unto him who loved us and redeemed us.

A. S. RAPER.

On September 26, 1911, the death angel invaded the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Anderson, and took from their midst little DAVIE. God sent this precious child to these dear parents some four years ago; he came as a bright jewel to gladden their hearts for a short while, and now his soul is a beacon light above to lead his loved ones to the Father's house, where there is eternal life.

Davie was an unusually bright child for his age and was dearly loved by all for manly and independent ways. Weep not, dear papa and mamma, and brothers and sisters; little Davie is not dead, but sleepeth in the arms of Jesus, and on the resurrection morn will be standing at the beautiful gates, watching and waiting to welcome his loved ones. Grange Hall Sunday School is sad indeed. Davie is absent. Sorrow not, Sunday school; Davie has answered the roll call of everlasting life, which we all must answer some day.

Blessed be the name of the Lord!

His Sunday School Teacher,
MAY McCRANE.

Mrs. MARY L. ROSE, daughter of W. H. and Amanda Burt, was born in Carroll County, Miss., Aug. 27, 1872; was married to Mr. E. H. Rose March 14, 1895, and died in great peace at their home, in Duck Hill, Miss., Sept. 27, 1911. She was the mother of five children—a boy who died in infancy, and four girls who, with their father, remain to mourn the loss of a devoted mother and wife. But they sorrow not as those who have no hope: for "believing in the resurrection of the body and the life everlasting," they "have the eternal comfort and good hope through grace" of again greeting their loved one in the great family reunion in heaven. Sister Rose was reared in a Christian home, and at the early age of eleven years she made a profession of saving faith in Christ, and was received into the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which communion she continued faithful unto the end. From childhood a lovely Christian character ever adorned her pathway, and in all relations and conditions of life the Christian graces were manifest. She leaves in the Church and community where she lived so long the savor of a good name. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord; yea, saith the Spirit: that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." (Rev. 14:13).

G. W. BACHMAN.

MISS SARAH E. KNIGHT, daughter of K. O. and M. W. Knight, was born at Old Athens, Monroe County, Miss., Dec. 6, 1869, and in her early girlhood moved with her parents and settled at Smithville, Miss., where she spent the remaining years of a useful life. When about sixteen years old she gave her heart to God and united with the Methodist Church at Smithville (under the pastorate of Rev. W. S. Shipman), in which she was a most faithful and devoted Christian worker. I have never known anyone who came nearer living up to the vows of the Church. She was the Church organist and a Sunday school teacher for a number of years—filling her place regularly; in fact, she was as faithful and true to her work as a minister. She was a great help to the pastor. No one possibly ever contributed more to the life and growth of the Church at Smithville, and she will be missed for a long time. Miss Sarah was postmistress at Smithville for twenty years, giving complete satisfaction to the public, and was pronounced by the postoffice inspector to be one of the best in the State.

She was kind and courteous to all alike, and won for herself a host of friends. Miss Sarah was a great favorite, especially with the children, and was loved by all who knew her. Her last illness was short, but intense. Oh, how she suffered (with acute pellagra) no one knows, but she bore it with scarcely a murmur or complaint. She endured it all with her accustomed sweet patience and Christian fortitude; and giving full instructions concerning her business affairs a day or two before the end came, she bade friends and loved ones all "good-bye," and folding her hands across her peaceful breast, said: "I am ready to go; meet me in heaven." And her eyes were closed in death, her Spirit went back to the God who gave it June 28, 1911. She leaves an aged mother, two brothers, one sister, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

After funeral services at the mother's home by the writer, her body was laid away in the Smithville cemetery to await the resurrection morn. May the grace of God sustain and bind up the broken hearts, and keep us till we shall all be gathered home!

W. A. BOWLIN.

Tidings From the Field

Sicily Island, La.:

The last revival meeting for the year 1911 on the Harrisonburg charge came to a close Sunday night with the shout of victory. Ninety-one have been received into the Church on this charge this year. We hope to render a good report at Conference.
G. D. Purcell, P. C.
October 31.

De Ridder, La.:

Just a word from my work. Collections on Conference claims will all be in full, though I have an $87 increase in assessments, and will not get $70 paid last year, and have the labor troubles to contend with. The Adult Bible Class has enrolled one hundred and fifty-eight, and the whole school is doing finely. Brother Singleton makes an excellent elder and should be kept at it for the full four years. Thirty-one have united with the church this year, and we have arranged for regular preaching at Ludlington. My predecessor, Brother Booth, is still remembered most kindly by his former congregation.—John F. Foster, P. C.

Nov. 3, 1911.

Montpelier, Miss.:

As the year is fast passing away, and the time to render an account of our work is drawing near, I will give a brief of our work on the Montpelier Circuit. Our presiding elder says we have one of the best circuits in our Conference, and he knows. I say we have one of the best presiding elders in our Conference, I know. So all we lack is a good preacher-in-charge to make this a first-class combination. I am concluding my third year, and I never expect to serve a more pleasant people. If I should be appointed to finish my quadrennium, I shall gladly do so. As to the work, we have had seven Sunday schools in operation during the year. In these schools about 400 have been enrolled. There has been some good work done. We have one League and one men's mission study class. We have received 20 members on profession of faith, and 6 by letter. Our congregations are good and we hope to report in full at Conference, but we are trying a new method, using our lay leader and missionary committee. Of course, we expect for them to do the work successfully. We have a large territory, full of possibilities and white unto the harvest. The pastor who is so fortunate as to be appointed to this charge for 1912 will find a large, comfortable home, with a seven-acre lot, all in fairly good condition, and as loyal a band of stewards as can be found anywhere.—J. A. Poe, P. C.

FROM BROTHER TURNER.

Dear Brother Meek: I am glad that you have been re-elected editor of the Advocate. You and Brother Chalmers are giving us a good paper.

I am now able to be up and around the house, and I hope to be well soon. Thirty days' absence from my work at this season of the year is unfortunate, but I feel that we shall be able yet to get ready for Conference. My church has been loyal and true to us during my illness. No congregation could have shown a better Christian spirit. Brothers P. O. Lowrey and J. L. P. Sheppard have been very kind.

Brother R. F. Treadway, a Baptist minister, has filled my pulpit most of the time and our people were delighted with his preaching. Brother Sims, from Centenary College, was with us one Sunday and made a fine impression. Rev. Walt Holcomb is now in the beginning of a meeting here which promises to be a real revival, so I am told by those in attendance. Many thanks to the brethren of the Conference who have, by letter and otherwise, shown such a kind and brotherly interest in my welfare.
A. W. TURNER.
Mansfield, La.

FROM THE COLPORTER.

"The Annotated Edition of the Methodist Hymnal" is the title of one of the most valuable books ever issued by our Publishing House. It should be a leader in the market until every preacher and layman who has any appreciation of our church hymnody is supplied. "The hymns are given in full with careful criticism and historic notes. The book contains also biographical sketches of all the authors of hymns and composers of tunes."

"It is one of the duties of the pastor to be familiar with his hymnal, and it is the privilege of the intelligent layman as well. This work contains many valuable facts and opinions, criticisms and approbations that can be found nowhere else."—Preface.

I will have at the North Mississippi and Mississippi Conference sessions a limited supply of this choice book, but enough for all who will notify me by Nov. 20th that they want a copy. By so doing, the postage, at least, will be saved on the regular net price, which is $2, postpaid. Lest ye forget, write me at once on a postal card for this and any other special book you may want at your Conference.

Surely that liberal offer of Dr. T. B. Holloman in the Advocate of "Jones' History of Methodism in Mississippi" at $1 per volume should have hundreds of responses right soon, during the Conferences at farthest.

Collections in full by Conference is now the slogan of pastors and presiding elders, but the Colporter should have his in hand before; not later than Nov. 20, if you please. He who says, "It will do as well to settle at Conference, knows not whereof he speaks."

May we all meet at Macon and Meridian in the spirit of brotherly love and enjoy together that Christian fellowship that is like to that in heaven. Yours faithfully,
G. W. BACHMAN.
Winona, Miss.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Whereas God in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to take from us our beloved brother and Sunday school worker, P. B. SUMMER, therefore be it resolved

First—That this church expresses its sincere regrets in having to give him up, but with bowed heads, in submission to him who rules in heaven and among men.

Second—That in giving him up, not only the church is losing a faithful and devoted member, but that the whole community, regardless of creed, will miss his kind and friendly attentions, his words and deeds of sympathy, his moral uplift, and the magnificent impression he has made upon those with whom he has come in contact.

Third—That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of his church and a copy be published in our town paper and in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed: Mrs. C. K. Jones, Augusta Spann, J. A. Lindsey, Ruth Radford, Committee.

Epworth League Department.

(Conducted by Rev. H. B. Watkins, Magnolia, Miss., to whom all communications concerning League matters should be addressed.)

TOPIC FOR NOVEMBER 12, 1911.

"THE INJUNCTION WITH THE INVITATION."

Rev. xxii:17; Dan. xii:3.

In studying the first reference, we have before us the last page of the Word of God. How shall the Book close? Some one suggests that the only fitting word with which to close such a wonderful Book should contain a promise to the righteous, a threat to the wicked, an invitation to the poor and needy, and a welcome to the coming One. This is exactly the kind of word that is employed to close the Book of Revelation—"Come!"

The Double Ministry of the League.

It is the duty of every Christian to watch and pray for the coming again of Christ, and to keep himself in readiness so that when his Lord does appear, he may be ready to go in with him to the marriage supper of the Lamb. Every one who hears the prophecy of our Lord's assured coming should join in the prayer, "Thy kingdom come."

But there is a second ministry, and that is the cry for sinners to come to the Savior—"The Spirit and the Bride say, Come." Every saved individual must of necessity become a savior of others. He simply cannot remain indifferent while others are perishing. I have read that during a heavy storm off the coast of Spain a dismantled merchantman was observed by a British frigate drifting before the gale. Every eye and glass was on her; a canvas shelter on the deck almost level with the sea suggested the idea that there yet might be life on board. Instantly the order sounded to put the ship about, and a boat put off, with instructions to bear down upon the wreck, and rescue life, if aught remained. Away after that drifting hulk go the gallant men, risking their own lives on the mountain billows of the roaring sea. Reaching it they cried aloud, and from the canvas screen creeped out what proved to be a man with body so shriveled and wasted that he appeared a mere skeleton. In tender pity the rough men rubbed the chilled and wasted body. As they were about to pull away the rescued man moved and moaned, and, listening carefully, they caught the muttered words, "There is another man." Every saved Epworthian will be anxious for the "other man."

A Good Rule for the Leaguer to Adopt.

A minister tells of an instance of direct labor for souls which he says he can never forget. In conversation with an engineer employed on a pleasure boat which plies on a certain river, the discovery was made that the man was a Christian, and the inquiry being made by what means he was converted, he replied: "My mate is a Christian, and he kept telling me of the great love of Christ, and his readiness to save; and he never rested until I gave my heart to Jesus, and became a changed man. For it is a rule in our church that when a brother is converted he must go and bring another brother; and when a sister is converted she must go and bring another sister; and so more than a hundred of us have been recovered to the simplicity of the gospel of Jesus Christ."

Why Evangelism is Imperative.

Although God so loved the world as to give his only begotten Son, and Christ freely gave his life to redeem the world from sin, yet the human hand, the human head, the human heart, the human voice, are indispensable in carrying the message to individuals. "Let him that heareth say, Come." There is no reference here to age, or position, or gift, or learning. He that "heareth" is to "say, Come." If you cannot "say, Come," in the church, you may say it in the shop, or in the home, or on the road. For Christ's sake we ought to "say, Come." The condition of Christless souls may well excite our pity, and prompt us to active exertions in their behalf. For our own sake we ought to "say, Come," for "they that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars for ever and ever." Besides, Christian activity is twice blessed—it blesses the giver and the receiver.

You have heard of the traveler who was crossing the mountain height alone over almost untrodden snows. Warning had been given him that if sleep overcame him he would never wake again on earth. For a time he went bravely along his dreary path. But with the deepening shade and freezing blast of night there fell a weight upon his brain and eyes which seemed to be irresistible. In vain he tried to reason with himself; in vain he strained his utmost energies to shake off that fatal heaviness. At this crisis of his fate his foot struck against a heap which lay across his path. It was not a stone, although no stone could have seemed more lifeless. He stooped, and found a human body half-buried beneath a fresh drift of snow. The next moment the traveler had taken a brother in his arms, and was chafing his cheeks and hands and brow, breathing upon the stiff, cold lips the warm breath of his living soul, pressing the silent heart to the beating pulses of his own generous bosom. The effort to save another had brought back to himself life, warmth and energy. We must save others, or perish ourselves.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

AN ENGLISH AUTHOR WROTE:

"No shade, no shine, no fruit, no flowers, no leaves—November!" Many Americans would add no freedom from catarrh, which is so aggravated during this month that it becomes constantly troublesome. There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption, being one of the wasting diseases. Hood's Sarsaparilla has shown that what is capable of eradicating scrofula, completely cures catarrh, and taken in time prevents consumption. We cannot see how any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its radical and permanent cures. It is undoubtedly America's Greatest Medicine for America's Greatest Disease—Catarrh.

The Sunday School.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

Saucier has organized Beginners' and Primary Departments and introduced the new graded literature

* * *

The Sunday school at Chunkey has a Cradle Roll, Home Department and separate rooms curtained off for classes. We may look for fine reports from this school from this time on.

* * *

Sumrall has an organized class. The big fire recently has to an extent disorganized affairs in that thriving little city, but it gives more time to consider Sunday school matters.

* * *

Conditions in Philadelphia are very satisfactory. A Teachers' Training Circle has been organized with twelve members; the Primary Department has been organized, the new graded course introduced, and Rally Day services have been held. Brother Black usually "does things."

* * *

The Worker's Manual for Sunday school boards prepared by Mr. Pepper at the request of the Sunday school chairmen, is from the press, and ere this has reached every member of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board. We trust each member will read it carefully and come to our annual meeting prepared to profit by the suggestions found therein.

* * *

Last Sunday was "Rally Day" in Columbia. A teachers' meeting was held previously, the town was divided into districts, and they, with the Home Department superintendents, systematically visited every Methodist home and others having children in our Sunday school. These fathers and mothers were not only invited to attend the Rally Day services at 11 o'clock, but cordially invited to attend the Sunday school session and see the school at work. The entire 11 o'clock hour was given to this Rally Service. Songs and recitations by the children were followed by addresses by several of our teachers, and a collection was taken for the model Sunday school building at Junaluska.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Mr. R. A. Weaver's Men's Class, Tupelo, increases in interest and size; it has lately taken full charge of the choir for the church service, and is doing a great and appreciated work.

Mrs. Helen Porter, of Boyle, organized her class with 21 adult members, and it is confidently expected that the number will soon be doubled under Mrs. Porter's consecrated teaching.

* * *

A young women's class, with a separate and attractive room, has beautiful flowers brought every Sunday, and after the class exercises, they are sent to the charity ward of a nearby hospital.

* * *

Blue Springs has a good school, and is planning a reorganization and uplift along modern Sunday school lines. There are fine people all over Brother Foust's large charge, who are willing, ready and even eager to strive for the highest and best.

* * *

A class of Boy Scouts has had an attractive booth all during the Fair week in their home town. There they have met, interested and entertained, as well as shielded, every boy of their age possible, who visited their Fair and made a week of joy to themselves as well as actual helpfulness to the other fellows.

* * *

Miss Mary V. Duval is planning to organize a mixed Adult Class at Shelby, Miss. She is a fine teacher and a clever historian, and her work will be of the best quality. Brother Bachman passed that way and reminded those fine people what they were missing in not having such a class, and this enthusiastic organization will be the result.

* * *

Miss Dollye Thomasson of Belden, has a class of 26 Intermediates, and they are members of Mr. Arthur Davis' fine school at that place. These pupils with quite a number of others, under the leadership of Mrs. Simpson, picked cotton all one day last week for the Orphanage, and it was a beautiful and helpful sight indeed to see the busy childish fingers pile great heaps of the fleecy staple of this Southland for the love of other children, less favored by circumstances.

The 51st young lady was enrolled in Mr. J. H. Ledyard's fine Philathea Class at Tupelo, Sunday, Oct. 15th. They are preparing an interesting exhibit of their class work for the Annual Conference in Macon. It is to be boped that many classes will follow this highly commendable example. Mr. Ledyard is not only a progressive and uplifting teacher in his home school, but is a member of the International Committee of Superintendents, and doing specially effective work in that executive body.

Mrs. J. E. Holmes, of Sherman, has a splendid class of young boys and girls, and Mrs Phillips has a class of little folks in that sweet, useful and attractive new church in this good town. Mr. G. M. B. Smith is the superintendent, and all are planning even greater and better things for the coming year. Brother Foust will have the new church dedicated by Bishop Wilson Nov. 1st. This church of 30 members has 55 enrolled in Sunday school, and all are alive, active and happy, and are a great inspiration.

The Home Department is very much needed in many of our schools and very many of our rural communities. Our Methodist Home Department literature is especially attractive and helpful, and quite a number of good, active teachers have been made from this preliminary step to vital Sunday school life. Only four things are necessary to have a Home Department: (1) A Sunday school; (2) A home with some one in it who does not attend Sunday school; (3) A lesson quarterly; (4) Some one to carry the quarterly to that home. This Home Department interests the home in the school and the school in the home, increases the membership of the school, and improves the quality of work done. The boys' "messenger service" and the girls' "Sunshine Bands" can be of great help along this line. The emblem of the Home Department is a purple button with a white center, and you can secure information and supplies direct from our Publishing House.

ROBERT W. McKEOWN DEAD.

Dear Doctor Meek: On the night of the 26th inst. Mr. Robert W. McKeown died from hematuria in the King's Daughters Hospital in Greenville. Brother McKeown was a member of our Leland Church and a faithful friend of his pastor. Several times during the year he declared to me his purpose to keep in the narrow way that leads up to God. Besides friends and other relatives, Brother McKeown leaves a brother, wife, two children, and father, Rev. L. A. McKeown, to mourn his departure. There has never been a man among us more faithful in comforting the bereaved than Rev. L. A. McKeown, and I know merely to mention his great sorrow in the loss of his son, Robert, will call forth for him and the other bereaved ones the sympathy and the prayers of every member of the North Mississippi Conference.

THE GULF COAST MISSION.

Two institutions on the coast that could not be dispensed with are the Sailors' Rest at Gulfport and the Wesley House at Biloxi. Both are under the control of the Home Mission Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and both are under the more direct management of Rev. W. T. Griffin. That both of these institutions do a great amount of good is shown by the report for the year which was submitted by Mr. Griffin to a committee from the Home Mission Board, which was in Gulfport Tuesday. The two institutions spoken of are combined under the name of the Sea Coast Mission.

A committee, composed of Rev. John M. Moore, Home Mission Secretary; Mrs. R. W. MacDonnell, Woman's Mission Secretary, of Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. C. W. Crisler, of Vicksburg; Rev. A. F. Watkins, and Rev. G. H. Thompson, of Hattiesburg; Rev. M. L. Burton and Rev. W. B. Jones met at Gulfport to plan the work for the coming year.

It was decided to continue the work under the same plans as heretofore. The reports showed substantial work being done at both places. There have been 10,800 visits from sailors and officers to the reading rooms at the Rest in twelve months; 2,025 attended gospel services; 2,400 attended concerts, socials, etc.; 617 visits were made to ships; 11,000 tracts, Testaments and books were distributed; 3,500 magazines were donated to out-going crews; free beds were furnished 465 needy sailors; 62 were helped who were out of money and food.

That the work is appreciated was shown not only by the above facts, but by letters received from men who have been helped to a better life. The services of a young man from Chicago, a Scandinavian, who has had experience in this work, have been secured and he will soon enter upon his duties as assistant. The American Tract Society and the Norwegian Mission Board have supplied the Rest with a library of hundreds of volumes.

The Wesley House at Biloxi is under the supervision of Miss M. M. Long and an assistant, Miss Campbell, with Miss Stubbs as kindergarten teacher. Their night school and kindergarten classes have overrun their present quarters and they are very much in need of more room. They have the help of Miss Gordon and other teachers from Biloxi in their night school. There is also a large sewing class of girls from seven to fifteen years of age. These are given a regular course in stitching and domestic sewing. Clubs for married women in domestic science will also be a feature of the work. The night school embraces the ordinary branches of a grammar school.—From the Gulfport Daily Herald.

CHURCH FIRES.

Inspections Important.—The season is Approaching when Fires are Numerous.

The subject of fire waste has been paramount lately and fire prevention day officially observed in many states has given an opportunity to inform the public as to the tremendous fire loss in the United States ($2.39 per capita, as against 44 cents in England) and how to avoid many fires—such as are due to carelessness and neglect.

A warning has recently been issued by the New York Board of Fire Underwriters regarding the dangers from fires in churches, halls, schools and such buildings. In part this says:

"Defective heating and lighting devices, together with carelessness in the handling of motors, fuel, packing materials, paint and general refuse have caused the majority of fires in churches. Systematic supervision of these features will, therefore, prevent many church fires."

This is a reminder of what may not be known to all, that it has been the custom of the National Mutual Church Insurance Company, of Chicago, ever since it began business, to send out annually, just before the holidays, a warning to its members as to the hazards incident to cold weather and the demands made on the heating plants.

This company has persistently urged the frequent and careful inspection of heating apparatus, smoke pipes and flues. In this inspection work—spreading the gospel of carefulness, preaching "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure"—the Church Insurance Company has rendered a service of great value to Methodism and has been a pioneer in giving its people information, a portion of which is just now reaching the public through other sources. This feature of its work alone should commend its plan to all. All church officials would do well to follow the suggestions which it makes and write for specific information.

Another point urged by the Church Insurance Company is that many churches carry too little insurance—a matter of great importance, particularly at this season.

HERBS AND FLOWERS CURE CATARRH

A Safe, Simple, Reliable Remedy Which Costs Nothing to Try

You need not suffer from catarrh, bronchitis, lingering colds or other catarrhal troubles. After years of research and experiment Dr. Blosser discovered a compound of herbs, leaves and flowers which by a unique method is applied to every nook and corner of the mucous membrane in the head, nose, throat and lungs.

Any sufferer, after giving it a trial, can readily see why it is so greatly superior to such ordinary treatments as sprays, ointments, salves, liquid or tablet medicines, because all these do not and cannot reach all the affected parts, while Dr. Blosser's method reaches every spot; and this explains, at least in part, the wonderful success with which it is meeting. The full size package costs but one dollar. It is harmless, pleasant to use, and is easily applied even by a child.

No matter how deep-seated, your catarrh may be; no matter how long it has troubled you; no matter if other remedies have failed; you should give this treatment a trial, and it will do for you what it has done for thousands of other sufferers. Write at once to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., in order to avail yourself of his offer of a free trial package of the remedy and an illustrated booklet which gives all the facts about catarrh. It is not necessary to send any money—simply send your name and address.

RHEUMATISM

A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as those who have it know, for over three years, and tried almost everything. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial, I will send it free. Address,

CHRISTIAN ETHICS.

By Rev. J. W. Sandell.

Dear Brother Meek: The word Christian is in only three places in the Bible: Acts xi:26; xxvi, 28, and I Pet. iv, 16. In Acts xi, 26, it is said "The disciples were called Christians first in Antioch." I have never seen an article in the literature of our Church on Christian ethics. The sermon of Jesus on the Mount contains some very essential instruction along that line. The Quarterly Review for July and October contains two articles on the "Ethical Element in the Talmud." But we need the ethics of the New Testament.

There are lessons to be learned from the facts connected with the three places in which the name Christian is used. The name itself is significant. The fact of the disciples being called Christians first at Antioch is worthy of serious consideration. There are reasons for it. One important feature of the disciples at Antioch was their readiness to supply the needs of the poor saints at Jerusalem. Moses had taught that "the poor shall never cease out of the land," and Jesus had said "the poor ye have always with you." Paul had agreed with the apostles at Jerusalem to remember the poor in his ministry to the Gentiles, and he says, "the same which I also was forward to do." This promise was faithfully performed by that great man, both by his example and teaching among those to whom he ministered. He went with others from Antioch to Jerusalem to deliver the collections for the poor saints. He devotes two chapters (the 8th and 9th) in II Corinthians to that important Christian duty. It is an interesting mental exercise to follow the teachings of the Bible.

Dr. Clark says in his commentary on this name: "An early fruit of Christianity was mercy to the poor." The age in which we live and the usages and customs observed by the people in the social, commercial, civil and religious relations existing among the people in so-called Christian nations indicate the propriety of a serious consideration of what is true in Christian ethics as it should be applied to individuals and organizations.

In connection with the name Christian, the poor are prominent in the call for religious co-operation. Twenty-two years ago the writer wrote and had published a pamphlet on Conference claimants in behalf of that class of Church beneficiaries, not expecting at that time to live to be in that class. Notices have been published in the Advocate that distribution to the claimants cannot be made for lack of funds. There are 68 claimants on that fund this year. The assessment is $12,000, an average per claimant of $176. This includes 21 superannuate prachers and 47 widows and orphans. The highest sum paid a superannuate in the Mississippi Conference is $300, and there is only one in the Conference who receives that amount. At this time, when the cost of living is so high, it would be a wise movement on the part of the churches to adopt the Christian ethics that the New Testament commends to people who are called Christians. The Annual Conferences cannot expect much aid from the Superannuate Endowment Fund for many years to come; therefore, it is important that each and every Annual Conference should provide liberally for its own claimants, and for the times called "to-day."

ADAMS CIRCUIT.

This is a summary of the year's work up to the present on the Adams charge. I began my first revival at Johnston Station, July 30, with Rev. H. A. Gatlin doing the preaching. By his clear, logical exposition of the Holy Scriptures, the members of the two churches were very much edified and built up. Here we received two members on profession of faith. My next meeting was at Ebenezer, beginning Aug. 20. The pastor did his own preaching, except the evening sermon on Sunday, which was preached by Brother Rawlins, one of our home boys who was home from school for a few days, when he returned to finish his collegiate course. Our young brother's discourse did us all good. We closed our meeting here on Wednesday. There were no accessions at this point. Our next meeting began Aug. 27, at Old Adams Camp Ground, in Lincoln County, where we have a high school, and where God has so wonderfully blessed his people in times past. Quite a number of our young men now in the ministry were converted and called to preach the gospel here. But the church here, like the Laodiceans, have grown cold and formal. It was here that the Lord sent to us Brother H. A. Gatlin, who preached us a series of awakening sermons. Each seemed to be just the right one in the right place. As a result of this meeting, we received one member by baptism and the church was somewhat revived. Since that time we have organized a Senior and Junior Epworth League. The Seniors are organized into a mission study class. They will take up the study of Cuba. We have an excellent corps of teachers and they have all joined our Senior League. I will give our people at Pisgah a two-days' meeting next Saturday and Sunday.—C. H. Herring, P. C.

AN APPRECIATION.

No more effective or helpful bit of bookmaking has resulted from the intense interest in Sunday school work than the Working Manual for Chairmen, Members and Field Secretaries of Annual Conference Sunday School Boards of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, edited by that indefatigable, helpful, capable and all-round Sunday school expert, Mr. John R. Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn. At the meeting of the Sunday School Boards in this city, April last, there was noted the deficiency of "campaign literature," and to Mr. Pepper was delegated the Herculean task of editing an initial volume on the needed lines, and at once, and he has assuredly made a splendid success. The Manual is artistic in color, very attractive in paper and printing as well as technique—a real joy in the plethora of medicore efforts along similar lines.

The contents, culled from every available and competent source, is stamped with the vibrant Sunday school enthusiasm and long years of active, world-wide experience of the editor and compiler, and will begin the work of realizing the great ideals these busy Sunday school folk have had in view all these strenuous uphill days of previous years. The crying needs for just such a manual makes its appearance in such a satisfactory form all the more keenly appreciated. Field secretaries and indeed all Sunday school workers everywhere will gladly welcome this valuable aid in carrying on the work in this best and whitest harvest field of all Christian activity. The Sunday school world already owed Mr. Pepper an immense debt of gratitude, but this latest touch of his pen, with the ink scarcely dry, has heaped the measure of obligation mountain-high.

With this volume at hand, a Methodism-wide increase in this special line of work may be expected, and to Mr. Pepper is due large and heartfelt thanks from all the beneficiaries of his skill, promptness and Christian generosity in creating the instrument by which to produce such long desired results.

THIS WILL INTEREST MANY.

F. W. Parkhurst, the Boston publisher, says that if anyone afflicted with rheumatism in any form, neuralgia or kidney trouble, will send their address to him at 701 Carney Bldg., Boston, Mass., he will drect them to a perfect cure. He has nothing to sell or give; only tells you how he was cured after years of search for relief. Hundreds have tested it with success.

Who Can Doubt Sworn Testimony of Honest Citizens?

Some time ago I began the use of your Swamp-Root with the most remarkable results. For years I was almost a wreck and was a great sufferer. The doctors who treted me made me believe that my great sufferings were due to female trouble. I was so bad at times I would faint away and had sinking spells. Finally a new doctor was called in and he said that I had kidney trouble and gave me medicine, of which I took several bottles. I obtained some relief from this but I was getting weaker all the time; I could not sleep and suffered so much pain that my husband and children had to lift me in and out of bed. After this time two friends sent me word to try Swamp-Root, which I did, and am glad to state that the first dose gave me great relief. After taking the third dose I was helped into bed and slept half of the night.

I took several bottles of Swamp-Root and I feel that I owe my life to this wonderful remedy. The two family doctors said that I could not live three months. I would have to be helped in and out of bed ten to twenty times every night. After taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root for two days I was entirely free from getting up and could sleep soundly.

MRS. D. E. HILEMAN,
Tunnelton, W. Va.

Personally appeared before me, this 11th of September, 1909, Mrs. D. E. Hileman, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

JOSEPH A. MILLER.
Notary Public.

Letter to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Prove What Swamp-Root Will Do For You.

Send to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. It will convince anyone. You will also receive a booklet of valuable information, telling all about the kidneys and bladder. When writing, be sure and mention the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles for sale at all drug stores.

THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH.

From the time when Ponce De Leon crossed the ocean in search of the Fountain of Youth, to the present day, people are trying to find an escape from the infirmities of old age. But they do not find it because they do not reason out their weaknesses and are unwilling to apply the remedy.

Blood alone gives strength, health and vigor to our bodies and keeps aglow the Fire of Life within us. How important then it must be to keep this Life's Blood in the best condition. By taking W. H. Bull's Herbs and Iron, the means of attaining a ripe old age with a strong, healthy body, is within reach of all. Herbs and Iron makes pure blood, invigorates the nerves, creates a healthy appetite, stimulates the liver and kidneys and strengthens the heart action. Take this life-giving medicine, and you will have discovered what others are seeking, a strong, healthy, and young old age. Herbs and Iron gives to the body a feeling of new life and energy, making you feel that life is worth living. If you wish to enjoy the pleasures that old age holds forth to you, try W. H. Bull's Herbs and Iron, it will make you feel like a new person. This preparation can be had at all druggists. After using two-thirds of a bottle, according to directions, if you feel that you have not been benefited, return the remainder and the purchase price will be refunded to you—every cent of it.

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 58—No. 46. "Prove All Things; Hold Fast That Which is Good." WHOLE No. 2909.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY NOVEMBER 16, 1911. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

Dr. Wu Ting Fang wants to retain the Emperor as a "figurehead" in the new Chinese government. Monarchs are fortunate to retain any sort of a head in these opening years of the twentieth century.

A writer in the Western Christian Advocate makes the following observation: "In Asbury's time the Conference resolved that, "No man who does not relinquish his trade of buying and selling, though it be only pills, drops, or balsams, shall be considered a traveling preaching any longer." Whether this rule forbade the selling of tombstones, town lots, the writing of insurance, and such like, the brother does not say.

Dr. Gilbert, one of the most capable editors in American Methodism, recently began thus his editorial notes: "Lost, strayed, or stolen: One Emanuel Movement. Liberal reward for its return." This is by no means the only modern scheme which has been brought forth in the religious world with much ado, only to live a brief life of unfulfilled promise, and die "unwept, unhonored, and unsung." Most of our little hobbies quickly run their race and cease to be.

A dispatch from Los Angeles, Cal., states that it had been arranged for the registration clerks to attend the prayer meetings of that city with a view to registering women voters. This is encouraging, since it indicates that the prayer meetings there are well attended. We fear that if all present at some of our mid-week services in the East were enrolled as suffragists, the number expected to exercise the right of franchise would not be much increased. Certainly the prospect of having more voters from the praying class of our population ought to hearten and cheer us in this day of perplexing governmental problems, even though they be suffragettes.

The well known Wesleyan layman, Sir Robert W. Perks, who for seventeen years was a member of the British House of Commons, and who was a conspicuous figure at the recent Ecumenical Methodist Conference, while on this side of the Atlantic passed the following criticism upon American Methodism: "Methodism here is out of touch with the working classes. It must revert to the early ways of the Church. It needs not the high-salaried preacher, but the man who works for the love of the creed and the Church of John Wesley. America must join forces with the strong, and build, as we have built in England, great halls for service, and not small and elaborate churches where only the more fortunate seem welcome." These impress us as wise words. Only the Church that feels that it has a mission to the masses of the people and seeks faithfully to fulfill it, has the possibility of a great future.

A NATIONAL REPROACH.

The position of leadership among the nations is held by the United States in most things. In the variety and value of our agricultural products, in inventions and enterprise, and in the matter of accumulated wealth our country stands first among all the nationalities of the globe. But unfortunately we lead in many practices that are evil as well as good. For instance, it is said that we have more homicides, indulge more in gambling and consume more intoxicants than any other civilized people on the planet. And lately, as the Chicago Inter Ocean has pointed out, Prof. Bailey, of the Yale Department of Political Economy, has registered another severe indictment against us. That journal says: "Mr. Bailey has printed a chart giving the divorce record of eleven nations for a five-year period ending in 1902 or 1903. It shows that of the Christian nations the United States has the most divorces. During this period we piled up a total of 55,502, or seventy-three to each 100,000 of population, as against 8,864, or twenty-three for each 100,000 in France. The German Empire had only fifteen and Great Britain only six to each 100,000 of population. Of the countries on the list of Christian nations we find that Austria has the smallest proportion of divorces—only one to each 100,000, while Italy with three, Great Britain with six, Norway with six, Sweden with eight, Hungary with eleven, the German Empire with fifteen follow in the order named.

"Switerland comes next to the United States in the number of divorces, her total for the five-year period being 1,053, or thirty-two to every 100,000 of population. But as this is less than half the proportion of the United States, it is evident that Switzerland cannot teach us anything on this subject.

"Professor Bailey cites only one Oriental record, but that is so far ahead of all Occidental ones that the Christian nations may well despair of equaling it. It is hardly necessary to say that the reference is to Japan. That nation now adds to the late familiar demonstration of its skill in war a no less striking proof of its talent in the field of divorce. It had 93,949 divorces in the five-year period. This amounts to 215 to every 100,000 of population. In other words, when it comes to divorce statistics, Japan nearly doubles the total for the United States and trebles the proportion to population. It has moreover more divorces to its credit than all the Occidental nations.

"After stating that in some European countries divorce is almost unknown and citing the case of Ireland, where there was but one divorce granted from 1900 to 1903, Professor Bailey goes on to say that 'whatever evils we may claim are brought here by our large immigration, a greater tendency to divorce is not one of them. Whatever the cause, we do not need to search for it outside our own country."

Having shown what a bad record we have for disregarding the sanctity of marriage, the Inter Ocean tries to palliate the force of these discreditable figures by stating that in all these countries, except Japan, it is more difficult to get a divorce than it is in the United States, and that there would likewise be more of them in other lands, if they could be secured with equal ease. But this is a pitiably poor defense, since the laws of a country are but crystallized public sentiment, and the fact that other nations have legislated more wisely than we shows that they have sounder views on the subject.

The truth is, the extent to which the divorce evil prevails among us is a national reproach and is fast becoming a serious menace to the public welfare. Mr. Gladstone in his day characterized the disposition to regard lightly the marital vows and trample them under foot upon trivial provocation as one of the greatest dangers of modern society, and this tendency has greatly increased since the famous English statesman passed off the stage of action. The family is the unit of the social order, and whatever tends to disrupt and destroy it, strikes at the very foundation of civilization. The Christian home, where love and virtue sit enthroned, is the corner-stone of the republic, and when that gives way the national fabric will not long survive.

The causes of this shameful reign of the divorce evil among us we will not now attempt to discuss, though we quote the folowing statement from the New York Christian Advocate of November 2, which bears on this point and is quite suggestive:

"Statistics compiled from the records of the District Supreme Court at Washington, D. C., show that forty per cent of all divorces in that city are the result of runaway matches and that thirty per cent result from marriages where one of the contracting parties was under twenty-one years of age. Eighty per cent of the divorce suits have been filed by women, and less than ten per cent of the couples who seek the courts are parents. There is one divorce suit in the District to every four marriage licenses. * * * There is a warning in these statistics to young people who run away to be married and a caution to persons to consider well when inclined to marry in haste."

It requires no bravery to kick the man who is down, nor to fire at evil that is afar off. When Beattie's wicked life was exposed recently, many of the secular papers grew hot with indignation and poured out upon him a stream of denunciation. All this, and perhaps more, he deserved. But why is it that these journals have little or nothing to say concerning the conditions existing about their very doors which ensnare young men and drag them down? And we feel much the same way about the recent marriage of Colonel Astor. That he should have presumed to wed again when he has a divorced wife living, who is a worthy woman, was, we think, wrong and deserving of censure. But are not such cases common in the land? Cannot they be found in nearly every city and town? Indeed, we have seen such couples occupying prominent places in the Church. What sort of consistency is it which blinks at evil near by and rages about it at a distance; which tolerates wrong in the obscure and excoriates it in the conspicuous? We believe in the reformer who begins at home and who battles uncompromisingly for his cause everywhere.

tion of it is "without ceasing." They were undeterred by the iron gate, though it moved not on its hinges at their earnest cries. Of a truth, theirs was a heroic faith that undertakes without the use of key or slightest touch of human hand to open the iron gate beyond which an imprisoned treasure lies. The conflict seen here is often reproduced—faith against iron gates. Within the iron gate was a sleeping saint. Peter, the prisoner, was made secure against release and all that was possible was done to hold him, and many and great difficulties stood between him and liberty. The Church had undertaken a gigantic work in trying by prayer to break the many bonds that had been put upon Peter. Look at the situation. The great iron gate, opened and closed, ushered him into the prison. Then the doors of the first and second wards closed upon him. Two chains bound his limbs and armed soldiers guarded him. The keepers before the door kept the prison. Surely nothing more could have been done to prevent his release. Tight-bound was Peter, the prisoner.

On the morrow the chains were to be unlocked, the soldiers dismissed, the gates thrown open and Peter led forth to die. Was he afraid? The account says: "When Herod would have brought him forth, the same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers." This is one of the grandest pictures in all the Bible: the eve of execution arrived and the sleeping saint resting sweetly in the care of God. Ah, it is written: "He giveth his beloved sleep." Peter was trusting against vast odds; and did his trust in God triumph? Glory to God, right through the iron gate came a divine deliverance. Prayer prevailed and its high aim was reached. The prayers of the faithful, though waking not the sleeping city, were heard on high. God's ear is ever open to his people's cries and he will deliver. An angel was sent of God; and, quicker than light and noiseless as the roll of worlds, the messenger of God came into Peter's prison-cell. "A light shined in the prison; and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying: 'Arise up quickly.' And his chains fell off from his hands." The angel said to him: "Gird thyself and bind on thy sandals." And so he did. And he saith unto him: "Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me."

They passed the sleeping guard and drew near the inner gate. It opened at their presence. When they had passed the first and second wards and came to the iron gate, it, by unseen power and as if of its own accord, opened to them; and Peter passed through into liberty. Angels are better friends than soldiers; and God's dear children should, no matter what the difficulties in the way, go forward with faith and prayer in obedience to the call of God. The iron gate will open by divine command, and the prisoner go free who puts his entire trust in God, his best Friend and sure Deliverer.

MY FIRST CHARGE AND ELSE.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

No. 3.

On one occasion in the spring, while preaching, I noticed a stranger in the congregation, a young woman apparently about 25 years of age, who eyed me closely and seemed to give the strictest attention while I sang and preached. I learned she was a Miss Wedgeworth, and lived not far from Mr. Hudson's, the place where the preaching service was held. After the preaching service, she stayed for dinner and seemed much interested in the young preacher. It was Saturday, and I was to preach ten miles from there Sunday. When I bade the family and others good-by, she, having gone out into the flower yard, fixed up a beautiful bouquet of flowers and gave them to me as I left. Now, the question arose in my mind, "What must I do with this?" To go riding along the road with one hand full of flowers, while I guided my horse with the other, was not according to my custom and interfered with my reading and studying. Then I had no home to carry them to. I was not long deciding what to do. I saw a large pine stump near the road, so I decided to leave my flowers on the stump, and I did. When I passed there again I looked for my flowers but they were gone. I never heard of Miss W. afterwards.

From Mr. Hudson's I went to John Bell's, where I usually preached the fourth Sunday. When I got to Brother Bell's I was met by one of the best women in all that land, Mrs. John Bell. I was the youngest preacher that had been in that section for years. Sister Bell had some boys about my age and size, and of course wanted her boys to do well, and was not opposed to their being intimate with her preacher. She encouraged it. There were John, George (usually called Gad), Jack and Hannibal. They lived on the bank of Bayou Banard, six miles from Hansboro. The tides were noticeable in the Bayou. I had heard of the ebbing and flowing of the tides, but did not know just what it meant. For the first time I saw and studied the tides here. Webster says, "The tides are the results of the attractive force of the sun and moon."

At this point I usually had a good congregation. There were two local preachers present at my first appointment here—W. G. Evans and a Brother Jordan. To me they both looked wise, and I was scared. I knew I could not preach; but most of the people I had preached to up to this time knew less about preaching than I did. Brother Evans especially looked like a man of more than ordinary intelligence, and he was. At the hour for preaching, I sang, I prayed, then sang again. Then—well, I read some Scripture, took a text, but what I said I don't know, for I could not get those preachers off my mind. I said a few words, sang another song, called on Brother Evans to pray, dismissed the congregation and went to bed. Sick? I don't know. I wanted to hide.

There were several people of more or less intelligence in the audience, and Brother Bell, big-hearted man that he was, invited many of them to stay for dinner. I could hear them talking and laughing, and was sorry I did not have the courage and sense to join them. Dinner being over, Brother Evans came in the room where I was, sat down and talked to me in a pleasant, encouraging way, and invited me to his home. I felt better.

Brother Evans proved one of the best and most helpful friends I ever had in all that country. He and Brother Alex Scarborough were the principal help I had in that wonderful revival meeting we held at Coleville later in the year, during which sixty-six joined the church. Brother Evans passed to his reward on high years ago. He has two sons, prominent lawyers, living in Gulfport, Miss. I soon learned Brother Evans to be a young preacher's friend. I never heard him criticize any one. He had too much good sense to criticize harshly young preachers. He labored to help them up and on. He brought up and sent out into the world a family of good children.

I usually spent five or six days visiting in the neighborhood of this appointment. Here I found fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters. Then I was near Hansboro, my postoffice. This church, Bayou Banard, was near the Captain Kibby place and was afterwards purchased by Rev. J. B. Walker, of the Louisiana Conference, and used by him for a summer resort the latter part of his life. After spending several days in the neighborhood, sightseeing, visiting, preaching, etc. (during which time I went to Mississippi City, where Rev. Henry T. Lewis, the noted temperance lecturer, was editing a temperance paper), I started on to my next appointment, White Plains, which was twelve or fifteen miles away.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The recent National W. C. T. U. Convention at Milwaukee passed some splendid resolutions. One of the most important of these had been put before the Committee on Resolutions by Mrs. Martha C. K. Miller, of Hammond, La. She was the delegate at large, sent there by the vote of the Louisiana State Convention. This resolution asked that Congress be memorialized to enact such laws as would prevent the issuance of internal revenue liquor license in dry territory. When this resolution was read before the convention, a delegate from Kansas moved that it be stricken out. Her argument against the passing of this resolution was that the revenue license is prima facia evidence against the man who has it. To this argument, Mrs. Miller replied that a revenue license protected the "blind tiger" man that fears the violation of the United States laws a great deal more than he does the violation of State laws; that he becomes alarmed when he knows the United States authorities are tracking him; remove the revenue license for the sale of liquor and there would be few or no blind tigers.

This resolution caused much debate in the Convention. It was also championed by Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, the W. C. T. U. State president of Kentucky. She was one of the most fearless and brilliant women in the Convention. It was also strongly advocated by Margaret Dye Ellis, the national W. C. T. U. secretary for the Department of Legislation. After many strong arguments by others for its passage, a vote was taken, and the resolution was passed by a large majority.

It now becomes the imperative duty of all ministers and local W. C. T. U. organizations to see that petitions to Congress be sent from every town, city, village and community in the United States, and especially from the Southland. Now is our opportunity. Let these petitions stretch from the Pacific to the Atlantic, from Canada to Panama. We have no time to waste; begin now. Send them to your Congressman as soon as possible, so the consideration of the question may begin with the opening of Congress. Get all church members to sign the petitions, and also get people outside the churches to sign them. Let the churches and ministers take enthusiastic interest in this matter, and go to work in earnest to memorialize Congress to prevent the issuance of the internal revenue license for the sale of intoxicating liquors in territory where prohibition prevails.

On Jubilee night, Mrs. Dilliard, of Oxford, Ga., was the first speaker. This distinction fell to her because Georgia had made the greatest W. C. T. U. gain during 1911. Mrs. Dilliard was deliberate and convincing in her remarks.

Miss May Russell represented Mississippi. She was eloquent and forceful. Mrs. A. C. McKinney, of Ruston, La., represented Louisiana; her remarks were unique, being full of wit. Mrs. Beauchamp, of Lexington, represented Kentucky. She and Mrs. Curtis, of Texas, rank among the most logical and brilliant women orators in the nation. Mrs. Hoge, who is National Assistant Recording Secretary, represented the Virginia delegation. She is a facinating woman of the Southern type; she charmed her audience. All of these ladies received much applause, as each made a two-minute talk, stating conditions in her State.

CONCERT PIPE ORGANIST.

Miss Beulah Margot Herring, of Corinth, Miss., will be open for dates this fall and winter as a concert organist. Church recitals and sacred concerts a specialty. Write her for terms. Miss Herring is a graduate of the University of Arkansas, also the American Conservatory of Chicago, under the famous organist, Wilhelm Middleschulte.

The Daily Corinthian says: "The First Methodist Church had standing room only last night with which to accommodate the large and critical audience that greeted Miss Beulah Margot Herring at her organ recital. She was not only happy in her selection of the numbers, but in the rendition as well. Her technique is flawless, and her pedal work really wonderful. Her interpretation of the great music masters was par excellence."

A VALUABLE BOOK AT REDUCED PRICE.

We are authorized by the owners of the books to announce that the price of Jone's History of Methdism in the Mississippi Conference has been reduced to $1 per volume, and may be had by writing the Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.; Dr. T. B. Holloman, Port Gibson, Miss., or through the Advocate office, 512 Camp St., New Orleans.

The Memphis Conference is in session this week, with Bishop Candler presiding. The session is being held in the Bluff City in the Madison Height's Church.

The Methodists of England are erecting on the site of the old aquarium, facing Westminster Abbey, a headquarters for world Methodism, which is expected to cost $2,500,000.

The Southern Methodist Church is said to be maintaining 400 missionaries in the foreign field. Our per capita contribution to tbis cause is now reported to be about 22 cents.

The Tennessee Conference had last year more than 4,000 conversions, and more than 3,500 additions to the church on profession of faith. A pretty good showing for the "Old Jerusalem Conference."

The women in the two Missionary Societies (Home and Foreign) of the Methodist Episcopal Church raised during their fiscal year, just closed, the magnificent sum of $1,724,100. This was a gain over the preceding year of $295,000. Part of the credit for this large increase is given to the Woman's Jubilee Campaign.

The beautiful new Methodist Episcopal Church at Evanston, Ill., which with the site cost $225,000, was dedicated by Bishop W. F. McDowell on October 15. To the strong and scholarly dedicatory sermon the Northwestern Christian Advocate makes the following reference: "The Bishop was at his best, and his best no one can better."

According to the last report of our Sunday School Editor, Dr. E. B. Chappell, there are at present in the M. E. Church, South, 15,980 Sunday schools, with an enrollment of 127,761 officers and teachers and 1,377,108 pupils, the gain in enrollment over last year being about 71,000. The sales of Sunday school literature for the year ending March 1 footed up the sum of $314,872.26.

South Carolina Methodism is this year constructing a large number of new churches. The Anderson District is erecting three at a cost of $60,000; the Charleston District is building 7, the Cokesbury District 3, the Florence District 6, the Kingstree District 3, and the Orangeburg District 1. We are pleased to note this indication that the followers of Wesley are making substantial progress in this historic commonwealth.

The Central Methodist Advocate says: "Only one-third of our Methodist homes, it is estimated, are visited regularly by a church paper. Now and then a stray copy drops into the other homes, but is generally soon lost in the scrap bag or goes to the dump. If we could only get the other two-thirds of our church membership to take and read their church paper regularly, what might not be accomplished for the spread of Christ's kingdom."

The Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church has advised the missionaries to China, who belong to that denomination and are now at home on furloughs, not to return until things have assumed a more settled shape in the Chinese Empire. It is gratifying, however, to note that Bishop Bashford sent the following cablegram to the Board on October 30: "All our work in China continues except the schools in Kiukiang and Chengtu, which have been temporarily suspended. Both the government and the revolutionary forces are friendly to the missionaries. I advise the fullest possible appropriations to our work in China."

Rev. Joseph Lambert, pastor of the Elmwood Temple Congregational Church of Providence, R. I., who enjoys the unenviable distinction of having officiated at the marriage of Col. J. J. Astor and Miss Madeline Force, has tendered his resignation and expressed a purpose to quit the ministry and go into business. He affects to be much hurt by what he terms the unkind criticism of the ministers of the city in which he resides. Mr. Lambert deliberately placed himself in his present unfortunate predicament, and has no right to complain of the treatment accorded him. We do not think the cause of Christ will be hurt by his retirement.

The Young Woman's Christian Association is beginning the construction of a new headquarters building in New York City, which will cost $500,000. In addition to this, the site, which is on Lexington Avenue and was the gift of an unnamed donor, is valued at $200,000. This structure will be twelve stories high, and will surpass, in size and the conveniences afforded, the Y. M. C. A. building in that city. Former United States Senator Clark, now a resident of New York, has given to the Los Angeles Y. W. C. A. (which has a membership of 2,200, the largest of any chapter in America) a building which cost $200,000. He did this in honor of the memory of his mother, who was a life member of the Los Angeles organization.

SHALL SUCH THINGS BE?

A news item reads as follows:

"Martha Raser, a juvenile lion tamer, aged 12 years, who was attacked by a large lion while the Sparks Shows were giving a performance at Utica Saturday afternoon, died this morning at the Jackson Sanitarium."

Shall such things be permitted in Mississippi?

This should rouse our people to demand an adequate child labor law covering all sorts of shows and an officer to enforce the law. Such a thing could not happen in Louisiana. A good law with Miss Jean Gordon enforcing it has protected children in that State.

No child of twelve years should be allowed to perform in a show, as many are now doing in moving picture shows and others at the risk of morals, if not of life.

The Vicksburg Herald, commenting upon this tragedy, sugests that the man who thus put a child in peril of her life deserved to be shot. I hope the editor of the Herald will turn his righteous indignation in the direction of prevention and urge an amended child labor law. I appeal to all who believe in the protection of children to agitate this question. I also ask members of the legislature to create the office of inspector and to submit an amendment making women eligible for such office.

The protection of children inside the home and outside as well is certainly the special duty of women.—Nellie Nugent Somerville, in the Jackson Daily News.

LOST AND LAWLESS GIRLS.

Facts gathered in the two recent, nauseating cases have brought plainly to the surface a condition of affairs existing in Memphis which should be abated in some way. How, it remains for the police to say, but in the Union Avenue case and in that which is now pending in the criminal court a state of depravity is exposed that is most deplorable.

In several States institutions for homeless and outcast women have been established. They are cooperative to an extent, but have met with small success. The unfortunate truth is that a great majority do not feel that it is worth while attempting to save a woman who has become an outcast.

The first emotion of nearly every one, when the subject is presented, is amiable enough, but there is the accompanying belief that it is impracticable to maintain such institutions. If a sin can only manage to become common enough, it is finally regarded as a part of the natural order of things. Any attempt to remove it, or to obviate its effects, is looked upon like an effort to dig away a mountain. This is the view of philanthropic people who do not fully understand the possibilities of reform. They feel that the evil has become so thoroughly intrenched, that the world has become so used to it, that really it is a gratuitious task to try to abate it.

This is not the case. If evils cannot be absolutely abated, they, at least, can be regulated. In this instance no attempt is being made to keep young girls off the street, or to prevent older sisters, who have gone wrong, from selling their younger sisters into a life of shame.

Moral evils follow a uniform law. If the pressure against them is strong they usually succeed by compromise. Society as a whole capitulates under the name of compromise. A few are in earnest and the few should be helped.

It is a good rule, when you wish to do men service, to seek some struggle, apparently hopeless, and help that. Here is a chance. The struggle to assist these unfortunate girls, to guard them from the lecherous men and women who seek their downfall, is the one to help. It is unfortunate, but true, that the average woman who goes wrong does not repent, but seems to have an overwhelming desire to drag others down with her. This is especially the case where an elder sister has a younger one, over whom she holds the influence of superior years.

This has become a custom among weak women and it is never difficult to follow a fashion. To set one is another thing. John Howard, who was one of the most illustrious philanthropists of England, who was responsible for the prison reform laws, for the abolition of the debtors prison, so vividly described by Charles Dickens, set aside the customs of his country. He plunged into the dungeons of Europe and brought the sunshine of human sympathy with him.

Our charity is languid so long as it is skeptical. The methods may be matters of difference and debate, but not the object. It was not more a matter of course, a century ago, that debtors should be imprisoned, than it is now that the friendless and outcast women of our society should be utterly lost.

We have grown wiser about imprisonment for debt. We should not now despair of rectifying the present and growing evils of society.

The persons who are interested in this subject in Memphis, and in every city, are precisely those who understand the peculiar difficulties of any effort. They are neither Utopians nor Sybarites. They are of the kind by which the work of the world is done. The least we can do is to encourage them. If we cannot hope, we can at least pray.

Young womanhood and weak womanhood must be guarded at all costs, and must be helped back to a path of rectitude, if their unshod feet slip along the slippery way of righteousness.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Whitworth College.

Oct. 26, 1911.

Session 1911-1912: enrollment 232 (two hundred and thirty-two). A few vacancies in the boarding department. One hundred and thirty in the music department. College was never more prosperous than now.

Each graduate of the Brookhaven High School, 1910-1911, entered Whitworth College in September. This is an evidence the College is appreciated at home. The faculty is giving unusual satisfaction. Prospects are good for an enrollment of 265, session 1911-1912—a record of which Whitworth friends are delighted. Send for catalogue. Address,

A Committee of Congressmen who returned last week from inspecting the Panama Canal expressed the view that the great waterway will be completed in 1913, and that the expense of its construction will be within the estimated cost of $375,000,000.

The Nobel prize for chemistry for the current year has been awarded to Mme. Marie Sklodoskwa Curie, of the University of Paris. This brilliant woman, jointly with her husband, has won International fame in this science, and well deserves the distinction accorded her.

After five weeks of wrangling, the Court had on the 8th inst. secured three jurors in the McNamara murder case, now in process of trial at Los Angeles. It is predicted by some that it will take until Christmas to select the whole twelve. Truly, the rules of practice in our American courts are in urgent need of revision. Mr. Taft has been directing attention to the necessity for such a reform for some time, and it is to be hoped that it will be forthcoming in the near future.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has issued an official order instructing postmasters to deliver letters addressed to "Santa Claus to charitable persons or institutions asking for them." In case there should be more than one call for such mail, it is to be divided as the postmaster thinks best. This is wise action. It will not hurt Uncle Sam to aid in carrying blessings and brightness into the homes of the poor within our borders. Indeed, somewhat more religion might help the old gentleman in many ways.

Mr. A. J. Balfour resigned the leadership of the opposition party in the British Parliament on Oct. 8, giving as a reason ill health and increasing age. It is thought, however, that the sting of criticism also had something to do with it. This distinguished statesman is of a philosophic temperament and possesses a considerable reach of scholarship. He gave to the public some years ago the well known volume, "Foundation of Belief," which won high praise on both sides of the Atlantic. It is not improbable that he has been too much of a student to be an adroit and tactful politician.

The price of land is reported to be steadily advancing in Louisiana. As an illustration of this, it is said that some parties in Jefferson parish sold a few days since 10,000 acres that are low and wet, which they purchased for $19,000 in 1907, to a New Yorker for $53,082. The indications are that the South will witness within the next two or three decades the most marvelous material development in its history. It is to be hoped that our people will not become panicky because of the depredations of the boll weevil and sacrifice their lands for less than their true value. It is not likely that they will ever be as cheap again as they are at present.

A cablegram to the New York Sun from Berlin states that Germans generally are much dissatisfied with the terms of the Moroccan agreement, and are alleging that France got much the best of the transaction. They affirm that Morocco will gradually become another Tunis, adding substantially to the wealth and prestige of France, while their acquisitions in South Africa are of doubtful value commercially. There is little doubt that the settlement would have worn quite a different aspect had it not been for England's vigorous re-enforcement of the French contentions. Britain's mighty navy gives tremendous emphasis to anything she says concerning international disputes.

Dr. Wu Ting Fang, who was the Chinese minister to the United States from 1897 to 1902, and again from 1907 to 1909, and who is probably the most brilliant Mongolian that ever resided in America, has committed himself to the cause of the revolutionists in the Chinese Empire. Dr. Wu has been since August, 1910, Councilor to the Foreign Office under the Manchu administration, and has been invited to take the same post under the new provisional government which has been formed. He thinks that ninety per cent of the people are in sympathy with the insurrection movement. Referring to his own views, the Doctor says in a statement made through the Associated Press: "Personally, I favor a limited monarchy, retaining the Emperor as a figurehead, with a strong cabinet and constitution, but the prevailing sentiment seems to favor a republic."

Though the final count of the votes leaves Maine in the dry colum by a majority of 758, nothing seems to have been definitely settled by the recent election. Gov. Plaisted has announced that at an early date, probably next February, he will call a special session of the Legislature with a view to having submitted to the people a constitutional amendment empowering the cities to deal independently with the liquor question as they see fit. This means that there will be another battle royal in the Pine Tree State in the near future. The statement by the whisky press that prohibition has been tried in Maine and found unsatisfactory, and that this explains why there has been such a change of sentiment there, is unfair and misleading. It is not a change in the convictions of those who enacted the present laws which has put in jeopardy their continuance, but an influx of foreign population. This same stream of immigration has made New England Roman Catholic instead of Protestant.

The elections held in several of the States on November 7 passed off quitely, and there were few surprises in the results. The Democrats carried Kentucky, where Hon. J. B. McReary, who was governor of the State thirty-two years ago and is now seventy-two years of age, defeated Judge E. C. O'Rear, a most brilliant and worthy leader, by a large majority. Governor Foss, Democrat, was re-elected by a decreased majority in Massachusetts, where Mr. Luce, a Republican, was chosen Lieutenant Governor. The Republicans also carried Maryland by a narrow margin, and elected a majority of the legislatures of New Jersey and New York. The other States holding elections went as they usually go; the new commonwealth of New Mexico joined the Democratic column. Much speculation is being indulged in as to what the election returns foreshadow as to the approaching presidential contest. They probably are of very little significance, so far as that is concerned. The loss of the New Jersey legislature may, however, affect adversely the political fortunes of Governor Woodrow Wilson. The Chicago Inter Ocean a few days since contained an interesting editorial in which Mr. Wilson was spoken of as an "alias" of Mr. Bryan, and the view was advanced that by his nomination the Democrats would probably throw away their chance to elect the next president.

THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS IN DALLAS.

The entire College of Bishops spent three days in Dallas last week, except Bishops Lambuth and Murrah, who are across the waters, and Bishop Kilgo, who was detained on account of illness. It was the occasion of their fall meeting. This is a new arrangement for the Bishops, as it has only occurred since the last General Conference. Formerly, there was only one meeting, and that was about the first of May each year. Now they meet twice a year. But the fall meeting is not of general importance, as it restricts itself to the duty of simply reviewing their six months of work and to decide such questions of law as develop in the meantime. They fix their appointments to the several conferences at the May meeting, and this is the one event toward which the Church looks with more than ordinary interest.

The Bishops are looking well, notwithstanding their arduous labors. Bishop Wilson presided, and, while laboring under a depleted bodily condition and weighted down with years, is still alive to the interest of the Church and quick to discern its needs.

Bishop Key, though on the nominal list, is an older man than Bishop Wilson in years, but he is more robust physically, and his mental powers are active and alert. He is looking unusually well.

Bishop Hendrix grows a trifle more rotund with age and seems to be vigorous and almost youthful.

Bishop Candler is the unique member of the College, but one of the ablest and most influential. He has all the elements of a genius, and whenever he speaks he says something original.

Bishop Morrison is inclined to be feeble, though he retains his old appearance, except the tinge of his hair is slightly off color.

Bishop Hoss is easily the most versatile and intellectually fertile member of the body. He grows stouter with age.

The others are all young men, only elevated to their positions at the last General Conference. But they are becoming used to the harness, and it will not be long until they, too, will be seasoned veterans in the work.

Dallas gave them a cordial welcome, and was sorry to see them go. The different pulpits in the city were occupied by these distinguished men Sunday morning and evening, and though the day was cool and inclement great congregations greeted them at every service.

We had the pleasure of hearing Bishop Waterhouse at Trinity Church. Though we have known him thirty-six years and first met him as a green, gawky boy in Roan County at a District Conference in 1876, and been intimately associated with him more or less since then, yet this was the first time we ever heard him preach. He is a stalwart man physically and robust intellectually, and he is a great preacher with no apparent pretention whatever. He has an analytical mind, and goes into the heart of his subject with inclsiveness and force, and brings out things new and old. But through the whole of his discourse there was a deep spirit of evangelistic truth, and the sermon gave great pleasure and satisfaction to the congregation.—Texas Christian Advocate.

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S CHAIR.

You are doing well, Meek, and I congratulate you. No man was ever consoled who, when jilted by the girl he adored, was told by some "Job's comforter" that there are as good fish in the sea as any taken out of it. Disconsolate and forlorn, his sighs declare his doubt. For him, that particular mermaid was the last! But the saying has a kernel of truth.

We have men even in the presiding eldership (!), I believe that was your former vocation, who can do something else than ask the question: "What has been raised the present quarter for the support of the ministry, and how has it been applied?" They are not all dry as dust, mere clerks, attending to routine work, tied to the red-tape of system as completely as a manacled convict. We have too many of that kind, but not all. Give them the opportunity and they make good in other spheres. The position you are filling with so much satisfaction to the Church exposes you to eminent perils. From that tripod men have gone to the episcopal throne, and in these times "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." Witness China. The whole drift of our age is toward democracy. In many places it is not a drift, but a swift, strong, irresistible current—running even into the extremes of Socialism. The Episcopacy in the Southern branch of Methodism has developed in the very opposite direction. The government of the Church itself is an oligarchy. The quarterly conference, a mere fraction of the Church and itself a self-perpetuating body, in no sense representative of the whole membership, is the unit of the organization. The quarterly conference elects delegates to the district conference, the district conference to the Annual Conference, the Annual Conference to the General Conference, which elects the Bishops. If there are two million members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, three hundred thousand would be a liberal allowance for the members of the quarterly conferences. The General Conference represents these three hundred thousand Methodists. The other seventeen hundred thousand members have no more voice in the government under which they live than the mayor of Timbuctoo. It is taxation without representation on a grand scale, only the revenues are not regarded as taxation. Now, this form of government is called an oligarchy—government by the few. And in this government the Episcopacy is an autocracy. Such a government will have a hard time holding its own amid the triumphant activities of democracy. The foundations of our Episcopacy are as insecure as a sand-bank. The whole subject of Methodist government will have to be readjusted. It would be easy by agitation to produce a revolution.

I do not think you are an aspirant for these perilous honors, but, Meek, be admonished, and do not set your heart on fame. She is a cruel divinity, and sometimes punctures the irridescent bubble of conceit with remorseless indifference to the suffering of her victim. I lay in my tent on a Virginia camp ground. The blue rim of the horizon was ridged with the undulations of the Bull Run mountains. Suddenly my cogitations were interrupted, the curtains parted, and a gentleman, unaware of my presence, entered and proceeded to perform the barber's act on his face. He turned and saw me lying on my cot, and apologized for his intrusion, saying: "My name is Judge ——."

"No intrusion," I said; "Make yourself at home. My name is Steel. I am glad you are here. They are expecting a great speech from you to-day, Judge."

I was the minister in charge of the camp meeting; he, a distinguished layman, who had been invited to deliver the principal address on Layman's Day.

As he proceeded with his shave he said: "You say your name is Steel? When I graduated at Emory and Henry College nearly twenty-five years ago, there was a young man named Steel—S. A. Steel—from Mississippi, I think, who delivered the literary address. It was a very fine address, and I regarded him as a very brilliant man, but I have never heard of him since."

"That's unfortunate," I ventured to remark.

"Yes sir," he went on as he wiped his razor. "I have often wondered what became of him and how he turned out. I predicted for him a brilliant career, but he seems not to have fulfilled the promise of his youth."

"I cannot speak so confidently about how he turned out," I replied, "but I can tell you what became of him. You are talking to him."

With a sudden jerk of the razor from his half-shaved face, he looked at me in surprise and said: "You don't mean that you are the S. A. Steel that delivered that address?"

"I do," I answered.

"I beg your pardon. I would not have made that remark, if—"

"No apologies necessary," I replied. "But, Judge, where have you been all this time not to have heard of me? I have made about as much racket in Israel in my day as is permitted to men of my ability."

He finished his shave in a hurry, gave a splendid address, avoided the preacher's tent, and left early, evidently annoyed at his own frankness. Beware of fame, Meek. She is a deceitful charmer.

When Bishop Fitzgerald, of tender memory, was editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, he ran a department of natural history that was very popular with the readers of his paper. The brother by the fireside cared nothing for the learned discussions about higher criticism, but he turned eagerly to read about the monkeys and elephants of Fitzgerald's religious circus. They made Fitzgerald a Bishop, and the animals disappeared. A pious Piers Ploughman asked his preacher, "What became of that man Fitzgerald, that used to edit the Christian Advocate?"

"They made him a Bishop," the preacher replied.

"Well right thar is where I lost sight of him," was the naive response.

Jungle stories kept Brother Fitzgerald and Teddy in the limelight, and made Kipling's fame. Meek, beware and don't be lost sight of!

The Memphis Conference Female Institute appears in the Bulletin of the Board of Education, just received, as an "unclassified institution." It appears to be in good company, however. I have been in trouble more than once by letting the cat out of the wallet. The pesky critter has scratched me for my carelessness, so I am a "leetle" bit cautious. But I could tell some tales on some of the colleges classed "A"! I have my opinion of a college that confers an M. A. degree, and its possessor, when applying for a position to teach mathematics, stipulates that she will not attempt to teach algebra. Such an M. A. reminds me of Hammond's story of Hugh Price Hughes. Hughes was to preach somewhere, and a circular was sent to a church to be announced whose pastor was not posted on the degrees. He read the circular to his people: "Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, M. A.," will preach at so and so, and then exhorted as follows: "Brethren, I don't know anything about the old lady, but if she talks like her boy, you ought not to miss it!" I don't go by the M. A.'s.

Imagine, if you can, Miss Augustus putting her name to the diploma of a graduate with the M. A. degree who would undertake to teach mathematics without understanding algebra. She would resign before she would do it.

We will present to the Conference when it meets the architect's plans for the new college buildings, and when they are completed this will be one of the most imposing and admirably equipped colleges for girls in the South. A number of necessary changes will be made when the Conference meets, and these will make others necessary. So there are many uncertainties, but we expect Dr. Weber to come back to the First Church in Jackson. He stands deservedly high in the esteem of the whole city.

S. A. STEEL.

WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT IT?

By Rev. Jno. W. Ramsey.

In the issue of the Advocate of November 2 the editor says: "The Southern California Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church has petitioned the approaching General Conference to strike from the Discipline the rule against card-playing, theater-going, and dancing, and leave these amusements to the individual conscience." And then the question is asked: "Is not this sufficient proof that the Church, South, is needed in the Far West?"

Now, while the rule against these amusements still stands in the Discipline of the Church, South, it stands there, not as indicating the sentiment and practice of the present, but as a record of the piety of other days, and as an expression of the thought of the Fathers of the Church relative to all forms of worldliness.

The truth is, it is a well known fact that the rule of the Church, South, touching these matters is a dead letter, and in these latter days it is utterly ineffective in prohibiting worldly amusements. If it were not that this rule, standing as it does in the Discipline, places the Church, as such, on record as being opposed to these amusements, we might as well pursue the course indicated by the petition of the Southern California Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Indeed, did not a former editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, in an editorial in that periodical, suggest that we take the very step pointed out by the action of the Southern California Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church?

I have said that the rule of our Discipline is ineffective in prohibiting worldly amusements. In proof of this statement, I could produce scores of instances which have come under my personal observation; but why offer proof of that which everybody knows? Let one or two instances suffice. A praying Methodist man said to me not long since, "I would quit my Church before I would quit my theater." I know a town where the ladies of the Methodist Church devote whole afternoons to the game of "forty-two," while their children are cared for by negro nurses. The leading man in a leading station church, who was also connected with the county fair, attached his name, or allowed it attached, to the foreword of the fair catalogue which contained an advertisement of a ball at the leading hotel, the proprietor of which was a Methodist. I know a city church whose pastor, some of the Sunday school teachers, and many prominent members attended Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show. But why multiply instances when thousands of similar ones have come to the knowledge of every faithful pastor whose heart bled as he witnessed these derelictions which he could not prevent? I recently heard a pastor say from his pulpit that the time was coming when such church members must go, and my spirit cried out within me: "How long, O Lord, how long?"

In some of my articles to the Advocate I have been accused of criticising the Church. If pointing out the sins of men who occupy prominent places in church circles is criticising the Church, then I must plead guilty to the charge. But I cannot see it that way.

The world has gone wild on godless sports and worldly amusements, and many church people, having cut loose from their moorings, lost their faith in God and their respect for the authority of the Church as expressed in her rules, are drifting to destruction on the rising waves of a high-running tide of worldliness.

As I see it, if we do not call a halt, we might as well follow the example of the Southern California Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. What do you think about it?

If the reason mentioned in your editorial paragraph is the only reason for our Church remaining on the Pacific Coast, we might as well withdraw and expend our energies elsewhere. What do you think about it?

(We think that Brother Ramsey takes rather a too gloomy view of the matter under discussion. We have, to be sure, some members who patronize the dance, the theatre, and the card party, but they are in a hopeless minority. Unless our observation has misled us, the great majority of our people steer clear of such things. Nor do we think that, because discipline is not strictly enforced when our rules against such amusements are violated, it would be wise to modify or strike out these rules. Though they do not absolutely prevent indulgence in such practices, as we see it they exercise a most wholesome restraining influence. Their elimination would be regarded as a retreat upon the part of the Church, and, in our opinion, would make matters much worse. —The Editor.)

THE GOOD-NIGHT ANGEL.

The good-night angel comes at eve
Across the quiet hills,
And tucks the sleepy blossoms in Beside the meadow rills.
On uplands wide each drowsy bird
He cradles in its nest,
And in the dewy valley far
Rocks the wild winds to rest.

He pauses in his gracious guise
Where little children play,
And blesses each before he speeds
Upon his kindly way.
And ere he passes back to heaven,
Beyond the sunset bars,
To watch the babies, birds and buds,
For lamps he lights the stars.

A KITTEN'S PUZZLE.

Grandma was sorry she ever thought of giving the black kitten to Janey and Carolyn, when she learned that they quarreled about its name. Janey wished to name the kitten "Midnight," because it was so black. Carolyn insisted upon calling it "Jetty." The only fact about that kitten upon which the little sisters agreed was its color. It was unquestionably black.

Janey wished the kitten to be fed nothing but milk and begged to keep its bed in the kitchen. Carolyn tried to teach the kitten to eat everything, even oranges; she was glad mother said it must sleep in the woodshed. It did seem as if the little black kitten made more trouble in the family than anything that had ever happened—even measles. Mother threatened to send the pretty creature back to the farm to live with its mother cat and grandma and grandpa.

While mother, father, grandma and grandpa were feeling so bad because Janey and Carolyn quarreled about their pet, no one stopped to think that the kitten was much troubled himself. You see, he didn't know whether he was Midnight or Jetty. Sometimes he thought he was Midnight, and liked nothing but milk to drink; again, he was sure he was Jetty, who preferred bits of beefsteak for dinner. It was extremely puzzling.

One day something happened that never had happened before.

Said Janey: "Its name is Midnight, I tell you."

Said Carolyn: "And I tell you its name is Jetty."

The kitten had listened to this many times before; but, when Janey made a face at Carolyn, and Carolyn that very minute made a face at Janey, the kitten fled.

One day passed, two days passed, and the kitten failed to return. Janey waited with fresh saucers of milk. Carolyn waited with a feast spread on the woodshed steps.

At last Janey cried: "I am afraid something has happened to our dear kitten," she said. "Oh, if it will only come back, we will call it 'Jetty'!"

"Don't speak of it," answered Carolyn. "If the sweet thing ever comes back, I shall be too glad to call it 'Midnight.' I am afraid it has been killed by dogs."

"Or run over by an automobile," wailed Janey.

"And it is all our own fault," persisted Carolyn. "If we had even said: 'Come back, kitty, kitty, kitty,' that day, I believe it would have stayed at home."

"Instead of doing that," moaned Janey, "I called, 'Come Midnight, Midnight, Midnight,' and it mewed and ran fast."

"Yes," added Carolyn, "and, when I called, 'Come, Jetty, Jetty, Jetty,' it mewed and ran faster than ever. I believe that kitten knew more'n we supposed."

"Oh, I often saw the little thing wash its face and think at the same time," admitted Janey.

One moonlight evening, when Janey and Carolyn were sitting on the front steps with their arms around each other, who should come walking up the garden path but one black kitten followed by a second black kitten! Midnight and Jetty had come back home, but which is which neither Janey nor Carolyn knows to this day. All they do know is that grandma's kitten from the country came home with a twin so exactly like himself that even grandma can't tell which one is the farm kitten.

The kitten himself knows which one he is, because once in a great while, when Janey and Carolyn talk over the past and agree never to quarrel over anything again, one kitten winks at the little girls. Before Janey and Carolyn got over their surprise, the kitten quickly has a game of "tag" with his twin, and three seconds after that no one can tell which kitten winked, because they both look so exactly alike and so pleasant.

Perhaps all kittens would do nothing but purr cheerfully and never mew if they lived with such loving little sisters as Janey and Carolyn have been ever since their black kitten left home long enough to think of a way out of his puzzle.—Boys and Girls.

HOW TED SHARED.

Ted was cross. That very morning, when he found the ground all covered with snow, he had sat down to the breakfast table feeling that it would not do him any good, anyway.

"For you see, papa, I haven't a sled, so it isn't any fun at all without one," he said.

Papa laughed.

"Well, Ted, we must see about that. A snow storm without a sled would be a good deal like a mince pie without any mince. How much will a sled cost me?" He asked.

This was encouraging.

"I can get a beauty for $2!" said Ted eagerly.

So after breakfast he started for town as fast as he could go, with his shining silved dollars tightly squeezed in his hand.

On the way he stopped in for his intimate friend, Ned, who lived in a small house with so many children in it that Ted used always to think of the old woman who lived in a shoe. But they were the happiest family you ever saw, which was fortunate, for if they had quarreled it would have been so much harder for the little house to hold them.

"Have you a sled yet, Ned?" asked Ted, as they tramped down the road.

"Not yet," answered Ned cheerfully. "I did earn a dollar to get one, but Mamie needed shoes just then."

It did not take long to buy the sled, and then, as it was Saturday, they went to the hill to try it. But some way Ted did not enjoy it as he thought he would. And when he came home he sat down before the grate fire and fell into a deep study. And it must be confessed it was not a good natured one, either.

"What is it, Ted?" asked mother, after she had heard two or three long sighs.

"I do wish everybody was rich. You see, Ned gave up his sled to buy shoes for Mamie, and I'm such an old stingy I never thought of buying him a dollar one and one for me, too. And it just took all the fun out of it when I was riding to have Ned up there waiting for his turn, with his hands in his tight pockets—they're always too little. And now I've used the sled, I don't s'pose they'd take it back."

"I think I could arrange that if you would really like to, dear," said mother.

Another struggle went on in Ted's mind.

"I think it would be nice for papa to give him $2 for one, don't you?" he said at last.

"No, I don't dear. I believe you will enjoy a cheaper sled better if you take it for Ned's sake," answered mother.

"Well, I'll try it," said Ted. So he took the sled and note from mamma down town; and when he came in again his eyes were like stars.

"You're right, mother," he said. "She goes like a top. And Ned is as happy as I am."

"So am I," whispered mother.—L. E. Chittenden, in Youth's Companion.

SURE ENOUGH.

A Boston school teacher had been explaining to her class about the three kingdoms of nature—the animal, the mineral and the vegetable. When she had finished she said to the class: "Now, who can tell me what the highest degree of animal life is?"

At this a little girl in the rear row of seats raised her hand, and replied: "The highest degree of animal life is the giraffe."—Zion's Herald.

LITTLE ISLANDS OF NOTHING TO DO.

Barren and rocky out there in the sea,
Bold and as cold as an island may be,
Loneliest islands and sorriest, too—
Poor little islands of Nothing to Do.

Nobody wants them, for every one knows
Nothing takes root there, and not a tree grows,
Nobody lives there. To tell the truth, who Wishes to stay where there's nothing to do?

—Zion's Herald.

The goal of human history is the redemption of the world. If the field of Christ and the field of the Church is the world, so the field of every man with the love of God in his heart is the world.—J. Campbell White.

Editorial.

THE RANDOLPH-MACON CONTROVERSY SETTLED.

The following dispatch was sent out from Danville, Va., on the 8th inst.:

"The long and acrimonious controversy over the question of church control of the Randolph-Macon system of schools and colleges, made up of five institutions in this State, was settled to-day by the acceptance on the part of a committee of the Virginia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of a resolution recently adopted by the trustees of the Randolph-Macon system, providing for Conference approval of nominations by the Board of Trustees to fill vacancies in its membership. The resolution of the Trustees provides that when a vacancy arises the Board shall nominate a man therefor, subject to the approval of the Conference. If the Conference refuses to ratify the nomination, the Board must nominate some one else. In the event the retiring Trustee be from the Baltimore Conference, that body shall have opportunity to ratify the nomination of a successor; if in the Virginia Conference, that Conference has the right of ratification."

We are pleased to hear of the amicable adjustment of the long standing difference between the Virginia and Baltimore Conferences and the Trustees of Randolph-Macon. As we understand it, the cause of the trouble was the desire of the Trustees to have the institutions of this system become the beneficiaries of Mr. Carnegie's liberality, which necessitated a weakening of the Church's connection with them. The course which they undertook to pursue is, in our opinion, one of the most discreditable chapters in the history of American Methodism.

Not having the full text of the terms of the agreement reached before us, we are not in a position to discuss it intelligently. Unless, however, the right of the Chnrch to pass upon the Trustees is given some legal basis, it seems to us that the compromise virtually amounts to the surrender by the patronizing Conferences of the position for which they have been contending. If the power of Conference confirmation rests alone upon the will of the Board of Trust, what is to hinder that Board from revoking it when they see fit and thus throwing off entirely the authority of the Church? For our part, we think that the Methodists of the South ought to have a more secure hold than this upon an educational institution before they put their money into it and consent to build it up with their patronage. If we have not been taught this much by the Randolph-Macon and Vanderbilt controversies, we are slow indeed to learn, even in the hard school of experience.

WHAT IT CHALLENGES.

There are some who think that those who have been sounding the alarm against the assaults of higher criticism are unduly panicky, and that they are quite unfair and unjust in their judgments. They insist that nothing of consequence in the system of Christian doctrine has been attacked, and that those who advance the contrary view are heresy hunters who are making much ado about nothing. We invite this class of brethren to read carefully the following statement (which we take from the last number of the Methodist Review) from the gifted pen of Rev. John C. Granbery, who perhaps has been more liberal in his treatment of the higher critics than any other man in Southern Methodism:

"Some well-meaning scholars and friends of progressive thought are making a mistake. In seeking to allay suspicion and to commend modern scholarship, they overshoot the mark. They assure us that the old faith is not endangered by criticism; only the unimportant and unessential things that can be shaken are removed, in order that the eternal verities may abide, and so on. Their motives are good, but either their words lack thorough sincerity, or else they do not themselves apprehend the bearings of modern criticism. They ought to know how far-reaching, system-destroying, and reconstructing these 'harmless' newer views and methods are, and they ought to be candid enough to say so. In the long run, half truths are not even good policy. What intellectual acrobatic feats are performed in the name of pedagogy! Adaptation is God's own method with the race, but it has its limits. These 'liberals' make nothing by dodging and evading—nothing for the cause of truth, though they make a soft bed for themselves. Come out into the open, ye critics, and tell us the whole story! Let us see what it all means! Follow the example of the Roman Catholic Modernists! But the real critics are already in the open, and always have been. It is the popularizers—often a timid folk—who should come from under cover.

"What could be more absurd than the popular and supposedly illuminating distinction between the 'destructive' higher critics and the 'constructive' ones? The distinction is fictitious, created as a kind of breastworks for progressive thought. Let such stand on its own merits, or fight its way—if so be it has sufficient vitality—tragically, if necessary. What matters it if individuals go down? Only let not truth be compromised.

"Another baseless assertion, sounded in our ears for many years, is that in Germany a reaction has set in, or is about to set in, toward conservative views and traditional theology. One is reminded of a consumptive who keeps getting better and better, every time you ask about his health, till he dies. Criticism in Germany has rather become more searching and radical. The long-predicted reaction never arrives.

"A third amusing circumstance is the jubilant and reassuring way in which conservatives and half-baked, timid progressives claim Harnack. His dating of some of the books of the New Testament is somewhat earlier than that of some other scholars, and occasionally he decides in favor of the traditional view as to authorship where some other scholars take the other side; but in no method and at heart Harnack is, and always has been, just as radical as any."

DR. STEEL'S LETTER.

We publish this week a breezy and interesting letter from our honored friend, Dr. S. A. Steel, now the accomplished President of the Memphis Conference Female Institute at Jackson, Tenn. It is scarcely needful to say that we do not agree with our brilliant correspondent in all that he says. We belong to the conservative school, and Dr. Steel is a progressive. We do not, for one thing, concur in his view as to the episcopacy of the Southern Methodist Church. We have never thought that our episcopacy has any specific Scriptural warrant, but we think its existence is fully justified on the ground of expediency. Certainly it has worked well in the little more than one hundred years of its history. It is true that our Bishops have delegated to them vast power, but they work under law and are held to a strict account (or ought to be) for the manner in which they exercise it.

Dr. Steel is unquestionably correct in the statement that our form of church government is not democratic. But whether an organization should be a democracy depends upon what work it has to do. We do not think, for instance, that a democratic government would contribute to the efficiency of an army. Our Church has wrought marvelously and outstripped all the other Protestant denominations since it came upon the stage of action, and it is the conservative Southern branch that is to-day leading the van in the forward march of the various Methodist bodies. The achievements of Episcopal Methodism constitute its ample justification and defense.

As to the wisdom of having the entire Church membership elect the members of the quarterly conference, we are in full accord with Doctor Steel. It was our pleasure to support such a measure at the recent session of the General Conference at Asheville, and we regretted its failure to become a law. The Australian Methodists have adopted this plan, and we yet hope to see this change embodied in our Discipline.

Dr. Steel's facetious references to the editor in connection with the episcopacy are amusing in the extreme. That chain has long ago been broken, so far as the New Orleans Advocate is concerned. We have about as much expectation of ever holding high office in the Church, as we have of becoming an aviator, and, in the language of Ben Hill, "blowing our breath upon the sun." And we think we are about as well fitted for one job as the other. Dr. Steel must forgive us for these lines. He is to us the prince of preachers, and a Christian gentleman for whom we entertain great admiration. He has had a secure place in our esteem ever since wo have known him, though we do not always think as he does.

SOMETHING NEW.

In the Wesleyan Christian Advocate of November 2, Dr. C. O. Jones, chairman of the Board of Education, announces that Dr. H. N. Snyder, of Wofford College, will conduct a series of vesper services at the session of the North Georgia Conference. The Doctor further says:

"The themes are most appetizing. The general topic of the vesper lectures will be 'The Literary Interpretation of Life,' and the sub-topics; 'The Moral Element in Literature,' 'The Poet of Faith in an Age of Doubt,' 'Shakespeare's Handling of the Tragic Issues of Life,' 'The English Bible.' The subject of the annual address will be, 'The Mission of the Church in Education.'"

We do not doubt that Dr. Snyder's literary lectures are well worth hearing, but their appropriateness for such an occasion we fail to see. Studying Shakespeare at an Annual Conference, think of it! Surely this is "something new under the sun. And this in Georgia!"

THE PASTOR'S SALARY.

It is to be hoped that the officials in every charge will do their utmost to see that their pastor is paid in full. At best, the amount contributed for ministerial support is not large, and now, when the cost of living is so high, it is doubly important that the amount assessed for the preacher should not come up short. A deficit can usually be made up by everybody giving a little more and no one is hurt thereby; but a shortage of $50 or $75, which has to be borne wholly by the pastor, entails upon him a considerable hardship. Let our stewards bestir themselves and see that no faithful itinerant is thus made to suffer this year. The obligation to pay the minister who has wrought for the spiritual good of a community should be considered as sacred and binding as any other. The preacher is entitled to what was promised in the beginning of the year, and upon which he has probably been depending.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Examine the label on your Advocate and see when your subscription expires. Send in your renewal at once, or hand the money to your pastor so that he may forward it. You cannot afford to be without your Conference organ.

Rev. Robert Selby has been conducting a series of revival services in the Methodist Church at Moss Point, Miss., doing the preaching himself. We think it is a good idea for the pastor sometimes to conduct his own meeting.

In renewing her subscription, Miss Maggie Tate, of Blue Mountain College, who is one of the progressive educators of North Mississippi, has some commendatory things to say about the Advocate. We greatly apreciate her kind words.

Rev. J. L. Owen has had a year of great success on the Poplar Creek Circuit, North Mississippi Conference. He reports 275 conversions and reclamations, 82 accessions to the church, 30 family altars erected, and several prayer meetings organized. Everything is harmonious and the outlook most encouraging.

The meeting recently conducted at Lexington, Miss., for the pastor, the Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, by Dr. A. C. Holder, of Shreveport, is reported to have resulted in 25 additions on profession of faith and a general quickening of the spiritual life of the church. Brother Lipscomb is closing out a pleasant and profitable year in this good charge.

The following brethren have our hearty thanks for good work recently done for the Advocate: Rev. W. E. Akin, Bonita, La.; Rev. W. W. Graves, Homewood, Miss.; Rev. S. A. Brown, Boonville, Miss.; Rev. C. C. Wier, Franklin, La.

We regret to learn that Sister D. W. Babb, the wife of our pastor at Coldwater, Miss., is seriously ill with pneumonia. We trust that the malady will speedily yield to treatment, and that this elect lady will soon be restored to perfect health.

We are informed that Rev. S. M. Thames has had a pleasant year on the Carrollton charge. He has met every appointment except one, and his pulpit work has been strong and impressive. He will carry a good report to Conference.

Rev. G. W. Bachman spent Sunday, November 12, at Senatobia, occupying the pulpit both in the morning and evening. He reports that Brother Pope's work at that place is in good condition, and that the indications are that he will close out the year with his usual good record.

Information comes that Rev. R. A. Tucker is winding up in good shape at Sardis, Miss. He will report the Conference collections in full at Macon, and is hopeful of being able to wipe out the balance of the indebtedness on the Church by the time the Annual Conference meets. Brother Tucker will have Bishop Candler with him on Sunday, November 26.

Miss May Russell attended the recent meeting of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union at Evanston, Ill., and participated actively in the proceedings. She is still sojourning in the Northwest, where she is alert and is keeping in touch with the prohibition work in that section. Mississippi has cause to be proud of this gifted advocate of the temperance cause.

Rev. J. W. Price, our pastor on the Wilkinson Mission, Mississippi Conference, and Mrs. Price were in the city shopping Tuesday of this week, and favored the Advocate office with a call. Brother Price pleased the publisher by bringing with him a list of subscribers. He reports his work as progressing favorably, and stated that it is about 50 per cent ahead of last year.

Rev. T. W. Lewis has made full proof of his ministry at our great First Church in Memphis. His preaching has drawn large audiences and produced a fine impression, and he has also excelled in his pastoral work. He has had 264 additions during the year and his flock now numbers 1,712. This is John R. Pepper's church, and has a Sunday school second to none in the South.

We were delighted to have a visit a few days since from our genial friend, Mr. D. R. Barbee, who was in the city en route to Greenville, Miss., whither he was going to visit his brother, Mr. J. D. Barbee. Mr. Barbee, after a term of brilliant service as managing-editor, has severed his connection with the Montgomery Advertiser. He is a most capable and enthusiastic newspaper man.

In a personal note to the editor a few days since, Rev. W. L. Duren, of Tupelo, Miss., says: "My work has been unusually heavy this fall, but our usual report will be forthcoming." We do not at all doubt it. There is no such word as fail in the vocabulary of this noble people. Brother J. A. Bowen was wont to say when he served it, "It is down hill anywhere from Tupelo," and he did not miss it much.

A note from Brother Harbin, written from St. Francisville, La., on Nov. 10, stated he was in a meeting at that place, which was opening up most auspiciously. This energetic worker has been instrumental in leading many souls to Christ during the year, and his ministry has also greatly quickened the church at a number of places. We thank Brother Harbin for a nice list of subscribers.

The Lincoln County Times, published at Brookhaven, Miss., in its issue of November 9, contained the following: "Dr. I. W. Cooper preached a powerful sermon last Sunday morning at the Methodist Church on the theme, 'The Cry of the Human Heart for God, or The Spiritual Sense,' using as his text Haggai, ii, 7: 'And the desire of all nations shall come.' It was heard with rapt attention by a large audience."

The meeting at the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church of this city has resulted in the accomplishment of much good. Pastor Sutton was assisted throughout last week by Rev. A. A. Bernard, of Covington, La., who proved to be an efficient helper. On last Sunday the preaching was done by Dr. I. W. Cooper, who delivered two eloquent and able discourses. Twelve members joined the church, and two were baptized.

We acknowledge the reception of a copy of the Bulletin of the Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, containing a program of the services arranged for Sunday, November 5, together with sundry other announcements and matters of interest. We note that Rev. H. T. Carley of Centenary College was down to conduct the League exercises for that evening. Evidently this congregation is forging forward under the capable leadership of Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr.

Rev. J. W. Dorman is in high favor with his flock at Ittabena, Miss., where he has made his influence strongly felt for good. He is one of the safest and truest men in the North Mississippi Conference. He was a close friend of the late Bishop Charles B. Galloway, who often spoke of him in terms of appreciation. Brother Dorman expects to be present at the unveiling of the Bishop's portrait in the chapel of Millsaps College next Wednesday.

Rev. H. R. Singleton requests us to state that the Special Sleeper, which is to be run from Shreveport to New Orleans for the benefit of delegates to the Louisiana Annual Conference, will leave the former city over the L. R. and N. Railway on December 4 at 6:50 p.m. About one-half of the berths have been taken. Other parties desiring to secure accommodations on this car may do so by writing Brother Singleton at Shreveport. The price of the berths is $1 each.

From Tupelo, Miss., Rev. J. W. Ramsey writes: "I have held a number of revivals this year resulting in scores of conversions and additions to the church. My latest engagement was at the Shiloh Camp Meeting, where there were about 40 conversions. I am impatiently awaiting the meeting of my Annual Conference and my return to the pastorate." We are pleased to know that this energetic worker will again put on the harness for active service, and take his place in the ranks.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, who transferred last spring to the Holston Conference and was stationed at Trenton, Ga., has transferred back to the Louisiana Conference and will take an appointment at the hands of Bishop Mouzon when that body meets in New Orleans in December. Brother Lipscomb had a pleasant year at Trenton, Ga., but it was never his purpose to leave Louisiana permanently. He will reside in this city, at 926 Second Street, until the Annual Conference assembles.

From a report of his work on the Mount Olive charge, sent in by Rev. L. M. Alford, we take the following: "Our fourth quarterly conference was held on October 30. Brother Sharborough, our presiding elder, gave us three excellent sermons. We feel sure, notwithstanding the heavy increase and the ravages of the boll weevil, that all our assessments will be paid." We like the ring of these words. The man who succeeds in spite of adverse circumstances is entitled to double honor.

Answering the editor's personal letter concerning Advocate matters, Rev. W. D. Dominick, our worthy pastor at Heidelberg, Miss., says: "It astonishes me that three Annual Conferences do not give the Advocate 10,000 subscribers. I have made a personal canvass and secured 30 new subscriptions and three renewals. Seven will soon expire, and I feel sure that these will want the paper to continue to come." We highly appreciate Brother Dominick's good service and encouraging words. He has certainly wrought well for us.

Rev. F. D. Van Valkenburgh, who spent the summer at Marble Head, Mass., filling the pulpit of his son, Rev. W. B. Van Valkenburgh, the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in that city, who was away on a European tour, has returned to New Orleans, where he and Mrs. Van Valkenburgh will spend the winter at 1620 Calliope Street. Brother Van Valkenburgh paid our office an appreciated visit Tuesday of this week. He seems to be in good health and spirits, and says that he is glad to get back to Louisiana.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb and the progressive little city of Lexington will be at the front at the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference. Brother Lipscomb will make a fine report: 50 accessions, 30 on profession of faith, and the finances in full. Lexington will invite the Conference to hold its next session there. For the third time in succession, Brother Lipscomb will report the Conference proceedings for the Commercial Appeal. This is a guaranty that the people will have daily an admirable account of what is going on.

We are informed that on the fifth Sunday evening in October an enthusiastic and edifying service in the interest of the Men and Religion Movement was held at the Methodist Church at Philadelphia, Miss., three splendid addresses being given by laymen. The Sunday School Rally held at 11 a.m. the same day was largely attended and of much interest. The pastor of this growing charge, Rev. M. M. Black, who is one of the most accomplished ministers in Mississippi, has received 70 members this year—40 by certificate and 30 on profession of faith.

From Wilson, La., Rev. F. N. Sweeney, under date of the 11th inst., writes as follows: "We have just closed a good meeting here. Brother W. G. Harbin did the preaching, and Brother Jeffries the singing. We had twelve accessions to our membership, and the church in all its departments seems to have taken on new life. I wish you could hear our 'Sunbeam Class' of fifty children sing. Brother P. H. Howse conducted a successful revival for me at Pisgah, where there were twelve accessions to the church. We have taken in sixty members during the year. Praise the Lord for his goodness."

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Rather, of Leland, Miss., came to New Orleans a few days ago, brought here by the illness of Sister Rather, who has since undergone an operation at the Touro Infirmary. She is reported to have stood the trying ordeal very well, and at this writing her case is thought to be progressing favorably. Let prayer be made for the prompt recovery of this faithful Christian worker, who is a devoted member of our Church at Leland.

Wednesday, November 22, is the date for the unveiling of Bishop Galloway's portrait. The principal address will be delivered by Bishop W. A. Candler.

Presidents J. W. Beeson and M. A. Beeson report one of the most gratifying revivals ever held at the Meridian Male and Female Colleges. The Holy Spirit was wonderfully present from the first service to the last, and many were converted and quite a number lifted to a higher religious experience. Rev. M. A. Ferguson, of Mount Vernon, Illinois, did the preaching. Other helpers in the services were Brother Smith, the college pastor; that prince of laymen, Mr. L. P. Brown, and Brothers Paul, Harrison, Larabee, Wertenberger, and Hopper. These institutions are said to be having excellent sessions in every respect.

We sent out last week a personal letter to every pastor in Louisiana and Mississippi, asking their hearty co-operation in a forward movement in behalf of the Advocate. This letter was sent to all alike, and a number of the brethren have written us most encouragingly on the subject. Since we have held our present position, the preachers in our patronizing territory have given us much valuable assistance, and we shall never forget their great kindness. But for them the Advocate would soon have to shut up shop. We feel sure that the brethren will remember us in these closing days of the year, and we are confidently expecting good collections at the Annual Conferences.

Under date of November 11, Rev. Eugene Johnson, our pastor at Ripley and Blue Mountain, writes: "The 3d of November was a great day at Blue Mountain. Bishop A. W. Wilson dedicated our church there on that date. The thrilling and soul-elevating discourse of the Bishop produced a profound impression on the vast audience and will abide with them." Alpheus Waters Wilson is one of the most majestic figures in American Methodism. We have been particularly pleased to note his active work in North Mississippi, since it indicates that this "grand old man" of Southern Methodism may yet be spared to the Church for some time to honor and bless it. God grant that it may be so!

In our issue of last week we inadvertently stated that "Rev. Paul Jones," of Meridian, was assisting Dr. Hines in a meeting at the St. Charles Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church of this city. We meant to write that the Rev. John Paul was rendering this service. This was the editor's mistake. It was doubtless due to his mind attending to something else, and his latent consciousness directing his fingers as they touched the keys of the typewriter. Truly, the human mind is a wonderful thing. It accomplished a remarkable transformation in this instance, at least: that of a peaceful evangelist into a naval hero. Brother Paul must forgive us, especially as we conferred upon him an illustrious name.

The Mansfield Star of October 27 congratulates our Female College at that place upon having placed its bond issue and adjusted for the present its financial difficulties. It further says of this institution: "In its halls audiences have listened to some of the best and brightest men in the State. 'Standing with reluctant feet where brook and river meet,' many a mother, who is to-day queen in her home-realm, has received here her training for the duties of life. May this school prosper, and its ennobling influence spread with the passing years." Undoubtedly the outlook for Mansfield College is brighter than it has been in some time. Let us, each and all, now rally to its support and carry it forward to yet larger things.

Mr. R. C. Steen, President of the Y. M. C. A. of Millsaps College, writes: "The regular annual revival meeting held at this institution under the direction of our Association will begin Friday, November 17, and continue through the following week. Rev. H. W. Bowman, of Amite, La., will do the preaching. There is every reason to believe that the meeting will be one of the best ever conducted at the college. Besides having secured an efficient minister to conduct the services, those in charge feel that the time is more opportune for revival work than in the spring, which is usually a very busy season. Moreover, it is hoped that an early meeting will increase the religious interest and activity of the student body throughout the entire session."

Miss Mamie Taylor, of Meridian, Miss., while attending the recent Convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at Richmond, Va., in a letter home thus refers to an address delivered before that body by Mrs. Stevens of Mississippi: "Five thousand people gave our own Daisy McLaurin Stevens an ovation at the conclusion of her speech last night, such as has never before been accorded a woman upon a Richmond platform. She covered us all with pride and glory." Mrs. Stevens is a daughter of the late Senator A. J. McLaurin, and the widow of Judge W. F. Stevens, who was one of the brightest young men in Mississippi, and whose early death at Carrollton, Miss., some years ago was widely mourned. She is not only a woman of uncommon intellectual gifts, but also of beautiful Christian character.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

D. O. LIDDELL died in Natchez, Miss., Aug. 19, 1911, at the age of 41 years. He leaves his parents, one brother, W. J. Liddell; a sister, Mrs. L. Greenlee; his wife and several children to mourn their loss. May our Heavenly Father bind up their bleeding, aching hearts! He is gone, but not forgotten; never shall his memory fade from the minds of us who loved him. Resolutions expressing deep sympathy for the bereaved and commending them to the care of the infinite One were adopted by the Woman's Home Mission Society of Natchez.

A METHODIST.

Little BESSIE FERRELL was born Oct. 27, 1902, at McComb City, Miss., and died in Shreveport, La., May 5, 1911. She was the oldest of two children. She leaves her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Ferrell, and little Hazle to mourn their loss. The funeral services were conducted at the Baptist Church by the writer, assisted by Brother Chapman, the pastor of the Baptist Church. Little Bessie has gone to be with Jesus; so dear friends, mourn not as those who have no hope. You cannot call her back, but you can go to her. So may the translation of little Bessie to the kingdom of heaven be but the means of winning the hearts of the loved ones and weaning their affections from the things of this world, and placing them on heaven and heavenly things. Her pastor,

C. H. HERRING.

Mrs. MARY JANE SMITH (nee Chambers) was born in Wilkinson County, Miss., November, 1852. She came to Louisiana in 1891, and was married to A. P. Smith, Dec. 20, 1891. She joined the Christian Church when quite young, and always lived a consistent Christian life. She was Brother Smith's third wife. He had six children, four daughters and two sons. I never knew a stepmother that was more attached to stepchildren than she was, and they all loved her as their own mother. She was a faithful Sunday school worker, her husband being the superintendent. She always cooperated with him in doing all she could for the salvation of souls, and to make home happy. She was a great sufferer for six weeks before she died; but she bore it all patiently and was prepared when the end came. May the blessings of God rest upon the loved ones she has left behind!

F. N. SWEENEY.

SALLIE PERKINS EVERETT, the youngest daughter of Mrs. Willie Everett, was a bright, affectionate child, whom everyone loved. She was permitted to stay in her earthly home only eight years; on Oct. 13, God loosed the soul and body, and the spirit of the pure, sweet little girl returned to the Father, before it was stained in the least by the things of this world. How sad it must have been to give up the darling baby! While her voice is forever hushed among her loved ones on earth, she will sing, no doubt, with the angels in the eternal city of God. The memory of her sweet life will always be fragrant. Although gone for a season, she still abides with us in thought and memory. Our prayers ascend to God in behalf of the bereaved, that they may have divine help in their great grief. Her little body was laid to rest in the Liberty Chapel Cemetery with services conducted by Brothers E. C. Sullivan and N. G. Augustus. The funeral was attended by a large crowd of relatives and friends. May the God of all grace bind up the broken hearts with love and comfort, sustaining them by his promise, "Whosoever believeth in me, shall never die!"

A FRIEND.

On Sunday afternoon, Oct. 15, 1911, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wilson and took from them a precious jewel, little JIMMIE, aged six years. Jimmie was a sweet child, loved by all who knew him. Heaven is made brighter since he has gone to live there. All that loving hands could do, was done; but God in his infinite wisdom saw fit to take him. We must bow our heads in humble submission and say, "Thy will be done." We shall see him again; this parting is not for eternity. Jimmie is "safe in the arms of Jesus; safe on his gentle breast." This life is short; soon will the summons come for us to go. May we all meet him around the "great white throne, where parting is no more." Jimmie is waiting for us in heaven.

Beautiful hands of a little one see;
Baby voice calling, O mother, to thee;
Rosy-cheeked darling, the light of the home,
Taken so early, are beckoning come.

A FRIEND.

About noon, Monday, Oct. 23, 1911, the spirit of Mrs. MAY WILLIAMS McKAY took its flight to the God who gave it. For several years she had been a sufferer from tuberculosis. In vain, loving ones sought to restore her health. Her husband took her West for a season, but finding no improvement, brought her back to her mother, where she spent her last days. From childhood, she wore a sunny face. She joined the Methodist Church while quite young, and was ready to meet her Savior when the end came. She is survived by a fond mother, one brother, and four sisters, besides an affectionate husband, R. L. McKay, and a little son, Robert William McKay. These will more deeply feel the loss, but a host of others will grieve with them. Dear May, our loss is your gain, and even though a few years may separate us, may each be ready to meet you in that great beyond, where you have gone to join your brother, Jim, and much lamented father, J. M. Williams.

A devoted friend,

LUCY BREWER SIMPSON.

On Nov. 7, 1847, the ever busy Giver of every good and perfect gift gave to Mr. and Mrs. Dangal Calhoun a child, whose name has since been known as CHARLIE H. CALHOUN. His parents lived in Alabama seven years after his birth; then came to Louisiana and settled in Jackson Parish (now Lincoln). His father lived only one year after coming to Louisiana. Charlie, then eight years old, with the aid of his mother, assumed the responsibility of managing the business that his father had begun in Louisiana. He made such success as a farmer while but a boy that a large planter employed him at the age of seventeen to take charge of his farm. He kept Charlie as manager of his business for eight years. Sept. 2, 1873, he married Miss Laura E. Parker, at her mother's home near Old Trenton, La. They had seven children born to them. One little one died at seventeen months; two little boys died before they were seven; four children are living. All of these are grown and married except one, who is off at college fitting himself for future days. Brother Calhoun was elected four years ago as police juryman. He served there well and made a strong arm in favor of prohibition in Morehouse Parish. He was steward of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for twenty-seven years. He always considered it a pleasure to see after the needs of his pastor, and counted it a blessing to work for the cause of the Master. He was a loving and devoted father and husband. No one can truly sympathize with the widow and children except those who have had the same ordeal. He lived for others, and in so doing made his own happiness. His life was pure, and without doubt his soul shall appear before the great white throne to hear from him who sitteth Judge Supreme the welcome words: "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." The thirteenth day of August, 1911, early in the morning, the ever busy harvester of the souls of men garnered to himself a noble spirit for its reward. Oh, that all men loved the church and their neighbors as did this noble chaarcter! Loved ones and friends of him, our deceased, trust now "Him that is able to keep you from falling and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy."

T. J. HOLLADAY.

RUTH PACE, daughter of Albert Sidney and Laura Webb Pace, was born Aug. 14, 1898, and died Oct. 30, 1911. Ruth was in her fourteenth year since Aug. 14. The only daughter, she was the ideal of the home. She leaves her father, mother, and only one brother, her grandparents, and a host of kindred to mourn her death. This was one of the saddest of deaths, because of her beautiful person and character. She was a daily companion of her mother, and, being the only daughter, her decease is heart-rending to the family. Ruth possessed the charm of making friends of all who met her. The writer took her into the church four years ago, while helping in a meeting at Wall Hill, Miss. Her father is a merchant in Wall Hill. Some four weeks ago Ruth was stricken with typhoid fever, and was dangerously ill for many days. She was buried in the cemetery at Cold Water. May her bright, beautiful life be sanctified and blessed of God to the spiritual good of all the kindred, and may all meet in heaven.

W. M. YOUNG.

Mrs. A. YOUNGBLOOD was born in Claiborne County, Miss., and died at her home in Jefferson County, Miss., Nov. 23, 1910, at the age of about sixty-nine years. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at the early age of six years, and was converted when she was twelve years old. She lived a faithful Christian life to the hour of her death. Sister Youngblood was the only daughter of Brother James Callendar and Sarah Callendar. These faithful ones were known to many of the preachers, and loved by all who knew them. She was a niece of Rev. James F. Griffing, who was for many years a member of the Mississippi Annual Conference. She was related to Rev. John G. Jones, and many other prominent ministers of our Church. Forty-six years ago she was happily married to Brother A. Youngblood. God blessed the union with eight children; three of them preceded their mother to the better world. One brother, her devoted husband, four sons, and one daughter survive her, all of them following the same Savior that saved their loved one. Sister Youngblood was truly a good woman. This writer knew her from his childhood, and always knew her to be faithful in all the relationships of life. As a daughter she was obedient and loving. This remark of hers fixed itself firmly in my mind when but a youth: "I cannot sleep at night if I feel that I have done the least thing during the day that disturbs father or mother." As a wife she was considerate, true in every respect, and entered fully into all the cares and responsibilities of her husband. As a mother, she was kind and indulgent. Last, but not least, she was a true and faithful child of God, never failing to give place to the duties of her church; never happier than when she was in her own home entertaining and making happy the servants of her Lord. She was fully confident that all of hers would be Christians, and lived to see it. No doubt her entire household will one day be crowned with her in glory. May the God of all grace sustain and keep them to the end! Your loved one is not dead; she lives with God in his eternal abode.

Tidings From the Field

Cochrane Circuit:

Dear Brother Meek: The fourth quarterly meeting for this charge has been held. My presiding elder, Rev. J. E. Thomas, came on Wednesday and stayed with us until the next Wednesday. His visits are always helpful. He helped us with the collections, edified us with his preaching and cheers, and encouraged us with his presence and counsel. Our report from this charge will be as follows: 1, We have purchased a nice new parsonage; 2, we have built a new church and organized a congregation in a new town where we had no church; 3, we have put handsome pews and pulpits in two of our churches; 4, we have had 17 accessions to the church and baptized 8 little children; 5, our finances are in pretty good shape. We paid our assessments for Home and Foreign Missions in the spring. We have our assessments for Church Extension and Conference claimants in hand, and will try to get the others.—W. J. Burt, P. C.

Nov. 7, 1911.

Rienzi Circuit:

Having been a reader of the Advocate ever since I can remember, I am disposed to write a few lines for its columns, and let its readers know what is happening in this part of our Lord's vineyard. Bethel Church has a fine Sunday school and prayer meeting, composed of Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians, and you cannot tell one from the other, so beautifully do they work together. It takes this to give success to the work in the country. Our prayer meeting has influenced men to offer prayer to the Lord who were never known to do so before, and this in itself is a grand thing. There is nothing nobler in my eyes than to see the young men of our country taking the lead in such work. Our pastor, Brother Cunningham, has accomplished much for the Rienzi Circuit, and is generally beloved and honored by our people. We shall greatly miss him if he is not returned. It is with a sad heart that we give up our presiding elder, Brother Jaco, who has wrought so nobly on the Corinth District for four years. We pray that God may richly bless him wherever he may be sent. Our fourth quarterly conference was held on Nov. 8. Our Woman's Home Mission Society, for some reason, has ceased to be active, but with the coming year we hope to start again, and by the help of the Lord, do something for the cause of missions. May God bless the Advocate and its readers.—A Reader.

Bucatunna, Miss.:

I thought perhaps there were some who would appreciate a report from Bucatunna charge. We have had some successful revivals. As a result of one of our meetings, we practically raised an old church debt of $260. There have been 43 accessions to the church; one house of worship has been built, which is clear of debt. On the fifth Sunday in October we had the pleasure of having with us our beloved and efficient presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Lewis, who preached two excellent sermons, and dedicated two churches for us. We also appreciated having with us on this occasion Brother B. W. Lewis, of Enterprise, who was instrumental in building our neat and up-to-date church in Bucatunna, and Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock he delighted the audience with a splendid sermon. On Monday the places of business were closed, and the people of the town, with the school children, made a good congregation for Monday. Our presiding elder preached in demonstration of the Spirit and of power, and good interest was manifested. In the afternoon we held our fourth quarterly conference. The churches were well represented and everybody seemed to be interested. During the conference, a motion was made to raise funds to repair and insure the parsonage. The churches subscribed for that purpose. Taking everything into consideration, we feel greatly encouraged.—S. N. Young, P. C.

Baker, La.:

My fourth quarterly conference was held at Blackwater on Oct. 21-22. The presiding elder, though very unwell, was present, presided with grace and ability, and preached two very fine sermons at Blackwater, and also one at Baker. The people had prepared a nice dinner, which they served in the churchyard. The reports from the different churches on the charge were fairly good, and the brethren all seemed encouraged, notwithstanding that we are in the midst of the boll weevil district, and corn is almost a failure. The following Sunday we had a very delightful communion service at Baker, and your humble servant preached a sermon on the Passover and the Lord's Supper and showed the connecting link. I am very busy now trying to get ready for the meeting of the Annual Conference. The assessment for the benevolences on the Baker charge are based on the numerical strength of the charge, and are entirely too heavy. Our roll needs to be revised. We have members that live nearer other places, and still don't move their membership. Think of a country circuit assessed $815 for pastor and $540 for the benevolences! It is not right. It will be utterly impossible to collect it. I'm doing my best to do it; but we are in the midst of territory infected by the boll weevil and other crops this year are almost a failure. Mr. Editor, I am not complaining, but simply stating the facts to show how utterly impossible it is under such circumstances to raise all the Conference collections. The spiritual condition of the charge is improving, and the people are cheerful in spite of short crops. They are loyal to the church and big-hearted. The year has been a very pleasant one to me, and my only regret is that I have not been able to do more. God bless the Advocate, and all that are connected with it.—S. D. Howard, P. C.

THE VETERAN MINISTERS' ASSOCIATION OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Annual sermon before this Association will be preached by Rev. J. W. Bosweli, D.D., at 3 o'clock p.m. of the first day of the Conference session at Macon, Miss. The sermon will be followed by mutual greetings and short talks, reminiscential or otherwise, by members of the Association. It is earnestly desired that all superannuated and supernumerary preachers and all veterans and sons of veterans still in active service should be present at this annual meeting.

TOPIC FOR NOVEMBER 19, 1911.

"GIVING CHRIST THE RIGHT OF WAY."

Gal. ii, 20; vi, 14; Col. iii, 3.

Paul's conception of "giving Christ the right of way" was first to be "crucified with Christ." What is it to be crucified with Christ? By his crucifixion Christ became insensible to surrounding objects; he ceased to feel, hear and see—he died! Although the Christian is not thus literally crucified, he is so spiritually. Hence he becomes dead to the law, to the world, and to sin; dead to human pride, and pleasures, and degrading passions.

How Appropriated.

Henry Ward Beecher said: "My conception of Christ is that he is mine not in any sense which appropriates him to me alone, but mine as really and truly as though I were the only being in the universe. My father was absolutely mine, although my next younger brother could say the same thing, and though every brother and sister could say the same thing. I had the whole of him, and each of my brothers and sisters had the whole of him. And I have the whole of my God. The God of all the heaven, and the God of the whole earth, and of time, and of physical law and its sequences, and of all invisible laws and their sequences—he is my God!"

Christ's Love an Individual Love.

The great tronble is that folks take everything in general, and do not take it specifically to themselves. Many think that Paul was beloved, that Peter was beloved, that their mother was beloved, and that many others with superior natnres and full of moral excellencies; but they do not realize that God loves every individual, no matter how unlovable he may be. In illustrating this precious truth Mr. Moody offers the following: "Suppose a man should say to me, 'Moody, there was a man in Europe who died last week, and left five million dollars to a certain individual.' 'Well,' I say, 'I don't doubt that; it's rather a common thing to happen;' and I don't think anything more about it. But suppose he says, 'But he left the money to you.' Then I pay attention; I say, 'To me?' 'Yes, he left it to you.' I suddenly become interested; I want to know all about it. So we are apt to think Christ died for sinners, he died for everybody, and nobody in particular. But when the truth comes that eternal life is mine, and ...ies of heaven are mine, I beg... ...erested."

No Christ ...thout the Cross.

Every one ... ...t of glory—the avaricious, we... ...ain, distinction; the ambitious, ... the self-righteous, virtue; the ph... cal, wisdom; but the Christian sings.

"In the cross of Christ I glory,
Towering o'er the wreck of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round its head sublime."

That celebrated divine, Jonathan Edwards, in giving his interesting diary of the life of Brainerd, the great American apostle who was the means of converting thousands of the wild Indians, records that for some time poor Brainerd, in simplicity and not in guile, thought that the best way to make men sober was by preaching to them the attributes of God, laying hold of the conscience, and keeping the cross in the background. It is a remarkable fact that he found the whole system a failure; he could not produce one sober man. "Then," he says, "I bethought me that I would go and preach Jesus Christ; and many a hard face relaxed, many an eye shed tears that had never wept before, and I found that the best way to make men sober was to make them spiritual;" and from henceforth he too glorified in and held forth nothing but the cross.

The Life Hid with Christ in God.

"Have we not heard of rivers rolling in their calm and apparent majesty, hidden from the eye by the deep woods, by the solemn mountains and wide-extending prairie? Hidden! Nay, has it not been our lot to listen to the murmurings of far-off mountain streams we could not see? The Christian's life is such; like one of those glorious streams borne and taking its rise in far-off mountains, then descending the awful sides of the rugged hill, and shooting into light; then winding and wending its way through the villages and fields, by cities and by towns; more or less quiet, more or less observed; then taking itself to far-off country places again; telling, as it rolls, no story of its birth, and little of its means of widening growth; now watering the giant oak and the graceful beech and the lovely elm; and apparently lost in creeping its way by sedgy nettle-beds, and banks covered with hemlock and weeds; but not less useful in the one place than the other, till at last, beyond sight it is lost in the sea. So it is with the Christian life, and the life of God as revealed in the human soul."
—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Weak Eyes Lessen Efficiency

Banish eye troubles, and then you will be able to discard your bothersome spectacles or eyeglasses and triumph over one of the worst obstacles to your success.

Weak eyes are usually due to congestion and such cases can be cured by simply massaging the closed eyes with the Ideal Eye Restorer. This stimulation increases blood circulation, thus nourishing and building up the starved or decayed tissues wherein lies the seat of all eye trouble. Every man or woman who suffers from poor eyesight should adopt this treatment.

Over seventy per cent of the people who have used the "Ideal" have been enabled to discard their glasses, while in more than one case it has actually cured those believed to be blind.

Write today for 10-day free trial, also booklet which tells how the "Ideal" will strengthen your eyes and restore that day-after-day mind weariness that lessens efficiency. Address:

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Mrs. Ross Gamble, who was a faithful Sunday school teacher and superintendent of the Home Department at Grand Cane, La., now lives at Castor, and as there is no Methodist Sunday school there, she has gathered a group of some forty pupils in a home class, somewhat on the Junior League plan, and is taking the lead in raising money to build a church which is to be ready for occupancy by Conference. Rev. J. G. Sloane is the pastor at this place.

* * *

Rev. H. M. Banks, pastor, thinks the Sunday school at Sardis, ten miles south of Monroe, is the oldest Sunday school in the State. It is seventy-five years old. Brother Joe Rutledge, an uncle of Rev. S. J. Rutledge, our pastor at Indian Bayou, is the present superintendent. The Sunday school at Saline, also on Brotner Bank's work, has run longer this year than ever before, and has no thought for going into winter quarters.

* * *

Upon the cordial invitation of the pastor, Rev. J. W. Brown, the writer recently visited Fordoche, and found this (about the center of the Point Coupee Mission) a needy field. The only meeting place for public assemblages here is a dance hall, which is not equipped with either window lights, or a heater to make it comfortable in winter, and otherwise it is not a very pleasant place for divine worship. Because the little twelve-by-sixteen school house was not commodious enough for the forty pupils of the public school, the Parish Superintendent of Education has up to the present sent no teacher for this year, and so a secular and religious educational dearth prevailed. In our house-to-house visitations and addresses, we put emphasis on the need of both a public school and a Sunday school, and we had the satisfaction of seeing a Sunday school organized with fair prospects for success, and a subscription list for enlarging the public school building is being circulated, and the people are responding liberally. The Sunday school's officers chosen upon organization are: H. P. Simmonds, superintendent; Paul Jones, assistant superintendent; Mrs. C. J. Normond, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Dr. L. F. Magruder, superintendent Home Department; Miss Annie Simmonds, superintendent of the Cradle Roll. A collection for literature was liberally responded to, and an adequate supply ordered. The school will meet in the dance hall, the public school building, or in a private residence.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Brother Mills, Timberville, has a growing interest in the work in both his churches, and two good Adult classes.

* * *

Miss Duval's Adult Class, Shelby, Miss., was organized with 12 members and the following officers: President, F. W. Bullock; Vice-President, Mrs. C. J. Jacobs; Secretary, W. T. Wilkinson; Treasurer, Mrs. Geo. Roberts; class motto, "Work is Prayer;" class flower, white rose.

* * *

Brother Myers, at Louisville, has closed a great meeting, and he and his people are planning enlarged usefulness and more progressive organization in every department of his Sunday school.

* * *

Brother Lipscomb's Sunday school at New Albany is well organized. Mrs. Hamer's Men's Class is growing in members and efficiency every day, and they have a splendid winter campaign planned.

* * *

Hon. J. D. Fontaine has the Men's Class in Pontotoc and is making quite a success of it. Classes for girls and boys are also organized and doing unusually good work, housed comfortably in a fine new church.

* * *

At Lake Cormorant, on November 2, Brother Bennett had a fine program, participated in by enthusiastic Sunday school workers, and, with his interested people back of it, the occasion was a great success.

* * *

Mrs. Alexander's class of boys, Houston, Miss., will have a float at their Fair to be constructed and decorated by their own hands. They are doing fine work along Bible-study lines and out-of-door activitles.

* * *

"The common problem
Is, not to fancy what were fair in life
Provided it might be; but finding first
What may be, then find how to make it fair
According to our means. A very different thing."

This is the proper mental attitude for the Sunday school worker, and, with the right mental attitude, much may be accomplished.

Brother Eugene Johnson has a fine Sunday school at Ripley, with Dr. J. Y. Murry as superintendent and Mr. J. E. Finger as his able assistant. Dr. Murry's consecrated life and influence are evidenced in every department of his Sunday school work. Mr. Pegram has a good and prophetic men's class, and from the Cradle Roll to the Teachers' Training Class every line of work is well kept up. Dr. Murry has a very helpful closing service to his school; each class in concert, as it is called, repeats a verse of Scripture appropriate to the lesson, or from the lesson text itself, and the concerted effort is most helpful and effective.

Houston has a well equipped and finely organized school. Even the younger classes are organized, with prepared programs and future work well in hand. The spirit of the school and the intense interest manifested by the teachers prove the work they are doing. Mrs. Neblett's Men's Class of 84 fine Sunday school boosters opened their well-appointed new class room on Thursday, Oct. 26, in honor of the Field Secretary, and no more beautifully planned or hospitably carried out house-warming could be imagined. The room is large, well-lighted and attractively papered, and will be a source of continuing joy to its members and the entire church. The president, Mr. West, assisted by his pastor, our much loved president of the Sunday School Board, and his efficient committeemen, made the occasion a rare red-letter day for all concerned. Mrs. Neblett is the thoughtful, progressive and tactful teacher of this class, which has this year reached such commendable excellence.

Makes a Bad Cough Vanish Quickly--or Money Back

The Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy You Ever Used. Family Supply for 50c. Saves You $2.

You have never used anything which takes hold of a bad cough and conquers it so quickly as Pinex Cough Syrup. Gives almost instant relief and usually stops the most obstinate, deep-seated cough in 24 hours. Guaranteed to give prompt and positive results even in croup and whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other healing pine elements. A 50 cent bottle makes a pint—a family supply—of the best cough remedy that money can buy, at a saving of $2. Simply mix with home-made sugar syrup or strained honey, in a pint bottle, and it is ready for use. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—directions in package.

Children like Pinex Cough Syrup—it tastes good, and is a prompt, safe remedy for old or young. Stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both good features. A handy household medicine for hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis, etc., and unusually effective for incipient lung troubles. Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

DO WE NEED GOD IN OUR WORK, OR DOES HE NEED US IN HIS—WHICH?

Brother Editor: In last week's issue of your paper, Brother S. L. Pope, writing from Senatobia, says this: "As Dr. Meyer says, 'We are trying to get to the point where we will not ask God to help us in our work, but let us help him in his work.'" I may not be orthodox, but somehow that sentence looks to me like it is just backward from what it ought to be. I may be wrong, but it has always been my notion that we need God in all we do. As a bread-winner, I must go out into the world and battle with its forces. Certainly, I need God to help me. As a Christian I am to be "the light of the world." Certainly, I need God to guide and direct me. At every turn in life, in all of its phases, I need God. I have been taught that God could get along without me, though it would grieve him to do so, but that I could not get along without him. I do not care to abandon that doctrine now. If so, my strength is gone. I have regarded him as a "great help in time of need." I am commanded to "work out my own salvation." Do I need God to help me in that "work?" I feel sure dear Brother Pope will take no offense when I say frankly that I trust we will never get to the point where "we will not ask God to help us in our work." "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in Glory by Christ Jesus." (Phil. iv, 19.)

EXCELLENT MEETING AT LOUISVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: We have just closed one of the greatest meetings at Louisville it has ever been my pleasure to attend. We began under many difficulties and discouragements. The time was late in the year and several efforts had been made by some of the strongest preachers to be had, who had done most excellent preaching; in fact, I have never heard finer than was done by such men as Dr. Jones, of the Presbyterian Church; Dr. Fitzgerald, of the U. S. A. Church; Dr. Potts and Brother Wesson, of the Baptist Church, and Brothers Clifford and Cain of our own Church. With all these men the people were charmed and much good was done, yet they were not able to reach the unsaved and break down the barriers that seemed to be in the way of having a sweeping revival. In the meeting just held, Brother Bell, of Black Hawk, did the preaching and Brother Duke, of Strongs Station, did the singing and conducted the services for the children. The Lord was with Brother Bell in great power in preaching and with Brother Duke in song, and the oldest members of the churches in the town say they have never seen a greater revival. Prof. Rundle, our godly layman and principal of Louisville Training School, said of the meeting, "It reminds me of an epidemic in which everybody has caught the disease." And so it looked.

There were 19 who joined our church on profession of faith, beside 4 who went to the Baptist and 1 to the Presbyterian U. S. A. Church. It is impossible to estimate the number in the churches who claimed conversion and reclamation, or the good done the town at large.

I would most heartily commend these faithful men to any who desire the very best help in preaching, song and service. Brother Bell assisted me also in my meeting at one of my country churches, and the general expression was, "we have never had such a meeting here." There were 23 accessions on profession of faith in this meeting.

From indications and expressions from all parts of the work the charge was never in more prosperous or harmonious condition. The second year of my work here is closing more satisfactorily than at any time in my experience. There have been no great upheavals, but a steady and constant progress all the while, with general good-will and harmony at all times.

The preacher who comes to this eld another year may count himself ortunate indeed. There is no more loyal people, and the most perfect fraternity exists among all the churches that I have ever seen anywhere.

A GIFT WITH A THOUGHT IN IT.

What other Christmas present costs so little and means so much as a subscription to The Youth's Companion—52 weeks for $1.75? It is a gift which benefits not only the one who receives it, but every member of the same household.

If you do not know The Companion, if you are at all uncertain, just send us a postal card asking for sample copies.

Not only is The Companion the best gift you can choose for the money, but the easiest to choose. Keep the loving Christmas thought bright and unwearied by making your gift The Youth's Companion.

The one to whom you give the subscription will receive free The Companion's Calendar for 1912, lithographed in ten colors and gold, and you, too, as giver of the subscription, will receive a copy of the Caleudar.

The subscription price is now only $1.75, but on January 1, 1912, it will be advanced to $2.00.

"KEEP" TEXTS.

These "keep" texts are all in the Bible. Find them and learn them, and so make them yours.

"Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life."

"Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile."

"Keep thee far from a false matter."

"He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his life."

"Take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently."

"Little children, keep yourselves from idols."

"My son, keep thy Father's commandments."

"My son, keep sound wisdom and discretion."—Epworth Herald.

HERBS AND FLOWERS CURE CATARRH

A Safe, Simple, Reliable Remedy Which Costs Nothing to Try

You need not suffer from catarrh, bronchitis, lingering colds or other catarrhal troubles. After years of research and experiment Dr. Blosser discovered a compound of herbs, leaves and flowers which by a unique method is applied to every nook and corner of the mucous membrane in the head, nose, throat and lungs.

Any sufferer, after giving it a trial, can readily see why it is so greatly superior to such ordinary treatments as sprays, ointments, salves, liquid or tablet medicines, because all these do not and cannot reach all the affected parts, while Dr. Blosser's method reaches every spot; and this explains, at least in part, the wonderful success with which it is meeting. The full size package costs but one dollar. It is harmless, pleasant to use, and is easily applied even by a child.

No matter how deep-seated, your catarrh may be; no matter how long it has troubled you; no matter if other remedies have failed; you should give this treatment a trial, and it will do for you what it has done for thousands of other sufferers. Write at once to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., in order to avail yourself of his offer of a free trial package of the remedy and an illustrated booklet which gives all the facts about catarrh. It is not necessary to send any money—simply send your name and address.

RHEUMATISM

A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the Spring of 1903 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as those who have it know, for over three years, and tried almost everything. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial, I will send it free. Address,

It's wise to decide that you need an engine. But don't spoil your good intentions by buying a cheap one. Don't be blinded by a low price or by wild claims. Go slow and be sure. Buy an engine that has proved its worth, from a concern that has proved its integrity. You can't afford to make a mistake—it's much costlier than the price of an engine.

I H C Gasoline Engines

are in use on thousands of farms throughout the country, running the many farm machines, such as the cream separator, churn, feed grinder, pump, fanning mill, thresher, washing machine, electric light plant, etc. They guarantee you reliable power for every requirement at a surprisingly small cost.

I H C gasoline engines are marvels of simplicity, strength, economy, reliability, and durability. They run steadily and smoothiy, year in and year out. They make and save money every time they are used, and if, by accident, you should need repairs, you can get them promptiy with little trouble or delay from the I H C dealer in your locality.

Don't you think it would pay you to investigate an I H C engine before you buy any? They are made in so many sizes and styles that you can select just the right size and style for your work: Vertical type—2, 3, 25, and 35-H. P.; horizontal—1 to 50-H. P.; semi-portable—1 to 8-H. P.; portable—1 to 25-H. P.; traction—12 to 45-H. P.; sawing, pumping, spraying, grinding outfits, etc. Built to operate on gas, gasoline, kerosene, distillate, or alcohol—air-cooled or water-cooled. Ask the I H C local dealer for catalogue and all information, or, if you prefer, write direct.

HE DOCTORS "EASY ACRES."

"Easy Acres" is an expression frequently used by physicians, and means the remedy in which they place the main dependence in treating a disease. Dr. Jas. E. Pierce, of Germantown, Mass., writes: "Please send me a new supply of Gray's Ointment. It is my sheet anchor in cases of carbuncle, malignant pustule, and blood poison. I do not see this advertisement in any way, but use it for the good it immediately gives the patient in my practice."

Gray's Ointment is the sheet anchor of thousands of the best physicians in the treatment of boils, carbuncles, old sores, festering wounds, piles and itch. A free sample by mail if you write W. F. Gray & Co., 997 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

THE ONE WHO FOLLOWS.

One day an old veteran member brought his skeleton frames and coloring tools into the alley at the back of my office. As he sat on a box in the sun mending the broken and worn umbrellas I noticed that he seemed to take unusual pains testing the cloth, carefully measuring and accurately sewing the covers. Being always interested in any one who does a piece of work well, I went out to talk with him a few minutes.

"You seem extra careful," I remarked.

"Yes," he said, working without raising up, "I try to do good work."

"Your customers would not know the difference until you were gone," I suggested.

"No; I suppose not."

"Do you ever expect to come back?"

"No."

"Then why do you do it?"

"Well, I will be candid with you," came slowly from between his toothless gums. "I am an old man, and my work can't last much longer, but I will live a few years, and I like to feel that when I am gone I will leave behind me the best work I can do."

"Is that all?" I asked.

"No, not all," he answered, as if I were rather a dense dog. "I want my children and grandchildren to remember me as a man who did his best."

Then he went on to explain that his son, a boy of fifteen, was with him, and would some day take his place. He was training him to do his work as well as he could do it himself, and he wanted to leave behind him a boy who would be proud of his father's memory.

"I am not a rich man," he said, "but I have enough to live on, and I am not working for money. I am working for my boy."

Immediate Effect of Great Kidney Remedy Is Soon Realized.

In March 1907, I was troubled with severe pains in my back and left side, but took little notice of it, supposing it was from cold and exposure. I got so bad that I was obliged to keep the bed, it seemed as if I was suffering almost a dying death with pain, burning and burning pains after each meal, and I would have from five to six pain spells during the night. I had almost given up to die when I happened to think of trying Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. My husband bought me a bottle and I began to improve from the first dose. When I had taken two bottles I was completely cured.

Yours very truly,
(Mrs.) E. E. Hall,
Lincolnton, N. C.

State of North Carolina,
Gaston County.

Mrs. E. E. Hall, who being duly sworn, deposes and says that the above statement, signed by her, is true according to her best knowledge and belief, so help me God.

HARVEST HYMN.

By John Hampden Gurney.

Lord of the harvest! thee we hail;
Thine ancient promise doth not fail;
The varying seasons haste their round,
With goodness all our years are crowned;
Our thanks we pay
This holy day;
Oh, let our hearts in tune be found!

If spring doth wake the song of mirth;
If summer warms the fruitful earth;
When winter sweeps the naked plain,
Or autumn yields its ripened grain;
Still do we sing
To thee, our King;
Through all their changes thou dost reign.

But chiefly when thy liberal hand,
Scatters new plenty o'er the land,
When sounds of music fill the air,
As homeward all their treasures bear;
We too will raise
Our hymns of praise,
For we thy common bounties share.

Lord of the harvest, all is thine!
The rains that fall, the suns that shine,
The seed once hidden in the ground,
The skill that makes our fruits abound;
Now, every year,
Thy gifts appear;
New praises from our lips shall sound!

THE PRESIDENT'S THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

President Taft has issued the annual summons to Thanksgiving, appointing Thursday, November 30, as the day for giving thanks to God for the abundant blessings of the year. It is as follows:

"The people of this land, having by long sanction and practice set apart toward the close of each passing year a day on which to cease from their labors and assemble for the purpose of giving praise to him who is the Author of the blessings they have enjoyed, it is my duty as Chief Executive to designate at this time the day for the fulfillment of this devout purpose.

"Our country has been signally favored in many ways. The round of the seasons has brought rich harvests. Our industries have thrived far beyond our domestic needs; the productions of our labor are daily finding enlarged markets abroad. We have been free from the curses of pestilence, of famine, and of war. Our national councils have furthered the cause of peace in other lands, and the spirit of benevolence has brought us into closer touch with other peoples, to the strengthening of the bonds of fellowship and good-will that link us to our comrades in the universal brotherhood of nations.

"Strong in the sense of our own right and inspired by as strong a sense of the rights of others, we live in peace and harmony with the world. Rich in the priceless possessions and abundant resources wherewith the unstinted bounty of God has endowed us, we are unselfishly glad when other peoples pass onward to prosperity and peace. That the great privileges we enjoy may continue, and that each coming year may see our country more and more firmly established in the regard and esteem of our fellow-nations, is the prayer that should arise in every thankful heart.

"Wherefore I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, designate Thursday, the 30th of November next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and I earnestly call upon my countrymen and upon all that dwell under the flag of our beloved country then to meet in their accustomed places of worship to join in praise for the loving mercies He has given us."

LET US GIVE THANKS.

The year is far spent, and Thanksgiving Day is again near at hand. The Chief Executive of the Nation and the Governors of the States, by formal proclamations, are calling upon our people to repair to their houses of worship and render thanks to God for his abounding goodness and blessings. This is entirely meet and proper; for it is Christianity which has made our Republic strong and rich and great, and Christianity alone can preserve it from the disintegrating forces which wrecked the governments of the past. In virtue there is health and strength; wealth accumulates only in lands where morality prevails. Nothing is more characteristic of the heathen nations than their outstanding poverty. Vice tears down—it does not build up; it destroys alike the individual and society. The churches of the nation are its strongest prop and support. Upon them, more than upon the army and the navy or wordy patriots in legislative assemblies, the future of our country depends. Worthy of perpetual remembrance are the words of De Tocqueville: "I sought in vain the secret of America's greatness until I went into her Sunday schools and churches. Then understood I why France is a slave and America is free." In reminding us of the source of our innumerable blessings and our obligation to make grateful acknowledgment to Him from whose generous hand they come, our rulers have performed a needed and most important service. A people who forget God cannot hope to prosper long or to go forward to larger things.

A little reflection shows that there is much for which we should be devoutfully thankful. Our harvests, though not equal to some that we have had, are yet ample to supply our necessities. We have bread enough and to spare; we have a sufficiency of material for raiment, and a surplus to send across the seas. There is no likelihood of lean-visaged famine, the curse of the Orient, invading our domain. Whatever want exists among us is due either to misfortune or the inequitable distribution of wealth. Our fertile fields and wide-roving flocks and busy factories have produced enough for all. And also it has been a year of peace, free from serious internal strife and embarrassing foreign complications. The scourge of disease and ruinous disasters have been little known among us. A favoring Providence has smiled upon us and kept us.

But most of all, let us thank God for his spiritual blessings and the triumphs of the Cross. The sweet consciousness of his forgiving love is priceless. There is no diviner gift than his ennobling fellowship. Those who have been honored with this may well sound forth the jubilant notes of praise. In many places our churches have had gracious seasons of refreshing. Thousands have been born into the kingdom beneath our own starry flag, and in all pagan lands the gospel continues to speed forward on its widening way. The name of Christ is more reverenced and honored on the planet in the closing months of this year than at any previous time in history since man left the gates of Paradise. And even if we have had affliction and suffering, there yet remains reason to offer up the sweet incense of praise. Has not God's grace been present to sustain us and sanctify our troubles to our good? The Christian has no incurable sorrow; if earth does not bring relief, heaven will. What shall we render unto the Lord for his rich and unfailing benefits? Shall we not, like the Psalmist, "take the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord."

THE HOLY SPIRIT NEEDED.

Many a passage of Holy Scripture is dark and mysterious to men because they do not seek the aid of the ever-blessed Spirit of God in their endeavor to fathom its meaning. The pre-announced purpose of the Spirit's coming into the world, as stated by our Lord in that memorable discourse with his disciples, was to guide men into all truth and to quicken their spiritual preceptions as to things divine. Where there is lack of spiritual illumination and power in this day of the Spirit's dispensation, the failure can be traced not to the unreadiness or to the impotency of the Spirit to impart wisdom and strength to the seeking individual, but to the unwillingness of the individual to accept the Spirit's leadership. In the performance of the peculiar functions of his office work, the Holy Spirit of God does everything but invade the realm of human free agency in his endeavor to illuminate and guide aright the blood-bought sons of Adam's apostate race. Therefore, if they walk in darkness, it is because they choose darkness rather than light, and ignorance rather than knowledge.

WORTH THINKING ABOUT.

The truest test of civilization is not the census, nor the size of cities, nor the crops; no, but the kind of men the country turns out.—Emerson.

No man has come to true greatness who has not felt in some degree that his life belongs to his race, and that what God gives him, he gives him for mankind.—Phillips Brooks.

To serve with lofty gifts the lowly needs
Of the poor race for which the God-man died,
And do it all for love—Oh, this is great.
—J. G. Holland.

A great saint was once asked, "How can I live the highest life?" and he answered, "My child, go and live the lower life, and God will teach you the higher."

THE DOWNTOWN CHURCH.

By Rev. S. H. Werlein, D.D.

The downtown church affords the opportunity to carry out more literally the instructions which our Lord gave to the disciples. It is located contiguous to the working classes and to those who are poor and in need of help. While it reaches transient visitors, traveling men, dwellers in hotels, and permanent residents, it should employ assiduous efforts to reach the poor of the laboring class. The poor must have the gospel preached to them, or the Church is recreant to the spirit and example of the Lord. The deaconess becomes invaluable in bringing them in touch with the Church and encouraging faithful attendance upon the regular services.

What were the instructions which Christ gave the disciples? He bade them "preach, saying, the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils." They were to preach the gospel and to heal diseases. In other words, the body, the mind, the social nature were to be ministered to as well as the soul. Our Lord attracted the thousands. He not only preached the good news, but he ministered to the bodies of the people. Leave out the social features of his ministry and the therapeutic energy which our Lord exerted, and how much would he have lost in attractiveness? The attention the missionary gives to the sick in heathen lands and the use of the opportunities to instruct the native women in the arts of daily life are powerful auxiliaries in pushing forward the kingdom of God. The absence of these features in our home work has been largely the secret of our weakness. It is patent that the class who are most in need of the help here advocated are not friendly to the Church. They do not believe in the Church that leaves it all to preaching. To some extent they know of the wealth and influence of the Church, and these are withheld from them. John Wesley, by not ignoring these people, saved England. The breach now existing between labor and capital can be to some extent healed by a wise and philanthropic distribution of these advantages among those who are most in need of them. As a general rule, the Church feels that its duty has been done if the gospel is preached and the regular services are systematically maintained. As a consequence, the average church exerts a limited influence in the community. It does not reach the whole city. It is not the power for good that it should be. It is not recognized as a real necessity.

John Wesley, wise and far-seeing man that he was, not only endeavored to minister to the souls of the people, but also to their minds and bodies. In an age when printing was expensive he prepared for the people books on different departments of knowledge. He opened a number of dispensaries. He "provided a fund for relieving the necessities of the poor by furnishing them with food and clothing." But something more was requisite. Many of them were sick, and their sufferings stirred his sympathy. "At length," he says, "I thought of a kind of desperate expedient. I will prepare and give them physic myself." He took to his assistance an apothecary and an experienced surgeon. "In three weeks about three hundred came. Thousands delivered from sickness were full of gratitude." Tyerman says that "the Rev. Martin Madan, minister at the Lock hospital, and his curate, the Rev. Thomas Haweis, were both passionately fond of music and themselves composers. Once a year their chapel was turned into a concert room for the performance of oratorios; and, on two occasions at least, Wesley was a listener." He was a great lover of music, and by his presence indorsed the musical recitals which were given in a chapel. After hearing the oratorio "Ruth" performed, he observed: "The sense was admirable throughout, and much of the poetry not contemptible. This, joined with exquisite music, might possibly make an impression even among rich and honorable seniors." This man of God was elastic in his sympathies, and did not attach undue sanctity to places of worship. He realized that churches were made for man and not man for churches.

In the city there are hundreds or, as the case may be, thousands of promising young men and women who, while greatly desirous of preparing themselves for useful and successful careers, are unable to do so because of a lack of means. Deprived of the advantages of an education, they are forced to work at almost anything which offers in order to procure a livelihood. The downtown church could reach many of this class by affording them the special instruction of which they are consciously in need—industrial departments in which certain trades are taught, together with stenography, music, art, laundry, cooking, and other things as may be demanded. A free clinic, where poor patients could secure proper attention, would be helpful. I can imagine the eagerness and gratitude with which scores and hundreds would avail themselves of such opportunities. I can see how many could be reached by the gospel dispensed under the roof where such generous help is afforded.

Rev. James E. McCulloch, in his excellent book, "The Open Church for the Unchurched," says: "It is the mission of the Church to give life, and the test of her vitality is in her ability to give a 'more abundant life.' If the home is deficient, the Church must become as far as possible another home. Just where the home has broken down, just where parental obligation has failed, there the Church must step in as another home for both parent and child. The homes ought to have baths; if they have not, the open church provides bathing facilities. The homes ought to have good literature; if they have not, the open church provides a library and free reading room. Where the people are without pure and helpful amusements, the open church provides suitable means of recreation. The over-crowded tenements make healthful social life almost impossible; therefore the church opens a community parlor and arranges club rooms for boys and girls, women and men. The mothers are ignorant as to the art of good housekeeping, consequently the church has mothers' meetings, cooking and sewing classes. So other functions of the home should be performed by the open church whenever the need arises."

The downtown church aims at the saving of the whole man. Hugh Price Hughes, who accomplished a monumental work, in what may be called the downtown region of London, said: "We have dealt too exclusively with the individual aspect of the Christian faith. We have constantly acted as if Christianity had nothing to do with business, with pleasure, and with politics—as if it were simply a question of private life and of prayer meetings. It is because the Spirit of Christ has not been introduced into public life that Europe is in a perilous condition to-day. My wish is to apply Christianity to every aspect of life. Christianity is not something which has to do with a mere fragment of our existence. It has to do with us as men of business and as citizens quite as much as it has to do with our private life; and there are endless ways in which we can preach the gospel in addition to holding prayer meetings and delivering what may be called sermons." Acting on his conviction, he arranged for Saturday night concerts. He determined to provide amusements pure and elevating, and sought to attract people away from the sensuous and salacious recreations and amusements which they so liberally patronized. "The purpose of the entertainment is to provide a counter attraction to the doubtful places of amusement which are so prevalent in the neighborhood, and to supply innocent recreation for the thousands of young people for the West End business houses on their weekly half-holiday." To convert our downtown churches into institutions adapted to the spiritual, mental, bodily, social needs of the downtown people would be to invest them with a life and energy which they have never known. It would make them centers of spiritual and ethical power. Out of them would radiate influences which would reach the entire city. The plan has been successfully operated by some of the best known preachers of the United States. Dr. Greer, rector of St. Bartholomew Church, in New York City; Dr. Rainsford, of St. George Episcopol Church, and Dr. Scudder, of the Congregational Church in New Jersey, have demonstrated the practicability and usefulness of such efforts. Unfortunately, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has given the matter little or no attention, and by its determined adherence to the time limit made the venture an impossibility. There must be some special adaptation of men to such work, or it could not be successfully prosecuted. With a prospect of a removal of the time limit or such changes in the law as would except a certain class of preachers, the Board of Missions should give this subject careful attention. This plan of work should be commenced at once in some of our most populous cities, such as St. Louis, Louisville, Nasbville and New Orleans. The money needed for this purpose would be provided by the special efforts of the individual churches interested and the Board of Missions.

THE WORDS OF JESUS.

Some say that "the world needs no special revelation from God;" others that Christanity is "wholly of human origin."

They are "vain talkers;" they know not what they say.

If Christianity as a revelation be false, no other system of faith can demand a moment's attention; for if so the Creator has not communicated with his earthly children, and the most spiritual and elevating precepts are without divine sanction. The Sermon on the Mount is a dream; whatever the consciousness of sin and the anguish produced by it, there is no voice of pardon in nature; no regeneration, no inward purifying, reconstructing and unfailing helpful process; no place for prayer, for that implies faith in a being to whom we may pray and a belief that he will hear.

If Christianity be false, there is no unfailing comfort in trouble; no help; no hope; no hand of divine sympathy; no example of suffering for us; no divine declaration of the beneficient effects of affliction; no divinely imparted strength in temptation; no certainty of future life.

This struggling world will never let such words as these slip out of remembrance: The parables of the Prodigal Son and the Good Samaritan; the Sermon on the Mount; the story of the penitent thief and the dying words of Jesus: "Forgive them, for they know not what they do."

The world will never allow the invitation of Christ to be forgotten: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

It is he who brought life and immortality to light: "In my father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." "I am the resurrection and the life." "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

Oh, trembling Christian! Never will Christianity die out of the world; but sad is the life which ignores or spurns it and lives and dies without its comforts and its hopes.—New York Christian Advocate.

UNITY OF FAITH AND KNOWLEDGE.

By Rev. John Tillery Lewis.

The education of the mind, plus the education of the soul, is God's desire concerning all men. The training of the mind without the development of the soul, or the training of the soul without the development of the mind, is but half ideal. Man is a being of three distinct natures—body, mind and spirit. Yet the interests of the three are so closely interwoven that neither can attain to its highest efficiency when either of the other faculties of being is left undeveloped. Especially is this true of mind and spirit.

The training of the soul in the doctrines of Christianity gives to man the highest ideals and principles within the scope of man's imagination. No other religion can be even remotely compared to the Christian religion in the loftiness of its ideals and principles. No other religion teaches the "fatherhood of God" and the "brotherhood of man." Christianity alone, Hebrewism possibly excepted, teaches man to say, "Thou, O Lord, art our Father," and records God as saying to man, "I have loved thee with an everlasting love." Loyalty to God, and loyality to the duties that we each owe to our fellowman, can be inspired in man, by Jesus Christ only. No other personality has ever lived that even claimed to have such power over the heart of man that he could cause him to project his life upon a basis free from selfishness and full of sacrificing love for one's fellow-men. That Christianity has done that very thing in thousands of lives, no one can deny. Redemption from the power and thraldom of sin can be had from no source save Jesus. Christianity is the world's only hope for salvation from sin.

The training of the mind gives power to man. Without mental training, man is a very helpless creature, even though he have a pure heart. Purity of heart can no more make up for deficiency in intellectual training than can high intellectual culture make up for deficiency in heart purity. Materially speaking, no progress has ever been made save by the education of the mind, just as, morally speaking, no progress has ever been made save by the education of the soul. As one has wisely said: "The education of the mind creates new hope, new power, new inspiration toward things yet unattained. It broadens the vision of man, unlocks for him the secret vaults where the wealth of ages past lies buried, and with prophetic finger points to visions of things to be." Education of the mind is the world's only hope for salvation from ignorance.

It is the unity of mind and spirit, in their combined struggle for the God ideal of life, that has brought to earth her present greatest blessings. It is only by the development of mind and spirit that we can find the solution of those problems that stand in the way of our realization of those ideal social conditions that all of us feel should obtain among men. "What God hath joined together, let not man put asunder."

When Moses was forty years old, believing that God had called him to deliver Israel from bondage, he slew an Egyptian who was abusing one of his brethren. Moses thought his kinsmen would know that God had sent him to deliver Israel; but the developments of the day following proved that the Israelites did not so know him. Man-like, Moses thought that the schooling he had received at Pharaoh's court, and from the wise men of Egypt, was all he needed to lead Israel out of bondage into liberty. God did not so think, however. The fact is, though Moses had been taught in all the learning of the Egyptians, he was altogether unfit for a leader of men—that is, God so considered him. Before God counted Moses prepared for the great task of delivering Israel from bondage, he gave him forty years of schooling at "the back side of the desert." He gave Moses forty years of heart training. Nor did his close communion with God cease with his leaving "the side of the desert," either. But all during the following days of his activity, Moses had frequently close communion with God. It was thus with Paul also. Though he was brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, God had to lead him into a place of seclusion, into Arabia, that there he might be taught in God's school before God could make out of him "the great apostle to the Gentiles." Neither Paul nor Moses were lacking in intellectual training, for they each had about all of that that the world could give them; but each of them was deficient in heart culture. God could not use them till there was "unity of mind and spirit."

In the light of the foregoing facts our State schools are making a grave mistake by directing their efforts almost wholly to the education of the mind. That is, our State schools are making a grave mistake, if there be any desire to make of the rising generation characters that will measure up to God's ideal for man. Of course, if the purpose of the education that the State is giving be to so train the mind of the rising generation that they will be able to fight for gold skillfully and tread upon their less fortunate brethren, then it will be well to continue the prohibition of the Bible from our public schools. In other words, if we wish to project our posterity into a civilization controlled by "Wall Street" ideals and principles, then let us continue the present policy of crowding out moral and religious teaching from the public schools. But if there be a desire to perpetuate those high principles of conduct which found expression in the lives of those grand old men of the old South, such as honesty, hospitality, etc., then we will be compelled to revert to the teaching of Biblical principles. If the State refuse to alter her present policy (and the likelihood is she will refuse), then the maintenance of church schools becomes an absolute necessity, unless we surrender the fight for God and the right. The Church must both preach and teach. She must both save man from sin and from ignorance by the unity of faith and knowledge.

Sin and ignorance are world wide. Wherever man is found, there, too, are sin and ignorance. Jesus said: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." We thus not only have the knowledge that nothing except Christianity and education can save the world from sin and ignorance; but in addition, we have the command of our Lord to carry to all men light for their souls and minds. The light that Romanism, Mormonism and Mohammedanism gives to the world is an eclipsed light. The brilliant light of God's eternal love is hid from men by eclesiasticism, ritualism and the sin of those who are in power. Protestant Christianity alone is God's reliance for lifting man out of sin and ignorance. God's great heart of love is yearning to pour out a blessing on the world that it cannot contain, but he is delayed in thus blessing the world because there are so few who live the "surrendered life"—so few who are letting their light "so shine that others, seeing their good works, may glorify God." Since, then, God is looking to us for the distribution of the "light of love," shall we not do our best to plant the gospel banner of "faith and knowledge" in the heart of every living man? What work of man can be more glorious, what work more fruitful of enduring results? God is leading in this great work, and is beckoning us to follow. Let us not permit him to beckon in vain!

DIVINE INSPECTION.

By Rev. Robt. B. Downer.

The philosophies and religion of man's creation represent man's estate as being too insignificant to give special concern to the Infinite Creator. Even the Psalmist has said: "What is man that Thou art mindful of him, or the son of man that Thou visitist him." Yet Second Chronicles, chapter 16, verse 19, tells us that "the eyes of the Lord run too and fro throughout the whole earth, to show himself strong in behalf of them whose heart is perfect before him." We are thus instructed at a very early period of time that Abraham's children did not wholly monopolize the love and providential care of the Heavenly Father. It is very encouraging to know that individual loyalty from any quarter of the world will be recognized and rewarded. Abel's faith, Enoch's walk, Abraham's sacrifice, Noah's obedience, the love of Moses' parents, the consecration of Moses, the loyalty of Caleb and Joshua, the devotion of Hannah, the intrepid conduct of David, the constancy of Daniel and his three comrades, are striking illustrations of God's honoring them that honor him.

Covered sin is a corroding cancer in the individual life, destroying it and the beauty and life of God's Zion. The pure heart of Christ, while engaged in rescue work, was fully alive to the degradation brought upon the soul and body of the fallen woman of the well in Samaria, yet he felt willing to endure contact with her, knowing that when her enslaved state was clearly revealed, she would not attempt justification and concealment of her sinful life. Contrast with this his holy indignation and incisive utterances when in the Holy Temple of God—his eyes penetrated the outer covering of holy garments, beholding the corruption of indwelling sin of the Scribes and Pharisees: "Woe unto you Scribes, Pharisees, hypocrites, how can ye escape the damnation of hell," indicating his abhorence and rejection of any holy service emanating from hearts not right with God.

Ample provision has been made for complete perfect, cleansing from all sin in Christ's atoning blood, as seen in the following Scriptures: "Saved unto the uttermost;" "Be made partakers of the divine nature;" "Be filled with all the fulness of God;" "Abide in me"—all referring to the possibilities of God's grace incident to a life in this world. The standard is high, but being God-given, it is the only correct one, and every soul will be justified or condemned by it.

It is well to remember that God's eye is inspecting the work of each individual worker, and holds each worker responsible for all the possibilities of his day and generation. Of course, every soul professing a special call to the work of the ministry has made an absolute surrender of all that appertains to soul, body, mind and spirit, and is wholly the Lord's—a man of one work, that of presenting every soul of his charge perfect in Christ Jesus. He could not afford to present the standard of a holy life in God's sight to his people and himself be a delinquent; but should any be accounted delinquent by God's Holy Spirit—better for that man that a mill-stone be hung to his neck, and he be drowned in the depths of the sea. Have ye not read that "Many (not a few) shall say in that day, Lord, Lord," etc.? Ministers of the gospel must be holy, wise and strong, and always able to safely say, "Follow us as we follow Christ." No minister is wise that fails to teach Christ and him crucified as being the only correct standard, and that salvation is not of the Church as a whole, but of the Church in its individual life. We hear a great deal about "Our minister," "our church," but not so much about "My Christ and personal Redeemer." Our present need is individual consecration of self, the perfect heart before—not the minister or church society—but before God.

The eyes of the Lord are going to and fro through families, church conferences, Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, Annual and General Conferences, political conventions, halls of congress, courts of justice, highways, hedges, palaces of the rich and hovels of the poor, seeking for hearts that are perfect in his sight. In his seeking I very much fear that he has discovered vast quantities of covered sin, and could we have access to the record made, we would learn that covered sin is destroying the beauty and life of God's Zion. Have you never heard the confession, "I know that I am not living before God as holy a life as it is my privilege and duty to live"—forgetting meanwhile that, "he that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin," and "that the wages of sin is death?"

It is great comfort to know that "a book of remembrance is kept of them who fear the Lord and that think upon his name;" it becomes a strong incentive to "dare to be a Daniel, to stand alone," when ecclesiastical clouds lower, and priests offer the halt and blind in sacrifice, for a Luther, a Wesley, to stand in resistance to the great majority, and unfurl the banner of justification by faith and entire sanctification of soul, body and spirit for time and eternity. It is delightful to have congenial companions in any enterprise, but in loyalty of heart to God each soul must stand alone, even if it requires the forsaking of parents, kinsfolk, friends, houses, land—everything.

A handsome monument has been erected to the memory of Dr. John E. Edwards (who died in 1907) in the cemetery at Reidsville, N. C. It contains the following inscription, besides the date of his birth and death: "He gave his sympathy to the suffering, his substance to the poor, and his heart to God."

The St. Louis Christian Advocate of November 8 contains an excellent picture of Prof. E. E. Rankin, M.A., of Emporia, Kans. Prof. Rankin has for several years been a frequent contributor to that journal, and it is stated that he will probably publish this series of articles in book form in the near future.

The last number of the North Carolina Christian Advocate was an Epworth League edition. It contained a number of pictures, and was in every respect a most attractive issue. The address to the Leaguers from Bishop McCoy, president of the Board, was a stirring call to the young Methodists of the Old North State. The Leaguers of the Western North Carolina Conference are said to number 2,000.

This commission will continue for ten years, and will arrange the program of the next Ecumenical Conference, besides performing other service in the interest of world wide Methodism.

Bishop W. F. McDowell will lead the preachers of Chicago and vicinity in a special service at Centenary Church in that city on December 4, with a view to seeking spiritual power for the work of the winter. Such power alone can make a minister's work effective and fruitful. If the public meeting is of a kind to produce private meditation, heart-searching, and prayer, undoubtedly it will result in the accomplishment of much good.

Rev. W. B. Morgan, of Shaw, Miss., has been called to the pastorate of the Baptist Church at Brookhaven, Miss. He is a graduate of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, and is a tactful and successful worker. Should he enter this new field which has opened to him, it will appreciably weaken the working force of his Church in the Mississippi Delta, where he has been rendering effective service for the past three or four years.

Rev. Thomas Spurgeon, who in his boyhood was a draughtsman and etcher, has, since ill health compelled his retirement from the Metropolitan Tabernacle, returned to his early love and blossomed forth as an artist. A collection of a hundred water color drawings, painted by Mr. Spurgeon within the last two years, is now on exhibition. They are mainly landscapes of Swiss and Devonshire scenes and seascapes on the Devon coast, with a few vagrant drawings in Suffolk and Surrey.—Richmond Virginian.

The Methodist Episcopal Church is maintaining twenty-two institutions for the education of the colored people of the United States. The cost of their maintenance last year was $261,858. Of this amount the negroes contributed $131,850, besides raising $11,951 for the special trust and endowment funds. To these schools the Freedmen's Aid Bureau at its recent session at Pueblo, Col., appropriated for the work in 1912-13 $96,800. These institutions own property valued at $1,409,965, and have in them 6,620 students.

Billy Sunday closed a great meeting at Springfield, Ohio, a few days since in which there were reported to be 1,000 conversions. The tabernacle in which he was said to have cost $5,000, and it is stated that it was packed every night with an audience of seven people. Mr. Sunday's electrical style of preaching are thus described by Rev. Luther B. Rogers in a recent number of the Central Methodist Advocate: "Mr. Sunday will not go up a city unless he is invited by all the Protestant Churches. The invitation accepted, a stock company is formed, shares sold at $10. Enough are sold to stand for the expense of erecting tabernacle, renting furnished house for Mr. Sunday and his six helpers, advertising, etc. About three months ahead he sends a man to hold union services and prayer meetings, and arouse interest in the coming campaign. Later the tabernacle man comes, erects the tabernacle and creates further interest and organizes help for the care of the tabernacle and handling the crowds. With everything ready, the meetings begin and run six weeks. Mr. Sunday takes his text with entire calm and for forty-five minutes or an hour, paces the platform, beats and stands on the pulpit, throws chairs against the floor, shakes his fist and cries out a scathing challenge to sin, condemning it in all forms; consigns it and its advocates to hell, holds up the mercy of Christ, lays the responsibility of his death on the awakened consciences of his audience, then squares himself like a trained gladiator and says, 'It's up to you.'"

"WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT IT?"

By Rev. Jno. W. Ramsey.

In the editorial comment upon my article under the above caption, the editor of the Advocate so far misinterprets the spirit of that article that I ask space in the Advocate for the following statements.

The editor's statement, "Nor do we think that, because discipline is not strictly enforced when our rules against such amusements are violated, it would be wise to modify or strike out these rules," possibly leaves the impression upon the mind of the reader that I advocated the removal of the rule against worldly amusements from the Book of Discipline. On the contrary, I am so far from advocating such a step that I would take the admonitions of our Bishops against particular forms of amusements in their addresses to the General Conference and place them as specifications under our general rule, which forbids the "taking such diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus." My contention in my article was not for the elimination of this rule, but for its enforcement; and that, too, not necessarily for the expulsion of the godless member, but primarily for his reclamation and salvation. All know that it is not enforced, but perhaps all do not know that because it is not faithfully enforced, some, if not many, are lost. With all my heart, I sanction your affirmation: "Their elimination would be regarded as a retreat upon the part of the Church."

Admitting that some patronize the various forms of worldly amusements, the editor says that they are in the "hopeless minority." I wonder if the editor ever stood on the street on circus day and watched his members, including his board of stewards, going to see the elephant. In the "hopeless minority"—perhaps, but not so much so but that they bring reproach upon the Church.

The editor says again that I take "too gloomy a view of the matter," thereby leaving the impression that I am pessimistic. Is the machinist who for a moment, passes by the perfections of a wonderful piece of machinery to point out a few defects, a pessimist? Is the young lady who turns from the contemplation of her beautiful face in a mirror to gaze for a moment upon a deformed head, a pessimist? I deny being a pessimist, or taking a "gloomy view" of things. I am an optimist of the best sort, for I have faith in God, believe in the ultimate victory of good over evil, the final triumph of right against wrong, and the glorious merging of the Church militant into the Church triumphant, for "Christ loved the Church, and gave Himself for it, that He might present it to Himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing; But that it should be holy and without blemish."

It is scarcely necessary to say that we did not intend to misrepresent Brother Ramsey's position. We put a question to us which we thought he expected us to answer, and that we tried conscientiously to do. There is really nothing at issue between us.—The Editor.)

MATTERS AT OXFORD, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: Our beloved pastor, Rev. J. C. Paris, is now in Memphis, where he has gone for an operation, and the people here are very anxious for him. His health has not been good for several months; he has undergone several operations prior to this. We ask the prayers of our Conference to pray that he may be speedily restored to health and his loved employ. We are missing him sorely and realize what a great loss we and the whole Conference would sustain, should he not soon recover. Rev. J. B. Cumiss, of Grenada, filled brother Paris's place here yesterday morning and evening, and gave us two great sermons. Bishop Wilson was dated to be with us on the 14th inst. and came as far as Memphis, but was taken suddenly ill and was turned back to Atlanta. Our people were greatly disappointed, as doubtless they will never have another opportunity to hear him. We trust he will recover sufficiently to hold our approaching Annual Conference. With many good wishes for you and the Advocate force, I am, Sincerely yours,

MRS. FOUNT CALLOWAY.

Premier Yuan Shi Kai, of the Chinese government, began his work in a manner that caused many surprises. He included in his cabinet men from every political faith. His movements are watched with great interest.

Dr. Behsario Porras, former minister to the United States from Panama, when asked if he would run for the presidency of Panama is reportedis having said: "I don't know yet. It depends upon conditions; but if I get the presidency it will be because of the enemies I have made. If I go into the fight it will not be for myself alone, but for Panama." This statement bears the ring of true patriotism.

The secular press states that more than two-thirds of the city of Hankow, China, was destroyed by fire since the revolutionary outbreak, the loss of property being estimated at not less than $50,000,000, and leaving at least 400,000 people destitute. Just who is responsible for the fire it is yet impossible to tell, as the rebels charge it to the imperialists and the imperialists declare that the rebels are responsible for it. Hundreds of bodies lie among the ruins, many of them being women and children. We hope the end of this war is near at hand, and tbat China soon may see a better day.

In a recent article published in the Outlook, the following causes are given as the reason for the Chinese rebellion: Race hatred, the high cost of living, taxation, provincial jealousy of imperial control of railways and the desire for a constitutional and parliamentary government. The same article states that America has a twofold duty toward Cbina in the present crisis: First, to do immediately our part toward relieving the suffering, and, second, to continue with great determination our work of education among the Chinese. It is said that America has influenced China educationally more than all other nations combined, and that it is largely due to our initiative that 1,500,000 pupils have attended the modern schools of China during the past five years.

The thirteenth decennial census, whicb was taken on the 15th of last April, shows that the population of the continental United States (leaving out Alaska, Porto Rico, and other outlying possessions) was at that time 91,972,266, an increase since 1900 of 15,977,691—a gain of a little more than 21 per cent, against of a little more than 20 per cent for the preceding decade. The present population according to color is divided as follows: White, 81,732,687, or 88.9 per cent; negro, 9,828,294, or 10.7 per cent; all other persons (Indians, Chinese, Japanese, etc.) 411,285, or 0.4 per cent. The percentage of increase for the whites for each of the past three decades has thus varied: 1880-1890, 26.7; 1890-1900, 21.2; 1900-1910, 22.3; that of the negroes—1880-1890, 13.5; 1890-1900, 18; 1900-1910, 11.3. There are now only two States which have a black majority—Mississippi and South Carolina, and apparently in them it is being gradually wiped out.

REV. M. H. MOORE.

Rev. Marcus Houston Moore was born in Sumpter County, Ala., July 20, 1857. His parents, Andrew McNary and Martha Amanda Elliott Moore, were of Scotch-Irish blood. Their home was a Christian home; the evening and morning sacrifice was offered daily. To a child brought into such environment, the Christian life is his normal atmosphere; hence it is not surprising that he was converted in early life. The heart and life of the young man applied the language of St. Paul, "For he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Soon after his conversion, he was called to preach. He answered this call, and applied for license at about the age of eighteen. The quarterly conference at Chapman's Chapel, now Binnsville Church, in Kemper County, granted the license, Rev. Jno. A. Ellis, P. E., and Rev. A. B. Nicholson, P.C. He began to cultivate his evangelistic powers by assisting his pastor in revival meetings. One writing of this work said, "He and J. T. Nicholson, of Laurel, assisted Rev. A. B. Nicholson in several meetings in Kemper County, and God was graciously with these boy preachers in their first evangelistic work."

Brother Moore's advantages were those of the usual country boy during and following the Civil War. In the fall of 1874 he attended Cooper Institute at Daleville. In 1875 he went to Southern University, at Greensboro, Ala., and continued till he was graduated from that institution with the degree of A.B. While attending the university he served tbe Greensboro Circuit as supply. In September, 1881, he was married to Miss Katura Burton of Greensboro, and to this union were born six children. Four of them are living. After completing his education at Greensboro, he taught school one year at Newton, Miss. The Annual Conference which met in Natchez Dec. 12, 1883, received him on trial, and elected him to local deacon's orders, and he was ordained by Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh.

His first appointment was Mayersville, where he served acceptably for four years. In December, 1885, at Meridian, he was received into full connection. He was elected to elder's orders and ordained by Bishop J. C. Keener in Jackson, December, 1887. He was sent to North Wilkinson Circuit in 1888, to Amite in 1889, Columbia, 1890, and remained four years; Brookhaven in 1894, Terry, 1895-6; Centerville in 1897, and remained four years; Madison, 1901-2; Florence, 1903, and remained four years; Sharon, 1907-8; Poplarville, 1909-10, and was returned for 1911. His health had not been good for several years and in May he was advised by friends and physicians to go to a higher climate. He was loath to leave his work, and not until the middle of June did he consent to go. With his son, W. P. Moore, he went to Colorado Springs. Growing worse, he was placed in St. Francis Hospital, where all was done that could be to alleviate his suffering till he was called to his reward on the early morning of July 3, 1911.

His body was brought back to Poplarville, accompanied by his son and his brother-in-law, Mr. Morton, of Illinois, where, on Friday, July 7, his friends and relatives gathered in the beautiful church to pay tribute to his memory. The service was conducted by Rev. W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District. Rev. T. W. Adams, Rev. Mr. Wilson, pastor of the Baptist Church, and the writer, were present and took part in the service.

Brother Moore was a studious, thoughtful man. His sermons were the result of thought and prayer, and he was wise in his counsel as a pastor. His was "beaten oil." He thought for himself. He loved the Church, and this love for the Church made him intense in his work. No detail escaped his notice. There are none among us who have a better record. No obligation was ever laid upon him, that he did not try to discharge. The journals of the Conference will show that he not only looked after the material interest of the Church, but the spiritual interest was always paramount.

There was one thing he excelled in: the appreciation of his stewardship. He believed that he owed the Lord, and was, for his means, an unusually liberal man. The first time I remember to have heard his name was in connection with a subscription to Church Extension. He was one of four men who gave as much as $100 to the building of the Orphanage at Water Valley, and as long as he lived he was an interested and intelligent contributor. In the last conversation, save one, I had with him, he was discussing the needs of the Church, in her missionary, educational and benevolent enterprises.

Brother Moore's life was one of frugality and industry in all affairs. He and his wife were true to their trust in training their children. W. Powers, their eldest son, stands in the front rank among the young men of our State, morally and intellectually. In his record at Millsaps College and Vanderbilt University, he reflected the teaching of the parsonage home. Miss Julia, their eldest daughter, graduated from Whitworth College only a few weeks before her father's death, having maintained a splendid record as a student and a young lady of noble spirit. Mary and Mc, the two youngest children, have not finished school, but their lives speak for their moral training.

In the going from us of Brother Moore, the Mississippi Conference has lost a diligent, faithful, painstaking pastor, one who never shirked a duty nor avoided a responsibility. That he was free from mistakes, we do not claim; but we do claim for him an integrity of purpose that made it easy when he had done wrong to confess to God and acknowledge to man. His spirit toward his brethren was one of charity in the broadest, deepest sense. As pastor, his first thought was the welfare of the Church. A pastoral visit to him meant a talk on some religious subject of interest to the parties visited, a passage read from the Bible, and an earnest prayer to God for his blessing on the people whom he fondly called "my people."

He was, socially, a pleasant man, but the social circle was not the place of his strength. He was a good preacher, but the pulpit was not the place of his greatest power. His power lay in his life before his people—in his earnest, direct admonition, and godly counsel. He died as he lived. We are the beneficiaries of his life, and with the widow and children, we mourn the departure of a husband, father, brother, friend. The parting cannot be long; let us be faithful.

DUTY FIRST.

When I was a little girl, my grandmother taught me to knit. Every afternoon I was expected to sit in my little chair beside her and do six "purls."

One day, two of my little girl friends were waiting outside for me to play with them, and in my haste I dropped a stitch, and twisted two or three more, so that my work was badly uneven.

When my grandmother looked at it, she said:

"I am very sorry, Mary, but this will not do at all. You will have to ravel it out as far as the dropped stitch and do it over again."

"But not now, grandmamma!" I begged. "Ruth and Janet are waiting, and I want to go so very much. Let me finish my stint when I come in again."

"No, Mary," said grandmother, gently, but firmly. "I cannot let you go until this is done properly."

Although I loved my grandmother dearly, I felt that this was very unkind of her. I said no more, but there was anger in my heart. I knitted as fast as I could, and, when the last stitch was taken, ran away without stopping to kiss her.

I played with the children for a good while, but somehow I did not feel altogether happy, and I was really glad when they went home and left me free to go into the house again.

I looked for my grandmother, but she was not in her chair. My mother explained that she felt weary, and had gone to her own room to lie down.

"But can't I see her to-night?" I asked.

"Yes," answered my mother. "I am to take her supper to her by and by, and you may go with me."

When supper was ready, I begged to be allowed to carry in the tray myself with grandmother's tea and toast upon it. She was sitting up in bed, leaning against the pillows, and, when she saw me, a lovely smile lighted up her sweet old face.

"Here's my handy little maid!" she said.

I set the tray on the light stand beside the bed, where she could reach it easily. It seemed to me that she looked very pale.

"Oh, grandmamma," said I, "are you ill?"

"No, Mary dear, only a bit tired. The tea, no doubt, will do me good."

"Grandmamma," said I, going closer to her and laying my cheek on her hand, "I am sorry I was vexed. Will you forgive me?"

"Dear little girl, I forgave you before you asked. It made my heart ache to keep you in, but I knew it was best. Suppose you had the stint to do now?"

"Oh, grandmamma, I believe I should be too sleepy to see the stitches!"

"Then you will not forget the lesson I meant to teach you—that to put duty first and pleasure afterward is the only way to be either useful or happy."

I slept late next morning, and when at last my mother came to waken me, there were marks of tears on her cheeks.

"Oh, mamma, what is the matter?" I cried.

"There is nothing really the matter," she answered, though her voice was trembling. "Something so beautiful has happened that we must not grieve. Dear grandmamma went away to heaven last night in her sleep."

That was many, many years ago, yet, whenever I am tempted to put off until another time what ought to be done now, I seem to see the pretty room, the dainty tea-tray, and my grandmother's lovely face, and to hear again her sweet voice telling me what to do with a duty.—Mrs. Mary A. P. Stansbury, in Epworth Herald.

A LITTLE BOSS AND A LITTLE GENTLEWOMAN.

Dorothy's cousin Katharine had come to Gay Harbor for a year. She was going to begin school to-morrow, and the two were talking over things.

"There's one girl you won't like," said Dorothy, "and that's Jude Clark. She bosses everything—and everybody."

"The teacher?" queried Katharine.

"No," Dorothy laughed; "but she'd like to."

"I don't think she'll boss me," replied Katharine, slowly.

"Oh, she will! You're so quiet she'll be sure to order you round first thing, just as she does Hattie Seips. You see, she knows more than anybody else, she's head of every class, and she lords it over us—oh, you'll see! Dick calls her a 'regular tearer.'"

"Isn't she pleasant?"

"Pleasant enough, oh, yes! She'd be real nice if she didn't want to boss everybody."

When Katherine entered the school room with her cousin she found herself face to face with a black-eyed girl somewhat taller than she.

"Hullo!" said the girl, "What's your name?"

The new comer looked straight into the snapping eyes, and answered:

"Katharine Ingersoll Northcote Gilbert."

"Oh, me!" cried the other. "What a name! Doesn't it tire you to carry it around?"

"It hasn's so far," Katharine replied, smiling.

"Well, it ought to—Katharine Ingersoll Northcote Gilbert! What do they call you—Kitty?"

"No, Katharine."

"I'm going to call you Kitty—Katharine is too long."

The stranger smiled. "You might just put my initials together, if you want something short."

"K I N G—why—ee! I guess, after all, you'd better be Katharine. I'm Judith myself. Now, remember," turning to the others, "you're not to call me anything else after this!" Then, "What do you know?" returning to Katharine.

"I know the multiplication table," answered Katharine promptly.

"Say it!"

Katharine did, from "Two times one" to "Twelve times twelve," glibly, smoothly, without break or blunder.

"Oh, me!" muttered Judith Clark, while her eyes sparkled her praise. "What else do you know?"

"I know the prepositions," replied Katharine.

"Say them!" commanded Judith.

Katharine began quietly: "Aboard, about above, according to," going straight forward without hesitation until she had named the entire sixty-five.

"Oh, me! Oh, my!" exclaimed Judith, under her breath. "I couldn't do it to save my life!" Then aloud: "Do you know any poetry?"

"Yes," answered Katharine.

"Repeat some!" ordered Judith.

In a clear voice Katharine recited Mr. Whittier's beautiful poem of Barbara Frietchie, and it went along with a dash that quite astonished Dorothy. Her cousin had seemed so quiet, and here she was eclipsing Judith in everything.

The speaking ended just as the bell struck for order.

"Thank you," Judith said, softly, and then went soberly to her seat. She studied hard that morning. For the first time in weeks the teacher did not have to reprimand her for some mischievous prank. Hitherto she had kept at the head of her classes with little effort, and much of her time had been spent in play. Now she saw that she must study if she would "keep up" with the new scholar, and she went straight to work.

"You have done beautifully to-day," the teacher told her at night.

"You ought to thank KING for it," returned Judith, her eyes a-twinkle.

"Thank whom?"

Judith couldn't help laughing to see the teacher's puzzled face.

"That is only the short for Katharine Ingersoll Northcote Gilbert," she explained.

Miss Garton laughed, too, saying: "I hope you and Katharine will be friends."

"We are now," declared Judith.

They were, and the new scholar's gentle ways were so attractive that Judith began to borrow gentleness for herself, and, "I'm glad she came," was her secret acknowledgement.—Zion's Herald.

WEEDS AND FLOWERS.

The big dahlias in mother's garden were withered by the frost, even the little red asters were dull and wilted, and Philip and Doris Grant looked about anxiously, for it was father's birthday, and they had thought out a nice surprise for him. They wanted to put a border of flowers all around the dinner table, so that when he came in he would ask, "Who did that?" And then mother would say, "The children."

Back of the garden was a field which sloped down to the brook, and the children walked slowly across the field. They had nearly reached the brook when Doris called out, Look, look, Philip!" and pointed toward a bunch of fine yellow blossoms.

"Those are weeds!" said Philip. "Just yellow weeds. They grow everywhere, by the road and all along the brook."

"But they are as fine as the garden blossoms," said the little girl. "Probably they don't want to be weeds. Per'aps it's just like some children who don't have anybody to love them, and have to grow up where they can. You know Aunt Sue told us about children that didn't have homes; and I guess weeds are just blossoms that don't have gardens."

"They're pretty," agreed Philip. And then they began picking the yellow blossoms.

That night, when Mr. Grant came in to dinner, he looked at the table with the lovely sprays of yellow blossoms all about it.

"Well, well," said father, "I'm glad you selected goldenrod. I think it ought to be our national flower."

"What is a national flower?" asked Philip.

"It is a flower selected by the people of a country as their floral emblem," expplained Mr. Grant, "just as each nation has a flag of its own."

Doris' face was full of delight.

"I told you weeds were just as good if their blossoms were lovely," said Doris.—Alice Turner Curtis.

It is apparent to the observer that we are passing through a period of wide attention to the Bible. We do not have reference to the general interest in the Bible as a book of literature, though the Bible is the greatest literature in the world, but we have reference to the fact that the Bible is being read and studied as never before. From the newspaper to the pulpit, from the platform to the college, from the rostrum to the street corner, the Bible is the theme of discussion. Men are reading it, studying it, and quoting it as a book of authority. Even those who do not believe it are reading it, and are quoting it as a book of authority.

Whether this widespread attention to the Bible will result in a revival of religion, or in a revival of infidelity, is a question of tremendous importance, and one which is now engaging the attention of the thoughtful. Many are the signs that the Bible is losing its hold upon the people, and that the day is not far distant when it will be relegated to the shelf with the musty tomes of the past. On the other hand, there are many signs that indicate a return to the Bible as the only source of authority in religion, and as the only rule of faith and practice.

Which of these tendencies will prevail in the future, and to which will the world attribute its salvation, is a question of tremendous importance, and one which is now engaging the attention of the thoughtful. Many are the signs that indicate a return to the Bible as the only source of authority in religion, and as the only rule of faith and practice.

tative church in Washington City. The next session of this body will be held at Brownsville, Tenn.

Rev. G. W. Eichelberger, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in Mississippi, was scheduled to deliver three addresses at Greenwood last Sunday. Dr. Eichelberger is taking hold of his work energetically, and is organizinng the temperance forces throughout the State in which he has been commissioned to work.

Brother E. K. Means, of Minden, La., has sent us a list of renewals, and hopes to bring up all expired subscriptions and call at our office during Conference Brother Means is in high favor with his people, and no doubt will have a good report at Conference, as is his custom.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., sends us the following item: "The Mississippi Conference Training School at Montrose, though it has no endowment and is given no financial assistance by the Board of Education, has among its students twelve candidates for the ministry to whom free tuition is given."

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb conducted the prayer meeting at the Louisiana Avenue Church, this city, last week. The work at this church is going forward under the leadership of Brother J. L. Sutton. Brother Lipscomb also preached to a splendid congregation at our Epworth Church on last Sunday night.

Brother S. D. Howard, of Baker, La., requests us to make the following announcement: "There will be a meeting of the stewards of the Baker charge Saturday, ovember 25, at 11 a.m., to make a final financial settlement with the pastor and presiding elder. All the stewards are urged to attend."

Rev. K. W. Dodson, of New Iberia, La., writing on November 14, sends the following: "Mrs. M. E. Smith died last night about 10 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry N. Pharr, of New Iberia. Sister Smith lived a beautiful life and died in the faith." We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

In a personal letter to the editor, Rev. Robert Randle, of Cotton Valley, La., commends the Advocate and assures us of his interest in its future success and usefulness. We highly appreciate the kind words of this faithful worker, whose good-will is attested not only by what he says, but also by what he does.

Hon. Asa Candler, of Atlanta, was in the city this week attending the American Bankers' Association. He is a brother of Bishop Candler and one of the first citizens of Georgia. The Methodism of Atlanta has been immensely helped by his large-hearted liberality. Mr. Candler worshiped at the First Methodist Church of this city last Sabbath evening.

Miss Maggie Walker, of Stovall, La., writes: "More than a year ago I was advised by a friend to take the New Orleans Christian Advocate, which I did, and am glad to say that I have enjoyed its pages so much that I am renewing my subscription." We are grateful for these encouraging words. We hope to improve the paper greatly with the opening of the new year.

A letter received from Rev. W. C. Carlisle, pastor of our Second Church, at Columbus, Miss., written on the 16th inst., stated that his son, Coleman Carlise, who was injured in a street-car accident several days ago, was doing well, and that the indications were favorable for his recovery. Brother Carlisle's many friends will be pleased to have this good news from the bedside of this brave little sufferer.

We are in receipt of an attractive wedding invitation which reads as follows: "Mrs. William Henry Hall invites you to be present at the marriage of her daughter, Kathryn, to Mr. William Harris Mounger on Thursday evening, December 7, 1911, at 6 o'clock, at home, in Sardis, Miss." We extend congratulations in advance, and wish the contracting parties a long, useful, and happy life together.

Rev. W. E. M. Brogan, the pastor of the Methodist Church at Starkville, Miss., writes that he is quite busy getting things in readiness for the approaching session of the Annual Conference. Of course, everything will be in full from this excellent charge. We regret to know that Brother Brogan has been somewhat indisposed of late. He is one of the most diligent and efficient ministers in North Mississippi.

Rev. J. W. Rogers, who transferred from the North Mississippi to the Oklahoma Conference a year ago, at the recent session of the East Oklahoma Conference was appointed to Madill, which is reported to be a most desirable station. The town has a population of perhaps 3,000, and in it Southern Methodism is vigorous and active. We are pleased to know that our young friend has been assigned to so inviting a field.

Though far from strong physically, Rev. Robert B. Downer is cherishing the hope of being able to attend the Mississippi Conference at Meridian. Brother Downer writes: "I am praying that the session may be characterized by a display of Pentecostal power." It would be well for our people generally to pray for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon these annual gatherings, at which so much important work is to be done.

At the recent session of the Baptist State Convention at Leesville, La., it was stated that 1,600 had been received into the Church in Louisiana during the past year as a result of the labors of persons employed by the State Board of Missions. The Convention adopted ringing resolutions in favor of vigorous and aggressive work against the saloons in this commonwealth. The Baptists everywhere are among the most stirring advocates of the prohibition cause.

Brother W. W. Drake, of Lake Charles, La., writing under date of November 18, says: "We closed a two weeks' meeting here last Sunday. Revs. H. B. Watkins and C. N. Guice, of the Mississippi Conference, were with me except the opening and closing Sundays, and did acceptable and effective work in sermon and song. The Church was helped and blessed, and we have 18 applications for membership in our Church and 3 in other churches. We are closing up the year hopefully."

"Delegate," whose National W. C. T. U. Notes appeared in last week's issue of the Advocate desires to make the following correction: "Georgia stood at the head of the Southern States, having made the greatest gain of any commonwealth in the South. Of all the States in the Union, Ohio made the most gain and ranked first. Let me add that Louisiana should feel proud of her W. C. T. U. State President, for Mrs. McKinney acquitted herself most admirably. Her brief talk on Jubilee night was applauded heartily."

We appropriate from the Guntown Hot Times (Mississippi) of the 17th innst. the following: "Rev. L. W. Cain will deliver his last sermon at this place during the Conference year on next Sunday, November 19, and there will undoubtedly be a large attendance, as this devout man of God has made many friends since he has been stationed here, and is loved not only by the Methodists, but by all denominations. We trust that the Conference, in its wisdom, may return Brother Cain to this charge for another year."

Brother J. S. Carlton, of Sardis, Miss., writes: "On next Sunday, November 26, Bishop Candler will dedicate our church in Sardis. Yesterday the congregation raised the entire balance of the debt—something like $3,700, and there will be nothing against the house when the dedication day arrives. The church has met all its assessments, and paid all its obligations, during the year. We anticipate a great time next Sunday—an immense congregation and happiness and good-will in abundance. All former pastors are invited to be present."

The following dispatch was sent from Ackerman, Miss., to the Commercial Appeal on the 18th inst.: "The fourth quarterly conference of this charge for the current year was held at Salem to-day by the presiding elder, Rev. N. G. Augustus. Good reports were made and everything is in readiness for the Annual Conference, which is near at hand. Rev. J. D. Simpson, the pastor, has been here four years, and, under the rules of his Church, will have to be transferred to another field. His members regret very much that it is necessary to give him up."

From the Scott County Register we clip the following: "Rev. C. McDonald, of Pelahatchie, who is so well known and highly esteemed here, to the disappointment of his many friends, did not remain long in Forest on his return from High Hill last week, where he on Sunday met with that Church in their Rally Day exercises. It is always such a pleasure to meet this kindly aged minister, who has for so long been working in the Master's cause, and who, though superannuated, and having reached his 75th milestone, is still able to aid greatly in the great work."

From the Jackson Daily News (Mississippi) of November 16, we take the following news-note: "Owing to inability to complete the interior of the edifice, the new Capitol Street Methodist Church will not be dedicated during Thanksgiving week, as had been expected. Rev. J. M. Morse, pastor of the congregation, stated this morning that the dedicatory exercises will not take place until after the first of the year. It had been planned to have the dedication while Bishop Candler, of Georgia, was in the State. The distinguished Georgia divine is to preside over the annual session of the Mississippi Conference next month."

Rev. C. A. Northington has had a successful year at Beliefontaine, Miss. He has had 45 conversions in his charge, and 34 additions to the church, 29 of them on profession of faith. One attractive house of worship has been built and paid for, and others have been improved. Seven Sunday schools are in operation, the collections were already in advance of last year when Brother Northington wrote, and he was hopeful of securing them in full. He states that his people regret very much to give up their present presiding elder, the Rev. E. S. Lewis. This faithful worker has also looked well after the interests of the Advocate, having sent us a number of subscribers.

Rev. A. H. Williams, of Shuqualak, Miss., writes: "Rev. J. D. Newsom is happy over the prospect of meeting the brethren again in the coming session of the North Mississippi Conference, which is to convene at Macon, on November 29. He has learned that a most worthy family of that city has declined to take any other guests, saying, "Send us Brother Newsom and his wife. Brother Newsom has a cozy residence and lives well at home, but greatly enjoys a Conference." We are pleased to know that this noble veteran will be on hand to mingle with his associates in the Master's work. He wrought well in the days agone, and it is gratifying to know that he is being cared for in his eventide.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, of Homer, La., under date of November 16, writes as follows: "Brother J. B. Williams, our pastor on the Lisbon Circuit, has been sick for six weeks. He was operated on by Dr. P. Gibson, at the Homer Sanitarium on Nov. 8 and at this writing is improving nicely, but hardly will be able to attend the Annual Conference. His local preachers have been filling his appointments and his laymen have been looking after his Conference collections. Brother Williams is one of our choice men in the Conference and the people in this section love him very much.

Dr. S. A. Steel filled the pulpit of the Broadway Methodist Church at Paducah, Ky., the two Sabbaths immediately preceding the assembling of the Memphis Conference. The News-Democrat of that city speaks enthusiastically of the forceful and eloquent sermons which he delivered. Among other things it says: "The theme at the morning hour was 'The Coronation of Jesus Christ.' He paid a tribute to Moses, the great law-giver, and said his law included the three things that are so much striven for to-day—"the initiative, referendum, and recall." At night Dr. Steel preached a special sermon, a message to young men, on the subject, "What Will You Do With It?" based on the two brothers, Esau and Jacob.

The Church Bulletin for the Homer Church (Louisiana) for November and December gives the subjects of the sermons of each Sabbath until the meeting of the Annual Conference in New Orleans. Brother Lutz is happy in the selection of the themes for his discourses. Perhaps this is one reason for his great popularity as a preacher. We note that the presiding elder, Rev. R. W. Tucker, is to occupy the pulpit on the evening of November 26. We are pleased to observe that commendable headway is being made by this stirring congregation in the task of wiping out the debt on their beautiful new house of worship. On a $1,500 note due this month, $1,332.75 was pledged when this Bulletin was issued.

A new date has been agreed upon and the campaign under the direction of the Men and Religion Movement will be conducted in this city next March. A number of the leaders in this work have recently been here, and they have awakened considerable interest in the undertaking. Among these distinguished visitors were Dr. W. E. Bierdewolf, the noted evangelist, of Monticello, Ind.: Dr. H. F. Swartz, of New York: Dr. Latimer, of Birmingham, and Mr. James G. Cannon, president of the Fourth National Bank of New York City, who is at the head of this movement. With a view to getting the organization of the work started, a luncheon was given at Fabacher's Royal Street Restaurant on Wednesday, November 15, which was well attended: and Mr. Cannon delivered an instructive address in the hall of the Progressive Union Tuesday evening of this week.

ORPHANAGE CAR.

Dear Dr. Meek: Will you please say that the Orphans' Home Car to be run over the G. & S. I. will leeve Hattiesburg at 6:30 on the morning of Tuesday, the 28th inst, and go through to Jackson that day. I will be on the car to see that everything is properly marked, etc. Let every person interested in the Orphan children help to make them glad by filing the car with everything that he can spare that people eat or wear or can use in a home or school. Fraternally, LOUIS F. ALFORD.

Mount Olive, Miss., Nov. 17, 1911.

One of the city papers reports that a syndicate is planning to establish in New Orleans a big distillery, several stories high and with facilities for caring for 3,000 or 4,000 barrels of liquor. We trust that we may be spared such a calamity. New Orleans is whisky-soaked enough now. But the leaven of sound teaching is at work, and we hope at no distant date to see Louisiana in the column of prohibition States. Does this sound chimerical? Nay, it is not so. The State Lottery was thought to be too strongly entrenched to ever be overthrown, but notwithstanding it finally went down in hopeless defeat. And so sooner or later will the saloons.

Superintendent Hayes of the North Carolina Children's Home is calling for $15,000 to erect a school building and chapel.

Brother ELI AMASON GILBERT was born in Sumpterville, Sumpter County, Ala., on June 26, 1846, and died in great peace and the triumphs of a living faith at his home at Gilbert, Miss., on May 11, 1911.

How well he fell asleep!
Like some proud river, widening towards the sea,
Calmly and grandly, silently and deep,
Life joined eternity.

His place is now vacant and our hearts are sad; yet our Lord has promised that he shall live again, and death is only a short, dreamless slumber, from which we shall awake and again be with friends and loved ones forever, where congregations never break up and where Sabbaths have no end. Brother Gilbert moved to Smith County, Miss., with his mother in 1858. He joined the Confederate Army in its beginning, where he remained until the close of the war, and no better, braver soldier than he ever served his country. He enlisted also under the banner of King Emmanuel at an early age and had never grown tired of the service. He was as faithful and loyal to his church and to the cause of Christ as any man I have ever known. He was the last of the charter members of the old Carr Church and was one of its most liberal suporters, and his support was bountiful, systematic and helpful. He was married to Miss Mattie Turner on Oct. 15, 1872. One child blessed this union, a son, who survives him. He was a faithful and devoted husband and father. During the last week of his illness he talked a great deal about dying, and often said, "If it is the Lord's will, I want to go home and meet my Savior and all the loved ones and friends gone on before, where there is no more sickness nor pain." On that Thursday in May, when the wires hurried to all parts of the country the sad message that Eli Gilbert was dead, there was a gloom of sorrow, like a mantle, hovering over the whole community. His burial service was conducted in the old Carr Church and was one of the most solemn and impressive scenes I have ever witnessed, made so by the fact that we were then laying away from mortal sight the last of the original members of that noble old church. Many were the sad hearts that day that gave expression in loving tribute to the blessing that his noble life had been to them. With uncovered heads and with solemn steps, loving hands bore his body to its last resting place and tenderly laid it away in the old church yard to await the resurrection morning.

W. W. GRAVES.

Homewood, Miss.

Just as the last beams from the sun faded out of the western sky on the afternoon of Sept. 18, 1911, the soul of little ETOILE PETERS stole away from its earthly home and departed for the land of the blest. It is now more than two years since Dr. Scudder went to the Orphans' Home and brought away with him this little girl, with her sunny face and her golden locks. She came into our lives like a benediction, making them better and brighter. Though in the strict sense she was an orphan, yet all were glad to claim a share of her love—a place in her warm little heart. The sight of a smile of pleasure on her face, or a word of approval from her lips, seemed to make the burdens of life less hard. It is so sad that the hand of the reaper must sometimes pluck the flowers from our lives; that stern, cold death, from which there can be no turning away, must needs choose the child about whose innocent life the tendrills of affection from our hearts are wrapped—yet how sweet it is to know that the hand of the Maker has written it so, and that hand never yet made a mistake; to know that somewhere beyond all trials, temptations and tears, the little flower, which for six short years blossomed so beautifully here in such adverse soil, will there be allowed to bloom throughout eternity with never a care nor trouble. May we who loved her here meet her there some day and sing the praises of him "Who doeth all things well."

ELMER C. GUNN, Pastor.

JAMES THOS. BAILEY was born in North Alabama, Oct. 26, 1829. After an illness of nearly twelve months, he died near Barton, Miss., May 4, 1911. Brother Bailey was reared in Tennessee. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Overton Forhess, Aug. 6, 1856, who died Dec. 13, 1877. To them were born four sons and six daughters. The sons and two of the daughters survive him. He was married the second time to Miss Mattie L. Hull, of Tennessee, Jan. 14, 1880, with whom he lived happily until his death. Brother Bailey was converted in early life, and joined the M. E. Church, South. He developed into one of the most earnest, active and capable laymen in North Mississippi. Some years ago he professed entire sanctification and lived it. Brother Bailey practiced the tithing system and was liberal to every financial interest of his church and to charitable purposes as well. He was for years a steward of his church and recording steward of his charge. He was the preacher's friend. I, with numbers of other preachers, will breathe a sigh of sadness at his going away. But with his loved ones, we rejoice in the hope of meeting him again. As we laid him to rest in the Oak Grove Cemetery near the church he loved so well, my heart kept singing the beautiful lines:

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

R. W. EVANS.

Death has called him from among us. His soul has gone to the God who gave it, and his body has been consigned to the universal resting place of mortality. The home he loved and made bright by his genial disposition is darkened by the pall of death. His footfalls will no more echo through the hall of that home. They need not wait for his coming nor listen for the voice now silent in death. WALTER F. WHITE died at Yelolw Pine, La., Oct. 16, 1911, and was buried in the Lanesville Cemetery the following day. The writer, assisted by Rev. W. J. Porter, held the funeral services. The large crowd that followed his remains to its last resting place attest that he was loved and respected by all. All who knew him say, "Walter White was a good boy." He joined the M. P. Church when only ten years old and remained true to the end of his life. He was only seventeen years old when he died, but his many virtues still live to keep his memory green. May God comfort the bereaved father, mother, brother and sisters as he alone can!

Tidings From the Field

Shaw and Merigold Charge:

I am closing my fourth year with this charge, and soon will be saying good-bye to these good people. Leaving friends like these, is like leaving home. They are friends of long life. On our arrival they met us with words of welcome and many deeds of kindness. They have walked by our side, stood close to us, clasped our hands warmly, at all times. They have wept with us in sorrow and laughed with us in times of joy, and now at the end of our four-year journey, we find them tender and faithful and just as careful of our comfort and pleasure as when we first began to work together. Inside the parsonage is found every comfort that is found in the homes of this charge. Each year they have welcomed their "new preacher" with a "shower" that reached from study to pantry. At Shaw they have done much repairing on the church, inside and outside. The parsonage has been repaired throughout and made like new. At Merigold they have been and are yet busy repairing the church and putting a new piano in for the Sunday school. The church membership of the charge has been greatly increased. They have paid every assessment in full each year, and while the assessments were increased this year, they paid domestic and foreign missions and church extension in full and two-thirds the district parsonage assessment in February, and everything is now paid in full, and ready for the treasurers. The people of Shaw and Merigold charge co-operate with the pastor. Of course I do not know who my successor will be, but this I do know, he may be glad to serve this charge of consecrated women, chivalrous men and grateful, sweet-spirited children. May God's richest blessings be upon him and them, is my prayer.—L. A. McKeown.

Nov. 13, 1911.

Coldwater, Miss.:

Dear Dr. Meek: We are trying to get ready for Conference, but it is under sore affliction. Mrs. Babb has been seriously sick with pneumonia for ten days. Her fever has gone, but she is very weak, and it is doubtful about my attending Conference. What a disappointment to me it would be! During the thirty-eight years since I commenced the itinerant work, not a Conference have I missed, from the Quarterly up to the Annual—God has been so good to me. If I fail to be there I expect to have my report there showing a clear balance sheet. Our presiding elder, W. M. Young, is closing out his quadrennium on this district with credit to himself and to our Church. The universal expression among the people is regret that he has to leave us. It will be hard to find a more painstaking and wide awake presiding elder than he is, and his preaching is of no low order. We bespeak for him a field of usefulness in his new appointment. By all means we ought to have another presiding elder's district. Our Conference is overwhelmingly rural and needs the presence and help of the presiding elder at the interior points more than can possibly be given to them under the present arrangement. Be it understood that I am no applicant for a district, but I see the needs of the Church I love, and especially the Conference I have devoted the best of my life to. Dollars and cents are not the prime objects to be considered, but the development of Christ's kingdom. I am sure that three-fourths of the members of our Conference are anxious for at least one more district.—D. W. Babb, P. C.

Nov. 16, 1911.

Mount Olive, Miss.:

I feel that we are closing the year with some degree of success. During the year we have had four meetings with some good results. Our first meeting was at Mt. Olive in the spring. The preaching was done by Rev. J. M. Alford, of Bogalusa, La., which was truly evangelistic. Many souls were blessed and 7 were added to the church. Our next meeting was at Oakvale. The preaching was done by Brother Sharborough, our presiding elder, and Rev. J. A. Alford, of Selma, La. It was all good, and the church was blessed, though we had no accessions. During the latter part of August, the Lewis brothers (five in number) held a few days' meeting for us here which was very much enjoyed, both the preaching and singing. Four young ladies joined the church. During the first week in September, the pastor held a few days' meeting at Arbo, a saw mill town just below here. At the closing service we organized a church, with 23 members. Our fourth quarterly conference was held on Oct. 30. Brother Sharborough gave us three excellent sermons. We feel sure, notwithstanding the heavy increase in assessments for missions and the ravages of the boll weevil, that all our assessments will be paid. Our two Sunday schools are supporting a native Bible woman in Japan. Our Woman's Missionary Society, which is operating both departments, is in a flourishing condition. We have a fine people to serve. In many ways they make it pleasant for the pastor and his family. We have a good parsonage. It is well furnished. I am laying in a supply of wood, etc., and of course, I am not expecting to move. I hope to meet all the brethren and the editor at Meridian.—Lewis F. Alford.

FIRST CHURCH, MEMPHIS.

Dear Brother Meek: On the eve of Conference I thought I would send my report to the North Mississippi Conference, through the Advocate. It has been a strenuous year to me. I have made 2,564 pastoral visits, baptized 12 children, received 45 members by profession and 229 by certificate, a total of 274. Our present membership is 1,715. We have raised about $26,000 for all purposes, $11,000 of this amount for missions. Our church supports two missionaries and nineteen scholarships. We have the finest Sunday school I ever saw. The financial results have been accomplished without a single public collection. We are not a rich church. We have some prosperous men, but the great bulk of our people are wage-earners. It would do your heart good to sit down with our official board of 60 choice men, Brother J. R. Pepper being the leading spirit, and see how they do business. I have conducted 54 funerals and performed 98 marriage ceremonies. Come up and spend a Sunday with me and you may preach to a big church full of people.

FROM BROTHER GATLIN.

Dear Dr. Neek: I left Millsaps College (Jackson, Miss.) the first part of May, and after spending about two weeks at home (Natalbany, La.), I went to Clinton, La., to relieve Brother J. P. Haney, who was serving the East Feliciana Circuit, but who at that time was sick. When I first went there, I expected to serve only two months, but owing to the continued sickness and death of Brother Haney, I stayed there until November. I was there little over five months. When I took charge of the East Feliciana Circuit, I was a stranger in that part of the country; I didn't know anyone, but I did not remain a stranger very long, and even chickens got to knowing me before I was there a great while. The circuit is quite a large one; therefore, I was on the go nearly all the time. I took 28 into the church, most of them by baptism, and there are two more to be received yet. I organized one Epworth League and started two Sunday schools and one prayer meeting. Some of the best people God ever made live within the bounds of East Feliciana Parish and on the East Feliciana Circuit. If some of my stewards did call me "kid," I love them all just the same.

I got here (Appleton City, Mo.) Saturday morning, Nov. 4, after traveling two nights and one day. This is a fine town on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad, with some 1,800 or 2,000 people. We have some royal Methodists here. By the way, we have a nice parsonage, but, of course, it is not in use at present. I have three churches, one here in town and two out in the country. I am just back from one of my churches this morning. I guess it is time to bring this to a close.

H. G. GATLIN.

Appleton City, Mo., Nov. 13, 1911.

COCKRUM, MISS.

Our fourth quarterly conference for the year 1911 has become history. It was held at Greenleaf on Oct. 20. Brother W. M. Young, our presiding elder, was present and preached a splendid sermon from the text, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" After the sermon, dinner was served on the ground; we then came together for the business session of the quarterly conference, which was dispensed with in a creditable manner. One sad feature of the occasion was the shortness of our financial report. We think this was due largely to holding of cotton by our people for a better price. We hope that the assessments may be raised in full by our fifth meeting which is set for Nov. 25. We would be glad for our preacher to go to Conference with everything in full. Brother Collins is well liked by the people. I think the people have grown spiritually and the work has improved in a material way during the year. We should be glad when the Conference meets at Macon if it would return him to us. I think I voice the sentiment of the people in this; the fact is, I believe it would be almost universally satisfactory. His every movement is characterized by a zeal and earnestness that is highly commendable, to say the least of it. We regard Brother Collins as being an able preacher, especially for a man of his age and experience. The following resolution was read and adopted: "Whereas, our presiding elder, Rev. W. M. Young, is now completing his fourth year on the Sardis District, and is now with us in our fourth quarterly conference, Resolved, That we take this opportunity of expressing our high appreciation of him as an efficient officer of the Church, as a preacher of the gospel and a Christian gentleman, and assure him that our prayers and good wishes will follow him wherever the Conference may send him to labor."—L. P. Bailey.

A THING TO BE CONSIDERED.

In these days of estimating the virtues and faults of preachers for the work and determining the character of appointment to which they should in justice to themselves be sent, we suggest that the character of the home they make for their successors should enter into the presiding elder's data of points in making the next year's assignments. A comfortable, well equipped house is one of the necessities of the best type of modern civiliation and a great aid to the efficiency of the gospel preacher, and Methodist parsonages are largely what the preachers make them. In some sense, at least, the preacher's own ideal of what he feels that he needs in the way of a home is embodied in the house he turns over to his successor. If this should consist of saggy doors, open panes, screenless windows, no closets, or kitchen shelves, or bath tubs, sinks, or conveniences, with dragging gates, pickets off the fences, no shade or fruit trees, yard and premises full of tin cans, trash and litter, no drainage and the appearance generally of a dilapidated and forsaken place, there this estimates the type of home that would suit the present occupant in his next pastoral charge. On the other hand, if he has made his home bright and comfortable, with shrubs in the yard and well worked vegetables in the garden, and a well arranged cow stall in the lot, his ideal of home life is thus established, and he should be sent to this kind of a parsonage.

By any standard of justice, it is not fair to make a man who craves the comforts and conveniences of a well equipped home and lays himself out to provide it, follow a man who has hardly driven a nail, cut a weed, hauled off a tin can, nor planted a bush.

Why not let the presiding elders note down besides the "brilliant preachers," "good mixers" and "fine money raisers" "comfortable home makers," and let them succeed each other just as do the $500 men" "$1,000 men," etc. It is not right to make a man who has shown some industry and zeal in building up a well furnished and well equipped parsonage follow a man who boasts that he "does nothing but preach"—a big preacher, perhaps—and start in anew to cleaning up trash, repairing fences, putting in glass and on locks, and building shelves, and the presiding elder could go a long way in correcting it.

TOPIC FOR NOVEMBER 26, 1911.

METHODISM'S RESPONSIBILITY TO AMERICA.

(Home Missions.)

(Num. xiv, 14; Ps. xxxiii, 12; Ps. cxlvii, 20.)

Hymn 635, "Christ for the World We Sing."

This great Western World has been known since our forefathers came to it for religious liberty as a nation where God dwelleth and whom he hath wonderfully prospered. "In the light of events no reasoning mind can doubt that the Western Hemisphere, particularly the United States, was predestined, discovered, and reserved to become the seat of a Protestant Christian nation that would be the light to the world."

No other nation, unless it be God's chosen people, was ever so truly religious and really missionary in its beginning. The Maynower compact spoke of the coming of the Pilgrims as "for the glory of God and the advancement of the Christian faith." A true leaven was hid in the nation in those early days. Psalm xxxviii, 12; cxivii, 20. (Let the leader give illustrations of the religious purpose of the founders of this country.) Prayer, that in the midst of great prosperity we may still be a nation whose God is the Lord, that we may still keep a place of leadership in the missionary work of the world.

The fact that Methodism was born on a voyage to America seems to link this country in a peculiar way to Methodists. John Wesley, on his way to help the people of the Oglethorpe colony, encountered a severe storm at sea. The Moravians on board the ship kept perfectly calm, for they had such faith in God. This caused Wesley to draw closer to the Lord and led to his experience: "I felt my heart strangely warmed, * * * and assurance was given me that he had taken away my sins." The Society of Methodists was formed in London in 1739. In 1760 Barbara Heck and Philip Embury, founders of Methodism in America, came to the United States. About the same time that Embury began to preach in New York, Strawbridge began in Maryland and Webb in Philadelphia. Their gospel was salvation by faith leading to consciousness of sins forgiven. Alas, despite the wonderful work of Methodism, there are millions of people in this country whose hearts have never been warmed within them! To them all Methodists are privileged to go; indeed if the zeal of the early Church is ours, we must witness among them.

The Responsibility of the Church for the South and West.

According to the numbers given by the Laymen's Misisonary Movement in an effort to show the share of the world's population for which each denomination should be responsible, we find that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has a share of 8,000,000 at home—that is, to do the part that is ours by reason of our proportionate strength, we must Christianize 8,000,000 of the people of the South and West.

Who are these 8,000,000, and where do they live? Some are moral people who, by reason of scattered population and inadequate gospel opportunity, are yet to be saved by faith in Christ.

Has Your League Any Special Responsibility for Them?

Some are the foreigners who have come to live in close touch with all of us—Bohemians, Hungarians, Greeks, Cubans, Mexicans, and Orientals.

On the Pacific Slope there are about 100,000 Orientals. Our Southern Methodist Church has assumed the responsibility for the few thousand Koreans and several thousand Japanese. Our Korean Mission in San Francisco (maintained by the Woman's Home Mission Society) is the only permanent Korean mission in North America. The Korean National Association, which keeps in touch with all their exiled countrymen, is located in San Francisco. Our magazine, the Korean Evangel, has a circulation of over 1,000. Of this number, about 450 go to Korea. The object of the magazine is, "for the education, elevation, and evangelization of Korean Christians throughout the world, and the evangelization of the unsaved." Of the 50,595 Japanese adults in California, 2,618 are Christians and 4,090 are worshipers in the eleven Buddhist missions of the State, leaving 48,272 without any profession. Our work for them is located at Oakland and Alameda.

Besides these Orientals, there are about 1,000,000 foreign-born persons in our Southern Methodist territory. Last year about 50,000 alien immigrants came to the South, Texas receiving the largest share. This is not a large per cent of the whole number who came to the United States (1,044,000), but it is a much larger number than the people of the South are giving an adequate chance for Christian living.—Epworth Era.

NOTICE TO MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE LEAGUES.

At the last League Conference, a motion was adopted requesting the secretary of each Chapter in this Conference to send a quarterly report of all work done to the district secretary of his district. Let each local secretary render a complete report to the district secretary of his district for the months of August, September and October at once.

List of Mississippi Conference District Secretaries:

Brookhaven District, Mr. John McEwen, Hazlehurst, Miss.; Hattiesburg District, Rev. W. B. Alsworth, Estabutchie, Miss.; Jackson District, Rev. W. W. Thomas, Jackson, Miss.; Meridian District, Miss Mabel Holladay, Meridian (Poplar Springs Route), Miss.; Newton District, Miss Ethel Crawford, Laurel, Miss.; Port Gibson District, Mr. Chas. S. Elliott, Mayersville, Miss.; Seashore District, Mr. W. A. Price, Gulfport, Miss.

CLIFFORD R. FIELD,
President Miss. Conf. Ep. League.

REPORT OF THE LOUISIANA FIELD AGENT.

Dear Brother Watkins: As you requested that I send you a report each month of my work for the Advocate, I report for the month just closing, October, 1911, as follows:

Number of Leagues visited, 6; number Senior Leagues reorganized, 1; number Junior Leagues reorganized, 1; number Mission Study Classes reorganized, 1; number Mission Study Classes partially organized, 3; number of letters written, 18; number of new League helps (department and Cuba special) sent or given, 9;

In addition to this, I led one meeting in my own (First Church) when the Mission Study Class was reorganized, as above reported.

I conducted the opening exercises of one Sunday school, and addressed the Woman's Missionary Society at one church, while visiting.

The information and inspiration I gained while attending the Assembly at Biloxi this year has prepared me to do more and better work than before.

I am happy in my work, "All For Christ."

LOUISIANA METHODIST ORPHANAGE.

We are pleased to state that the collections from "Work Day" amounts o about $3,000. While this does not reach our expectations, still we are very grateful for this help. We will be enabled to pay about $3,000 on the debt and the interest on the remaining part of the debt. It is a severe disappointment to us that we will be compelled to carry over to another year a debt of approximately $4,0.. Still we are grateful for the help that we have received and trust thework may go forward without abatement. If any of our people have any funds for the Orphanage, it would be of great help to us to get these funds to us before December, as our debt of 7,000 will fail due at that time. Every dollar applied on this debt will decrease the amount necessary for interest and will be that much saved to the Orphanage.

LOUISIANA AVENUE CHURCH, NEW ORLEANS.

Thinking that it might be of interest to others, I should like to say that we closed a very successful revival t Louisiana Avenue Church. Brother Bernard began preaching on Monday, nd continued every night, including riday, after which time he had to return to his work. Mrs. Devail and rs. Selser, of Baton Rouge, assisted the music. Dr. Cooper, president f Brookhaven Female College, was ith us on Sunday, and preached both morning and evening in his usual plain and convincing manner that presented the gospel of Jesus Christ. hough the weather was threatening and cold on Sunday, we had a large and attentive congregation at both services. At the conclusion, we had a regular old-time Methodist handshake with the preacher. Ten people joined the church.

NEWTON DISTRICT NOTES.

On Nov. 11 and 12 I was at First hurch, Laurel. I found the pastor and his congregation busy building a new church.

This church, when finished, will have all the other church buildings in Laurel completely overshadowed, both in beauty of appearance, and convenience of location, and will be one of the handsomest church buildings in our Conference. Dr. Weems, the efficient pastor, and his people are to be congratulated on their good fortune in securing such a desirable site upon which to build and on their choice of plan for the building. They are constructing a work shop rather than an art gallery. The apartments of the building are: auditorium, Sunday school room, kitchen, ladies' parlor, Epworth League hall, kindergarten, pastor's study, and seven Sunday school class rooms, so arranged that nearly all the apartments can be made into one room for special occasions.

Dr. Weems is closing out his second year at Laurel, and he has by his diligence and prudence made an enviable record, and has enshrined himself in the hearts of his people as few pastors are able to do.

From Laurel I went to Rose Hill, where I found the pastor, Rev. W. H. Lane, busy laying the foundation of a new church, which, when finished will be a credit to Rose Hill and will reflect honor on the builders. This is ie second church for Brother Lane o build this year, and the eighth hurch to be built on the district. Beides these we have repaired, and improved several old church buildings, and have built two parsonages, and bought another.

HERBS AND FLOWERS CURE CATARRH

A Safe, Simple, Reliable Remedy Which Costs Nothing to Try

You need not suffer from catarrh, bronchitis, lingering colds or other catarrhal troubles. After years of research and experiment Dr. Blosser discovered a compound of herbs, leaves and flowers which by a unique method is applied to every nook and corner of the mucous membrane in the head, nose, throat and lungs.

Any sufferer, after giving it a trial, can readily see why it is so greatly superior to such ordinary treatments as sprays, ointments, salves, liquid or tablet medicines, because all these do not and cannot reach all the affected parts, while Dr. Blosser's method reaches every spot; and this explains, at least in part, the wonderful success with which it is meeting. The full size package costs but one dollar. It is harmless, pleasant to use, and is easily applied even by a child.

No matter how deep-seated, your catarrh may be; no matter how long it has troubled you; no matter if other remedies have failed; you should give this treatment a trial, and it will do for you what it has done for thousands of other sufferers. Write at once to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., in order to avail yourself of his offer of a free trial package of the remedy and an illustrated booklet which gives all the facts about catarrh. It is not necessary to send any money —simply send your name and addres.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Mrs. Wallace, Elementary Superintendent of our Pollock Sunday school, has more than fifty babies on the Cradle Roll.

* * *

Mrs. R. H. Wynn has done a magnificent work with the "Loyal Soldiers" boys' class in the Monroe Sunday school. Her boys are mostly from homes more or less worldly, and yet she has seen three-fourths of them join the church this year, one being an Italian. Besides this, five of them have gone to college and joined Sunday schools there, and send their old teacher assurances of being firm in their Sunday school and religious course. Such Sunday school classes would go a long way towards solving "the boy problem." But alas, so many of the lambs are either not gathered into the fold, or are "fed" in such an indifferent sort of way that they have no relish for the food set before them to save a boy! To save a boy and put him through college!! To save a class of boys from worldly homes and give them back to the world cultured Christian gentlemen!!!

* * *

The Monroe Sunday school, under the three years' pastorate of Rev. R. H. Wynn, has come from a state of practical chaos to a standard of excellence approaching Dr. Chappell's standard for first-class schools. All departments are at work, with a total enrollment, including the Cradle Roll and Home Department, of about 600, with an average attendance in the regular sessions of 275. All the graded literature is being used with eminent satisfaction, and the need of room is forcing the consideration of enlarging and remodeling the Sunday school building, all manner of shifts now having to be resorted to to care for the classes with any degree of satisfaction. A specially fine record has been made in the financial line. A missionary program is given regularly each month. Miss Lacey is the superintendent, and last year made her programs bear on China. Mrs. John Monholland is doing fine work as elementary superintendent, and Mr. Burt Atkinson, the superintendent of a saw mill, drives six miles to teach the Bible class.

One of the most phenomenal class records in our Conference is the "G. R. O. W." mixed class of young people in the Monroe Sunday school taught by Mrs. Jack Parker. Beginning last year she has brought her class up to 150, almost wholly from non-attendants before, gathered from the by-ways, all caste lines being obliterated in her love and attention to her members. When the pastor names a person for her to seek, she almost has him there. She drives her buggy without stint in making and caring for her class, and makes liberal use of the mails, always sending cards to absentees at her own expense. One young man walks in five or six miles; and the rule in the class is to hold all it has and be on the active search for more. Recently 45 signed the temperance pledge, and the class has given $100 to the Louisiana State Sunday School Association's work.

In a large Men's Class the chariman of the sick committee and a half dozen of the members will plant a dozen bulbs apiece now, and have flowers for the classroom and for the sick and shut-in all winter.

If it is not advisable to have the membership committee in the Adult Bible Class elected for the year, have such a committee of twenty men whose duty it is to welcome strangers Sunday morning, call upon them, cultivate their friendship and win them to the class, and let this committee be appointed every four weeks.

No man has so gripped every city as has Mr. W. C. Pearce, Adult Bible Class Superintendent for North America, with his great appeal for Men's Bible Classes. These classes in North Mississippi are increasing in size, efficiency and good works every day and are planning to be one with his great work as it touches our home Conference.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'s class in New York states in its attractive and helpful year book that it has been organized seventeen years. Their motto has ever been, "To promote Christian Manhood among Young Men." hey further add a quotation from Dr. Faunce: "All young men who come to this class are welcome, regardless of party, creed or residence; the great question for us all is not where we come from, but where we are going to."

A NEW USE OF TERMS.

A rapidly increasing number of schools are becoming graded schools and a very large proportion of them are using the new graded lessons. This has brought about the necessity of a change in terms in connection with our work. At the International Convention at San Francisco, it was decided to make this change at once, and from this time on we will use the terms "Division," "Department" and "Grade." The Elementary Division will include the four departments, i.e., Cradle Roll Department, Beginners' Department, Primary Department and Junior Department. The Beginners' Department consists of two grades: first year and second year. The Primary Department has three grades: first year, second year and third year. The Junior Department has four grades: first year, second year, third year and fourth year.

An Innovation in Oil Heaters

The Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater, with its drums enameled in turquoise, is an ornament to any room, whether in the country or city home.

No home is quite complete without a Perfection Oil Heater. It is a necessity in the fall and spring, when it is too warm to start the regular heating apparatus, and too cool to be without heat. In the midst of winter it is often convenient as an auxiliary heater, as there are always some cold corners in a house.

The enameled heater always presents a nice appearance, as the enamel will not tarnish or burn off. It is not an "enamel paint," but it is the same as the enamel of your cooking utensils.

The Perfection is the most reliable and convenient portable heating device you can find. An automatically-locking flame spreader prevents turning the wick high enough to smoke.

Auditing Board.

Lake Charles, La., Nov. 16, 1911.

NOTICE—LOUISIANA PREACHERS!

The Assessment for Minutes is a small item in each charge, but because of the heavy cost of material and work, it is essential that the amount be paid in full. Your Minutes are sent to you without further cost, but unless we secure the full amount we may be under the necessity of having the preachers pay the express on the packages sent them. Please make the item for Minutes in full.

We also urge each preacher to have his Statistical Report ready for the secretaries by the close of the first session of the Conference. This will be necessary if the statistical report is to be read before the close of Conference. We especially urge carefulness in making out the reports, as a little care on the part of the preachers will save the secretaries considerable unnecessary labor. Sincerely,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Statistical Secretary.

A Warning to Many.

Some Interesting Facts Regarding Health Statistics.

Few people realize to what extent their health depends upon the condition of the kidneys.

The physicians, in nearly all cases of serious illness, makes a chemical analysis of the patient's urine. He knows that unless the kidneys are doing their work properly, the other organs cannot be brought back to health and strength.

When the kidneys are neglected or abused in any way, serious results are sure to follow. According to health statistics, Bright's disease, which is really an advanced form of kidney trouble, caused nearly ten thousand deaths in 1910, in the state of New York alone. Therefore, it behooves us to pay more attention to the health of these most important organs.

An ideal herbal compound that has had remarkable success as a kidney remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy.

The mild and healing influence of this preparation is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of cures.

If you feel that your kidneys require attention, and wish a sample bottle, write to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper and they will gladly forward it to you absolutely free, by mail.

Swamp-Root is sold by every druggist in bottles of two sizes—50c. and $1.00.

PORTRAIT OF BISHOP GALLOWAY UNVEILED.

An oil portrait of Bishop Charles B. Galloway, which is the work of Miss Willie Bettie Newman, of Nashville, Tenn., and a duplicate of the one lately painted by the same artist for Vanderbilt University, was unveiled in the chapel of Millsaps College on Wednesday morning, November 22, with appropriate ceremonies. The Jackson Daily News states that Methodist ministers from all parts of the State and scores of the intimate friends of Bishop Galloway were present, and that the audience was one of the largest ever assembled at the college. This journal further says: "Just prior to the ceremonies in the chapel, there was a distinguished procession from the Carnegie-Millsaps Library to the main building. Members of the Galloway Literary Society acted as marshals. The procession was headed by Major Millsaps, in whose honor the institution was named, and who, with Bishop Galloway, was chiefly responsible for its establishment. Next in line were Bishop W. A. Candler, of Georgia; Bishop Bratton, of the Protestant Episcopal Church; President D. C. Hull, members of the Board of Trustees, visiting ministers, members of the faculty, and the student body. The exercises opened at 11 o'clock with a Scripture lesson read by Rev. W. W. Woollard and prayer by Bishop Bratton. In the absence of Bishop Murrah, president of the Board of Trustees, Dr. A. F. Watkins, the vice-president, presided, opening the meeting with a brief statement.

Dr. Watkins' Remarks.

The hearts of many of us have been so sincerely given these twenty years to Millsaps College that it would be pardonable in us if we should account the slightest contribution to its welfare a matter of rejoicing. The pleasure that we feel does not come from the indulgence of an empty sentiment, nor from the gratification of denominational pride; but from the fact that we recognize in this institution the most potent single factor for good ever enterprised or maintained by the Methodists of Mississippi.

It is a happy fact in the history of Millsaps College that the institution has commanded the love of the common people. Thousands of the poor have contributed to its endowment; thousands of hands were stretched out in apprehension and in hope when it was launched; thousands of hearts have uttered the prayer that the blessings of God might rest upon it; and in these we rejoice.

But when we think of the influences that made for its founding and its prosperity, we recognize two in which we rejoice most of all. Two great men united in prayerful counsel for its founding, two great personalities wrought in unfailing service for its well-being. In one it was with a voice of golden eloquence; in the other, with hands of golden deeds. They are the twin pillars of its glory. In wisdom unfaltering, in love unsurpassed, in fruitful labor unequaled, they toiled, and in this institution, made possible by their united effort, are wrought the elements of their enduring fame.

One of them abides with us still, his great heart made happy by the manifest blessings of God upon this, the greatest investment of his laborious and successful life. The other has passed from the walks of men, and in his bodily presence we no longer behold him. But if, as men have fondly hoped, the spirits of the sainted dead turn back with undiminished love to the hallowed scenes of their earthly lives, we cannot doubt his spiritual presence with us here.

To us he is a treasured memory—the memory of a princely form, the memory of a royal face, the memory of an eloquent voice, the memory of one who, to some of us, take him all in all, was the greatest man we have ever known. I have called him a memory; he is more than a memory; he is an influence and an inspiration, an influence for good wrought in the lives of his people, and inspiration that tends to bring out the best in the hearts of those who loved him. But he was more than an influence and an inspiration. He is a great personality, and we would not speak of our pride and affection as feelings that were, and are not, but as feelings that abide and find their object in him who is, though we see him not. He is as one to whom the messengers of God have opened the door, and he has passed within and the door has closed, shutting him out from our sight. Without him Millsaps College would not have been what it is; nor Methodism in Mississippi; nor the great commonwealth that he loved; nor the great church for which he wrought.

We are gathered this morning to honor ourselves and to honor him in the presentation and unveiling of a portrait of him presented to the college by the Board of Trustees as a slight token of the pride with which they cherish his memory. We shall look upon his face as genius saw and reproduced it, and, if there be aught of weakness in this reproduction, it shall be corrected by the image in our hearts, where memory holds the face and where love has idealized it and made it more than beautiful. We shall not again hear the melody of his voice, nor see the flashing of his eye; but we shall look upon this portrait and feel that his splendid character will ever be an inspiration to the young men of this institution.

It is very fitting that the Board, who presents this portrait, should be represented by his life-long and devoted friend, Mr. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, who will now discharge this pleasant duty.

Mr. Bingham's Address.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:

The fame of Charles B. Galloway is world-wide and is secure. It will prove more lustrous with the passing years. The hundred thousand dollar school property in Arkansas—Galloway College; the half-million-dollar hospital being built on the campus of Vanderbilt University—the Galloway Memorial Hospital; the handsome house of worship soon to be erected in this city, which he loved so well—the Galloway Memorial Church—all attest the love and loyalty of devoted and faithful hearts. This magnificent school property within whose precincts we are met to-day is a monument to him, and to that noble friend of his whose presence is a perpetual benediction. Far distant be the day when we will tell all the thought and love we have for that friend of his, and ours!

As the heart of David and the heart of Jonathan were knit together, so were knit the heart of Bishop Galloway and the heart of Major Millsaps!

Many here to-day recall how, with full hearts and overflowing eyes, we heard Bishop Galloway preach, with eloquence known to the tones of his voice only, our Commencement sermon on Friendship, using for a text that beautiful incident in the lives of David and Jonathan. Our hearts were warmed, indeed, on that ever-memorable occasion. Not "strangely warmed," as Mr. Wesley said of his own heart on the notable event in his life: for we never heard Bishop Galloway speak in the precincts of his own hospitable home, or in our homes, that "our hearts did not burn within us as he opened to us the Scriptures," and spoke to us of the great things of the kingdom.

Conscious of and grateful for what he was to mankind, to Methodism, to Mississippi, to us, the Trustees of Millsaps College have exquisite and infinite pleasure in presenting to the college a portrait of the Board's first president, Methodism's greatest leader, Mississippi's foremost citizen, mankind's fast friend—a man who was loved on all continents. During the recent great Ecumenical Conference in the city of Toronto, a gentleman introduced himself to Mrs. Bingham and me and remarked, "I am from New Zealand."

In responding to the introduction, I remarked, "We are from Mississippi." "Ah!" said he, as his face brightened, "you knew Bishop Galloway. What a great man he was!"

A prominent mission worker from the city of London, in addressing the Conference, spoke of his pleasure in having been a member of the Ecumenical Conference in London ten years before, and of the benefit to him from hearing the opening sermon by Bishop Galloway. "It was the most impressive sermon," said he, "I ever heard." Such incidents are characteristic, and might be multiplied. He was loved in all lands—nowhere as in Mississippi, where he wrought most and was best known. Great preacher, great Bishop, great citizen; greatest as friend—our greatest friend.

In having this portrait made we do not so much honor him as we honor ourselves. He needs not this expression. We do need it. We give it into the keeping of an institution which was dear to him, and is dear to us, so that Methodists and Mississippians to the latest generation may know that we had capacity to appreciate greatness and goodness.

At the close of Mr. Bingham's address the portrait was unveiled by Miss Stella McGehee, a granddaughter of Bishop Galloway, assisted by Rev. N. B. Harmon, and as the soft, white folds were slowly drawn aside the rich and beautiful voice of Mrs. H. R. Shands rendered Bishop Galloway's favorite hymn, "Abide With Me." Reverently the audience arose and gazed at the portrait of the man so well-beloved in life, and whose memory is so devoutly cherished in death. Tears started from many eyes as they beheld the familiar form. It was a presentment of Bishop Galloway as he appeared about fifteen years ago, when at the zenith of his physical and mental powers, and as his intimate friends like best to remember him.

The Picture Accepted.

As soon as the audience was seated, Dr. Watkins presented, Rev. D. C. Huli, president of Millsaps College, who on behalf of that institution, accepted the portralt in the following words:

I am deeply sensible of the honor that falls to me as the president of the College in receivlng this rare, this priceless gift. On behalf of the faculty, the students, and the friends of the college, I express to you, the donors, gentlemen of the Board of Trustees, our grateful appreciation.

We rejoice this day, one and all, in the sad privilege of joining with you in thus honoring the memory of the great and good man whose portrait has just been unvelled before us. Our hearts respond to every sentiment of praise for his greatness, to every feeling of pride in his achievements, to every emotion of sorrow in his death, and to every appeal for the emulation of his splendid life.

We are proud of the heritage that is bequeathed us in the memory of Bishop Galloway. We remember the standard of exalted duty and unswerving fealty which he set for us in laboring as a citizen of our commonwealth for the cause of civic righteousness. We remember the unrlvaled eloquence and power of his utterances as a messenger of God; and we have a grateful pride in the unlversal recognition of his gifts as a preacher, within the borders of his own State, in the other States and the larger clties of this nation, and even in the metropolis of Great Britain. We pay tribute with you this morning to the beauty of his private life, to the purity of his character, to the depth and sweetness of his spiritual nature. And last of all, we remember his devotion to the interests of this college, the zeal with which he labored for its development, and the wisdom with which he aided in the administration of its affairs. We remember his unfalling interest and his tender love for the students of the college, especially for those whose means were slender and whose struggles were, therefore, hard.

And so this morning, as citizens of the commonwealth which was honored with his citizenship, and as members of the college which he loved and for which he labored, we feel that we have a personal part in the heritage of his life. For all these reasons, therefore, we have pride in this gift which you have hrought to us, and we have warm appreciation of the fact that it has been prompted by tender, loving regard for him and by kindly and unfailing interest in us.

There can be no more helpful influence in the development of that which is truest and best in young manhood than contact with a great life. Herein, Bishop Galloway was a henediction to the students of this college. His home was always open to them, and they were there the recipients of a gracious hospitality and a loving kindliness that was inspiring and most helpful. We are indeed grateful for the kind providence through which we are yet blessed with these helpful and beneficent influences. We make grateful acknowledgment to Sister Galloway for her continued and loving interest in us and pray that she may long live to hless the hoys and girls of this college with the gentleness and goodness of this most gracious home.

And now that the great life of Bishop Galloway has passed from earth to Heaven, it is our privllege to cherish his memory, as it is our duty to emulate his virtues. And so we are glad to have his likeness adorn these walls, we are blessed in the privilege of looking upon it day by day, and we shall hope, God willlng, that as we thus look upon it we shall catch the vision of those matchless qualities of mind and spirit that once illumined that kindly face and shone in that kingly eye. And, as we catch that vision, may these qualities be transfused into our own lives, and may we thus become better and greater for having looked upon this manly form and thought upon this godly life!

Bishop Candler, one of Bishop Galloway's closest and most devoted friends, was hen introduced, and paid the following beautiful tribute to his former colleague:

Bishop Candler's Tribune.

When the poet, William Cowper, was scarcely six years old his mother died, leaving a life-long sorrow in his heart. About ten years hefore his own death, his cousin, Ann Bodham, sent him a portrait of her whose departure he had never ceased to lament. Acknowledging the precious gift, he wrote his cousin: "The world could not have furnished you with a present so acceptable to me as the picture you have so kindly sent me. I received it the night hefore last, and viewed it with a trepidation of nerves and spirits, somewhat akin to what I should have felt had the dear original presented herself to my embrace. I kissed it, and hung it where it is the last ohject that I see at night, and the first on which I open my eyes in the morning."

The gift inspired that most beautiful and tender poem entitled: "On the Receipt of My Mother's Picture Out of Norfolk," beginning with the ardent exclamation, "Oh, that those lips had language!" and continuing,

"Those lips are thine—thy own sweet smile I see,
The same that oft in childhood solaced me;
Voice only fails, else how distinct they say,
Grieve not my child; chase all tby fears away!'
The meek inteiligence of those dear eyes
(Blest be the art that can immortalize—
The art that baffles time's tyrannic claim
(To quench it) here shines on me still the same."

In some sucb frame of mind we look upon the portrait unveiled to-day, "faithful remembrancer of one so dear" to us all.

"Not willingly alone, but gladly," as if called by his own request, I come to speak at this hour.

"And while that face renews my poignant grief
Fancy shall weave a charm for my relief,
Shall steep me in Elysian revery,
A momentary dream that it is he."

Couid we indeed cali him back and turn his painted portrait into his princely person, would we?

"I would not trust my heart—the dear delight
Seems so to be desired, perhaps I might.
But no! What here we call our life is such—
So little to be loved, and he so much—
That we should ill requlte him to constrain
His unbound spirit into bonds again."

Yet we long to have back what we would not retake, and to-day, while looking upon this likeness to himself which the artist has made we find comfort and inspiration in recalling his high services and his still more lofty character.

To set forth adequately and worthlly all that he was and all tbat he did, requires gifts of speech equal to the great powers which he himself possessed, and which placed him in the front rank of the most eloquent men of the times in which he lived. Would that I were able to bring to this occasion such ability! Then he should be presented to you almost as if he lived again before you, even as his own eloquence called back Lamar, with his hurning words, and Davis, with his diction, dignified and elegant! But alas! when death sealed his lips and hushed his voice, no one was left among us able to set forth in a manner hefitting the theme such a man and such a life. However, you, who are assembled here knew him so well and loved him so tenderly that your knowledge of him and affection for him will make up for my inability to do full justice to him.

American Methodists—American Christianity—has produced many eloquent men who have, by their exalted powers, promoted the faith which gave them birth. Henry B. Bascom and George F. Pierce, Matthew Simpson and Enoch M. Marvin, Phillips Brooks and Richard S. Storrs, Benjamin M. Palmer and John A. Broadus, were men who would have been illustrious in any age of tbe Church; and Charles Betts Galloway is altogether worthy of a chief place among those great spirits who adorned and advanced the heavenly cause to which they and he devoted their holy lives. When he passed away, May 12, 1909, he was esteemed hy the people of our country, without regard to sect or section, as one of the foremost orators in the nation, if, indeed, we may not say the foremost. Born in Mississippi, breathing the atmosphere of the commonwealth he loved so well, and nourished hy its traditions, his eloquence reflected many of the characteristics of the other great orators whose triumphs shed lustre upon its history. In him there was something of the sparkling brilliance of Prentiss, the splendid dignity of Davis, and the irresistible fervor of Lamar. And all his great gifts were laid in charming humility, beautiful simplicity, and unreserved consecration upon the altar of the Church. He was not ignorant of the great political questions and social issues of the day, nor was he indifferent to them, nor insensible to the solemn obligations of citizenship. But first of all he was a preacher of the gospel of Christ. His princely form, his graceful hearing, his persuasive voice, his brilliant intellect, his elevated character, and his unaffected spirituality qualified him preeminently for the pulpit. It is easier to think of him as never having been at all, than to conceive of him as being without heing the preacher he was.

But his pulpit gifts were not all the qualities which made him conspicuous among his comtemporaries for greatness in life and usefulness in service. In him was found a combination of excellencies seldom united in one man. He was as versatile in his gifts as he was varied in his services. Men possessed of the oratorical temperament and remarkable for eloquence rarely excel in administrative ability and executive capacity; their genius for speech seems to unfit them for conceiving in detail or executing with patience the plans required for the successful achievement of the great objects which they perceive in vision. But he was equally efficient in the pulpit or in the presidency of a great body. He was wise in council and strong in the direction of men and in the management of affairs. When he preached men were enthralled, as if a seer opened to them things invisible, and when they took counsel with him they heeded his judgment as though they listened to the common-sense of a man of business, or yielded to the guidance of a far-seeing statesman. Indeed, publicists in the highest stations sought his advice to their great advantage and to the profit of the state and the nation.

When we recall what he was, we are not surprised by what he did. His varied labors were the natural and inevitable fruit of his richly endowed life. Royal in nature, his bountiful services became him as a crown becomes a king. From the beginning of his ministry in 1868 to its close in 1909, he was a teacher, a pastor, and editor, and a Bishop of his Church; and in every position to which he was called he did his work with distinguished success, doing it with an unstrained ease equaled only hy bis unmatched ability. What a vast amount of work he did during those busy forty-one years! From his pen flowed great sermons, convincing and opinion-making editorials, charming letters of foreign travel, captivating lectures before colleges and universities, wonderful addresses on notable occasions, powerful appeals to conferences and conventions, great arguments before legislatures and the people, interesting and instructive books, and splendid orations upon the lives and characters of mighty men in Church and State. And consider what multiplied causes enlisted his interest and commanded his energies—education and temperance, the moral and material interests of his own people, the welfare of the dependent race in our midst, and the salvation of peoples living in gospelless lands clouded by the deep shadows of spiritual night. His voice was beard in Europe, Asia, America, and the islands of the sea, pleading with persuasive power for every good cause and assailing with invincible force every bad thing. Who in his day did so much? Who did so many things? And who did so many things well?

Let no one imagine, however, that he was a fickle and fitful smatterer, hastening from one thing to another, according as his zeal flamed for a novelty and flagged when the newness of the object was passed. He never sought a position, or schemed for a change of work. From task to task he went, the burdens and cares of life ever increasing upon him; but he went always at the bidding of his Church and under tbe behest of his sense of duty. And bis sense of responsihility never suffered him to do carelessly anytbing that he undertook. What he did was done with painstaking thoroughness. For his beautiful treatment of Charles Wesley, he studied hymnology, and for his masterly discourses upon Lamar and Davis he studied the men and the events of their time with analytic power. In his work as an editor he gave himself to a wide range of reading, and for his labors as a Bishop he scrutinized religious movements in all ages and climes. How he did so much while travelling so continuously and responding so readily to all calls upon him for service is past understanding.

Apart from his sense of duty and the constraining love of Christ there is no explanation of a life so heroic in spirit, so tireless in toil, and so abundant in labors. These motives, and these alone, are sufficient to explain his unwearying labors and courageous consecration. Hereby we understand why at Vicksburg he dared the peril of pestilence, while in the path of duty walking undismayed to the very gates of death. Tbis explains his fearless editorials and his brave public utterances, the very excellence of which was manifest in that they outran public sympatby and incurred the censure of more timid and less noble minds. He took no counsel with fear; and without claiming more than his conduct justified, he might have said with apostolic truthfulness, "None of these tbings move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify tbe gospel of the grace of God."

His courageous consecration and eagerness to labor led us, perhaps, to lay too many burdens upon him. If so, grievously have we paid for our wrong! His goodness and his greatness tempted us, and we yielded to the allurement of his gracious brotherliness. He did so love to work! In one of his last letters that he wrote me he said: "I hope I may yet he well enough to work, which is my greatest joy." Oh, he was a joyous worker, glad and radiant and generous as the light of the morning, brightening a world, and blessing into beauty and fruitfulness the hills and valleys which it transfigures with its beams!

But great as were his attainments and wide as were his achievements, we loved him most—and do love him still—just for himself. More moving than the magic of his eloquence was the winsomeness of his charming personality; sweeter than the mellifluous periods which flowed from his prophetic lips, were the unfailing currents of his tender brotherliness; and more captivating than even his great public services were the blessed ministries of friendship and love in the private ways of life. Whether he entered our homes, or we entered his, where he was there was always an atmosphere as fragrant as the breath of heaven. To some of us—to many thousands, doubtless—the earth has been less like home since he went out of it. The chords of our hearts quiver at the sound of his name, and we look at the mute likeness which art has drawn of his princely form and kindly features, and exclaim, "Oh, that those lips had language!"

Well, in a sense, and a very high sense, they do have language. They speak to us of an unselfishness which excluded every ungenerous thought or impulse; they call us to that perfect courage, sprung of perfect love, which casts out all fear; and they exhort us to that unwearied consecration which, filled with the spirit of Christ, in both public and private life goes about doing good. Nay, through the portals of the tomb we hear him in tones sweet as the songs of them with whom he walks in light, more compelling than ever, just because he has passed out of our sight, entreating us with Pauline tenderness, "My beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord; for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

No life like his, though it fell short of the allotted years of man, can ever be in vain. Its influence (and far more its essence) is imperishable. It masters hearts, commands reverence as far as it is known, and projects its power on immortal spirits into the eternal world.

While we kindle anew in our hearts to-day the flame of our admiration and affection for him, he is equally esteemed and loved in other lands. Tenderly his name is pronounced by people dwelling beyond the seas and speaking in tongues unknown to us.

Thucydides records an oration of Pericles on the dead heroes of Athens, in which the great Athenian orator is reported as saying: "The whole earth is the sepulchre of noble men; not only are they commemorated by columns and inscriptions in their own country, but in foreign lands there is also an unwritten memorial of them, graven not on stone but in the hearts of men." Far, far beyond the limits of the fame and affection which Pericles claimed for the fallen soldiers of Athens, the name of Charles Betts Galloway is as ointment poured forth. In Canada and the United States, in Europe and the Orient, thousands of holy men and devout women have raised in their hearts imperishable memorials that testify to the elevation of his character and the excellency of his deeds.

But more than to all others he must be doubly dear to Mississippians, and as nowhere else in his beloved commonwealth, must he ever be held in veneration and affection at this institution of learning, for the establishment and development of which he labored so zealously. It is a blessing to the young men of Millsaps College that his portrait looks down upon them from these walls. Emerson has said, "Great men exist, that there may be greater," and this occasion is an exhortation and an inspiration to these young men to emulate the exalted life of him whose noble form before them stands in this portrait as a perpetual reminder of his greatness and goodness.

In Melrose Abbey there is a grave which is most singular and suggestive among the sepulchres of earth. When Bruce was dead, it is said, Douglas had the heart of the fallen hero encased in a silver casket which he suspended from his neck and ever wore upon his breast. Hard pressed in battle he loosed the cord which held it and, throwing the precious treasure among his advancing foes, exclaimed: "And thou brave heart of Bruce, go first in fight as thou wast wont, and Douglas will follow thee or die." From the field where he fell, the body of Douglas was borne for burial to Melrose, and in his grave they laid the heart of Bruce upon his breast. Young men, take into your hearts the image of this princely man, follow it in life's battles for the right, and, falling down upon fields of honor, let it rest upon your bosoms as you sleep beneath the soil of his and your own beloved Mississippi.

And may I not be permitted to speak, even on this public occasion, a word to our honored and beloved friend (Major R. W. Millsaps), by whose munificence this institution was founded? You well deserve the esteem and affection of your neighbors and brethren and fellow-citizens, and no small part of your satisfaction to-day must be in the fact that you and he were so long and so closely associated, especially in the establishment of this institution. We can scarcely think long of our dear Bishop without thoughts of you coming to keep company with our recollection of him. You are not as young as when you and he projected this educational enterprise. Fondly we hope you will remain with us yet many years, but it may be that you will outrun some of us and overtake him in the heavenly country before we join him there. If so, tell him when you strike hands in that happy land that we love him yet and will love him forever. Assure him that we are trying to establish more and more firmly the labor of his hands; that if we neglected it, we should feel unworthy of his welcome to the skies when our days too are ended. Tell him the world in which we are tarrying for a time is better to live in than it would have been if he had not lived and labored before us; but that it is more lonesome to some of us since he went home. And then do you and him keep watch for us; for we, too, expect to get home some day, and, with the loved ones whom we have "lost awhile," be forever with the Lord.

THE NORTH MISSISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AT MACON.

The forty-second session of the North Mississippi Conference will convene in Macon, Nov. 29, 1911. with Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson, of Baltimore, Md., senior Bishop of the Church, presiding. This will be the second time of his holding the Conference; the first being the session at Oxford in 1897.

He was born in 1834; entered the ministry in the Baltimore Conference; was elected Missionary Secretary in 1878 and Bishop in 1882. Though aged in years, he retains vigor of spirit and mind, and yet ranks, as of years past, as one of the leading pulpit men in America. We are glad of his coming and will give him a unanimous and hearty welcome.

This will be the fourth Methodist Annual Conference held in Macon. The first was the Alabama Conference, Nov. 24 to Dec. 3, 1858. Bishop Paine was president; Thos W. Dorman, secretary; T. Y. Ramsey, presiding elder; W. M. Linfield, preacher in charge.

It may be noted that the session continued ten days, a fact not unusual in those years, when, as compared with the present, there was less of haste to get away and more of prayer and Conference together in the interest of the Church and for personal improvement.

BISHOP A. W. WILSON,

Senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and one of the foremost figures in American Methodism. He is presiding over the North Mississippi Conference, at Macon, Miss., this week.

The second was the ninth session of the North Mississippi Conference, Dec. 11-16, 1878, with Bishop Paine presiding; John Barcroft, secretary; R. K. Porter, presiding elder; W. S. Harrison, preacher in charge. The visitors present were Dr. W. C. Johnson, editor of the Western Methodist; Dr. Young, secretary of Vanderbilt University, and Dr. Bruner, president of Hiwassee College.

The third was the twenty-second session of the same Conference, Dec. 2-7, 1891, when Bishop Hendrix was president; J. S. Oakley, secretary; W. T. J. Sullivan, presiding elder; J. H. Mitchell, preacher in charge. Among the visitors were T. B. Holt, treasurer of the Board of Missions; Dr. (now Bishop) Lambuth, superintendent of the mission in Japan; Dr. A. S. Andrews, of the Southern University; Revs. D. L. Mitchell and B. F. Lewis, of the New Orleans Christian Advocate and Dr. M. B. Chapman, of the St. Louis Christian Advocate. At this Conference was created the Kosciusko (now the Durant District) in compliance with the following unanimous action: "Resolved, That it is the sense of this Conference that several of the districts are too large and that we recommend the formation of at least one additional district."

It is the wish of a great many of the preachers and laymen that like action be taken at the coming session.

Macon Circuit first appears in the Conference Minutes in 1835, with E. Calloway, preacher in charge, and in Greensborough District, E. V. Levert, presiding elder.

From a historical sketch given, I quote as follows: "The town of Macon was located in 1835, and the following year the record of deeds shows where the Board of Police transferred fractional Block No. 7 to the town for the uses of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Presbyterian Church. The former built on their part a wooden structure which now stands on Eighth Street, but has been remodled for a dwelling house. Macon Methodism, therefore, began with the town. The development of the town of Macon, Miss., host of the North Mississippi Conference.

and church were rapid and the first provision for the accommodation of Methodist worshipers was entirely inadequate to the needs. Accordingly the old property was sold, and in 1852 a substantial brick structure was erected on Jefferson Street. Upon the building of this new house of worship Macon became a station."

This brick building was remodeled in 1897 under the pastorate of J. A. Randolph, and in 1904 the new parsonage was built by W. W. Mitchell. As a station it began with R. S. Finley, preacher in charge, and Elisha Calaway, presiding elder (Gainesville District). Membership reported at the close of the first year was 103 white, 55 colored.

The Church, under the present efficient administration of Pastor R. H. B. Gladney and Presiding Elder J. E. Thomas, is in a prosperous state. There is continued increase of membership and of liberality in support of the various interests of the Church. The Sunday school, Epworth League and Woman's Missionary Societies are well officered by excellent men and women, and all are doing good work.

Macon will be ready to receive the Conference with cordial welcome and to entertain her guests with royal hospitality. May the Holy Spirit be present in mighty power to make the occasion a great blessing to all, both hosts and guests.

The new Army and Navy Branch Y. M. C. A. building at Newport, dedicated last Thursday, was given by Mrs. Thomas J. Emory, of Cincinnati, a summer resident of Newport. Its cost was $275,000. It contains 114 rooms, with 140 beds, besides gymnasium, swimming pool, restaurant and class rooms, and is regarded as an improvement even upon the great buildings for similar purposes at Fortress Monroe and New York.

The Baptist State Convention, of Mississippi, by a vote of 103 to 63, decided to locate their proposed college for the education of young ladies at Hattiesburg. The institution will have to start with sixteen acres of land, on which there are two well equipped dormitories. This property was donated by the people of the city to secure the establishment of the school among them. The convention also chose 27 trustees to serve one, two, and three years, the terms of nine of them expiring every year.

The Foreign Mission Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church received $84,000 less for its regular work this year than last. The debt of this board has increased within the past twelve months from $98,600 to $171,976. There was a gain in specials of $118,000, making the total receipts for the present year slightly larger than those of last year. The income of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension also showed a small decrease. This board also is carrying an indebtedness of $72,000.

In the Texas Christian Advocate of November 16, Dr. Rankin writes at length of the service rendered the Methodism of that State by Bishop James Atkins within the past two years. He attributes not a little of the success achieved in that commonwealth in the correlation of our institutions of learning and the establishment of the Southern Methodist University at Dallas to his wise and tactful leadership. He affirms that his work in every respect has given great satisfaction both to the clergy and laity of the Conferences over which he has presided.

The Salvation Army is planning to reach at the approaching Christmas, in one form or another, 300,000 persons. It counts upon reaching 20,000 in Chicago; 8,000 in St. Louis; 12,000 in Boston, and at least 30,000 in New York and vicinity. The principal ways of helping this vast number will be with food and clothing. The Army's publication is to issue at Christmas 325,000 copies. It will contain greetings and commendations from Governors Dix, of New York; Wilson, of New Jersey; Hooper, of Tennessee; Senator Warren, of Wyoming, and others.

Reports from the Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur indicate success in securing funds from Baptists, largely from Southern ones, to assist the Baptist propaganda in Russia. As president of the World Alliance, Dr. MacArthur expects to sail for Russia in about a fortnight, hoping to interview the Czar and ask for larger religious freedom, not for Baptists merely, but for all bodies, including the Jews. Dr. MacArthur will take part in the dedication of a new Baptist Church in St. Petersburg, assist in Baptist services in Moscow, and then proceed on a world tour of inspection of Baptist mission work. He will be absent a year, and perhaps longer.

The Memphis Conference at its recent session reported a gain of 1,600 in membership. The showing made by the churches in the city of Memphis was notably good, as will be seen from the following figures giving the number of members received by several of them: First Church, 300; Lenox, 82; Madison Heights, 120; Mississippi Avenue, 80; Second Church, 133; St. John's, 112; Washington Heights, 42. The Conference voted to take complete control of the Female Institute at Jackson, of which Dr. S. A. Steel is president, and pledged itself to raise $30,000 for the school on the condition that the citizens of Jackson will raise an equal amount. The body also formally declared its purpose to raise $5,000 for the representative church to be constructed at Washington City.

PEN POINTS.

By Rev. L. C. Calhoun.

It is of vital importance to perceive the difference in a general revival of religion and a mere stir up. The first is achieved by the Word spoken under the influence of the Spirit, and the hearers having real faith. The latter may be brought about by an appeal simply to the emotions. This kind of revival, so called, has been referred to as a cornstalk revival. It is superficial and transitory, the converts not holding out.

It has been said that in hell the memory will serve only as a cruel engine to rake up the ashes of guilty deeds and to overwhelm the soul in an abyss of sorrow, and that the understanding there, like a condemned criminal, will be shut up in that dark dungeon to brood forever over its own calamity. Great God, how deplorable the condition of thy creatures that desert thee and wilfully accomplish their own destruction!

If a person buys books merely upon the recommendation of some people, he will make a very great mistake. There is great diversity of opinion in regard to the intellectual and moral value of literature. There are some books that are so dry, so to speak, that almost as soon as you open them you can nearly see the dust flying from their pages. It takes a special amount of wisdom to always make the proper selection.

In reading some secular journals I get the impression from their editorials that they have the following theory: If a moral evil gets to be popular with people generally, let it be legalized and make it a source of revenue. That is preposterous. Such are like some were in the days of Isaiah who said, "Bitter is sweet, and sweet is bitter." The Spirit saith, "Woe unto such!" Facts are incidental things and a knowledge of them is important, but real progress is hinged mainly on a knowledge of principles; these have their application in facts. The Psalmist said: "Open thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law." I believe that the word "law" here includes the whole scope of principles which are absolutely permanent—"they cannot be shaken." Unstable souls do not follow principles.

* * *

Writers who write many books, including many subjects, must have an extensive knowledge of words. One great advantage in writing much is that it is specially helpful in "enlarging ones vocabulary." One who does not write is apt (unconsciously) to get into ruts in conversation or in public speaking.

The idea of good morals does not figure in the minds of many in regard to government affairs. Not a few look mainly to material prosperity, and will vote for men to fill offices whom they know to possess bad morals. Men who seek an office merely for its honors and emoluments are anarchists at heart. "When the wicked rule, the people mourn," because their liberties are trifled with and their safety is not secured.

It is common in the lives of Christians to have to pass John Bunyan's two lions, the one on one side and the other on the other side of the road to the Celestial City, and though chained, the chains are so long that these ferocious beasts get their noses very close together indeed; and the utmost care is required in passing between them in safety. Every one must keep right in the middle of the road in order to escape them. This is in accord with Scripture.

LAYMEN'S MOVEMENT TO THE CHURCHES.

The general secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, Mr. J. Campbell White, has issued a message to the churches of the United States and Canada, calling attention to the fact that the Movement was five years old on November 15 last. The secretary thinks that the past five years have witnessed the most extensive and inspiring increase of missionary interest during modern times. The greatest series of union meetings for Christian men ever held in North America, has occurred during this period. Several hundred thousand men have been reached directly, and many more indirectly.

The movement has proved, thinks the secretary, that intelligent enthusiasm for foreign missions is not hindrance, but a help to every other Christian activity. With larger offerings for work abroad have come larger gifts for work at home. Thousands of men's missionary committees have been appointed as a result of its agitation, and all of these work for both home and foreign missions. The spirit of Christian unity has had a phenomenal development. Great communions are now co-operating to a degree supposed to be impossible five years ago. Far higher standings of Christian stewardship are coming to be recognized and adopted. That most expensive of all human effort, prayer, is being offered with multiplying frequency by laymen.

The secretary states that financial gains to missions during the five years are the greatest ever made during a similar period by the churches of entire nations. The churches of Canada have increased from $1,492,300 to $2,216,000 annually in their combined home and foreign gifts. Taking the United States and Canada together, the increase of foreign missions alone has been from $8,980,000 to $13,350,000 annually, or a gain of about 50 per cent. In addition to this increase to current gifts, more than $5,000,000 have been raised during the past two years in special equipment or endowment for foreign work.

The secretary says the movement expects to cooperate with the missionary agencies of the churches until the work of world evangelization is actually accomplished. At present there are twenty regular paid secretaries of the movement, and the number is steadily increasing. The movement is not a spasmodic or temporary sentiment, says the secretary, but the expression of a profound and determined purpose to rally and hold the men of the churches to the accomplishment of the greatest task ever committed to human agency.

Whitworth College.

Oct. 26, 1911.

Session 1911-1912: enrollment 232 (two hundred and thirty-two). A few vacancies in the boarding department. One hundred and thirty in the music department. College was never more prosperous than now.

Each graduate of the Brookhaven High School, 1910-1911, entered Whitworth College in September. This is an evidence the College is appreciated at home. The faculty is giving unusual satisfaction. Prospects are good for an enrollment of 265, session 1911-1912—a record of which Whitworth friends are delighted. Send for catalogue. Address,

A Conference of the High School principals of Louisiana will be held at the State University, at Baton Rouge, on December 8 and 9. It is stated that there are in the State about 100 of these schools, and that 40 others are appiying to be added to the list. The principal question discussed at this meeting will be how to improve the high school course.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie has promised the ladies of Clarksdale, Miss., $10,000 for a public library. The city council has agreed to appropriate $1,000 annually for its maintenance. This is a movement in the right direction. Many of our towns would do well to follow the example of this progressive little city, and provide wholesome reading matter for their people.

To mark the fiftieth anniversary of John Wanamaker's start in business in Philadelphia, the 14,000 employes of Mr. Wanamaker have presented him with a deed to his birthplace, together with a jubilee book containing the signature of every one of these employes. The recipient has made of this property the site for a Robert C. Ogden Memorial Hosptial.

The pecan industry is reported to be growing on the Mississippi Coast, the present investment in it being estimated at a million dollars. The crop this year is computed to be about 300,000 pounds, for which, it is said, a ready market is found at prices varying from 15 to 75 cents per pound. Orders have been received for shipments to the White House at Washington and to parties residing in England.

A National Woman's Anti-Suffrage Society is in process of organization in New York City. It is stated that Mrs. Arthur Dodge will likely be elected president, and that the movement will have the active support of Mrs. J. Piermont Morgan. It is affirmed that one of the first things undertaken will be the repeal of the Amendment to the Constitution of California granting the right of franchise to the women of that State.

Mr. William S. Hemingway, president of the Mississippi Audubon Society, states that an effort will be made to organize junior societies named for the great naturalist in the public schools of that State. The object in view is two-fold: to promote the protection of birds by awakening a kindlier feeling for them, and to promote the study of ornithology. We think this is a most laudable undertaking. Our children ought unquestionably to be given a larger acquaintance with their bird neighbors.

The monetary situation in China seems to be alarming. According to reports the revolutionists are issuing $11,200,000 worth of bonds. It is also stated that the Imperial government has tried to borrow money from the foreign powers, but in vain. The American National Red Cross is in need of funds to carry on its work in the Chinese Empire. The rebellion is causing suffering that cannot be portrayed in language, and famine and pestilence are prevailing to an awful extent in many localities. The situation is serious, and no one can tell what or when the end wil be.

Among other good things said by President J. G. Schurman, of Cornell University, in his address to the students of Tulane University was the following: "A great change has come over the students of universities and their ideals in the last ten years. In former days every student wanted to be a Croesus, a Carnegie or a Rockefeller. In the last decade the rank and file of students, and among them the ablest, have come to place service to the community as their highest ideal." He classed this ideal as the "supreme ideal." In this statement we heartily agree with Mr. Schurman, for the highest privilege of man is to serve others.

The football season is now about over, and a summary of the fatalities resulting from the sport shows twelve deaths, against more than a score last year. But while there has heen a less loss of life this year than last, the number of persons sustaining serious injuries shows a startling increase. It is announced that 521 players have been injured to such an extent to incapacitate them for further participation in the game. It is reported that not a few of those hurt are still in hospitals, and that some of them are not yet out of danger. Such a record ought certainly to lead to the adoption of new rules, or to the abolishment of the sport altogether as a part of college athletics.

A dispatch from Montgomery, Ala., to the Times-Democrat states that three opossum farms are in operation near that city, the total number of animals in the pens being 500. Opossums are reported to be selling at from $1.25 to $2, which it is declared to be almost clear profit. The first farm, operated by a negro, is said to have started with two male and two female opposums; these have multiplied until the number on this farm is now 126. The most suspicious thing about this dispatch is that this industry is represented as having originated with a colored brother. That Cuffy would keep a pair of oppossums off the table long enough for them to raise a family, is a statement which taxes credulity not a little.

Henry Clay Beattie, who was convicted of murdering his wife on the Midlothian pike, near Richmond, Va., on July 18, was electrocuted on November 24. Before his execution he confessed himself guilty of the crime with which he was charged. The Richmond papers are said to have printed a minute description of how the prisoner died and all the attending circumstances, utterly disregarding the following law of the State: "No newspaper or person shall print or publish a detailed account of the execution of criminals. Only the fact that the criminal was executed shall be printed or published." This is a most wholesome law and the authorities should insist upon its faithful observance.

The Woman's Dispensary in this city, is enjoying a large degree of prosperity. This institution was opened in June 1, 1905, and during the first year of its history 3,760 patients, and 15,941 treatments were reported. On account of its growing patronage, it has twice had to change its quarters, and is now overcrowded. There is talk of taking steps to construct a modern building, with the latest equipment, in the near future. The current expenses of the institution annually amount to $10,000. Of this the State contributes $2,000 and the city $1,500. The managers, physicians, and nurses of this hospital are all women. They do not confine their good work within the walls of their building, but send trained workers into many homes of want and suffering. Indeed, it is one of the noblest and most successful of the many charities of the Crescent City.

TWO BROTHERLY ADDRESSES.

At the recent Ecumenical Methodist Conference, in Toronto, the relation of the different branches of Methodism was given careful consideration. In an admirable address on "Economy in the Use of Force and Means," Dr. Homer C. Stuntz, of the Methodist Episcopal, gave utterance to the following impressive and brotherly words:

"We must have greater economy in the employment of workers and the spending of the King's treasure. See the lack of economy in our home fields! It is heart-breaking. Twelve branches of Methodists are at work in North America! That is three times the number demanded by national, racial or strategic reasons. Many of these churches occupy the same areas. They crowd their churches and pastors into the same cities and villages. They tax a poor constituency to erect two or more houses of worship and to support several ministers, where one good church, and one minister adequately supported, would count for more in the moral and spiritual life of the community than several debt-burdened little chapels, with a discouraged membership, and preachers starved in soul and body. It is to no purpose that we discuss the question of the falling off of the supply of candidates for the ministry, until we have ceased putting two or three ministers where the dictates of sound reason only call for one. If local resources proved adequate to continue this policy of denominational wastefulness, the case would not be so desperate. But this is not true. Several of these Methodist bodies spend large sums of home missionary money annually to keep these gasping institutions from dying out."

This forceful and fraternal utterance brought to his feet Bishop E. E. Hoss, who made the following noble and eloquent response for the Methodists of the South:

"I desire to get out of the way very speedily. I rise for the purpose of saying that I agree with absolute thoroughness with everything said on this side. Twenty years ago, or it may have been ten years ago, I laid down the dictum that when two Methodist Churches are built on the opposite corners of the same street and are starving their pastors and fighting one another—the devil doesn't need to do anything or to be personally present.

"I desire to thank Mr. Salt for the succession of phrases in his most admirable paper. He said that different branches of the Methodist Episcopal Church must learn to respect one another's "sphere of influence;" and I stand here to-day, brethren, to say that until all the churches are ready to do that, the day of complete organic reunion is delayed, and the first step for the union of all Methodism will be taken only when the different churches learn to respect one another's rights.

"I desire to say further that no one church ought to ask for more than it is willing to give. And I desire to add that no church ought to be manoeuvering for position. Dr. Stuntz gave an illustration. He spoke of a little town in the Northwest in which there are two little Methodist churches supported by mission boards, and I will find you a hundred cases along the northern border of our Church of the same kind. I am not going to say who is responsible for it, but somebody is responsible for it. And if my church is responsible for it, I am willing, as an individual member, to repent, and every other man should follow the example and do so in simplicity, and promise to do so no more. Yet I do not want to monopolize the repentance. In the place where I live, the most pronounced Methodist city in all the world, even more so than this model city of Toronto, a sister church, after spending $50,000 in the vain effort to build up an organization, has folded its tents and silently gone away.

"Now I have not a shadow of a doubt that my church has done the same thing in some instances. We have a fraternal spirit towards all the world, and we do desire to get closer to all our Methodist brethren. And I have prayed from the bottom of my heart for the coming of that great day when all the power of universal Methodism may be able to be delivered at the common point in the interests of the kingdom of God and the salvation of the world. And it is because I desire that consummation that I plead for wise management, for brotherliness, for the avoidance of all political tricks, or manipulations, to advance the interest of one denomination at the expense of the other, and for the large-mindedness which was in Jesus Christ."

HOW MARBLES ARE MADE.

All the boys like marbles, but who knows how they are made or where they come from?

"Marbles," says the Chicago Herald, "are made in great quantities in Saxony for export to India, China, and the United States. A hard, calcareous stone is used. This is broken into square blocks, and about one hundred and fifty of these blocks are thrown into a mill, in which is a flat slab of stone with numerous concentric furrows on its face. A block of oak of the same diameter as the stone, a part of which rests on the small stones, is made to revolve on the slab while water flows upon it. The whole process requires hut a quarter of an hour, and one mill can turn out 20,000 marbles a week. The mills at Oberstein on the Nahe, in Germany, manufacture marbles and agates especially for the American market."

So marbles are made by going through the mill and getting the rough corners rubbed off, the edges smoothed down, and the mass ground into a globular form. And boys are made into men in much the same way, by being run through life's school, which is their "mill," till their rough corners and edges disappear, and they become rounded and smoother, and fit use in the world. Poverty, adversity, hard times, and hard fare, all have their uses in this world, to round men, and smooth them, and polish them, and fit them for usefulness here and for glory hereafter.—New York Observer.

A GOOD RECOMMENDATION.

The Nashville Christian Advocate speaks this high praise of "MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE":

"'Modes of the Heavenly Life,' by Rev. Walter G. Harbin, one of our Southern Methodist preachers, is a timely and helpful book, and that it will be used by the Holy Ghost. This book honors the Holy Ghost. It consists of five sermons, all bearing on his personality and offices. The sermons are not only exceedingly spiritual and evangelical, but have a literary dress which bespeaks intellectual culture on the part of the preacher. He is a 'winner of souls.' His purpose and power are manifested on every page of the book."

Until Jan. 1, 1912, you can secure this book and A MAN WANTED—one of the greatest of men's sermons—for 50 cents.

Order now. Checks positively will not be accepted.

A LETTER FROM VANDERBILT.

Dear Advocate: Your readers may be interested in a word from our Biblical Department. This session opened with a large enrollment of new students, a choice group, most of them having collegiate training. The senior class is larger than usual. I thought in 1907 that the senior class of Millsaps was on the average about the best class of that institution (and my classmates to a man are making good). Naturally I think the same of the class graduating (?) from this institution. I may be pardoned for such a fond expression, because I have only the first term to spend here, having done summer work in the Divinity School of the University of Chicago in order to be ready to resume the pastorate and receive an appointment at the North Mississippi Conference. I am eager to get back in the active itinerancy, and yet loath to leave Wesley Hall—a real brotherhood home. Only those who come here know what those young ministers who do not come miss. It is worth while to take time to "sharpen one's sickle," even though "the fields are already white unto the harvest." But for the kindness of a good presiding elder, this scytheman would not now be ready for the harvest field. So much depends upon the attitude of the leaders in Israel in the matter of ministerial preparation. Bishop McCoy, while a college president, sent every one of the ministers in a senior class to Vanderbilt. Let the Church show fair appreciation of her only seminary, and young ministers will be encouraged to acquire technical training.

Feeling that the preacher, in order to be a specialist, must have expert knowledge and preparation peculiar to his work, I came here. To what profit? Why, I have gotten a vision of the great work of the Church, a wider view of Methodism, a better notion of the preacher's task—bigger by far than the idea I once had; a clearer conception of the preacher's function and its fulfilment—what needs to be done and how to do it. I have a more comprehensive and accurate knowledge of the Bible, the one Book of Religion—what it teaches and how to use it; I have come to know something more definite of the Gospel—its content and purpose. With all, my faith has been purified and intensified. But still, as I face the manifold demands and magnificent opportunities of the ministry, I shrink and say in my heart, "Who is sufficient for these things?"

After all, the man is the metal of the preacher's blade—training is but sharpening the blade. I have stated the benefits personally derived from a seminary course in order to testify with a view to arousing a serious interest upon the part of those who are considering the seminary question. It is my conviction that this is the best place for ministerial preparation in our country. The teaching here is conservative enough to be safe, and progressive enough to keep abreast with modern thought. Neither the old nor the new thought is tabooed; both are taught.

We have had a treat in the eminent lecturer secured for this session—Dr. Lyman Abbott, Congregationalist divine and editor of "The Outlook,"—a man of deep spirituality, of great intellectuality and of wide experience—rivaling Bishop McDowell in popularity. After the regular lecture, Dr. Abbott, in a confidential conference, answered any and all questions we wanted to ask, not evading the most difficult, with a marvelous clearness and precision.

MID-WINTER INSTITUTE AND LEADERS' CONFERENCE.

December 28th - January 5th.

The Mid-winter Bible Institute and Lay Leaders' Conference will be held at the Methodist Training School in the city of Nashville, Tenn., beginning Thursday night, Dec. 28, and closing Friday night, Jan. 5. The program for this year is probably the best that has yet been provided. The general program for each day will consist of a Bible study hour from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m.; an open conference from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., and a platform address from 11 a.m. to 12 m. Each afternoon will be set apart for group conferences and open parliament discussion. There will be a platform address each evening at 8 o'clock. The full program will be presented at a later date. It is possible, however, to announce at this time that Dr. Thomas C. Carter, of the Vanderbilt University, will have charge of the Bible study hour for the first three days. He will present a study of Paul—"The Missionary Pioneer;" "The Missionary Pastor;" "The Missionary Priest." Mr. O. E. Brown, also of Vanderbilt, who has rendered such signal and acceptable service at this hour in the past conferences will have charge of this study for the last four days of the session.

The workers under the direction of the Woman's Missionary Council will be in Nashville at this time for a conference and will attend some of the sessions of the Institute. They are to have as their guests Mrs. Lucy Rider Myer, the first American deaconess, and Prof. Jesse R. Holmes, of Swarthmore, Penn., one of the leading platform speakers of America. Mrs. Myer will deliver one address and Prof. Holmes will deliver two addresses to these conferences in joint session.

Dr. E. Y. Mullins, dean of the Baptist Theological Seminary, of Louisville, Ky., will deliver two addresses and preach the conference sermon on Sunday. His first address will be delivered on Friday evening, Dec. 29, on "The Ethical Revival in American Life." Second, on Saturday evening, Dec. 30, on "The Evidential Value of Christian Experience." He will speak at McKendree Church on Sunday morning on "The Lordship of Jesus Christ." Dr. Mullens is one of the really great theologians of this day. He is recognized as the leading scholar of the Southern Baptist Church.

Bishop Quayle will deliver three addresses on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 2d and 3d days of January. His subjects have not yet been announced. Bishop Quayle is one of the most magnetic speakers and preachers on the American continent, a lover of nature, a leader of men and a master of assemblies. It would be worth the time and money of any of our preachers or laymen to come to Nashville if they could hear only one of these great speakers. When it is possible to hear them all, besides many others who are leaders in church life, it seems incredible that any one of our church leaders should fail to give the question of attending this conference serious consideration. The committee has tried to prepare a program that will render the largest possible service to the Church. We shall be glad if we can have a record-breaking attendance this year. About eighty of the delegates to the conference will be provided room and board in the school at $1 per day. Rooms will be assigned in the order of applications received; reservations will be held until Dec. 28. Board at hotels two blocks away can be secured at $1.50 per day. Meals will be served in the school at 25 cents each, for delegates who do not room in the school building. A matriculation fee of $5 will be charged each delegate, regardless of the number of days he may attend. It is especially desired that the Conference missionary secretaries, the lay leaders and the presidents and secretaries of conference boards and the presiding elders be present. Those who wish rooms and board in the Training School should send in their applications as early as possible.

APPRECIATES THE ADVOCATE.

Dear Brother Meek: I am a constant reader of the Advocate, and it appears to me that it is growing better with each issue.

It is brimful of the most instructive and entertaining reading matter that can be found anywhere. It is certainly a very fine educator; there are various subjects and topics discussed in its columns, and usually by very able minds. The communications are of the highest and most refined order of literature that can be found in any periodical or magazine. They get up into the higher realms of thought, endeavoring to lead the mind of the reader to a higher plane of pure morals and a better life.

It occurs to me that the first consideration in the education of the rising generation is to look well to the moral training. A well trained and educated intellect to the neglect of morals, is not the best way to prepare an individual for future usefulness to either State or Church. I think it a very wrong step to take the Bible out of the public schools. The Scriptures should and ought to be read every day in the schools. By neglecting to read the Bible there the parents and teachers will finally neglect to read it at home. We cannot expect a spiritual development where the Bible is neglected. When I was a schoolboy the first thing each morning was the reading of a passage from the Bible and then a call to prayer. It has been over fifty years since I was a schoolboy, but those things are fresh in my memory yet, and will be till I die.

I fear the young men and women are drifting farther and farther from the Church. They don't seem to have that high regard for the Church and church people that they once did. I will now stop and hope to see the subject taken up by a more facile pen than mine and see the subject more fully elucidated.

SPECIAL REVELATIONS.

The fact should be recognized that special revelations from God come to certain Christians at particular times. But this fact is strenuously denied by many who claim to be Christians. They do not believe that the Holy Spirit comes directly in contact with the believing soul, making known to it certain duties, truths, and privileges, which he otherwise would not know. It is assumed by such ones that all Christians are on an equality in regard to the reception of Bible truth and its meanings. All are free to read and understand the Bible, and that the only way to ascertain the mind of God in respect to duty and direction is to seek for it in the Bible.

But those people are in gross error. Even in the Bible there are recorded instances in which it is shown that to certain believers there came special revelations from God, such as did not come to others in the same immediate vicinity. The studious Bible reader will call to mind instances in which a particular believer received a revelation from God in an audible manner, readily understood by the man himself, but by others it was supposed that it was only thunder, or some other noise.

And then in very silent and quiet ways, there were times when the Holy Spirit revealed needed messages to devout ones. I would as soon doubt any other truth or fact in the Bible as to doubt this one. I regard it as being a most encouraging fact. It ought to be very highly appreciated by the Christian, especially in his hours of perplexity concerning what he should do in relation to a certain proposition. Light from God is greatly needed, and in due time it comes. The path of duty is made plain. One's nearest relatives, though Christians, cannot see that light as the person himself sees it, and they may doubt that he has received it, but he may safely follow it, giving thanks to his Lord.

C. H. WETHERBE.

Moreover, we must remember that all self-denial develops character; that not only in order to resist temptation to bodily indulgence, but also to strengthen the will, we need to learn a little hardness.—Bishop Hall.

WHAT WE STAND FOR.

For the Christ of Galilee,
For the truth which makes men free,
For the bond of unity
Which makes God's children one.

For the love which shines in deeds,
For the life which this world needs,
For the church whose triumph speeds
The prayer "Thy will be done."

For the right against the wrong,
For the weak against the strong,
For the poor who've waited long
For the brighter age to be.

For the faith against tradition,
For the truth 'gainst superstition,
For the hope whose glad fruition
Our waiting eyes shall see.

For the city God is rearing,
For the New Earth now appearing,
For the heaven above us clearing,
And the song of victory.

WHAT ONE LITTLE GIRL DID.

When Mr. Whitfield was preaching in New England a lady became a Christian, and her spirit was drawn out in prayer for others. She could persuade no one to pray with her but her little daughter about ten years of age. After a little while God saved the child. In a transport of holy joy she then exclaimed:

"Oh, mother, if all the world knew this! I wish I could tell everybody. Pray, mother, let me run to some of the neighbors and tell them that they may be happy and love my Savior."

Ah, my child," said the mother, "that would be useless; for I suppose that, were you to tell your experience, there is not one within many miles who would not laugh at you, and say it was all a delusion."

"Oh, mother!" replied the girl, "I think they would believe me. I must go over to the shoemaker and tell him; he will believe me."

She ran over and found him at work in his shop. She began by telling him that he must die, and that he was a sinner, and that she was a sinner, but that her blessed Savior had heard her mother's prayers, and had forgiven all her sins, and that now she was so happy that she did not know how to tell it.

The shoemaker was struck with surprise, and his tears flowed down like rain; he threw aside his work, and by prayer and supplication sought mercy. The neighborhood was awakened, and within a few months more than fifty persons found Jesus and rejoiced in his love.—Presbyterian of the South.

THE LAZY LITTLE GIRL.

"I wish you'd have Ellen up for breakfast. I'm so late home nights, she's always gone to bed. Really, I shan't know my own child."

Mr. Skidmore looked severe; I suppose he felt rather cross.

Pretty Mrs. Skidmore puckered her forehead, and there were two tears in her bule eyes. Maybe she didn't know how to manage Ellen so well as if she'd had a dozen children.

"I've tried almost everything but whipping, and you don't approve of that," she said.

"No, indeed. Moral suasion ought to control children." Mr. Skidmore thought he knew all about it.

"I call her in plenty of time," Mrs. Skidmore went on, "but she dawdles. We both think she ought to dress herself, now she's old enough."

"Certainly," Mr. Skidmore said.

"She puts on one stocking, then she looks out of the window or does something else, and so it goes. Unless I stand over her, she'll take more than an hour."

"Well, I'm off!" Mr. Skidmore had to go without kissing Ellen, which was so bad!

Mrs. Skidmore's forehead puckered a great deal that day; she was thinking hard what new method she could try to break the bad habit. Suddenly she exclaimed, "I believe that will do!"

Joe, the chore boy, was building a doll's house for Ellen, working at odd times. It was to have two floors, with all the rooms, and really big enough for Ellen to get in herself, if she bent up double.

Mrs. Skidmore called out: "Joe, you needn't work on the doll's house any more to-day."

Ellen ran into the house crying: "Why not, mamma? Oh, dear! It'll never be done." The frame was up and the doors laid, it was all ready for the partitions. How trying to stop then!

"That depends on you, Ellen. Every morning you breakfast with papa, Joe shall work on the house that day all his spare time, but when you are late, he shall not touch it."

Ellen saw her mother meant it, and though she was late at times, a coaxing was in vain. What a trail to see the doll's house at a standstill!

So when Ellen was tempted to dawdle, she could say: "Joe can't work! Joe can't work!" and pretty soon Mr. Skidmore could kiss her every morning, for she wasn't a lazy little girl any longer.—Helen A. Hawley, in Zion's Herald.

A YOUNG EVANGELIST.

The shortest sermon I ever heard was preached by the shortest preacher I ever saw; and it was not on Sunday, or in church, but on Monday, on a small steamer plying between Toronto and the island.

Ever since the boat left the Church Street wharf, I had been amused by hearing a clear voice asking questions one after another, as fast as the tongue could go, every question begun, carried on and ended in the same high note. I could not hear the answers; for the lady in charge of the voice answered in low tones that did not reach my ear, though I sat near.

"It will learn to modulate in time," I thought. "She is teaching it not to speak so loud by her low, soft answer." I had to say "it" in my thoughts; for though every one in that half of the boat could hear the voice, only those on the other side of the lady to whom it was talking saw the face. Nothing could be seen from our point of view but a great hat of fine straw, which covered it like a tent underneath of which an edge of white skirt showed, and from it peeped a pair of tiny slippers.

Some of the questions asked by the voice were so original that I thought I would move around and see what was to be seen on the other side of the big hat; so I sat down on the other side of the lady and looked on one of the loveliest child faces I had ever seen. But, oh, such a delicate looking mite! Features perfect, eyes of softest hazel, and rings of silky brown hair curling all around the blue-veined forehead.

I was wondering how long the fragile little body would stand the wear and tear of the voice, when the boat touched at Wiman Baths, and a big policeman came aboard and walked toward a vacant seat beside the child? The little one looked around, then turned to the lady and put her little hand in hers.

"You need not be afraid of the policeman, darling. You are a good boy. It is only bad boys who are afraid of policemen."

"Oh!" said the child, with a bright smile. And when the big policemon sat down beside him, he turned up that beautiful face to him and asked:

"Are you a policeman?"

"Yes," answered the man looking down at him kindly.

"Why are you a policeman?" was the next question.

The policeman gave a puzzled laugh, but did not seem to have an answer ready. So the child helped him by saying:

"Is it 'cause you like to be a policeman?"

"Yes," said the man. Then, as if afraid of any more questions, he took out the key of the patrol box, and a pair of handcuffs and began to explain that they were to put on bad boys when he took them away.

"You won't take me away," said the little fellow bravely, looking him straight in the face, "I am a good boy."

"No, my boy, I won't take you. Whom do you belong to?" asked the big man smiling at the mite.

"I belong to Jesus."

The big policeman got very red in the face, and rising hurriedly jumped on the wharf at Island Park.

You see, dear children, that the sermon was only four words. Could any of you preach it?—Sunday School Times.

RADIANT CHRISTIANS.

Some faces are like the midnight. Clouds of scorn, hate and despair overhang them. They are darkened by an evil heart. Other faces are radiant with peace, joy and hope. The Bible speaks of the light of God's countenance. The same light is seen also in the countenances of his people. A pure heart makes a shining face, a cheerful voice and a radiant life. Such people are welcome in the Church, in the home and in every place. They bring comfort, encouragement and good cheer. They scatter sunshine everywhere. "Let your face be like the morning."—New York Christian Advocate.

INFLUENCE.

"I have no influence," says one. What has become of it? "I never had any." Yes, you had. When you were an infant only a day old you had a powerful influence over your mother and other members of the household. What has happened to your influence? In some cases it has been wasted by waywardness. A single voice will kill the good influence of a strong man. Each one has a tremendous energy stored up within him. It may not be physical energy, or intellectual energy, or the power of wealth or office. It is energy of love, of life, power to comfort, to encourage, to inspire, to move others. Keep it in daily exercise and it will grow more and more. Use it for good and it will bring a rich reward.—New York Christian Advocate.

Editorial.

The need of the Church is Spirit-filled workers to man its charges—not speculators, either intellectual or financial.

• • •

It is stated that sixty-nine per cent of the ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church have attended a college or a seminary, and that of these ninety-two per cent have attended Methodist institutions of learning. Still there are those who claim to think that the Church has no legitimate place in the field of education.

• • •

At the late session of the North Georgia Conference, Bishop Hoss, who was there assisting Bishop Wilson, stated that if he were making the appointments, he would not make presiding elders of any of the brethren who had not attended the morning devotional services. A hint to the wise ought to be sufficient.

• • •

"The wheelbarrow Christian is one who does nothing except when he is pushed; the weather-vane Christian is one who is 'turned about by every wind of doctrine;' the crocodile Christian is one who has to be awakened every season after a long sleep; and the crawfish Christian is one who advances backwards."

• • •

When Victoria College, Toronto, conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Bishop Wilson, along with several other celebrities, a few weeks ago, with characteristic impressiveness, he said: "I want you to understand that I am not going to give up the Gospel of John for your degrees. I have partaken of the life—the abundant life—of that Gospel for too many years for me now to throw it aside. I tell you I am not going to do it." It is now in order for some little fledgeling, who imagines that he is an advanced thinker, to rise up and call Southern Methodism's majestic leader a mossback.

THE FOUNDATIONS—SPIRITUAL.

II.

In our last issue we called attention to the neglect of even the material foundations of modern life and the foolish sacrifice, on the part of many, of substantial welfare to the artificial and extravagant conceptions of life now prevalent in society; conceptions which only men of large means can afford to follow, and which condemn to poverty forever and increasing discount those who, without fortunes already made, seek to live in such style. A sane economic foundation, in which men recognize their limitations, live within their incomes, and seek by honorable means gradually to obtain a competence, we declared must be the basis of any civilization that can be called Christian or that can long endure. Yet we would not by any means have it inferred that the mere possession of worldly goods, and a head on one's shoulders properly to administer them, constitute a sure foundation; or that the life that is established in these respects is therefore "founded upon a rock." Nothing would be more false to Scripture teaching and human experience the world over than that. To the shrewd father who accumulates a fortune, as well as to the thoughtless sons and daughters who squander it, God may say with equal emphasis, "Thou fool," if be as well as they ignore the deeper and alone enduring foundations of character.

What, then, are the elements which constitute the spiritual foundation of life and character—a foundation which neither the tempest of time nor eternity can shake or destroy?

Christ tells us simply that "whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them," is the wise man who builds his house upon the rock. The answer is true, but the sayings of Christ are many, so there is need of a brief epitomizing of these wonderful sayings of his. What, then, in every day words, are the essential foundations of character?

We answer, first, integrity—integrity to the bone—truthfulness, honesty, dependableness, as distinguished from insincerity, deceit, falsehood, untrustworthiness. Without integrity there can be no character, and he knows that in his life there are deceit, falsehood, dishonesty, insincerity—knows also that there is absolutely no foundation underneath his feet. So integrity we hold to be the very cornerstone of character.

But integrity is not all that is needed. We have known men of unquestioned integrity who came far short of the Christian conception of a noble character—true men, but hard, selfish, and unloving. So we would name as a second fundamental element, unselfishness—helpfulness—service to others, born of love and begetting love, uniting a man to his fellows in esteem and good-will. The man who deals in justice only with his fellow-men, but not in mercy, misses the spirit of Christ, and finds himself alone and lonesome as the years pass. He, too, feels that there is no foundation underneath his feet. "For life, with all it yields of joy and woe, and hope and fear, is just our chance o' the prize of learning love," as Browning says; and he who misses this is wanting in that upon which alone the heart can rest.

But integrity and unselfish service combined do not constitute the whole and sure foundation of character. A third element and one quite diverse must be included, and that is faith—faith in its distinctively Christian sense of trust in Christ alone for salvation. A consciousness of integrity, and unselfish service rendered, may inspire pride, and trust in this worthy character and these good deeds as a meritorious basis of salvation. And thus the spirit of the Pharisee might accompany both these admirable traits unless guarded by the spirit of Christian humility, in recognition of and in penitence for sin, and in personal trust in Christ alone as the source of grace. So, whereas Christ affirms that to keep his sayings is to be grounded upon a rock, Paul affirms that faith in Christ's person as the Savior of men is the one foundation, than which none other can be laid. So the sublime saints of the ages have rested only in him as the foundation of all their hopes and the inspiration of all their labors; and has been the song of the purest and best.

"On Christ the solid Rock I stand,
All other ground is sinking sand,"

So, the elements, integrity, unselfishness, and faith, constitute, we believe, the spiritual foundation of character; and he who builds upon these is established in that which nothing can destroy, and which shall stand the more gloriously firm when all material foundations shall crumble beneath his feet. Shall we not be numbered among the wise men, who build thus upon the rock?

We will conclude this discussion with a final editorial on "The Foundations—Assumed."

NO NEW GOSPEL NEEDED.

During all the years of his marvelous ministry, no truer statement was ever made by the great apostle to the Gentiles than the one in which he declared that the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Within the simple message of divine truth there resides a power sufficient for all humanity's needs. Although the story of the Cross is often told by stammering lips, yet it contains a power sufficient to break the stony heart of unbelief and to lead the trembling penitent to him who creates the spiritual life anew after the divine image. The world's need to-day is not a new Gospel, but for hearts to believe the old, old story of that redeeming love of which the Cross of Jesus Christ is the visible expression. When faithfully proclaimed in all its fulness, men are cut to the heart and made to see the dreadful consequences of sin, and the efficacy of Jesus Christ as the sinner's only hope. "Perish the thought that the world needs a new Gospel!" The world is dying because the old Gospel is not proclaimed as God's only and final message to men, and believed in as God's authoritative declaration concerning sin and redemption.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Woman's Missionary Societies of New Orleans are observing this week as a season of prayer for the cause of missions.

At the late session of the Memphis Conference, Rev. T. W. Lewis and Rev. R. A. Clark were returned to their former charges. Rev. E. B. Ramsey was sent to Dyersburg, and Rev. E. A. Tucker, to Milan.

Among those who attended the unveiling of Bishop Galloway's portrait in the chapel of Millsaps College on November 22, were Dr. I. W. Cooper, Rev. J. T. Leggett, and Rev. J. M. Wyatt.

The young ladies of Mansfield College gave a banquet and reception in honor of the young men of Centenary College on November 25. The occasion is said to have been a most enjoyable one.

Brother J. H. Montgomery, of Marksville, La., has brought us under obligation for a nice list of subscribers, forwarded on November 20. He has our hearty thanks for this good service rendered the Advocate.

Rev. I. T. Reames has had a good year at Opelousas, La. He serves a good people, to whom he is much attached. He states that his report at the Annual Conference will be in excess of that of last year.

Dr. H. M. DuBose has been re-assigned to St. John's Church at Augusta, Ga., and Rev. W. R. Hendrix, D.D., was appointed to Wesley Memorial Church in Atlanta. Dr. Frank Siler was appointed to First Church, Gainsville.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, dedicated the Methodist Church, at Fernwood, Miss., on last Sabbath. He delivered an able and impressive sermon, which was much enjoyed by the large congregation in attendance.

Bishop Candler was booked to preach at Crystal Springs, Miss., on the evening of November 22. He is expected to attend the North Mississippi Conference, which is now in session at Macon, under the presidency of Bishop A. W. Wilson.

The residence of Judge R. R. Reid at Amite City, La., caught fire last Sunday at noon, and the roof was destroyed. The fire is said to have been caused by a dislocated brick in the dining room chimney. The loss was estimated at $1,000, which was only partially covered by insurance.

The Rocky Mountain News of November 6 contained a picture and an interesting report of a sermon preached by Rev. James A. McKee, formerly of North Mississippi, but now pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Walsenburg, Colorado. This energetic young minister seems to be making full proof of his ministry in his Western field.

A dispatch from Vaiden, Miss., to the Commercial Appeal on November 24, reads as follows: "The last quarterly conference of this charge was held here to-day by the presiding elder, Rev. N. G. Augustus. All the reports were good. Rev. G. W. Gordon, who has been here only one year, has done a great work, and will hand in a good report at the Annual Conference at Macon."

The Dyersburg District, Memphis Conference, paid all its claims in full during the Conference year just passed, the only one in that Conference that did. The presiding elder was Dr. H. B. Johnston, who is a most wise and resourceful leader. Bishop Candler appointed Dr. Johnston to the Jackson District, which is fortunate in securing so aggressive and capable a man to look after its interests.

Miss Lily Baskin, of Conway, Ark., in renewing her mother's subscription takes time to write a line commendatory of the Advocate. She further says. "We moved here from Belden Circuit (now Sherman Circuit), North Mississippi Conference, a year ago. Conway is a fine Methodist town, and we are learning to love the people very much, for they really do things for Christ here. But there is no place like North Mississippi."

Dr. Felix R. Hill, the resourceful president of Centenary College, is doing a great work for the young preachers of the Louisana Conference. We are informed that he gives assistance to quite a number of them at the college who are short of means to pay their own way. There is no nobler work than this, and none which yields a larger return. The Methodists of the State should count it a privilege to aid Dr. Hill in equipping these young men for their life work.

Writing under date of November 22, Rev. G. W. Bachman, of Winona, Miss., says: "I had a most pleasant visit to the Memphis Conference last week. The kindly treatment shown me and other visiting brethren was refreshing. I am closing the Conference year with a good degree of satisfaction as to the results of my work, and am going to the Conferences at Macon and Meridian cheerfully, and with the expectation of seasons of good fellowship with the brethren."

In a personal note to the editor on November 21, Rev. W. H. Mounger, of Hollandale, Miss., says: "The boll weevil has struck us pretty hard in this immediate vicinity, but I am hoping that our church finances will come up all right." If they do not, it will not be Brother Mounger's fault. He is a faithful worker, and one of the most capable and promising young men in the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. E. W. Barrington, our pastor at Woodville, Miss., and the president of Edward McGehee College, was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office last Friday. He was in the city seeking medical treatment. We trust that this efficient worker will soon be rid of the trouble which is annoying him, and in the enjoyment of perfect health. He is giving a good account of himself in his present field of service.

The Woman's Missionary Societies of Brookhaven, Miss., held a Jubilee meeting at the Baptist Church in that city on Sunday morning, November 19. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, and addresses were made by Mrs. Stockman of the Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Luther Tyler of the Baptist Church, Miss Katie Ruth French of the Episcopal Church, and Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb of the Methodist Church. A beautiful spirit of harmony and good will prevailed.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson is closing out his quadrennium at Parker Memorial Church, this city, with all departments of the work in good condition. The present commodious house of worship has been completed within the past two years, and is a notable achievement. This congregation has one of the best organized Sunday schools in the Louisiana Conference. Brother Atkinson's people have recently presented him with a nice suit of clothes as a testimonial of the high esteem in which they hold him.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan, publisher of the Louisiana Conference Minutes of last year, requests us to state that the supply of the Minutes has been exhausted; and he suggests that it would be well for each preacher to bring his own copy to Conference with him. He would also appreciate it if persons who have extra copies in their possession would bring them along and turn them over to him, as there may be a demand for them. This is a matter of importance, and it is to be hoped that the brethren will heed this request.

The Louisiana Conference has in it seven men who are in their fourth year. They are R. S. Walton, of Hammond; L. N. Hoffpauir, Lake Arthur; J. D. Nesom, Sulphur; A. J. Coburn, Farmerville; L. A. Sims, Epworth Mission (New Orleans); T. V. Peters, Slidell, and C. D. Atkinson, Parker Memorial, New Orleans. Brother Sims has already been relieved of his charge, and is prosecuting his studies at Centenary College. The other brethren will be assigned to new fields at the approaching session of the Annual Conference. It is a good recommendation for a pastor to have staying qualities.

Until the appointment of Judge W. C. McLean to the Supreme Bench of Mississippi, a few weeks ago, all the Judges and Commissioners of that Court were former pupils of the Hon. Edward Mayes, who for many years taught law at the University of that State, but who is now a practitioner at the Jackson bar. Mr. Mayes is the leading counsel for the Illinois Central Railroad in Mississippi. He is not only a learned lawyer, but one of the most scholarly and accomplished men in the South and a Christian citizen of most exemplary character. At present he is also connected with the law faculty of Millsaps College.

Mr. and Mrs. James Washington Mason, of Benoit, Bolivar County, Miss., have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ruby, to Mr. Francis McGrew, which will take place at their residence on December 14, at 10 o'clock a.m. The bride-to-be is a most attractive young lady of noble Christian character, and we congratulate the happy groom upon having won her heart and hand. We pray that the blessings of God may rest upon this union, and that the coming years may crowd the pathway of this couple with time's choicest and most coveted gifts.

Mr. J. D. Glasscock writes that Rev. Frank M. Wells, the well known evangelist, of Jackson, Tenn., and Dallas, Texas, has recently been lecturng and preaching to large crowds in the oil fields of Caddo Parish, having filled engagements at Oil City, Vivian, and Trees City. He states that the fervent utterances of Mr. Wells aroused considerable enthusiasm, and resulted in the accomplishment of much good. Mr. Glasscock highly commends the Stiles brothers, of Trees City, who, he says, own 3,500 acres of land in and around that place, and will not allow a bottle of whiskey to enter the town. He affirms that they are prohibitionists of the right kind.

Rev. R. S. Walton is in his fourth year at Hammond, La., and continues to be in high favor with his faithful flock in that enterprising little city. His pastorate there has been successful to a remarkable degree, and he will turn over to his successor a church that is well organized and animated by a hopeful and progressive spirit. One who has wrought so well and accomplished so much, should receive kindly consideration at the hands of the Bishop and his cabinet. The man who toils faithfully and brings things to pass is seldom left to complain of a lack of appreciation upon the part of the authorities of the Church.

Our worthy friend, Mrs. S. Fannie Clark, of Okolona, Miss., in a personal note to the editor, says: "I was surprised some time ago when you said the women ought to stay at home with the children. You forgot that some grandmothers could go." We plead not guilty to this charge. It was a correspondent who wrote this, not the editor. We should hate to have to be held responsible for every sentiment that is expressed in the columns of the Advocate. It is quite enough to have to stand sponsor for our own utterances. We frequently print communications which are in conflict with our views from beginning to end.

Dr. Theo. Copeland, who at the recent session of the St. Louis Conference was assigned to Cabanne Church in St. Louis for the second year, has made a fine beginning already. He has received 36 members and lifted an old debt of $900 since the Annual Conference. His congregations are large and growing. The Doctor states that he has been preaching for twenty-two years, but has never been as happy in his work as he is now. Brother Copeland's many friends in Louisiana and Mississippi will be pleased to hear of his gratifying success in Missouri's chief city.

Writing from Rosedale, Miss., on November 23, Rev. T. M. Bradley, our genial pastor at that place, says: "Yesterday I married two couples: Mr. Walter Sillers and Miss Lena Cable Roberts, of this little city, and Rev. J. A. Coleman, pastor of the New Salem work, and Miss Bird Houston, of Malvina, Miss. Miss Houston is the step-daughter of Mr. Walter Arnold. Everything will come up in full at Rosedale. Brother Woollard, our efficient presiding elder, has been preaching us some fine sermons this year, and is growing in the love and esteem of the people throughout the district."

From Verona, Miss., on November 25, Rev. A. W. Langley, the pastor, writes: "Mrs. Mary Hay Long, a useful member of the Methodist Church at this place, died here yesterday and was buried here today. This will be sad news to all former pastors of this charge. A loving husband and an affectionate daughter are bereaved beyond expression. Indeed, the entire community mourns her going away." We regret to bear of the passing of this elect lady, and sympathize with the stricken ones left behind in this sad hour. May they be enabled to lean upon Jesus, who alone can solace bleeding hearts at such a time!

A card from Rev. J. M. Wyatt, written on November 25, reads as follows: "I will leave for Macon, the seat of the North Mississippi Conference, on next Tuesday, the 28th. I have had a very pleasant, and I trust a very profitable, time, with the good people of Brookhaven. During the seven months that I have been in charge here I have received sixty persons into the church, thirty-five of them on profession of faith. I have sent you twenty new subscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. All departments of the church, including money matters, are in excellent condition." This is, indeed, a fine showing. A more diligent and tactful pastor than Brother Wyatt would be difficult to find.

Mrs. Clara Crook, of Hammond, La., writes as follows: "Last Thursday afternoon, the ladies of the M. E. Church, South, had planned a surprise for the pastor's wife, Mrs. R. S. Walton, but on account of the rain and sickness, only eleven ladies were present. After spending an hour in pleasant conversation, Mrs. J. D. McConnell presented to Mrs. Walton a beautiful silver syrup pitcher and a china bread plate. Some nice refreshments were then served. Brother Walton and family expect to leave in a couple of weeks for a new field. They will be greatly missed by the church and community here, having made a host of friends during his three years' pastorate, all of whom will wish them unbounded success wherever they may go."

In the presence of a number of close personal friends of the family, Bishop W. A. Candler and Dr. A. F. Smith, pastor of the First Methodist Church at Jackson, Miss., administered the rite of baptism to Charles Betts Galloway, the infant son of Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Galloway and grandson of Bishop Galloway, on the afternoon of November 22. The ceremony, which was most impressive, took place at the former residence of the distinguished Bishop, which is still the home of his beloved widow, Mrs. C. B. Galloway, and his only living son, Dr. Galloway, who is one of the first physicians of Jackson. The Daily News of that city says: "At the conclusion of the baptismal service Bishop Candler prayed earnestly that the child might follow in the footsteps of his illustrious grandfather, whose life and labors are Mississippi's most precious heritage."

Mr. J. H. Sherard, president of the Board of Trustees of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss., has given out to the press the following statement: "We request the Methodists of Mississippi and other friends in the State to let their Thanksgiving offerings go to the Orphans' Home. There are 200 children in this institution, who are being given moral and intellectual training by competent teachers. These children are gathered from the "highways and hedges," and as a rule are from the lower walks of life. Two large brick buildings have been completed this year at a cost of $35,000, and there is a balance of $3,500 due on these two needed structures. On this day of rejoicing, would it not be well to make a contribution to help pay the indebtedness on this Home, maintained for these unfortunate children? Remittances should be made to Rev. M. L. Burton, Purvis, Miss., or to Rev. W. M. Williams, Manager, Jackson, Miss."

A dispatch to the Atlanta Georgian from Augusta, the seat of the recent session of the North Georgia Conference, thus refers to the sermon preached at St. James Church in that city by Bishop A. W. Wilson: "The morning sermon by Bishop Wilson is declared by Augusta people to have been the greatest sermon preached there within twenty-five years or more. The Bishop's text was the first two verses of Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians, his theme being, 'The loftiness of the Christian Calling.' Bishop Wilson was greatly enfeebled by his illness during the Conference; but he seemed to forget all pain and weakness, as time after time he reached the sublimer heights of the truth he was presenting. The congregation was thoroughly stirred, and several times he came near being forced to stop to give way to the shouts of the auditors. The sermon was followed by the touching scene of Bishop Hoss arising and taking Bishop Wilson in his embrace."

Judge W. P. S. Ventress, after an illness covering a period of several years and a brave and manly struggle for life, died at his home at Woodville, Miss., on the night of November 22. Judge Ventress was born in Wilkinson County in 1857, and was educated at the Norwood School in Virginia and the famous University of the Old Dominion. He studied law at the University of Mississippi, and was graduated from that institution with the degree of Bachelor of Laws in 1883. He was married to Miss Willie Galloway, the eldest daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Charles B. Galloway, in 1893: of this union, three children—Harriet E., Charles B. Galloway, and Margaret E. Ventress, were born. Judge Ventress served for several years in the State Legislature and Senate, and was at one time Chancellor of the Fourth Judicial District of Mississippi. He was an able lawyer, a worthy citizen, and a man of exemplary life, highly esteemed by all who knew him. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that the Heavenly Father may graciously comfort and sustain them.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Cohen, who reside in Carrollton, this city, and are prominent in both civic and religious circles, passed the twenty-fifth milestone of their wedded life on November 25. While they were spending the day quietly at home, a delegation from the Board of Stewards and the Woman's Missionary Society, headed by the pastor, Rev. J. G. Snelling, wended their way to the residence of the worthy couple and rang the bell for admittance. After an exchange of greetings, Mr. Sam Stone, Sr., in fitting words presented Brother and Sister Cohen as a gift from the Stewards of the Carrollton Avenue Church, a handsome silver mayonnaise bowl and spoon, suitably engraved; and Mrs. S. A. Montgomery, representing the Woman's Missionary Society, presented them, with appropriate remarks, a dozen silver salad forks. Refreshments were then partaken of, and good fellowship for a brief season abounded. The Carrollton congregation has no choicer members than this deserving husband and wife, and we join their host of friends in wishing them many returns of their wedding anniversary.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

JANE P. BIHM was born near Washington, St. Landry Parish, La., May 2, 1855, and died at her home in Palmetto, Nov. 2, 1911. She was twice married. In 1874 she married Amidee Richard. This union was blessed with two children, a son and daughter. The daughter preceded her to the better land. Her son, Emile, was permitted to live to care for her and be with her in her dying hours. In 188? she was married to Alvin Deloach. Of this union there were five children, four daughters and a son, three of whom are living, two girls having died in childhood. She was a member of the M. E. Church, South, for a number of years. She was a fond, indulgent mother and kind friend, and will be sadly missed by her family and friends. She was buried in the old Waxia graveyard, the funeral services being conducted by Rev. Beattie, of the Methodist E. Church. Do not grieve dear children, but let us live so we will meet where there is no parting.

HER NIECE.

MAMIE LOUIE, the youngest child of Brother and Sister J. L. Owen, of near Aberdeen, Miss., was born July 15, 1900, and after a brief illness was transplanted to that upper and better kingdom, July 17, 1911, where sickness and suffering, sin and death are felt nor feared no more, there to live and look, and await the coming by and by of "papa and mamma." One brother and two sisters are left to mourn their loss. Mamie was a bright and obedient child, the attraction of her home, and was loved by all who knew her. Her sweet face and cheery presence is missed so much, not only in her home, but at church, and Sunday school as well, where she delighted so much to be. Her little body was borne to its last resting place at the hands of her classmates as pallbearers, and after funeral services by the writer, was laid to rest at the Howell Cemetery, there to await the resurrection morning. May God sustain and comfort the grief stricken parents and all the sorrowing ones!

W. A. BOWLIN, P. C.

The subject of this obituary was born in Rankin County, Miss., Nov. 9, 1829, and died in Rankin County, Miss., February 24, 1910, aged 81 years. Her maiden name was Lird. She was married to Mr. Wm. M. Mayers in 1849. To them were born three children, two daughters and one son. She was again married to Miles Cortey in 1861. To them were born seven sons. She left eight living children when she died, all of whom are members of the M. E. Church, South, of which she was a member fifty-five years. This writer was her pastor in 1872, thirty-nine years ago. I frequently visited herself and family, and always found her the same good Christian woman. For quite a number of years since I met her and family tented on the Shiloh Camp Ground in Rankin County, Miss. Our next meeting will be in our Father's home beyond the river. May heavenly blessings rest upon her children and loved ones left!

Her former pastor,

R. A. SIBLEY, SR.

GEO. W. YARBROUGH, a steward of the Wall Hill charge, died in a hospital in Memphis, where he had gone for an operation, on Sept. 6, 1911. He was born and reared in Marshall County, Miss. He lived about seven miles southwest of Holly Springs. He served in the Civil War and made a good soldier. He was married to Miss Helen Jones on Oct. 31, 1866. She was also a native of Marshall County. Of this union nine children were born, six boys and three girls. Three of these had preceded him to the spirit world. Brother George Yarbrough professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Marvin, in Marshall County, where he lived for thirty-five years. For several years he had been a steward of the church and recording steward of the charge. His zeal for his church and the cause of his Lord was marked, and for the past four years (since the writer has been on the district) Brother Yarbrough had been the most capable and energetic steward on the Wall Hill charge. For several years he had been seriously afflicted with bladder trouble; finally he had to submit to an operation, but survived only a few days. His friends and brethren who visited him while at the hospital just before his death, found him brave and trustful. He died as he had lived—a courageous, manly man. He leaves his good wife and six children to mourn their loss; also one brother, Dr. A. S. Yarbrough, of Como, Miss. We commend his zeal for his church to all those who knew him. A good and useful man has gone. He was public spirited and a most useful citizen. May the blessing of our Father above abide upon his good wife and children, and may they so live that they shall all meet in heaven!

W. M. YOUNG.

CALEB WHITE, son of James A. and Clementine Taylor, was born at Morton, Miss., Sept. 27, 1868, and died at Pelahatchie, Miss., Oct. 11, 1911. He was married Oct. 15, 1891, to Miss Eula Flanagan. Six children were born to them, all of whom with their mother are still living. He joined the Methodist Church when a boy of twelve years. He was a faithful and consistent member of the church up to the time of his death. He served the church as steward and recording steward, and as Sunday school teacher. As a merchant he was successful, and enjoyed to an unusual degree the confidence and esteem of the whole county. To know him was to love him, because his was a lovable character. He was modest and unassuming. What he did was done quietly. He never did anything for the praise of men. He helped every one and every cause that was worthy. He was a liberal and constant supporter of the Orphans' Home. His place in church and community will be hard to fill. He realized that he must die and was not afraid. He told his wife that he loved everybody The end was peaceful.

W. J. DAWSON.

PICKENS BUTLER, son of Alfred and Jane Summer, was born in South Carolina, Oct. 1, 1851, and died at Pelahatchie, Miss., Sept. 21, 1911. He was married april 28, 1881, to Miss Josephine Patterson, of Hinds County, Miss. Three children were born to them, each of whom, together with their mother, are still living. He joined the Methodist Church when a boy. He was soundly converted, the evidences of which were a consistent life, earnest consecration, and fidelity to duty. He was reared by pious parents, which made it easier for him to be religious. He was a faithful servant in the church, either as Sunday school superintendent, teacher, steward or trustee. He was faithful in his attendance on all the services of the church. He was always present at Sunday school, prayer meeting and preaching when it was possible to be present. He died in great peace. Just before he died he sang a portion of,

"My latest sun is sinking fast,
My race is nearly run."

As the notes of this song died away, his soul passed into the great beyond. We miss him much. His familiar place at church is empty. We know where to find him.

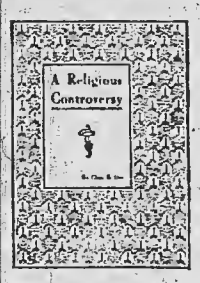
Objections to "The Truth" Do you know what they are, and can you give a convincing Scriptural answer to those who deny the vital principles of the gospel?

A RELIGIOUS CONTROVERSY

By CHAS. E. ORR



Enables the Christian reader to locate the very Scriptures best calculated to show the true nature of Bible salvation to the objector and to those unacquainted with the truth.

PRACTICAL AND TRUE TO LIFE

Through hearing the preaching of the pure gospel and the reading of literature, Mrs. Wiseman receives light that condemns her former life and awakens an intense desire to know God. James Wiseman, having lived forty years with only a Christian profession, is strongly "set" in his religious ways.

The humble life of his wife—her prayers, earnest entreaties and convincing explanation of regeneration baptism, sanctification and the one church finally bring about a very desirable change in the Wiseman home.

The Famous Rayo Lamp

The best part of the day is the evening, when the whole family is gathered together around the lamp.

The old days of the smoky fireplace and flickering candle are gone forever. In their place have come the convenient oil stove and the indispensable Rayo Lamp.

There are to-day, in the United States alone, more than 3,000,000 of these Rayo lamps, giving their clear, white light to more than 3,000,000 homes.

Other lamps cost more, but you cannot get a better light than the low-priced Rayo gives. It has become so popular we may almost call it "the official lamp of the American family."

The Rayo is made of solid brass, with handsome nickel finish—an ornament anywhere.

Tidings From the Field

DeSoto Charge:

Dear Doctor Meek: I want to state in the columns of the Christian Advoacte that since our third quarterly conference, I have held five meetings, preached fifty times, had several professions, some additions to the Church, baptized some, made about 130 visits, such as visiting the sick and praying in their homes. I have tried to be instant in season and out of season, making full proof of my ministry and doing the work of an evangelist. I am assistant pastor on the DeSoto charge under Brother Hilary Westbrook, a precious man of God. We met on Nov. 17, in our fourth quarterly conference. Brother W. H. Lewis, our presiding elder, was present and preached a strong sermon from Phil. ii, 7-8. I will, God willing, attend the Annual Conference in Meridian, hoping to come in close touch with the brethren of the Mississippi Conference. I am looking for a place in the Mississippi Conference, as I love the pastoral work, having had four years experience in that capacity in the M. E. Church, in Alabama. I feel that I am able to do the work of a pastor. Brethren, my whole heart and life is in the work, and as I am a new man in the Mississippi Conference (though this is my home), I need your help in any way that you are able to help me. I was ordained in Birmingham in 1908, and my work, both in Mississippi and Alabama, as well as Louisiana and Arkansas, has been crowned with success and signal victory. Brother Hilary Westbrook is closing up his Conference year in high favor with his people. Brethren, my heart's desire is to be so filled with the Spirit that I will be led of the Spirit and that I will be true to the heavenly vision.—J. E. Brasher.

Goodwater, Miss.

DeSoto, Miss.:

We have had a delightful year here on the DeSoto Charge. This is my first year here. Rev. W. H. Lewis, our faithful presiding elder, was with us on November 16 and 17, and on Thursday evening he preached us an able sermon here at DeSoto, using as his text Matthew 16:18; on Friday morning we drove out to Salem four miles west of DeSoto, and at 11 a.m. Brother Lewis preached us another soul-thrilling sermon, using as his theme, "The accentual nature of Christianity." Our fourth quarterly Conference was called to order by Brother Lewis, and the following places were represented: DeSoto, Salem, and Coopers Chapel, and all the churches made very good reports. In connection with our quarterly conference at Salem, the humble scribe, with the assistance of his junior pastor, Brother J. E. Brasher, held a three day's meeting, with some good results; but I couldn't say that our meeting was excellent by any means, though I feel safe in saying that it was very good. We have had 18 accessions to the Church, 11 on profession of faith and 7 by certificate. I have baptized 24 infants, and, best of all, we have had 12 conversions this year.

I have confronted my people 115 times, with the old, old story of Jesus and his love.

I want to thank the good people of the DeSoto charge, for the way in which they have treated their humble pastor, and his family this year, and I also want to say that I have enjoyed being in their homes and partaking of their kind hospitality. May God's richest blessings rest upon one and all on the DeSoto Charge.

As I leave DeSoto on December 5 to attend the Annual Conference at Meridian, Miss., I believe that I will be able to say without a doubt that I am leaving some warm friends behind on the charge. As a young preacher I did the best I could for my people and the Church. We are all cheerful and happy, and on our way to glory. Amen.

HILARY WESTBROOK, P. C.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Whereas, God in his providence has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved Brother YARBROUGH, therefore, be it, resolved,

First—That we bow submissively to the will of our Heavenly Father, knowing that he doeth all things well in mercy and love.

Second—That by his death, we sustain a great loss in his personal friendship and devoted steward in our church and society.

Third—That while we mourn his departure, we shall cherish the memory of his noble Christian life. Oh, how I miss him!

Fourth—That we tender our sincere sympathy to his beloved family, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to his family and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

A VALUABLE WORK.

Dear Dr. Meek: Through the kindness of Dr. T. B. Holloman, D.D., one of the owner's of Jone's History of Methodism in Mississippi, I have in my bookcase this valuable work. The Methodists of Mississippi owe Bros. Burton and Holloman a debt of gratitude for bringing out the second Volume of this history, and they should show their appreciation of this book by buying it at the very low and reasonable price at which it is offered. A Methodist preacher cannot afford to be without the information these books give. Respectfully,

W. H. SAUNDERS.

IN NEED OF ASSISTANCE.

Mr. Editor: I am writing to call attention to Rev. J. B. Williams, of Lisbon circuit, Claiborne parish, a member of the Louisiana Conference, who is now quite unable to do his work, and to all appearances will not be able to take work at the coming session of Conference. Brother Williams is and has ever been a faithful preacher, but now he is disabled and in need of aid. He has been confined to the house and bed for the past two months, and is now in a sanitarinm. I hope that his many friends in Louisiana will remember him in this time of need and disability with their mite.

I am yonrs respectfully,

B. T. FERGUSON, M. D.

November 20. 1911.

(We suggest that persons desirous of aiding Brother Williams send their remittances to Rev. A. S. Lutz, our pastor at Homer, La., who doubtless will take pleasure in seeing that they reach him promptly. Brother Williams is being treated at a sanitarium in that city.)

CHARLOTTE, NORTH CAROLINA.

Dear Dr. Meek: When I came to North Carolina seven years ago, broken down in health as the result of repeated attacks of lagrippe, soon as strong enough to resume work, I was appointed to fill a charge made vacant by the death of a minister, namely, the Raberdel circuit, in the Rockingham District, North Carolina Conference. The few months spent on this charge were crowned with a good degree of success, a large number being added to the Church, and other good work accomplished. When the Conference was over I had planned to return to my old home in Mississippi, but was prevailed upon by my presiding elder here, Rev. Jno. N. Cole, to remain a while and conduct some revival meetings in his district, and while waiting for arrangements to be made for the meetings, Rev. N. W. Oglesby, one of the leading ministers of the district, was killed in a railroad wreck, and Brother Cole asked me to take the charge for the remainder of the year, which I did almost for an entire year, as this sad accident was soon after Conference.

When this year was ended, the Lord having blessed our work greatly, I went to Florida where I was appointed to a charge and served a short time, having resigned to go to the bedside of my sick son who was extremely ill at Chattanooga, and where I myself became disabled again for work. After the summer was over, however, I engaged in some revival work again, and the good Lord gave us some gracious victories. At the following Conference. I was appointed to the Pleasant Garden Circuit, Greensboro District, in the Western North Carolina Conference, where the year was spent in an almost continuous revival. Many were added to the Church, and the general interests of the charge were almost doubled. I was reappointed to this work for another year, but after the first quarterly conference was moved to Kings Mountain Station to fill the year out, made vacant by the resignation of the former pastor. Here I spent a good year, and as I had just had a book published at considerable cost, fearing I could not make a success of the sale of the book and at the same time fill a pastoral charge, I declined to return. Here I may have made a mistake, but such is life. I had hoped to assist some of the brethren in their meetings, but there were but few open doors this year. So the following year I accepted supply work in the Virginia Conference to again fill the place of a deceased minister. It was the Daville Circuit. Some good meetings were held—onevery notable at New Design Church near Daville, where a great victory was scored for Christ. This year I was appointed to a charge in the South Carolina Conference where they were scarce of ministerial supplies, but again I was compelled to give up my work owing to extreme sickness in my home, which lasted persistently for more than eight months, day and night.

I have engaged in some good meetings, however, during the last two months. During all this time I have passed through many afflictions, and suffered much in many ways, but the Lord has brought me through it all so far, and I praise his name for the good that has been accomplished. I am writing this letter that my old friends of other days may know something of my whereabouts and God's dealings with me during these years.

You can give this note a place in the Advocate if you think it worth while. I often long to be back in my old homeland to mingle with the friends of my youth and earlier ministry, and think I may be some day. Please pray for me and mine. May the good Lord bless you in your work. Very fraternally,

E. G. KILGORE.

TOPIC FOR DECEMBER 3, 1911.

"REPRODUCING THE MODEL."

Eph. iv, 11-16; II Peter i, 3-4.

In studying the theme for this evening we should bear in mind the general theme of the month—the glorious destiny which is to be ours in Christ Jesus. To attain to this destiny we must seek to reproduce in ourselves the divine model that has been given us, which is Christ himself. By so doing we attain unto a more perfect unity than the church had at first. We are to work for this ideal a mature and perfect humanity, endowed with the fullness which Christ in union with the church has. In order to reach this united manhood we must cease to be unstable children, at the mercy of every scheming teacher. Some one says that "language cannot express the full truth. Christ is the head, he is also the whole organism. He is also the source of its unity, growth and energy." Christ is all and in all.

'O wondrous Lord, my soul would be
Still more and more conformed to thee,
And learn of thee, the lowly One,
And like thee all my journey run."

In our second reference we are told that we are to be "partakers of the divine nature." Doctor Parkhurst says that this means "taking part in the divine nature." "Not simply like God, but in a way shareholders in him; something, possibly, as the waves of the sea are partakers in the sea; something, it may he, as the leaves of a tree share in the life of the tree." Doctor Maclaren says: "Partakers we shall be in the measure in which by our faith we have drawn from him the pure and the hearty love of whatsoever things are fair and noble; the measure in which we love righteousness and hate iniquity. And then, remember also that this lofty purpose which is here set forth is a purpose growingly realized in man. The apostle puts great stress upon that. He is not talking about 'being,' but about a 'becoming.' That is to say, God must ever be passing moment by moment into our hearts, if there is to be anything godly there. Cut off the sunbeam from the sun and it dies, and the house is dark; cut off the life from the root and it withers, and the creature shrivels. The Christian man lives only by continual derivation of life from God; and forever and ever the secret of his being and of his blessedness is not that he has become a possessor, but that he has become a partaker, of the divine nature. By daily increase we shall be made capable of daily increase." Let us each day by day keep before us this high ideal:

"Unwearied may I thus pursue;
Dauntless to the high prize aspire;
Hourly within my soul renew
This holy flame, this heavenly fire,
And day and night, be all my care
To guard the sacred treasure there."

How Attain to It.

In order to attain to this glorious destiny we must "escape the corruption that is in the world"—physical, mental and moral—corruption of the life. Then, by "speaking the truth in love" we are to grow up into Christ the living head. There is no standstill. If we would reproduce the divine model we must follow the example of him who said: "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." We must "speak the truth" upon all occasions, but, like our model, we must "speak the truth in love." Truth without love will fail, and love without truth also will fail. It is not so much in what we say as how we say it, nor in what we do as how we do it. Some folks seem to have the faculty of saying truth and doing kindnesses in a very disagreeable way. This will never happen when "the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

A Thousand Years Hence.

No human being can look into that vast beyond and foretell to-day the things and conditions that will exist a thousand years hence, or even a year hence, but we venture to predict, that if the world is still in existence at that far distant time, the people who live in that age will live under entirely new conditions and surroundings. The superb buildings and magnificent monuments that are being erected to-day, unless they are of a material known as Georgia Marble, will have crumbled away or been demolished, but if they are constructed of this Georgia Marble, the next thousand years, and then thousands of years more upon that, will find them as substantial and beautiful as they are to-day. To-day we look back upon the marble temples and palaces that were erected in the ancient ages in wonder and amazment—a thousand years hence people will be looking upon the buildings and monuments we erect to-day of Georgia Marble with that same bewilderment, although, there is nothing so wonderful in this stone standing for thousands of years because it is identical in beauty and quality with the world-famous Parian marble, used in the earlier ages.

United States Government test shows the crushing strength of Georgia Marble to be upwards of 10,000 pounds to the square inch, and as result of their investigation into this material, Uncle Sam is using it in a great many of his finest and most important buildings, building that are erected for the purpose of serving many generations as yet unborn. A microscopic analysis of this stone shows it to be of a crystalline formation, each tiny crystal being so closely interlocked with the other as to prevent the slightest degree of absorption or decomposition. It absolutely will not decay or discolor in any climate, and will withstand heat to upwards of 1,000 degrees Fah.

As a monumental marble, this Georgia Marble is simply superb. It can be had in the most beautiful and delicate shades, and in any size up to the limit of transportation. The Cherokee grade is a silver grey; Creole, a mottled black and white; Kennesaw, a pure white and Etowah an exquisite pink in many shades. It is the most attractive and substantial material for finishing work that can be obtained. The Candler Building, of Atlanta, Ga., is finished throughout in the Creole, it matches up perfectly and has a continual stream of admirers.

If you contemplate erecting a monument for any purpose, and want it to remain always beautiful and lasting, even to the end of time, or if it be a building, and you want it fire-proof and time-proof, use Georgia Marble. The more you investigate its beauty and durability, the more convinced you are of its superiority over all other building and monumental material. Ask your dealer to show you samples of this celebrated Georgia Marble, but if he can't supply you, write to the Georgia Marble Company, Tate, Ga., and they will put you in touch with a nearby dealer who can.

A Pint of Unequaled Cough Syrup for 50c

The Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy You Ever Used, or Money Refunded. Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly.

You may not need the $2 which a 50-cent bottle of Pinex saves you, but you do need the wonderful effectiveness of this famous cough remedy. It will usually stop the most obstinate deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours, and has no equal for whooping cough.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, mixed with home-made sugar syrup, gives you a full pint—a family supply of the most pleasant and effective cough remedy you ever used. Easily prepared in five minutes—directions in package.

The way this takes hold of a cough and gives instant relief, will make you regret that you never tried it before. Stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative and tastes good—children take it willingly. It has a wonderful record in cases of incipient lung trouble and is splendid for croup, asthma, bronchitis, throat trouble, etc.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in gualacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a pint bottle, and it is ready for use. Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THE ANXIETY OF A PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHER.

After the writer had addressed an audience recently upon the importance of the church in religious teaching keeping pace with the common school as to modern methods, the principal of the high school came forward and emphatically stated that it was a matter that gave him no little concern, that his two hundred pupils were not being taught religion. The unwritten law of division in our country is that the State give the secular education and the church and the home the religious. The civil government is taking care of its part of the contract magnificently; but within the bounds of this teacher's territory the home was lax in its work of Christian nurture. The church's excuse for a Sunday school was of such a weak type that it could not hold the respect of the public school children, who were taught in a well equipped building with trained teachers, and given graded and well arranged courses of study. The Sunday school had only one room, with seats only for adults; no blackboards or maps, and the teachers were picked up here and there without special reference to their qualifications. It was run on a haphazard schedule, and the best that could have been said about it was that it was better than nothing.

Many of these public school teachers feel that the church is not "toeing fair" in this matter of education. If the church will only have a school on Sunday where real teaching is done, they are ready to do their best to help, but, with the average country Sunday school, they feel that the returns are too meagre in comparison with their week-day achievements. The State is setting us an example of aggressiveness, and it is high time we were doing better. The Sunday school must improve or die by the very law of contrast. In the meantime, who is to care for these 200 high school pupils who are not being taught religion?

P. O. LOWREY.

HONORED AT HOME.

In 1848, the seven leading druggists of Nashville, Tenn., exressed their appreciation of Gray's Ointment in the following announcement: "We, the undersigned druggists of Nashville, Tenn., take pleasure in stating that we have sold Gray's Invaluable Ointment for many years, and that we have never known it to fail in giving entire satisfaction in the many diseases for which it is recommended, and that it is more popular than anything else we sell of a similar character."

For boils, carbuncies, old sores, festering wounds and to prevent blood poisoning, Gray's Ointment has held first place since its introduction, 1820. Invaluable for man and domestic animals. Free sample by mail or 25c at your druggists. Dr. W. F. Gray Co., 807 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE.

Whereas, since the last quarterly conference of the Morton and Pelahatchie Circuit, held at Zion Grove on the 25th day of August, 1911, God in his wisdom has removed by death from the church at Pelahatchie and from the official roll of this conference, Brother P. B. SUMMER, Dr. E. N. BAKER and C. W. TAYLOR; and, Whereas, these brethren were serving the church faithfully and efficiently, Brothers Summer and Baker, as trustees, and Brother Taylor, as steward and recording steward at the time of their death; and, Whereas, the town of Pelahatchie has lost three of her best citizens, the Methodist Church three of her truest and best members, and this quarterly conference three faithful officials; therefore, be it, Resolved, By this quarterly conference of the Morton and Pelahatchie Circuit in session at Lindsey's Chapel, this the 17th day of November, 1911, that we hereby express our sorrow and loss on account of the death of those brethren; Resolved, That in our deliberations we shall miss their suggestions, their wise counsel, and their godly influence; Resolved, That we express to the families of these brethren our sincere sympathy, and that we pray that they may be kept by God's love and power; Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the Minutes of this quarterly conference, and that a copy be sent to the family of each of these deceased brethren, and a copy be sent to th New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: W. J. Dawson, P. C.; J. A. Lindsey, W. H. Till, J. L. Tanner, G. G. Lindsey, J. C. Lindsey, stewards.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION IN 1912.

No other paper is quite like The Youth's Companion. It is taken in half a million homes where the choice of reading is made with as much care as the choice of friends. It entertains, it satisfies the keen zest for thrilling adventure, it is rich in wit and humor, and all the while its purpose is to be to every reader a help onward—never a drag backward.

Among the contributors to the 1912 volume will be General Baden-Powell, the defender of Mafeking and founder of the Boy Scouts, Walter Camp, the celebrated football coach, Hudson Maxim, the inventor of high explosives, Governor Harmon, of Ohio, Percival Lowell, the astronomer, Jacob A. Riis, Marion Harland, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Rev. Francis E. Clark, founder of the Society of Christian Endeavor, etc.

The serial stories alone, which will follow one another the year through, will be worth $1.50 each when published in book form. By subscribing to The Companion you get them all and 250 other complete stories for $1.75, and the Articles, Miscellany, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Household Page, etc., put in for good measure. Now is the time to subscribe, sending $1.75 for the 52 weekly issues of the new volume, for on January 1, 1912, the subscription price will be advanced to $2.00.

Do not forget that the new subscriber for 1912 receives free, The Companion's Calendar for 1912, lithographed in ten colors and gold, and all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1911, free from the time the subscription is received.

The only way to be patient, to be calm, to be ready for all effort and all endurance, is to hold in the soul the thought of the great truths of God, greater than any passing event or crisis. To live thus in the presence of eternal laws and lofty ideals is to have power and conquer.—New Gulde.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

I used to think that God's gifts were on shelves one above the other, and that the taller we grew in Christian character the easier we should reach them. I find now that God's gifts are on shelves one beneath the other, and that it is not a question of growing taller, but of stooping lower, and that we have to go down, always down, to get his best gifts.—Rev. HERBS AND FLOWERS CURE CATARRH

You need not suffer from catarrh, bronchitis, lingering colds or other catarrhal troubles. After years of research and experiment Dr. Blosser discovered a compound of herbs, leaves and flowers which by a unique method is applied to every nook and corner of the mucous membrane in the head, nose, throat and lungs.

Any sufferer, after giving it a trial, can readily see why it is so greatly superior to such ordinary treatments as sprays, ointments, salves, liquid or tablet medicines, because all these do not and cannot reach all the affected parts, while Dr. Blosser's method reaches every spot; and this explains, at least in part, the wonderful success with which it is meeting. The full size package costs but one dollar. It is harmless, pleasant to use, and is easily applied even by a child.

No matter how deep-seated, your catarrh may be; no matter how long it has troubled you; no matter if other remedies have failed; you should give this treatment a trial, and it will do for you what it has done for thousands of other sufferers. Write at once to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., in order to avail yourself of his offer of a free trial package of the remedy and an illustrated booklet which gives all the facts about catarrh. It is not necessary to send any money—simply send your name and address.

RHEUMATISM

A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as those who have it know, for over three years, and tried almost everything. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial, I will send it free. Address,

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

A Young People's Bible Class has been organized at Sardis, twelve miles from Monroe, with Mr. Chas. Nabnet, president; Miss Katie Rutledge, superintedent of the Cradle Roll.

* * *

A Young Men's Bible Class has been organized at Calhoun with Prof. Wiley, an exhorter in our church, teacher; Mrs. Howard Peavy superintends the new Home Department and Mrs. Willis Anders, the Cradle Roll.

* * *

Rev. W. H. Ledbetter held a meeting recently at Oakdale and organized a Southern Methodist Church, the building of the M. E. Church being used. When a church can be built he intends organizing a Sunday school.

* * *

At Indian Village, on the Eros charge, a Young People's Bible Class has been organized with Mr. Wade McClendon, president, and a Home Department superintended by Mrs. S. L. Boyd, and Miss Trudy Bryan superintends the Cradle Roll.

* * *

In a neatly printed and comprehensive church bulletin from the Homer Church is the announcement that the Sunday school classes are giving $167.50 on the $1,500 note being paid off on the church debt this year. We are glad to see the Sunday school scholars being trained to manifest service and Christian giving. They ought to be taught to help support the pastor, pay the sexton, etc., as well as to buy their own literature and give to foreign missions. Giving, like other fundamentals in religion, should be taught to children and youths, and not leave the young disciple to "set" in selfishness.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The Home Department of the Sunday school has as its aim "A studied Bible in every home," and already between 50,000 and 60,000 have traced their conversion to the work in this department.

* * *

The Gleaners in this same Eupora Sunday school is a woman's class working shoulder to shoulder with the men, and doing very progressive as well as aggressive service for their Lord and Master.

* * *

Keep in mind the Sunday school exhibit for our Annual Conference at Macon, Nov. 29. Brother Gladney has a fine room set aside for this work and several classes are preparing to compete for the Sunday School Board award. These exhibits will be very practically helpful to all classes and an enthusiastic effort should be made to have every one-year class in the Confrerence make some sort of entry in this line of Sunday school activity.

* * *

The Men and Religion Forward Movement Campaign is having fourfold results: (1) a heightened zeal for Christian work; (2) a greater appreciation of the importance of the Church among men in general; (3) a greatly augmented spirit of cooperation among the ministers and church leaders of the city; (4) a definite continuing committee organization in all the Protestant Churches along all five lines of this campaign effort.

* * *

There are urgent reasons why every Sunday school should include missions as a part of the regular instructions given the pupils: (1) Recruits for the Master's service must come largely from the youth of the Church; (2) Many of the noblest characters of history have been the men and women who have served God as missionaries, and the heroism, faith and fidelity of these consecrated saints will make a profound impression upon the lives of the boys and girls if related to them; (3) Boys and girls are touched by an appeal to help and are really anxious to do so.

* * *

A certain prominent minister in the Conference had the fortune to be strenuously admonisished to attend Sunday school by a barber who was an enthusiastic member of a great Bible Class. The clergyman was in a business suit, and did not disclose his identity till the barber recognized him on Sunday as the highly honored and specially invited guest of his church for the next Sabbath, and his consternation can be imagined. That minister has been saying kindly, helpful words to busy barbers ever since, and in a very few minutes in a city barber shop last week discovered one of the old members of this class who had not been to Sunday school since he left the home-town and put him in line with a great class and led him back to his first love. The personal touch of this consecrated man is being felt by men in many places as he emphasizes the efforts of the Adult Bible Class fellows, and is winning numberless friends here and many stars in his crown hereafter.

* * *

An elementary banquet or rally in a given school, city or neighborhood for all the teachers in this fine arm of aggressive and intensive Sunday school uplift will do much to promote interest in new and approved methods in this department. Try it. If every member of each Adult Men's Class would bring one boy to Sunday school in the next three months untold good would result and the real foundation of future church support would be laid. The Morris Class, Eupora, has had new members added from a recent religious census of the town, each teacher in the Sunday school selected the material collected suited to his or her needs and a large and enthusiastic Rally Day service was held in the splendid new church on Oct. 29. This class has printed cards for strangers and framed notices of class services and fellowship hung in all public places and were brave and fine enough when their room in the new church was needed for some one else to rent their present quarters at $60 a year and continue to spend their blessed Sunday school hour in their "upper room." Miss Willingham and this great class are a source of inspiration and uplift to many, and the business men of Eupora say the standard of morality has been visibly and helpfuliy raised by the lives of these men.

NOTICE.

To the Preachers of the Louisiana Conference—

Brethren: The banks of the city of New Orleans years ago entered into an agreement not to cash out-of-city checks, free; therefore, if you do not secure New Orleans or other bank exchange, you must add fifteen cents to each and every local check handed to us. The banks are very kind to us and render to us and to other Conference Boards many courtesies and very valuable assistance, and we must comply with their very easy terms.

Sincerely,

A. M. MAYO,
J. G. SLOANE,
W. R. HARVELL,

THE CLASS OF THE FIRST YEAR.

Members of the class of the first year in the Louisiana Conference who have not completed their examinations, are requested to meet the committee at Parker Memorial Church Tuesday, Dec. 5, at 2 p.m.

J. M. HENRY, Chairman.

CLASS OF THE FOURTH YEAR.

Members of the class of the fourth year in the Louisiana Conference who have not taken the correspondence course, are requested to meet the committee at the Parker Memorial Church, Tuesday morning, Dec. 5, at 9

M. C. HOLT, Chairman.

NOTICE—LOUISIANA PREACHERS!

The Assessment for Minutes is a small item in each charge, but because of the heavy cost of material and work, it is essential that the amount be paid in full. Your Minutes are sent to you without further cost, but unless we secure the full amount we may be under the necessity of having the preachers pay the express on the packages sent them. Please make the item for Minutes in full.

We also urge each preacher to have his Statistical Report ready for the secretaries by the close of the first session of the Conference. This will be necessary if the statistical report is to be read before the close of Conference. We especially urge carefulness in making out the reports, as a little care on the part of the preachers will save the secretaries considerable unnecessary labor. Sincerely,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Statistical Secretary.

HOW TO REPORT THE MEMBERSHIP OF YOUR CHARGE.

To the Pastors of the Louisiana Conference.

Dear Brethren: We are especially anxious to get the report of membership of our churches entirely accurate, and I will ask that you follow the following rules in making your report to the Conference:

In the column "Reported Last Year," please place the figures found in the last Minutes in the column for "Present Total Membership." Do not attempt to place what you had enrolled at the beginning of the year, even if your church was divided. But place the actual figures that were reported as your present total membership for your charge at the last Conference. Then, after deducting your loss, or adding your gain, report what your present total membership is for the present year in the column provided. For instance, take the Rayne and Indian Bayou charges in the Lafayette District: At the last Conference a division was made in the Indian Bayou charge by taking one of the appointments and giving it to the Rayne charge. In this case, for Indian Bayou, in the column for "Members Reported Last Year," the report should be 338. The Bethel Church had a membership of say 150 members. The last Conference transferred this membership from the Indian Bayou charge to the Rayne charge, hence Indian Bayou will report a loss of 150 members for this year, and if there have been no losses or gains, otherwise on the charge, the report to be given in the column for "Present Total Membership" will be 188 members. If there are no gains or losses otherwise on the Rayne charge, that report will be, "Members Reported Last Year" 81, "Present Total Membership" 231.

It is only by conforming to this method of reporting the Membership of our Church that we can arrive at any degree of accuracy in this important item. I hope that the reports will be carefully rendered and that we may have, for once, an entirely correct report of our actual membership. I certainly hope that the desire to make a good showing will not cause any of our preachers to report the actual losses of their charge, if there have been any losses, and trust that our net gain in membership will indicate a steady and substantial growth in our Church the Conference over. Cordially,

ROB'T W. VAUGHAN,
Statistical Secretary.

NOTICE.

To Members of the Louisiana Conference:

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 58—No. 49. "Prove All Things; Hold Fast That Which is Good." WHOLE No. 2912.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1911. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

By Dr. John T. Sawyer.

The sixty-sixth session of the Louisiana Conference is being held this week at the Parker Memorial Church, with Bishop Mouzon presiding; Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, secretary, and Rev. Chas. D. Atkinson, the genial host. Could we take the time necessary to consult the old records, and were sufficient space in the Advocate allowed us, we could easily show that the labors and achievements of the Louisiana Methodist Fathers were as heoric and glorious as those of any section of our great Church. We shall not in this article go back to the time of Nolley and the other noble spirits who followed him in the early years of the last century. The Louisiana Conference has given to the Church some of our greatest Bishops in Holland N. McTyeire, John Christian Keener and Linus Parker; and indeed we might add, with permission of Mississippi, Charles Betts Galloway, so much one of us was he while editor of the Advocate, and he always lived in the hearts of our people.

BISHOP E. D. MOUZON, of San Antonio, Texas, who is holding the Louisiana Conference this week. He is the youngest member of the episcopal college, and a man of scholarship and unusual eloquence.

McTyeire, the founder of Vanderbilt; Keener, the profound theologian and mighty preacher; Parker, the elegant writer and sincere friend—all three were the equals of any of the Episcopacy, from Joshua Soule to the latest. All three were accomplished editors of the Advocate. Some years ago this writer was sitting in the Advocate office conversing with Bishop Keener, when Mrs. Deacon, one of the old and elect sisters, appeared at the door, and, standing looking at the Bishop, said this: "Brother Keener, when you were pastor of the Poydras Street Church and held your great meeting, a young man seated near me said, pointing to you as you walked up the aisle to the pulpit, 'there goes the Holy Ghost.'" Her reference was to what was probably one of the higgest revivals ever held in New Orleans, during which he had preached to great congregations every night for many weeks, discoursing largely upon the law of God, and producing deep convictions and thorough conversions. There have been many men of Holy Spirit power in charge of our churches before and during the civil war and the years since. Some of the most successful preachers from elsewhere have held pastorates and wrought well among us. There was Dr. W. V. Tudor, the scholarly and eloquent pastor of old Carondelet, who stood as a pulpit man shoulder to shoulder with his Presbyterian neighbor, Dr. B. M. Palmer of the First Presbyterian Church. Dr. John Matthews, who was with us in all about ten years, was a mighty man of God, and at Felicity, Carondelet and Rayne Memorial was pre-eminently successful in the winning of souls. Original in his style and methods, he drew immense congregations and added to the Church many hundreds of saved men, women and children. There must he mention of Dr. Joseph B. Walker, who was a member of the Louisiana Conference for many years and whose bow kept its strength to near the last of a long and fruitful ministry. Like Dr. Matthews, he was a great revival and camp-meeting preacher, and also a diligent pastor. Rev. Robt. J. Harp, who was one of our best preachers and most active workers in the early days, is still with us, and, like the others of our beloved superannuates, awaiting in great peace the summons home. There are numbers of others we might mention, but their records are on high, and are all of the best. The presiding elders of the Conference are all first-class men, and the brethren who are pastors in charge, though not "in the saddle," as in the olden time, are as capable a lot of preachers, old and young alike, as can be found in any Conference. A number of the young men in the cities and towns and on the circuits have the stuff in them to do large things for God.

REV. C. D. ATKINSON,

Host of the Louisiana Conference.

Dr. Felix R. Hill is having great success at Centenary, and the orphanage work at Ruston moves on successfully under the guidance of Rev. Robt. W. Vaughan. We hear splendid reports of Profs. Carter and Carre, at Vanderbilt, and Dr. C. W. Carter, after a long life of ministerial success, and though a superannuate, is still doing a lot of preaching, and, in accordance with the request of the last Conference, he will preach a semi-centennial sermon during this Conference. At the last Conference our membership was reported at 33,664, a net gain of 101 for last year. We trust the gain may show this year some hundreds more of increase during 1911. Last year the decrease in amount paid for Foreign Missions was $234, and for Domestic Missions $81. The assessments for these and the other interests are moderate and ought to be largely overpaid.

When we joined the Louisiana Conference on trial, Bishop Enoch M. Marvin was president of the body and preached three times, calling mourners at each service. There were some forty or so converted and who joined the Church. We have in these days so many boards and committees, and what not, to attend to, that little time is left for revival sermons and work. Anyhow, let believing prayer go up to God from every clerical and lay member of the Conference, that the Holy Spirit may abide in power upon our Annual Conference.

"MOUNT UP WITH WINGS."

The soul that rises in thought and affection and life sings. Some have lived so near to God that they hardly knew whether they were in the body or out of the body. Charles Wesley has expressed the rapture of the Christian in his loftier experiences in language that almost rivals that of Shelley when he sings of the skylark:

"On the wings of his love,
I was carried above
All sin and temptation and pain;
I could not believe
That I ever should grieve,
That I ever should suffer again.

"I rode on the sky,
Freely justified I,
Nor envied Elijah his seat;
My soul mounted higher
In a chariot of fire,
And the moon it was under my feet."

We may have our wings now. All men expect to soar some time; but most men are waiting for death to give them wings. One needs not to wait for death. Only let him "wait on the Lord," and he shall find his wings—"they that wait on the Lord shall mount up with wings of eagles."

But some one will say: "This high life will unfit us for work on the earth. We are living on the earth. Our duties are here. Our interests are here. We have no needs of wings. They would hinder rather than help." This is wrong. The truth is that those who soar highest are most efficient in everyday labor and struggle.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

On behalf of the preachers of the Sardis District, Rev. James Porter presented a gold mounted umbrella to Rev. W. M. Young, who had completed his quadrennium on the Sardis District.

The Bishop called the class of the Third Year. A. G. Hall, D. H. Crowson, J. L. Nabors, having completed the course of study for the third year, were reported passed by the committee, and were advanced to the class of the Fourth Year. A. L. Davenport, T. E. Young and T. J. Hopper, not having been before the committee, were continued in the class of the third year. Rev. J. H. Felts presented the request of T. E. Yancey for reference for the supernumerary relation and he was so referred.

The Bishop resumed the call of question 22, and called the Aberdeen District. The preachers made brief reports and their characters were passed.

On behalf of the preachers of the Winona District, Rev. J. A. Dorman presented a gold watch to Rev. E. S. Lewis, who had completed his fourth year as presiding elder on the Winona District.

C. O. Chalmers, publisher of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, was introduced to the Conference by the Bishop.

Bishop Wilson called Bishop Candler to the chair. The Columbia District was called, and the preachers reported and their characters were passed.

On behalf of the preachers of the Oxford District, Rev. J. H. Mitchel presented a gold watch to Rev. J. E. Cunningham, who had completed his quadrennium on the Oxford District.

The secretary read a communication from the Pastors' Association of Starkville in regard to the Arbitration Treaty pending in Congress. It was referred to the committee on spiritual interests.

The Bishop introduced G. W. Eichelberger, secretary of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League, to the Conference, and he addressed the Conference on the Status of Prohibition in Mississippi, and presented a paper which was referred to the committee on temperance.

The secretary presented a communication from the Mississippi W. C. T. U., and it was referred to the committee on temperance.

The call of question 22 was resumed and the Corinth District was called; the preachers reported and their characters passed. The call of Corinth Station was deferred.

Dr. J. W. Boswell was added to the committee on memoirs. Rev. G. W. Bachman offered the following resolution:

"Whereas, President Taft, seconded by Governor Noel, has issued a proclamation designating Thursday November 30, 1911, as Thanksgiving Day, Resolved, that we observe the day requesting Bishop Candler to preach a Sermon at 11 o'clock at the Methodist Church, and Dr. H. G. Henderson at the Baptist Church."

The resolution was adopted.

The Bishop proceeded with the call of question 22, and the Durant District was called; the preachers reported and their characters passed. Through his presiding elder, E. E. Langford surrendered his credentials and requested the privilege of withdrawing from the Conference. On motion, the request was granted. The secretary read a telegram of greeting from the American Bible Society

It was announced by committee on public worship that the Veterans' Association of the North Mississippi Conference would meet in annual session in the Methodist Church at 3 o'clock, the annual sermon to be preached by Dr. J. W. Boswell, and at 7 p.m. the anniversary of the Board of Missions would be held, with an address by Dr. W. W. Pinson, the general secretary of the Board of Missions.

After singing the Doxology, the benediction was pronounced by Dr. T. C. Weir, and the session adjourned.

Second Day—Morning Session.

The Conference met at the appointed hour, 9 a.m., Bishop Wilson in the chair.

Dr. J. W. Boswell conducted the opening exercises, reading Psalm 67 and announcing hymn No. 388, "A charge to keep I have," and, after singing, led in prayer.

The secretary called the roll of absentees, and, on motion, further calling of the roll was dispensed with.

The secretary read the minutes of the previous session, and they were approved.

A communication from the General Secretary of the Anti-Saloon League was presented and referred without reading to the Committee on Temperance.

A communication from the Seashore Divinity School was read by the secretary and referred to the Board of Education.

The Bishop called question 2, "Who remain on trial?" and proceeded to call the class of the first year. J. M. Quinn, C. G. Smith, W. W. Hartfield, A. S. Brisco, W. J. Wood, A. M. Bennett, Olin Ray, R. I. Collins, R. J. S. Worley, T. G. Adair, W. S. Selman, J. S. Jennings, having completed the course of the first year, were passed by the committee and were advanced to the second year.

W. N. Dodds, A. S. Raper and G. L. Houston, were not passed by the committee, and were continued in the class of the first year.

J. D. Boggs, J. R. James and A. F. Moore, not having been before the committee, were continued in the class of the first year.

It was reported that J. S. Jennings had returned to the Presbyterian Church.

J. R. Bingham presented and read a brief report from the Hospital Commission, and, on motion, the report was referred to a committee of five to be appointed by the Chair.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary of the Tri-State Hospital Commission, was introduced to the Conference.

The Bishop called question 4, "Who are admitted into full connection?" and proceeded to call the class of the second year. E. M. Broyles, E. H. Cunningham, J. E. Stephens, C. A. Northington, T. E. Gregory, T. J. Halfacre, J. S. Duke, J. A. Coleman, J. G. Johnson, having passed an approved examination on the course of study for the second year, were elected to deacon's orders and passed to the class of the third year. J. A. Biffle, being in deacon's orders, was advanced to the third year.

W. V. Shearer and G. W. McLane, not having passed an approved examination, were continued in the class of the second year.

M. A. Burns and J. H. Bell, not having been before the committee, were continued in the class of the third year.

The character of J. D. McWhorter was passed, he having been transferred to the West Texas Conference.

L. B. Hankin was discontinued with no reflection on his character, and the Conference made a cash offering to him of $61.71.

The Bishop called question 14, "What traveling preachers are elected elders?" and proceeded to call the class of the fourth year. J. C. McElroy, K. P. Foust, E. B. Sharp, F. L. Nabors, having completed the course of study, were passed and elected to elder's orders. S. B. Myers was also reported passed by the committee.

The Bishop called question 12, "What local preachers are elected deacons?" and the Bishop called the districts for applications. T. L. Oakes, of the Durant District; J. D. Wroten, of the Oxford District, and F. T. Alexander, of the Winona District, were elected to deacon's orders.

Question 16, "What local preachers are elected elders?" was called. The districts were called, but no applications were reported.

Question 7, "Who are received from other churches as local preachers?" Rev. B. P. Jaco presented the application of S. W. Donehew, and he was received from the Baptist Church in local elder's orders.

The Bishop resumed the call of question 22, and called the Greenville District. The preachers reported and their characters were passed. Through his presiding elder, L. P. Wasson surrendered his credentials and asked the privilege of withdrawing from the ministry, and the request was granted with the good-will and well wishes of the Conference.

The Bishop returned to the Corinth District and called the name of J. W. Herring. His presiding elder reported charges of immorality preferred against him, and that he was suspended, pending the action of the Conference. The Bishop made the following appointments for the trial: For the prosecution, W. L. Duren; for the defence, W. S. Lagrone; committee of trial as follows: J. W. Bell, chairman; W. E. M. Brogan, A. W. The Bishop announced the Hospital Committee as W. L. Duren, O. W. Bradley, L. M. Lipscomb, H. S. Spragins and R. O. Brown.

H. C. Edmondson was referred to the commlttee on conference relations for the superannuate relation.

The order of the day having arrived (the Thanksgiving sermon), Bishop Candler came forward and announced hymn 708, "Great God, beneath whose piercing eye." After singing, J. H. Mitchell led in prayer; the Bishop read Psalm 67 and Acts 17, and announced hymn No. 180, "All hail the power of Jesus' name." During the singing and offering was made to the Methodist Orphanage. Bishop Candler announced his text, Acts xxviii, 20: "For the hope of Israel I am bound with these chains," and preached a powerful sermon on "Jesus Christ the Hope of Humanity," and in conclusion announced hymn No. 1, "O for a thousand tongues to sing my great Redeemer's praise." After singing, Dr. R. A. Meek led in prayer.

The commlttee on public worship announced a service at 3 p.m. and one at 7 p.m., in the interest of the Sunday school work, with addresses by Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick and others. Other announcements were made and the Conference adjourned with singing of the Doxology, and benediction by Bishop Wilson.

Third Day—Morning Session.

Conference met at the appointed hour (9 a.m), Bishop W. A. Candler in the chair. The Bishop announced hymn 22, "Come ye that love the Lord," and called on Rev. J. W. Honnoll to lead in prayer. The Bishop read the twelfth chapter of Acts and delivered a forceful and practical discourse on prayer. "How firm a foundation," was sung, after which the secretary read the minutes of the previous session, and they were approved.

Various papers were referred without reading to the several Conference boards and commlttees.

The Bishop resumed the call of question 22, and called the Oxford District. The preachers reported and their characters were passed.

Rev. J. R. Countiss presented and read his report as president of Grenada College. It was referred to th Board of Education.

Rev. W. Fred Long, State Field Secretary of the International Sunday School work, and Rev. W. S. Simpson pastor of the local Presbyterian Church, were introduced to the Conference.

J. H. Sherard, president of the Orphans' Home Board of Directors, presented his report, and it was read by the secretary. The report was discussed by J. H. Sherard. Rev. W. M. Willlams, manager of the Orphans' Home, was introduced and he addressed the Conference on the affairs of the Home. The report was adopted.

J. H. Sherard and D. W. Babb were elected to succeed themselves as members of the Board of Directors of the Orphans' Home.

The committee of trial in the case of J. W. Herring presented their report and it was read as follows: "We, your committee of trial, find J. A. Herring gullty as charged, and expelled from the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

The Bishop resumed the call of question 22, and called the Sardis and Winona Districts. The preachers made their reports and their characters were passed.

On behalf of the preachers of the Corinth District, R. M. Weaver, with words of love and appreciation. presented a Bible to Rev. B. P. Jaco, who had completed his fourth year on the Corinth District.

The Bishop returned to the call of question 2, and called the name of Thomas Miller. He made his report, and, having passed an approved examination on the course of the first year, was advanced to the class of the second year.

Rev. J. A. Randolph, chaplain in the U. S. Army, addressed the Conference in regard to his work and asked leave of absence, which was granted.

The report of the committee on Conference relations was presented and read by Rev. J. W. Dorman, which was adopted, granting superannuate and supernumerary relations to all who were referred. This answered questions 19 and 20.

The Conference made a cash offering to Rev. H. C. Edmondson.

The Bishop called question 1, "Who are admitted on trial?" and called the roll of the districts. W. O. Wagoner, from the Aberdeen District; E. D. Simpson, from the Columbus District; G. A. Baker, from the Corinth District; D. R. Wasson, from the Durant District; D. M. Gean, from the Oxford District, and J. J. Baird and E. M. Shaw, from the Winona District, were presented for admission, their recommendations being in due form and order, and having passed an approved examination by the committee, and passed by the committee on admissions, were admitted on trial.

The Bishop called question 8, "Who are received from other churches as travelling preachers?" and called the roll of the districts. W. D. Bazzell, from the Corinth District, was received in elder's orders from the Methodist Protestant Church; E. R. Smoot, from the Winona District, was received in orders from the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. J. E. Thomas was introduced and she addressed the Conference on the work of the Foreign Department of the Woman's Missionary Council.

The Bishop called question 5, "Who are re-admitted?" and Rev. J. M. Wyatt, from the Oxford District, was re-admitted into the traveling connection.

The committee on public worship announced that Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary of the Tri-State Hospital Commission, would preach at 3 p.m. in the Methodist Church, and that Dr. W. F. McMurry would deliver an address at the Methodist Church at 7 p.m.

Conference adjourned with the doxology and benediction by Bishop Wilson.

Fourth Day—Morning Session.

The Conference met at the appointed hour, 9 a.m., Bishop Candler in the chair, with Bishop Wilson present. Hymn No. 309, "Amazing grace; how sweet the sound," was sung, and Rev. W. M. Young led in prayer. Bishop Candler read the twentieth chapter of Matthew, and made forcible comments on consecration. "Am I a soldier of the cross?" was sung."

The secretary read the minutes of the previous session and they were approved.

The Bishop called question 48, "Where shall the next Conference be held?" Rev. H. S. Spragins nominated Greenwood. Rev. T. H. Lipscomb nominated Lexington. Rev. W. E. M. Brogan nominated Starkville. After hearing representatives of the places in nomination, the Conference voted as follows: Greenwood, 82; Lexington, 43; Starkville, 2. Greenwood was announced as the place for the next meeting.

MEETING OF THE HISTORICAL SOCIETY, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

According to a standing appointment, the Historical Society of the North Mississippi Conference met in annual session on the eve of the Conference, Tuesday evening, at 7 p.m., Nov. 28, 1911, in the Methodist Church, in Macon, Miss., Dr. T. C. Weir presiding, in place of Rev. W. W. Woollard, the president.

Religious exercises were conducted by the secretary, Rev. G. W. Bachman, who read Psalm 140, and announced hymn 383, "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Rev. T. H. Dorsey led in prayer, and hymn 355, "Love Divine," was announced and sung

Rev. J. W. Honnoll then preached his semi-centennial sermon from the text, "My grace is sufficient for thee," II Cor. xii, 9, the theme being the infinite fullness of the grace of God.

This good man of God, having served forty-one years in the active itinerant work, two as a superannuate, and seven as president of Epworth College—a half century in peace and war—serving all classes of appointments, and still active, gave full testimony to the fullness and power of the grace of God. He joined the Conference in 1861, at Jackson, Tenn.

The sermon was followed by an old-time Methodist handshaking.

Rev. G. W. Bachman spoke, explaining the nature and purpose of the society and urged the preachers to gather up and preserve the records of the churches.

Dr. J. W. Boswell made a motion that Rev. J. J. Brooks be appointed to write a history of Sylvesta Church, near Holly Springs, and Rev. E. S. Lewis to write a history of Friendship Church, near Woodland, Miss., both to be read at the next annual meeting of the Society. The motion was carried.

The Society adjourned with the benediction.

W. M. LANGLEY.

REV. WILSON MOORE.

Rev. Wilson Moore was born in Arkansas March 5, 1862, and died at Glenmora, La., Oct. 28, 1911. He was admitted on trial into the Louisiana Conference in 1885. He was an active itinerant preacher twenty years in this Conference, two years a superannuate, and four years a member of the Little Rock Conference. His opportunities for an education and to prepare himself for the ministry were limited; he labored under many disadvantages, being long a sufferer from bronchial and other troubles, and yet he was determined to succeed and did. He served many hard places, and had to surmount many difficulties; yet, as one who knew him for many years, I never knew him to really complain. It was my pleasure to have had him as my pastor while he was on the Wesley circuit; also to be pastor of his family this year. Brother Moore was a good, clear and forceful preacher of the gospel. Many were converted during his ministry; he was a good pastor, a good, pure and true man. He lived the life he preached. He had many friends to whom his death was a great shock. He leaves a wife, three sons, a mother, many relatives and friends to mourn his departure. May God comfort the loved ones!

Brother Moore fought a good fight, kept the faith, hence has received the crown of righteousness.

E. L. CARGILL.

A man who lives right, and is right, has more power in his silence, than another has by his words. Character is like bells which ring out sweet music, and which, when touched accidentally even, resound with sweet music.—Philips Brooks.

Whitworth College.

Oct. 26, 1911.

Session 1911-1912: enrollment 232 (two hundred and thirty-two). A few vacancies in the boarding department. One hundred and thirty in the music department. College was never more prosperous than now.

Each graduate of the Brookhaven High School, 1910-1911, entered Whitworth College in September. This is an evidence the College is appreciated at home. The faculty is giving unusual satisfaction. Prospects are good for an enrollment of 265, session 1911-1912—a record of which Whitworth friends are delighted. Send for catalogue. Address,

SOME MUSINGS.

By Rev. John F. Foster.

The influence and impulse that flow from the Master's life is in accord with and like to the Master himself. He is a unit within himself and reproduces himself in the living of those who commune and walk with him.

He left heaven and came to earth to lead man back to heaven, that is to God, winning him away from himself and sin, showing him a noble way of living, and to open up the way of approach to the Father's throne of grace. But so doing, he, in order to win man away from earth, having won his love and affection, left earth, returning to heaven, carrying his life thus other worldly and not earth centered. But now, absent from the body, or rather from the earth, who is to represent him and attend to the affairs of the kingdom, prosecuting its work and accomplishing its purpose? The answer is, man; for God hath ordained that it is by the foolishness of preaching, the instrumentality of man and his labor, spirit filled and mastered, that the world is to be taken. Man's life is thus given meaning, and under God, being guided by the Holy Spirit, is to become the light of the world, the salt thereof, his life and living illuminating the path of his fellow man and showing him the manner of life which, living, he may live eternally, and also may himself likewise become a savior of men.

The Christ life living in one, the fruitage of the vine is borne by the branch and man is in a sense a savior of his fellow-man. Thus the Kingdom of God is within us and from us flows out the force and power of that kingdom to win and woo the world from sin unto a higher life.

Jesus here in the body was localized and limited in his fields of operation, but Jesus bodily absent from earth is by and through the mystical uniting of his spirit in the transformation of the soul life of a man and of many men in regeneration, multiplying himself as a center of influence, and all who have met and gained spiritual knowledge of him become centers of influence and the Christ is "manifest" again in the flesh through their obedience, being incarnated again in each and every man who, owning his name, lives with and for him.

Our bodies becoming the temples of his indwelling, the earthly citadels of his kingdom, the centers from which his spiritual forces proceed, coming in contact with man through man, the Divine plan in the Incarnation, man becomes the ally of God and the coworker of the Master in the world's salvation.

Thus the coming of the Master redeems man, not only that he himself may be saved, but redeeming him redeems the forces and potentialities of his life, broadening his sphere of operation, making him a world character and causing his influence to reach out and out as it reaches him and touches another man. One through the Christ, thus multiplies himself, and the miracle of the loaves and fishes is seen over again, for a lone man becomes a host increasing with geometric progression, the concentric circles of whose influence shall ever expand until the last day when they break on the banks of eternity before the throne of God.

Man redeemed becomes a redeemer, not of or through himself, but by reason of Him in whom he abides and who abiding in him, makes him a fruit-bearing branch of the true vine of which the Father is the husbandman. This ever widening of man's scope of life, the impulses and possibilities of living, redeemed that he may redeem, lightened that he may enlighten, saved that he may save, this is the highest glory of man's living and the measure of his reward in glory and the basis of the "Come ye blessed of my Father," for is it not "in as much as ye did unto one of these" that the blessing follows?

The Master spoke with authority, being himself the embodiment of the truth he spoke. He conquered sin in his own body, and, being what he taught, he could teach others. Man lifted by him, illumined by him, transformed by him, because he, who is that power is in him, the hope of his glory, doing in him the work which he left heaven to do, being incarnated that he might be incarnated anew in our flesh, becomes a new creature, saved and saved for service, and comes into the kingdom, even the kingdom of fellowship with the Master as an heir of God and joint heir with the Son.

THREE GREAT LECTURES.

By Dr. Lyman Abbott.

(The following notes on Dr. Abbott's recent lectures at Vanderbilt University were made by Rev. J. R. Bright, a student in the Theological Dpartment of that University.)

I. The Congregation.—

Not the congregation merely of the assembly within the four walls of one's church, but the people of the church community are the field of the minister. The choice of this wider congregation was looked at with reference to "the man on the street," the average unchurched man. Attention was called to the fact that there is a good deal of "practical atheism" on the part of those who live as though there were no God, who defy divine authority. "Thou shalt not kill," is not reverenced by such as operate factories, mines and the like, which destroy life. "Thou shalt not commit adultry," is disregarded by those who do not honor the marriage relation and break the moral law as though there were no God to reckon with. And the preacher meets much agnosticism. Many men think God only a probable hypothesis—this reduces all law to only rules of conduct for the present. Many of these agnostics are not ignorant; many, not immoral They say, with Leslie Stevenson: "I mean to live like a gentleman and die like a gentleman, if possible." There are thousands like him. Then there there is a class of scientific materialists. You meet them when you try to help criminals, drunkards and the like. Why say the laws of nature, hereditary and environment have produced such persons and there is no remedy, no use to bother?

But men in these states are not satisfied, so, fortunately, there is the preacher's opportunity. The preacher, then, must know the states of mind of his people, if he reaches them with the gospel.

II. The Message.

Men generally recognize the presence of higher powers and the necessity of making connection with these higher powers. At Sinai, Israel was taught that the objects of nature—sun, moon, etc., are not gods as other peoples then thought, but that God is like man; the image of God is man. "The Higher Powers are like man." This is proclaimed by the prophets. Look within, read your own hearts and thus commune with God. So "God is to be interpreted through man" and "man is the interpreter of God to man"—The prophets interpreted God as human, in authropomorphic terms. Obedience to the laws of God is the condition of communion with God —this is Judaism.

Christianity adds to Judaism. Men had been seeking after God—now, "God goes seeking for man," and he is seeking all men. Jesus Christ is come for God to man, come to bring the kingdom of heaven, that is to bring God and men together. The Incarnation is the crown of the image of God—man, the eternal Christ, is the perfect manifestation of God—the very presence of the Father, the Son of God.

III. The Minister.—

The preacher of religion is to develop the perception of God as manifested in Christ Jesus, so presented as to influence men to become Christ-like Christians.

"Preaching ecclesiasticism is not preaching religion"—preaching Methodism, Congregationalism or Presbyterianism is not preaching religion. To lecture on such a subject may be advisable, but that is not preaching.

"Preaching higher criticism is not preaching religion." Higher criticism is only a literary and not a religious question, Lectures on literary criticsm may be desirable. Essays, however, are not sermons.

"Preaching theology, is not preaching religion." Some students think the theological seminary is a wholesale house where one comes to gather up "job-lots of theology," and then go out and retail in sermons. Theology. is not religion. The world will never be saved by theology, by either the old or the new theology. The preacher must know theology and use it as basis and background for preaching religion.

"Preaching emotionalism is not preaching religion." Emotions must be motor emotions, moving to life. To stir up the emotions and not relate and direct them to Christian activities is like firing up an engine on the track and leaving it detached without hitching it to the train.

Information and instruction are the means, but not the end of the sermon. "The object of the sermon is to impart life," "The life of God in the soul of man." If you have not the experience of the life of God, you cannot preach. You are limited by experience and older men have the advantage. Fifty is not the dead ine for the minister, but the dad line is the decay of enthusiasm.

The thing the Church needs to-day is not more elegant preaching in tho pulpit so much as more elegant living in the pew. Christians become interested in the church because they are at work. Commonly the congregation sit still and hire a preacher to go out and kill the giants, as Israel sat in camps and sent David out to kill Goliath. It is the minister's business to boost churches and set the members to work in Christian service, to lead them to do the will of God and to bring them into fellowship with Christ.

A LOST ART.

By J. W. Manhood, D.D.

Shall we say it is a lost art—this withdrawal within the veil? Shall we say that this busy, restless age thinks it has outgrown the need for listening to the voice that speaks only to the soul? That saintly mystic, John Tauler, said that one might learn more in one short hour from the inward voice than from man in a thousand years, and if he had reference to the deep things of God he was probably right. Yet in these days how little time the average Christian gives to the inward look and the inward voice!

Now religion is both a science and an art. In recent years much attention has been given to the scientific side. The age has been one of discovery—discovery in mechanics, in astronomy, in therapeutics, in social economics. This spirit of exploration has also extended into the realm of religion. And this is well. The Church of Jesus Christ owes much to the patient investigation carried on by men of great devotion to the interests of the kingdom of God. But it must not be forgotten that while science discovers, art creates. In our enthusiasm for the discovery side of religion it is possible to forget the creative side. The art of Christian character building has been much neglected, and where this is neglected it is so easy to allow ourselves to drift on the tide of worldliness and spiritual indifference. We need a renaissance in the art of Christian living.

In this intensely practical and explorative age we have gone to the opposite extreme from the mystical and contemplative. Indeed so little time is given to meditation that it may well be called a lost art. We have no longer time to ponder the great truths of life and destiny. With breathless haste we rush after something new among the things of time and sense and leave no room or strength for the hour of contemplation.—From The Lost Art of Meditation.

A GOOD RECOMMENDATION.

The Nashville Christian Advocate speaks this high praise of "MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE":

"'Modes of the Heavenly Life,' by Rev. Walter G. Harbin, one of our Southern Methodist preachers, is a timely and helpful book, and we feel sure it will be used by the Holy Ghost. This book honors the Holy Ghost. It consists of five sermons, all bearing on his personality and offices. The sermons are not only exceedingly spiritual and evangelical, but have a literary dress which bespeaks intellectual culture on the part of the preacher. He is a 'winner of souls.' His purpose and power are manifested on every page of the book."

Until Jan. 1, 1912, you can secure this book and A MAN WANTED—one of the greatest of men's sermons—for 50 cents.

SOUTHERN METHODISM ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

By Rev. I. D. Borders.

The conclusions of a recent writer in these columns have loosed the strings of my pen, and I shall ask to be suffered a word regarding the outlook of our Methodism in the great empire west of the Rockies. Two things must first be premised: to begin with, it must be frankly confessed that no man is wise enough to say the last word upon the subject, and that usually it is he who knows least who speaks most. There is no man who does not know the subject experimentally whose opinion is worth anything whatever. I have been here two years, and it may be said without undue self-praise I have enjoyed rather unusual opportunities for studying the situation, and yet I would hesitate long to speak with any approach to cocksureness. Let it be understood, therefore, that my opinions are modestly advanced, with no claim to infallibility. In the second place, I must plead guilty to being rather heretical with respect to a consuming loyalty to any particular ecclesiasticism, even that which is tenderly beloved by me, our own. Any denomination is to me only a means to an end, and the end is always paramount to the means.

As it appears to me, there are at least four classes of situations in which Southern Methodism finds itself in this country. There are many places where it is the only Methodism and sometimes the only Protestantism. Here it seems to supply every spiritual need, and there appears small reason to believe that any other Methodism is needed or could enter without doing violence to the Spirit of Christ. Secondly, there are many localities, such as Stockton, for instance, where our Church has been long established and where we possess a substantial constituency; under such circumstances there is absolutely no ungodly rivalry or strife, no appeal to unworthy prejudices, and an opportunity as stable as exists in any part of the connection anywhere. There is less friction between our Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church in this city than usually exists between a First and a Second Church of our own people in any ordinary Southern community, and we have as good a hearing as any other pulpit, with as much accomplished in the moral uplift of the population. A third class of appointments is that in which we find it a herculean effort to make buckler and tongue meet, where it is a never ending problem whether we can go on or whether we shall not have to abandon the fight. In such places we have a small membership, usually an ineligibly located or hopelessly incommodious or forlornly dilapidated house of worship, and it appears only a question of time until our struggles must cease, unless extraneous support comes to our aid. There is a fourth class where we are completely overshadowed, without means to carry on our work or hope of substantial results if we could do so, where another Methodism is strong and abundantly able to supply the field. In such places the preponderance of population is Northern in sentiment or extraction and would quite naturally prefer the Methodist Episcopal Church. In such communities we keep our Methodism alive through a tacit and sometimes expressed appeal to sectional prejudice. It is a shameful thing, but there are several instances of this unholy spirit to be found in this section. Such an attitude is utterly subversive of the Spirit of Christ, and for all such societies there is in waiting not only certain doom, but inevitable disgrace. To protract such a situation is not only unwise, but sinful. Far from upholding the dignity of our denomination, as is sometimes claimed, we only make fools of ourselves when we persist in such a contumacious policy at the expense of sense, popular respect and possibility of usefulness, and with a large outlay of money necessarily entailed.

It is obvious that these four classes of cases demand variant treatments. The first one needs only to be let alone. If our sister Methodism will only cede to us such fields as we have long occupied exclusively, and will allow us to do the work to which the Holy Spirit has indubitably called us by providential leadings, there is no good reason why we may not fulfill every legitimate demand such communities may make. The second class of cases is not bothering anybody. All they ask is of heaven—that they may be wise and brave and honest and true to their chances. It is the other two which give us concern and which trouble Israel. And each of these presents a different problem. In the case of the weak and disadvantaged Church there are many things which do not lie on the surface which must be inquired into. Each field is entirely an individual problem, and there is no blanket solution which will prove a catholicon. For example, the paper referred to at the outset cited the case of our Centenary Church in the city of San Francisco. The statement of the case was not more lugubrious than the actual facts. The present situation there is about as wretched as could well be imagined. It seems to be certain that we cannot hope to do anything in our present surroundings there, and if we are shut up to remaining in that plant at that place we must die, and the sooner we do it the more decently it will be done. But there are about five hundred Southern Methodists by inclination, if not by affiliation, in the great wicked city of Saint Francisco. It does seem as if they might set themselves up in business, but the fact remains that they have not done so, and by all tokens will not do so. If the great connectional Church of their daddies will help them generously and assist them to their feet, there is every reason to believe they may be retained for our Church, and what is very much more to the point, for our Christ. As it is, they are ecclesiastical derelicts, having just enough loyalty to our institutions to make them averse to enter another communion, and yet having too little fervent Christianity to keep them lights in the midst of a wicked and perverse generation. The figures are not my own, and I do not vouch for them, but I believe that a properly built edifice with a suitably manned pulpit would in ten years result in a live, working membership as large as the number named. Would not this be worth while?

The fourth class deserves independent consideration. I am slow to speak of it, however, because I know too much about it. It is not easy for me to be moderate in speech, perhaps it would be best for me to refrain altogether. But I shall allow myself to say that whatever may be the history or the justice of the situation, common sense, sound business policy and the spirit of true Christianity unite to make retirement from such a field the only available policy. To protract such a struggle is to waste precious opportunities, to vitiate sacred trust funds, to foster unworthy sentiments, to promote acrimony and discord, to invite opprobrium, to prejudice honest seekers after truth, to crush aspiring hearts, to grieve the great heart of the Master and to court inevitable defeat, which will be the more certain, ignominious and conclusive for having been deferred.

A word more and I am done. The time has come, at least in this Western world, for an organic union of all denominations which have a common basis of easy agreement, and for a thoroughly fraternal federation of all the other evangelical branches of Christ's Church. We have too much Devil to fight out here without having to take up any time in sparring matches with each other. I have said little about Methodist union, but I have thought much. My honest opinion is that there is absolutely nothing in the way which may not be effectively cleared by an honest, charitable, kindly, Christ-like approach to the subject. It may be that we have suffered much; it might be that we might suffer more; but let us be willing to suffer the loss of all things rather than that the kindom of Christ should be hindered. Let it increase, though we all decrease.

RECENT OBSERVATIONS IN THE NORTHWEST.

Dear Brother Meek: I notice in a recent number of the Advocate you say "the vote for women is coming," and it is, but since cause always precedes effect, thinking people, seeing the effect, naturally, look for the cause.

Having just returned from the great National W. C. T. U. Convention in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where the fight is on for woman suffrage, I have somewhat to say if you will bid me "say on."

The men politicians of that great city, where we were told every third person we met was a foreigner, have allowed 2,100 saloons to plant themselves boldly upon its streets, posting on their doors, "Welcome," "Come In," "An Egg With Every Beer," "Call Again," etc. They voted them in by themselves, but if they ever vote them out they will need the help of their wives, sisters, and mothers. See? A few women desire to vote for the novelty and notoriety of the thing, but with the majority it is a case of "have to." We were not saving the heathen fast enough, so God is sending them to our doors, and with present conditions they are a menace to our race. "God moves in a mysterious way," and where one sex, class or individual fails, he must seek other channels. That men have miserably failed, is a self-evident fact; what women can and will do, remains to be seen.

The suffrage States were all represented at the convention and were enthusiastically in favor of having their tribe increase rapidly. President Taft was in the city when we arrived. The official board, composed of the national officers and State presidents of the W. C. T. U., were presented with 100 tickets entitling them to reserved seats at the lecture banquet, and in our honor wines and liquors of all kinds were omitted. The subject of the lecture was "Labor Unions." The President said many good things, and I presume his recommendations will be "referred" to a "committee." Every State and territory was represented in the Convention, and we found that "Dixie" is a favorite air with the North as well as the South. As is our usual custom, we sought the sanctuary on the Sabbath day and felt very much "at home." Judging from the fact that a "class meeting" for the following week was announced, they are a little "old fashioned." The doors leading to the hotel bar of the building in which many of the delegates were entertained were closed, and cards were placed over the doors bearing the words: "Closed in honor of the W. C. T. U." Nearly five hundred voting delegates were present, with many visitors.

We passed through Zion City en route to Evanston, where we were conducted through Rest Cottage, Miss Willard's old home. What shall I say of Chicago? Its thousands of inhabitants seem in a hurry about everything except going to bed. In one particular it is like Heaven—"there is no night there." Men, women and children may be seen in large numbers at all hours of the night; drays, carts and cars are as busy, seemingly, at night as they are in the day. If I had to "view" that hurrying throng all the time, I should like it to be "through the loophole of retreat."

We found these temperance leaders very much interested in missions and were invited to "stop and talk" (not lecture) at several places on our homeward-bound journey. It was good to be there and 'tis good to be here.

"Don't send our boys where our girls can't go,
And say 'There's no danger to boys, you know,
Because they all have their wild oats to sow.'
There's no more excuse for our boys to be low

WHAT GRETA COULD DO.

Greta was only six years old and very small for her age. When she came into the Sunday school she wished very much to do something for Jesus. "Only I'm so little," she sighed, "and there isn't anything, not a single thing, I can do."

"Tut!" said grandfather, who had overheard. "Who opens my paper and finds my spectacles and brings my book from the library table?"

"And who puts the ribbon in my cap and gives puss her saucer of milk and teaches her to play so nicely with a string?" added grandmother.

"Who is the little girl that carries my slippers and rolls my chair up nearer the fire?" asked father, his eyes twinkling.

"I know somebody who can do errands as nicely as anyone," said mother. Then sister Belle told what she knew, and Greta's eyes beamed with delight.

"Every little task that we do willingly makes the Lord Jesus glad in heaven," finished grandfather, patting Greta's brown curls.—J. A. Campbell, in The Mayflower.

JIMMY THE NEWSBOY.

"Sun and World!" cried Jimmy as loud as he could. But the big boys pushed him back. His papers were not all sold, and it was getting late.

"I did my best," said Jimmy to himself. "They are bigger than me. I am bigger than Pete, but I could not punch him. His mother is sick, and he is all she has. Stand in front of me, Pete, till yours are gone," said Jimmy, "and then I'll sell mine."

Pete's lot was soon gone, and he ran home to his sick mother with a loaf of bread for supper, which was the first they had had that day.

"Sun and World!" said Jimmy as he stood alone, his bare feet stinging with the cold! "Sun and World!"

His papers were not sold and there was no one left to buy.

"Come here, my boy," said a fine looking gentleman who had been watching him. "You lost your chance to sell your papers by helping another boy. Remember that you will never lose anything by being kind to others. Do so all your life, my boy, and God will bless you."

As he said this he slipped a shining silver dollar into Jimmy's hand.

"Oh, thank you!" said Jimmy. "I will try." And he saluted like a little soldier as his friend turned away. Then he looked at the silver dollar and knew that it was no dream.—The Little One.

THE PRETTIEST GARMENTS.

"I put on my prettiest dress this morning, because grandmother is going to take me to Lennox to spend the day with Mrs. Price," announced Letty Day, as she came to the breakfast table.

"Everybody knows that you are going to Lennox to-day, Letty. You have talked of nothing else for a whole week," laughed her twelve-year-old brother, Clyde.

Letty laid down her knife and fork, and made a face at her brother. "You mean thing, I know you wish you could go, too, and I am glad that you have to stay at home."

"Letty, Letty," said Mrs. Day, gently, "Clyde was only joking. You remember he went down-town for your new hat yesterday, and when he found it would not be done until afternoon, he went back again for it. He knew that you expected to wear it, and he did not want you to be disappointed."

Letty made no reply, but there was a deep frown on her face all during breakfast.

"I cut my finger; oh, Letty, tie it up for me," wailed Baby Grace, when breakfast was over.

"Don't come near me, you might get blood on my dress," warned Letty. "It is just a little cut, any way; so don't make such a fuss about it."

Grace cried harder than before, not because the cut hurt worse, but her sister's tone was so cross. Mrs. Day tied up the finger, kissed the tear-stained face and the little girl ran off to play.

At that moment, Carol Day came into the room, her face wreathed in smiles. "Letty, I can have such a good time all this long day, while you are gone, if you will let me play with your new doll and your set of dishes," and she waited eagerly for Letty's consent.

"Let you play with my new doll and my dishes, I guess I won't. You might break some of the dishes, and you would be sure to soil the doll's dress."

Carol's chin quivered, and she bit her lip to keep back the tears of disappointment.

"I thought, Letty, that you said you put on your prettiest garments this morning," Mrs. Day said, as Carol left the room.

"Why, I did. I have on my new dress with all the embroidery, and my best slippers. You can see I have," and Letty's eyes were wide with surprise.

"But you left off the garment of good temper, for you were cross with Clyde. And you forgot to put on the garment of kindness, for you were not kind when Grace cut her finger. And you did not have on the garment of unselfishness, for you would not let Carol play with your doll and dishes. These are the prettiest garments anybody can wear, and I want my little daughter to wear them, and she will be pretty if her dress is very plain. You want to wear the garments of good temper, kindness and unselfishness here at home with your brother and sisters; not just put them on when you go for a visit or to play with your little friends."

Letty looked very much ashamed. "I guess I will let Carol play with my doll and dishes, after all," she said. When she had given the dishes and doll to her sister, she crept close to her mother and whispered: "I am going to try to put on the garments of good temper, kindness and unselfishness the very first thing every morning, when I get up."

"I would do that, too," and Mrs. Day patted her daughter's curly head, "and then you will make everybody you meet happy."—Sarah N. McCreery.

THE TWO MYSTERIES.

We know not what it is, dear, this sleep so deep and still;
The folded hands, the awful calm, the cheek so pale and chill;
The lids that will not lift again, though we may call and call;
The strange, white solitude of peace that settles over all.

We know not what it means, dear, this desolate heart-pain;
This dread to take our daily way, and walk in it again;
We know not to what other sphere the loved who leave us go,
Nor why we're left to wonder still, nor why we do not know.

But this we know: Our loved and dead, if they should come this day—
Should come and ask us, "What is life?"—not one of us could say.
Life is a mystery as deep as ever death can be;
Yet, oh, how dear it is to us, this life we live and see!

Then might they say—these vanished ones—and blessed is the thought,
"So death is sweet to us, beloved! though we may show you naught;
We may not to the quick reveal the mystery of death—
Ye cannot tell us, if ye would, the mystery of breath."

The child who enters life comes not with knowledge or intent,
So those who enter death must go as little children sent.
Nothing is known. But I believe that God is overhead;
And as life is to the living, so death is to the dead.

—Mary Mapes Dodge.

WINDOWS IN MANILA.

Perhaps in no other country in the world are conchas used as a substitute for window glass. These shells are flat, nearly round, and average 4 inches in diameter. The edges are trimmed off, so as to leave panes about 3 inches square, and these are set in narrow strips of wood. The shells are of course translucent rather than transparent, and the result is a soft, opalescent light, very agreeable in a country where the glare of the sky would be intolerable if ordinary glass were used. To obtain the maximum window openings the sashes are made to slide horizontally on wide sills of hard wood in a manner similar to that adopted by the Japanese. By this means openings as wide as 12 feet are obtained. —From "The New Manila," in the December Century.

MANILA'S GOVERNMENT.

Manila was one of the first cities to have the commission form of municipal government. This was organized during the civil governorship of Mr. Taft. Consisting originally of three members, appointed by him, it now has six, four of whom are appointed by the governor-general and two (up to the present time natives) elected by the popular vote. Under this form of administration Manila has been able to make rapid progress in practical, sanitary and esthetic development.—From "The New Manila," in the December Century.

Editorial.

THE FOUNDATIONS—ASSUMED.

III.

In our first editorial on this subject we asserted that while many, in their absorbed interest in the ornamentations of life, seem to forget the need of a foundation altogether, yet there are others who simply take the foundations for granted; recognizing the need of such, but assuming the foundation as there, safe and secure, so needing no further attention.

A fallacy like this is easily yielded to, for it is true that the foundations of buildings, once well laid, may be trusted and dismissed from thought, and it is easy to assume that the analogy holds in the realm of the moral and spiritual. It does not hold even in regard to material possessions, and whoever, neglecting attention to his business affairs, takes his income as a matter of course will soon find that even the possession of wealth does not insure an income unless that wealth is carefully and wisely administered. The common notion that the rich man has nothing to do but to enjoy himself has not in it a glimpse of how easily such foundations waste away without constant mental work of a high order.

But even more utterly untenable is the fallacy that moral and spiritual foundations, once established, will remain without further attention, either in state, or church, or family, or individual life. And that for this reason: Moral and spiritual foundations are laid in the hearts and minds of men; but the generation in which these have been well laid soon passes, and the foundation must be laid again in the hearts and minds of the new generation, if the superstructure which rests upon these principles is to remain safe. So, the American nation, as no other under heaven, was founded upon the integrity and disinterested patriotism of its citizens; and such a spirit characterized the generation in which it arose, and has characterized the several generations which have followed. But this has been true only because each generation has transmitted by instruction its noble traditions to the generation following; and the foundation will remain only as we also transmit to our children the great moral and spiritual principles which lie at the basis of our national life. But a marvelous folly appears! Methods of education tested and tried by the centuries are looked upon askance; we do not want our children "hampered by our ideas;" we want them left free to "follow the lines of their own natural development (a theory which supposes that they are good by nature and will grow constantly better if left alone!). Our schools must leave religion out more completely than ever in our history; so it is not surprising that the foundations are beginning to crumble, and a New York judge whom we quoted recently affirms: "I assert that in our schools not enough emphasis is placed on the child's responsibility to God."

In the Church the folly of some is even more wild. The foundations, "the traditional views" which have stood the test of centuries and have been the moral inspiration of the civilized world, which have satisfied the deepest soul longings of multiplied millions, and which they have felt and known the truth of even in the dying hour, are by some (only a few, thank God) assumed to be wrong. So the effort is made, not to build upon the old foundation, than which Paul says none other can be laid, but to tear it up, arouse distrust in it, and set everybody to searching for a new foundation, with not a solid stone in sight. God save us from being misled by such blind guides, and God save the Church from warming and feeding such serpents within her bosom! "If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that which ye have received, let him be accursed. (Gal. 1:8, 9.)

But even those of us who believe in the old foundations find it easy to assume that they are of course laid in the hearts of our people to-day, as of old, and accordingly to neglect preaching on the great fundamental doctrines of Christianity and of Methodism. We sometimes impute to people a knowledge and an experience of religion which inquiry would reveal they sadly lack. So our ministrations to them miss the mark, and they remain unprofited. In illustration, we remember a pithy saying somewhere in Wesley's Journal to this effect: "I heard a very good sermon to-day in the Church; but it took for granted the hearers were all Christians!"—a supposition, he thought, which could hardly be made. So it is the part of wisdom to stress frequently the fundamentals, with exhortations to self-examination. Such sermons never fail to interest and to profit.

Finally, it is easy for Christian parents, themselves men and women of worthy character, to assume that their children will develop into like Christian characters, and so, beyond an unavoidable parental anxiety, to occupy themselves no further about it. But it is likely that no such hopes will be realized unless the parent faithfully lays the same foundation of Christian nurture which he remembers made such a profound impression for good in his own early years. So we would ask of those parents who are assuming that their children will "come out all right:" Are you rearing your children as you were reared?" or as you know they ought to be reared? Do you pray with them and have family prayer, as perhaps your parents did? Do you go with them regularly to church and prayer meeting and require them to be faithful in religious duties, as was required of you? Do you protect them from evil influence and forbid their indulgence in worldly amusements, as you were thus shielded in the tender years of youth? If not, then you are neglecting the foundations which alone can reasonably be expected to produce such men and women as you desire your children to be. The loss which will be occasioned by such mistaken assumptions to the nation and to the Church, the general assembly of the first born, is incalculable.

Let us then look well to the foundations, and build solidly into the Church to-day and into the generation of to-morrow the moral principles and religious experiences upon which all things stand secure, and without which all things must fall into a wild chaos of ruin.

QUESTIONABLE CHARITY.

Charity is one of the most beautiful of the Christian virtues. The matchless Bard of Avon says of it: "It is twice blessed—it blesses him that gives, and him that takes." It is the natural outflow of love divinely implanted in the human heart. The unmistakable teaching of the Holy Scriptures is that the strong should help the weak, and that the rich should give assistance to the poor. There is an earnestness that is most impressive in the memorable words of Saint John: "But whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" Whatever else may be said of the Christianity of this age, its larger philanthropy is much to its credit.

But while there is a charity that is beautiful and ennobling, there is also a charity that is unworthy and hurtful. We refer to the distributions of funds that are raised by questionable or vicious methods. The very name of a "charity" ball is offensive. Securing money to aid the poor by means of lotteries, theatrical performances, card parties, or match games of various kinds on the Lord's holy day is most reprehensible. This kind of benevolence is "tainted." It is the philanthropy of the godless world—vice seeking to win favor by counterfeiting the practices of virtue. This philosophy of "doing evil that good may come of it" was born in the brain of his satanic majesty. It has no recognition in the ethics of the great divine Teacher.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Bishop Wilson is holding the Alabama Conference at Pensacola, Fla., this week. Bishop Denny is present to render such assistance as our honored Senior Bishop may desire.

The brethren who have been assigned to new charges should drop the publisher a card, telling him where to send the Advocate. In writing him, give both your old and new address. This matter should be attended to at once.

An appreciated visitor at our office this week was Dr. John M. Moore, secretary of the Board of Missions for the home field. He was in fine spirits and looked to be in vigorous health. Dr. Moore is magnifying his office, and has long since proven himself to be the right man in the right place.

Our Publishing House at Nashville has now in press, and will soon publish a new book by Bishop W. A. Candler, entitled, "Wesley and His Work, or Methodism and Missions." It will probably appear in January next. The many admirers of our brilliant Georgia chief pastor will await with expectancy the issuance of this volume.

A meeting of unusual interest was recently held at Bogalusa, La., Rev. P. H. Howse, of Hattiesburg, doing the preaching. The membership of the church was greatly refreshed, and there were more than twenty new names added to the roll. The pastor is much pleased with the results, and speaks in terms of high appreciation of Brother Howse as a revivalist.

Sister T. S. Randle, of Gilbert, La., continues to favor us with subscriptions to the Advocate. She has our hearty thanks for her helpful work in behalf of the Conference organ. In her letter Sister Randle says: "I am glad to say that our son, Ross, is again in the active work, having been assigned to the Manchaca charge, in Texas. Praise the Lord.'

At the late meeting of the Farmer's Union of Mississippi, Rev. W. W. Graves, of Homewood, Scott County, was chosen State Chaplain. Brother Graves has been contributing to the Farmer's Union Advocate, under the nom de plume of "Uncle Fuller," a series of articles on good roads, which have attracted much attention. We congratulate this faithful minister upon the unsought honors which have come to him.

Rev. D. L. Cogdell, who served the Belzoni charge last year, has brought us under obligations to him for a nice list of subscribers. This honored veteran took a superannuate relation at the late session of the North Mississippi Conference. No worthier man ever served in the ranks of the itinerancy. May the blessings of heaven abide upon him and his noble helpmeet, whom we regret to state is at this time far from well.

The Hazlehurst Courier of November 30 states that the attractive little city in which it is published has two favors to ask of the Mississippi Conference, now in session at Meridian: One is to return the present pastor, Rev. N. B. Harmon and his accomplished helpmeet to that field for another year; the other is to hold its next session at that place. That the Copiah County capital would royally entertain the Annual Conference, should it elect to go there in 1912, scarcely needs to be said.

At a union Thanksgiving service held at Fort Smith, Ark., on November 30, Rev. L. M. Broyles preached a sermon of unusual strength and beauty. It was printed in full in the Southwest American of that city, which says: "Dr. Broyles was heartily congratulated at the close of his discourse by both the ministers in attendance and many of the audience." Brother Broyles' many friends in Mississippi will be pleased to know of his success in his new field. He is one of the growing young men of the Church.

Rev. S. L. Riggs, of St. Francisville, La., under date of November 29, writes: "I wish you would make note of the death of Brother W. M. Town, who passed away this morning at 2:45 o'clock. He was for more than fifty years a most faithful steward of the church at this place. He was ninety years four months and seven days old." Such a record of service well deserves to be mentioned. Some one has said that "fidelity unto death" is one of the things that cannot be counterfeited. "Precious in the sight of his Lord is the death of his saints."

Rev W. R. Goudelock, who was recently transferred from the North Mississippi to the North Texas Conference, in a letter written on the 2d inst., says: "The brethren gave me a warm reception, and I feel very much at home with Rev. Charles A. Spragins, a transplanted Mississippian, as my presiding elder. Brother E. H. Cacy, who also is a son of the Magnolia State, has likewise shown me special love and friendship." Brother Goudelock enclosed a remittance to have the Advocate continue to come into his home. We commend him to the Texans, and wish him large success in his new field.

Referring to the meeting which he recently conducted for the Young Men's Christian Association at Millsaps College and his visit to that institution, Rev. H. W. Bowman, of Amite, La., says: "I had a delightful time with the student body and the faculty. Dr. Hull is certainly a strong man, who is splendidly capacitated for the high place that he holds. Mrs. Hull is, indeed, a helpmeet to her husband. The boys love her, and her influence is strongly felt for good. I never witnessed a larger measure of fidelity than that exhibited by the students while I was there.'

Rev. W. H. Porter writes: "Having finished my work on the Lanesville charge, Louisiana Conference, I report as follows: 'Health good; preached 100 times; baptized 13 adults; received 12 members by certificate, and 18 by vows; have held 11 church conferences; have collected all the Conference claims in full (three times as much as this charge paid last year); salaries of presiding elder and the pastor are paid, and last, but not least, have sent 20 new subscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.'" This is, indeed, a fine showing, and we heartily congratulate Brother Porter upon his great success in the work.

Dr. John M. Moore, the Home Mission Secretary, has prepared a provisional program for the Conference on Evangelism, which will be held in Nashville on December 20, 21, 1911. The exercises will begin on Wednesday, December 20, at 9:45 a.m., and close Thursday afternoon, at five o'clock. The day exercises will be held in the assembly room of the Publishing House, and the night exercises in McKendree Church. All the Southern Methodist evangelists, independent, Conference, and missionary, are especially invited. Among those who have signified their intention to be present are Dr. George R. Stuart, Rev. John E. Brown, Rev. John B. Andrews, Rev. B. Marvin Harris, Rev. D. L. Coale, Rev. Bob Jones, Rev. G. A. Klein, Rev. Walt Holcomb, and Rev. J. A. Bowen.

The Hammond Daily Herald recently contained a most interesting account of an elegant reception given Mrs. C. C. Miller, of that place, at the beautiful home of Mrs. Thomas McKneely. The parlor and dining room presented a most attractive appearance as the guests chatted with each other for an hour or two. About 4 o'clock Mrs. S. A. McKneely came through the folding doors between the dining room and the parlor with a large box in her hands, that contained several handsome and useful presents for Mrs. Miller, which were happily presented to her. Mrs. W. E. Ludlam, to whom we are indebted for this interesting bit of news, thus refers to Sister Miller: "She has spent the past three years here, in a life of self-sacrifice, ministering to the poor, the sick and the needy. Not only has she worked for the church and Sunday school in this town, but she has devoted all the proceeds of her interesting little book, 'Al-e-the-ia,' to charity and the temperance cause."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The recent session of the North Mississippi Conference was a most pleasant and profitable one. Though cold, the weather was bracing and invigorating. Harmony prevailed throughout the deliberations of the body, and a spirit of brotherliness was strikingly manifest in all the proceedings. Brother Gladney was a most attentive and obliging host, and the hospitality of the good people of Macon left nothing to be desired. The joint presidency of Bishops Wilson and Candler was highly satisfactory, eliciting hearty commendation on every side. The appointments gave very general satisfaction.

A number of the connectional brethren were present, and were cordially received by the Conference Dr. W. W. Pinson came early and delivered a stirring address on missions. Dr. McMurry also was on hand, and delivered a ringing message which will not soon be forgotten. He is a favorite with the North Mississippians. Dr. James Cannon visited the body for the first time, and worthily represented the connectional chautauqua movement, of which he is the executive head. Dr. F. S. Parker, the accomplished Secretary of the General Epworth League Board, was the principal speaker at the League anniversary on Saturday evening and made a fine impression. The Tri-State Methodist Hospital enterprise was strongly represented by Rev. H. M. Ellis, the energtic field agent. Dr. George S. Sexton was also an appreciated visitor and brought cheering news concerning the movement to build a representative church at Washington City, the enterprise for which he has been gathering funds for the past two or three years. Of the $275,000 promised by the Church for this structure, $225,000 has been secured in cash and good subscriptions.

After six years of service in the pastorate, Rev. J. W. Dorman has been called back to the presiding eldership. This appointment was very generally recognized as a wise one. Brother Dorman has both a clear head and a warm heart, and the interests of the Church will be safe in his hands. The North Mississippi Conference has never had on its roll a truer or more manly man than this new leader of our forces in the Sardis District.

Rev. J. H. Mitchell, who has unusual gifts for leadership was assigned to the Corinth District as the successor of that tireless worker, Rev. B. P. Jaco. He will have to move with swift step to keep pace with his predecessor, but that he will prove equal to the task we do not doubt. He has never served a district which did not make marked advancement along all lines under his administration.

One of the surprises in the appointments was the assignment of Rev. R. A. Tucker to the presiding eldership of the Holly Springs District. He had served the Sardis Station for only one year, and was in such high favor with the people that it was supposed that he would be returned; but the success which he had achieved attracted the attention of the cabinet and he was pressed into service for a more responsible work. We predict that he will wear his new honors worthily and prove him a skilled leader of the hosts of Zion.

Considering the ravages of the boll weevil, the short crops, and comparatively low price of cotton, the Greenville District made a fine showing under the leadership of Rev. W. W. Woollard, who is one of the strong and resourceful men of the Conference. A majority of the charges paid everything in full. Methodism is in the ascendency in the Mississippi Delta, and is still forging forward.

The Winona District is fortunate in having secured as its new presiding elder, Rev. B. P. Jaco, who is unsurpassed in zeal and aggressiveness. He has a great field, and we predict large prosperity for the Church in this territory during the next quadrennium, in spite of the threatened destruction of the cotton industry. Things have to move when Brother Jaco has his hand upon the helm.

Dr. John W. Boswell, Assistant Editor of Sunday School Literature, attended the Conference. He is a much beloved member of it, and the brethren were delighted to see him. He was looking well, and wore his usual cheerful air. He took care of the interests of the Publishing House at Nashville during the session.

Sunday was a great day in Macon. The several pulpits of the town were filled by visiting ministers, and overflowing congregations heard them dispense the Word. The Conference Love Feast, conducted by Rev. J. W. Honnoll, was largely attended and spiritual fervor was at high tide. At 11 o'clock Bishop Wilson preached a great sermon on "The Loftiness of the Christian Calling" at the Methodist Church, and Bishop Candler at the same hour delivered a masterly discourse at the Baptist Church on the "Resurrection of Christ." At the evening hour Bishop Candler occupied the Methodist pulpit, and thrilled the vast audience with another characteristic message. The ease and power with which he preaches are most remarkable. Though a wise administrator, he is pre-eminently a preaching Bishop. The pulpit is his throne of power. The citizens of Macon and Noxubee county will not soon forget the first Sunday in December, 1911.

It was our pleasure during the Conference to be entertained in the charming home of Mr. and Mrs. George Richardson, who left nothing undone to minister to the comfort of their guests. Besides the editor, Rev. W. S. Lagrone, Rev. S. B. Myers, Rev. Eugene Johnson, Rev. G. W. Bachman, and Mrs. Clark, a visitor from the Cochrane charge, were sheltered beneath this hospitable roof. Our host and hostess kept open house, and good fellowship abounded from the first day to the last. Mr. Richardson is a leading lawyer of East Mississippi, and a son of the Rev. Simon Peter Richardson, whose names is writ large in the annals of Methodism and whose memory will long be cherished.

Though somewhat late in arriving, Rev. J. C. Park, who had been under medical treatment in Memphis, was present at the Conference. He is deservedly popular with his brethren in the ministry, who were happy to see him. In order to give him lighter work and an opportunity to recuperate, he was transferred from Oxford to Macon. We trust that his health will soon become robust in his new field. The Maconites should count themselves fortunate in securing the services of this gifted pastor.

After three fruitful years on the Aberdeen District, Rev. J. H. Felts has returned to Corinth, which was his first charge in the North Mississippi Conference. It was under his former pastorate in that city that our church there was enlarged and made a tasteful and attractive house of worship. The Corinthians were anxious to have Brother Felts serve them again, and the Bishop yielded to their importunity. We hope that our Brother's second term of service may be attended by even a larger measure of success than his first term.

Four years ago Rev. E. S. Lewis was taken from the West Point Station at the end of his first year, to serve the Winona District. After a quadrennium as presiding elder, during which he achieved conspicuous success, he goes back to West Point as pastor, where he will be given a hearty welcome. We predict that Methodism will flourish in this Queen City of the Prairies under his direction. It is to be hoped that he will be able to enterprise the building of a new church there in the near future. It has been urgently needed for many years.

The time limit necessitated the removal of Rev. W. W. Mitchell from Grenada, where he had wrought well for four full years. The Bishop sent him to Oxford, the University town of the State, where he will have a great opportunity to impress the young men of the commonwealth. His friends predict that he will render an important service to the Church in this responsible place. He is a diligent student and a painstaking pastor, who wears well.

BISHOP W. A. CANDLER, of Atlanta, Ga., who is now presiding over the Mississippi Conference at Meridian. He is one of the ablest preachers and most forceful personalities in American Methodism.

MRS. ELLEN ADONIA BROWN died in New Orleans on Nov. 16, 1911. She was a daughter of Col. and Mrs. Thomas McKnight, and a sister of Mrs. John T. Sawyer, and was a native of Tennessee. Most of her life from early girlhood was spent in New Orleans, and there she was married to Mr. Robert Brown, of Kentucky. Blessed with a bright intellect, she received a thorough education at the best schools and was fitted for the arduous duties and responsibilities of an active and eminently useful life. Soundly converted in her youth, she became a member of the Southern Methodist Church, and was a worker in the activities of the Church and a successful teacher in the Sunday school. She was a student of God's word and it dwelt in her richly and was as daily food for her soul; and as the Spirit led her into its spiritual depths of meaning, she steadily developed in the divine life and was moulded into the likeness of her Lord. All along "God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness," shined in her heart "to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ;" and so, her path was that of the just, shining brighter and brighter "unto the perfect day" of heaven. She bore the pains of her last sickness with calm resignation and sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, her head pillowed upon the bosom of the Divine Love. Life's struggles and trials all over, she entered the haven of rest and is at home with God forevermore.

MRS. JULIA A. WHITE (Nee Richert) was born in Clinton, La., Sept. 10, 1841, and died in the same town Sept. 30, 1911, being at the time of her death the oldest native resident of the town. But few people have lived in the same community for 70 years and left behind them the record that she did. She joined the Methodist Church in her young girlhood, and ever after remained a faithful member. She was for many years the organist of the church, and for a long time a teacher in the Sunday school. She took always a great interest in church work and was up to the time of her death a leading member of the Ladies' Aid Society. She was a teacher for many years, and by that means left the impress of her godly life upon many characters. She was a moving spirit among the "Daughters of the Confederacy," and the monument erected to the Confederate dead, which stands in the court house square in Clinton, is a monument to her zeal as well as to their valor. The Old Soldiers' Home in New Orleans was annually remembered, and a box sent under her supervision. On August 20, 1889, she was married to John A. White, of Clinton, with whom she lived happily to the day of her death. A good woman, one who will be long remembered in Clinton, has gone to her reward. She is survived by her husband and many relatives. May they all meet her in the land of etrenal bliss.

J. M. BROWN.

L. Q. C. LAMAR LANE, son of Brother and Sister E. W. Lane, of Wesson, Miss., was born Nov. 26, 1890, and peacefully passed away Oct. 14, 1911. In the year 1902 he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the pastorate of Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, and ever remained a faithful member of the same. I have never known a more consecrated young man, or one who gave greater promise of usefulness in the Master's cause. Lamar was a model son and brother, and was especially solicitous about the spiritual welfare of his loved ones. He loved the church with all of its interests. The Sunday school, the prayer meeting and Epworth League were especially dear to him, and he was always found in his place ready to witness for his Lord or otherwise to aid in the promotion of his kingdom. He felt called to the ministry and so expressed himself to some of his most intimate friends. Some months before his death he went to Texas, where he was working hard to provide means with which to go to school and prepare for his life work. Amid his new surroundings he was true to God and duty. After he was gone a few months he became a victim of tuberculosis and returned home to linger awhile with loved ones and then go away to be with Jesus. In the providence of God Lamar was spared but a few brief years to bless the world with his life, but behind him is left a holy influence which will never die. While his earthly plans have been frustrated by the ruthless hand of death, yet his loving ministry has not ended, for it is written: "Therefore, are they before the throne of God and serve him day and night in his temple." In that brighter and better world we shall see him again. Until then farewell.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to take from us our sister, Mrs. ELLA MULLEN, who departed this life and entered into the rest of the righteous Oct. 25, 1911, therefore, be it resolved,

First—That we bow in submission to his will, knowing that he doeth all things well in mercy and love.

Second—That in her death we, as a society, have sustained a great loss in her unselfish devotion to the cause; her kindness to the sick and strangers, to the poor and needy in our midst, and her wise counsel and zeal in the work of the society.

Third—That while we mourn her untimely going away, we shall ever cherish the memory of her noble Christian life, and strive to emulate her many virtues, which made her a blessing to those about her.

Fourth—That we tender our sincere sympathy to her bereaved husband, sons and daughter, praying the God of love and mercy to comfort and sustain them in the dark hour of bereavement, and that they may be kept under the shadow of his wing, and finally reunited with her in the land of the blest.

Fifth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and to the Ruston Leader for publication.

Signed: Mrs. Julia A. Robison, Mrs. H. E. Pitts, Mrs. W. R. Pratt, Mrs. J. W. Ogden.

Tidings From the Field

Buena Vista, Miss.:

Dear Brother Meek: I have served Buena Vista charge this year and these are among the best people I have ever served. I don't feel that I am worthy of all the kindnesses they have extended to me. Surely I have gotten the best in every home. We have four appointments, and three Sunday schools that live twelve months in the year. We have two Epworth Leagues that are thoroughly alive and both in the country. Preacher's and presiding elder's salary were paid in full. We have had some thirty additions this year on profession of faith. The Lord has been good to us up here this year, and if the Bishop will let me alone, I will be very much obliged.—T. J. Durrett.

Shaw, Miss.:

We are now on the eve of an Annual Conference, and know that our pastor, Brother L. A. McKeown, will be sent to another place as he has already served us four years. The church here has thrived under Brother McKeown. During the four years he has been with us our membership has increased about 70 per cent; the property of the church has been greatly improved by reason of repairs, papering, painting and fencing. These are a few of the visible accomplishments of the church under his administration and are very insignificant as compared with those which are visible only to "the all-seeing eye." Brother McKeown's life among us has been an influence for good, which will live long after he has passed from this world to the great conference above. Brother McKeown is a good, consecrated Christian and is loved, not only by his members, but by the entire community. We shall miss him greatly when he is gone, but feel that our loss will be another's gain. We all love Brother McKeown and our prayers shall follow him wherever he goes.—M. B. Brister.

Meridian, Miss.:

Dear Advocate: A multiplication of joyful duties have hindered my reports this year. We have had two revival efforts at our little church this year, most of the preaching in the first one being done by Rev. W. W. Nelson, of the Moscow charge, and Dr. C. W. Campbell, of Meridian; and in the second one, Rev. R. S. Stuart, of the South Georgia Conference, did the preaching. All of them preached the Word, and as a result a goodly number were either converted or sanctified, and the church wonderfully edified. In our last meeting we had a street service just preceding the night service of the last day, and a large crowd assembled, and the Lord was there. Many who hardly ever darken a church-door, for one time at least, heard the gospel; several held up their hands for prayer, and one man followed us to the church, surrendered to God and identified himself with God's people. Some of the other hardened sinners followed us to the church service—thank God! At different services during the year some have been genuinely converted and some entered into the experience of inward holiness, while the church, in a Scriptural sense, has prospered; so we face the end of the year with victory. During the year I have helped in seven meetings, all among my brethren of our Conference, with an average of six days in each meeting. As a safe estimate, 500 people bowed at the altar during these meetings, and a goodly number of them were either converted, reclaimed or sanctified in the old-fashioned way, for which I give God the glory and praise. Oh, how I do thank him that he "thought upon me" and gave me a place in his vineyard to work! "Since he filled my soul with glory, I just love to tell the story."—J. A. Wells.

BELMONT, MISS.

Quarterly Conference Resolutions.

Resolved by the fourth quarterly conference of the Belmont Circuit now in session at Belmont, Miss., that it is with a deep feeling of regret that we come to the end of the four-year ministry of Rev. B. P. Jaco, as presiding elder of the Corinth District. They have been years of progress and reform, such as have not been seen before. Within these years the church has been developed in many new fields, and all along the line there are signs of greater life and activity. This has been brought about largely by safe counsel and wise leadership, yet it has all come through a heart aflame with evangelism. We believe that the Corinth District stands to-day in the front of the districts of the North Mississippi Conference, both as to present development and future possibilities. Our great desire is that the Conference will give us another that shall take the work as found and carry it on to a glorious conclusion. Then we are glad to know that the church in every department of its work has been faithfully and efficiently attended to. Nothing, however small, has been left undone that would approach the ideal. Therefore, we, as a body, extend to Brother Jaco our best wishes for the future, and pray that the Lord will honor his work as he has in the past.

Obituaries

PEARL NIXON was born Jan. 19, 1886, and died at her home in Arcola, Miss., Oct. 18, 1911. About a year ago it was discovered that she had tuberculosis. The best physicians of Greenville, Vicksburg and Memphis were consulted and she spent some time in Colorado, but instead of improving, she rather grew worse. She came home in September and was never afterward able to be up. Some months ago she made a profession of conversion, and at her request, I baptized her and received her into the Methodist Church. She was a long and patient sufferer. She knew death was coming and was not afraid. She was trusting in Jesus Christ as her Savior. Her mother, Mrs. Stinson, of Arcola, a brother, two sisters and other relatives mourn her death.

W. H. MOUNGER, Pastor.

Mrs. SUE FITZPATRICK (nee Cole) was born in Greene County, Ga., Oct. 21, 1820, and died of a burn, Feb. 20, 1911, at the home of her brother, Mr. W. A. Cole, Newton, Miss. She was educated at the Woman's College, LaGrange, Ga. She was first married to Dr. Edward B. Terrell, of West Point, Ga., in 1837, who was at the time a surgeon in the Indian war. Three children were born to them, but all died in early life. Dr. Terrell only lived seven years. She was converted and joined the Methodist Church at West Point, Ga., during a camp meeting about seventy-one years ago. Rev. Thomas Sanford conducted the meeting. After Dr. Terrell's death she remained a widow for thirteen years, then married the second time Captain Bird Fitzpatrick, of Union Springs, Ala. He died in 1873. She then moved to Garlandsville, Miss., where she lived until about three years ago. She having made her home with her brother for several years, moved with him to Newton, Miss. She was a member of the Garlandsville Methodist Church for more than thirty-five years, and the Church had no member more devout or loyal than she. She had been a subscriber for the New Orleans Christian Advocate for more than forty years. Her pastor was always cordially received and the home was typical of Southern Christian hospitality. Her sister, Miss Lizzie Cole, and her brother, Mr. W. A. Cole, his three daughters and two sons, all so thoughtful of her welfare, mourn her death, but they do not grieve as those who have no hope. While the loved ones miss her in the home and while death came suddenly, she had been making preparations for her Lord for many years. She has gone to live with her Savior who had won and held her heart's affection for more than seventy years. While we enjoyed the incorruptible inheritance and the unfading crown, let us who knew and loved her make sure that our titles are clear to the heavenly home. A former pastor.

WALDO W. MOORE.

On Monday, Nov. 13 there passed away at the home of her son-in-law, Brother Henry N. Pharr, Sister M. E. SMITH, a good woman, well rounded in Christian character and ready for her translation. Her days had been well spent, she having redeemed the time, making good use of it both in the service of the Father and humanity. Mrs. Smith was not a public woman and the arena of her life was never before the public. The sphere in which she moved was her home, her church and quietly among those who, less fortunate than she, she could cheer, comfort or relieve. Her method of helpfulness was always quiet and unostentatious, not letting her right hand know the deeds of the left. Her soul was clean, pure and simple in its faith, trusting God and walking with him in spirit and in deeds. She was faithful in service, regular, not spasmodic in her efforts and always cheerful with a kind word for all, doing with her might what her hand found to do. As her pastor, I learned to rely on her in all church work and ever found in her in my younger days in the ministry a helpful sympathy full of encouragement and good cheer. Left a widow in early life with five sons and two daughters to educate, she met the problems of support with fortitude and trust in the Father and lived to see them all grown men and women, with college training, fitted for usefulness in the world, all save one being members of the Church. In her children, her works live after her and many besides her family will arise in the resurrection, calling her blessed. Her life was beautiful in her faithfulness to duty, in the courage with which she met obligations and the confidence with which she waited on God. The longer I observe humanity, the more the thought impresses me that the uncrowned heads of life outnumber the crowned, and one of the highest evidences of the greatness of the soul is simplicity of character. The last few years of her life were spent in illness and pain, but during those long days those near her never saw aught but a beautiful character, patient, thoughtful of others, waiting on God. Her burial was conducted by Revs. K. W. Dodson and Jno. F. Foster, the interment being at New Iberia, Tuesday, Nov. 14, 1911.

A Warm Bathroom

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Every mother should be careful that the children take their baths in a warm room. The chill of a cold room is dangerous after coming out of the hot water.

A Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater brings bathroom or bedroom to just the degree of warmth you want in five or ten minutes. All you have to do is to touch a match.

The Perfection Heater burns nine hours on one filling and is always ready for use. You can move it anywhere it is needed. There is no waste of fuel and heat warming unoccupied rooms. Just the heat you want, when and where you want it.

The Perfection is fitted with an automatic-locking flame spreader that prevents the wick being turned high enough to smoke and is easy to remove and drop back when cleaning.

Drums finished either in turquoise-blue enamel or plain steel; light and ornamental, yet strong and durable—suitable for any room in any house.

BOONEVILLE, MISS.

The following resolutions were passed by the fourth quarterly conference:

Whereas, according to the established law of the Southern Methodist Church, no minister can remain in charge of one station, circuit, or district longer than four years; and, whereas, Rev. Ben P. Jaco has been presiding elder on the Corinth District for the past four years, and, therefore, must leave us at the approaching Annual Conference, therefore,

Be it resolved, by this, the fourth quarterly conference of Booneville Station, Corinth District, assembled:

First—That we here give formal expression of our appreciation of Brother Jaco and his family; we have learned to love them for their many Christian virtues, which have been a helpful influence in our community.

Second—That we sincerely praise Brother Jaco for his untiring efforts in behalf of the Church in our midst, and thank him for his patience and uniform kindness and consideration for us all in all of his official administration of the affairs of the Church as we have labored together.

Third—We commend him to the charge to which he may be assigned as worthy of all confidence and esteem, and assure him that our love and prayers for the richest benedictions of God to rest upon him shall follow him always.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be furnished Brother Jaco, and also that copies be sent the New Orleans Christian Advocate and our county papers for publication.

Signed by L. D. Rinehart, vice-president; W. J. Bolton, secretary; D. T. Price, president.

PERSONAL ACQUAINTANCE WITH GOD.

Let us not run until we have been sent. Let us not rush into a multitude of words until we have ourselves in the still chambers of the soul heard the "still small voice."

The disciples stood gazing into heaven, whither the Shepherd had gone. The angel chided them, and said: Why gaze ye into heaven; go back to Jerusalem and get to work. Yes? Is that so? It is a half truth. The angel did call them from gazing into heaven to go to the work they had from henceforth to do. But that is not all the story. While the angel did tell them to go back to Jerusalem to begin there the work which should found a new religion, he warned them not to begin that work until they had first been commissioned by the personal enduement of the Holy One. That always is first.

A summer convention is not sufficient to equip a worker for service. No institute, no book, no sermon, no impulse is sufficient. First is the still small voice, first the heavenly vision, first the gentle presence, the whispering God; first the writing; first the personal acquaintance. Seek that, soul of mine! Seek him! His whisper will commission thee. Seek; await the personal, the interior fellowship of the Holy One. Then go.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

Great Kidney Remedy Saves Two Children in One Family.

About one year ago two of my children suffered badly from weak kidneys and diabetes. They would have severe spells of dizziness and were all run down in health. I was just about discouraged. I tried several remedies and finally a doctor, but they did not seem to improve. I knew of a friend who was taking Swamp-Root for kidney trouble with good results and I decided to get some for the children. I had noticed that there was some improvement after they had taken two large bottles and continued to give it to them until they had taken one-half dozen bottles and were well on the road to recovery. I think Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root has done more for my children than any other medicine. I have tried and recommend it to anyone having children that suffer as mine did.

Very truly yours,

Epworth League Department.

(Conducted by Rev. H. B. Watkins, Magnolia, Miss., to whom all communications concerning League matters should be addressed.)

TOPIC FOR DECEMBER 10.

"THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM A WORLD-WIDE WONDER."

Matt. ii, 2; Luke ii, 15.

Missions.

No one can doubt that Christianity is a missionary religion. When the angels, who were the first missionaries, proclaimed the glad evangel, they declared that it was meant for "all people." It is very fitting that we go back to this glad morning of Christ's birth into the world which he came to redeem with his own precious blood for a missionary topic, for the greatest missionary story ever written is that of the birth of him who came to seek and to save that which was lost.

Wise men came from the East that they might find Jesus and lay their offerings at his feet, while his own people, who lived in the town in which he was born, knew nothing about this wonderful event, and cared less. Is it not the same to-day? Have not multitudes of heathen seen this great light and followed it until they have found the Savior, while hundreds in this most favored land of gospel privileges are so busy having a good time and making money that they have no interest whatever in the matter? Only those who are looking for this "Star" see it, and are attracted toward it. Many go through the world, but they see nothing of God, nothing of Christ; or what they do see is merely the building in which Christ dwells—a great deal about his church, a great deal about his Word, but very little about himself. Still the Star shines on, and all who will, may see it and be guided by it to the Savior.

The Truth Proclaimed.

The shepherds were watching their flocks on the plains of Bethlehem, with no sounds to break the stillness but the occasional bleating of the sheep, when suddenly a glorious light shone round them, and an angel appeared and announced the glad tidings, and

"When such music sweet
Their heart and ears did greet
As never was by mortal fingers strook,
Divinely warbled voice
Answering the stringed noise,
As all their souls in blissful rapture took
The air such pleasure lothe to lose,
With thousand echoes still prolonged each heavenly close."

The shepherds lost no time, but "came with haste, and found Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in the manger. And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child." Is not this the duty of every Epworthian? "Go and tell it! go and tell it!" "Let him that heareth say, Come!" Although these shepherds were uncultured and unlettered, yet they could speak from experience; what they had seen and heard had touched their hearts with love, and had fired their souls with the spirit of true brotherhood, and they were compelled to tell the "good news" to others. Should we not do the same?

But we should never speak until we are sure we love. Doctor Tholuck relates how that one who had been a great traveler said to him that he had scarcely ever fallen into company with fellow travelers without speaking to them of the heavenly journey. When Tholuck almost questioned the propriety of forcing such conversation, his friend replied: "Ah, but I endeavored never to speak until I was certain that I loved. I figured to myself that we are all brothers, and this never failed to soften my heart; and when there was love in my own heart I soon found a bridge into the heart of the stranger."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

HAS THE LEAGUE "MADE GOOD?"

We have met in some of our church papers the opinion as expressed by a correspondent that "the Epworth League has not fulfilled the object for which it was organized." Where has this brother been to gather his information? The League was organized to assist our young people in securing a knowledge of the doctrines and history of our church and to encourage them in works of grace and charity. Who will say that this is not being done in the four thousand active League chapters in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South? Has there ever been a time when our young Methodist people were more loyal or intelligent than now? Has there ever been a time when they were more active in ministry and service? Let there be an end of carking and obstruction. For its opportunity, for the time and money put upon it, nothing has paid better than our young people's organization. Those who talk of sidetracking the work have not reckoned with the interests which have their roots in this hearty fellowship.—Epworth Era.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

What is a stairway but a series of obstacles? Yet you rely on the stairs to help you mount to a higher place. If the life road had no obstacles to surmount, who would ever get up? No one can climb on thin air.—Wellspring.

How to Get Rid of Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way, and it Costs Nothing to Try.

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive, home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty six years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of these. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased mucous membranes and arrests the foul discharge, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not poison the system and ruin the stomach as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you by return mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal headaches, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet. Write him immediately.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

The Philathea class of the Methodist Church at Lafayette, La., is one of the star classes of the Philathea Union. It grew out of Mrs. E. R. Kennedy's young women's Sunday school class and was organized Jan. 19, 1909, with a membership of fifteen, which has increased to thirty. The officers are: President, Miss A. Young; vice-president, Miss M. Bernard; secretary, Mrs. P. B. Toreau; treasurer, Mrs. W. E. Walker; teacher, Mrs. E. R. Kennedy. The writer feels justified in saying that there was never a better, more consecrated teacher than Mrs. Kennedy, and her influence has held together the class and inspired its members to greater work than they had ever done. The class takes care of two orphans at our Conference Orphanage at Ruston. On Work Day, $14 was sent the Orphanage, aside from regular donations. Our sick, flowers, and visiting committees are busy workers. Since its organization, the class has spent $178 for all purposes. The social side of the class was enjoyed upon Mrs. Kennedy's return from her summer trip, when the class gave a reception in the class room to her. Each member has made a conscientious study of the Old Testament this year, and Mrs. Kennedy's map drills and Old Testament drills are entertaining features.

MRS. P. B. TOREAU, Secretary.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

"No school can rise higher than its superintendent."

* * *

A Mother's Department is a delightful and uplifting picture to contemplate, and why should not every school have one and enjoy its radiant and character-building influence?

* * *

Inactive Bible Classes are not always as idle as they seem. They have been known to work very hard in selecting an elaborate list of committees, most of whose members had grown a wish-bone in the place a back-bone should be.

* * *

Sir Robert Laidlaw, president of the London Sunday school union says, "We need a crusade in favor of home religion. The Bible is the great home builder, the molder of character and the shaper of the nation's future. Not only has it God's message to man and to society, but it has the key to all our social problems."

* * *

Then further, the teacher comes from a home whose influence makes or mars his or her influence. With the forces of right now emanating from the organized active Sunday school co-operating with the home life, well-poised and well organized, a cordon of invincibles will be found against all the legions of darkness. Home—This link in the chain of Sunday school success and progress needs welding.

* * *

The Galloway Memorial Class, Corinth, with Mrs. Frank Worsham as teacher and Mrs. R. C. Battle as president, is planning great things for the winter campaign. The initial effort to interest old members and win new ones began last week when these fine married ladies and their husbands were entertained with a delightful reception which was a rare delight to all present and promoted the finest feeling. About 100 were present.

* * *

The Sunday school has the boys and girls for just one little hour and the home has them that other preponderating part of the week. As a light-house standing for clear truth and helpful righteousness the Sunday school may become a marvelous force, but after all has been said, the home is the real place for training. Now the present problem is how shall the searching, illuminating light of the Sunday school penetrate into every home and its darkest corner.

* * *

Our young people cannot thrive alone on religious and moral teachings given them at Sunday school—for just twenty minutes a week. The reality of these religious truths to the individual pupil depends upon how closely these truths are related to and connected with his every-day life, most of which is spent in the home. We may think we can supply the lack of parental training or counteract its harmful influence, if such it is, but in very many cases the children will largely become what the bome makes them. Then, the Sunday school should have and hold, and interest as well as instruct the fathers and mothers.

EXTRACT FROM REPORT OF PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE TO THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The 72d session of the Port Gibson Female College opened Sept. 13th. The enrollment up to date has been 127, of whom 81 are in the boarding department. It is thought that other matriculates the second term will make the total enrollment equal to that of last session, which was 150.

There were seven graduates at the last commencement, and the Senior Class for the present session numbers ten. Twenty-seven students partly paid their way last session by duties performed for the school in the dining-room and elsewhere; and thirty-two students this session are partly paying their way by taking work. The daughters of ministers are charged no tuition and are given reduction on board and the special studies.

Improvements have been made during the last few months in the sanitary condition of the grounds and about $250 has been expended upon other improvements. The management of the school has given special attention to the table fare; there is at all times a good variety of food in plentiful quantity, and well prepared and served. Worthy of special mention is the fact that every pound of butter used up to date this session has been manufactured at the college, the product of the college herd of Jerseys.

During the vacation a friend of the cause made a gift of $500 to the school; $98.54 of this has been expended for an additional bricked cesspool; $64.97 was used for paying the balance due upon a note given by the Trustees for improvements, made three years ago, upon the annex building. The balance of the $500, amounting to $336.49, is ready to be applied for other purposes. The gift was made upon condition that the president of the school could use it in any way he thought fit. He advises that this balance be applied upon the Annex debt. Also Mr. J. T. Drake, of Port Gibson, Miss., has contributed 200 recently upon the Annex debt.

The contribution which the Mississippi Conference is to make at this session in fulfilment of assessment made a year ago, will also be applied upon this Annex debt, leaving a balance of about $400. The students of the present session are from 32 different parishes and counties, showing that the school has representatives in its student body from a varied and extensive region; and we believe that the school could grow in popularity and usefulness, if it could be enlarged in capacity and equipment. There is certain real estate immediately in front of the college proper and also in the rear which could be secured now at a much lower price than formerly. If this additional land could be secured and also funds for building and equipment, it seems to us that the school would thereby make a great stride.

Religious activity of the students has been evident. The League, Sunday school and Y. W. C. A. are all in successful operation.

We understand that the business administration is upon a cash basis, all accounts, including teachers' salaries, being paid each month.

LOUISIANA MAN TESTIFIES.

Writing under date of May 3, 1911, Mr. R. H. Marcotte, of Bordelonville, La., writes:

"W. H. Bull Medicine Co., Dear Sirs:—I took sick the first Monday after Christmas last, and was down in bed for two weeks. I called in my family doctor, he gave me relief for a few days only. My trouble was pronounced liver trouble, with an attack of Dropsy, caused by the liver. After I was up a few days from his treatment, which I only found temporary, I began to feel bad again, followed by an awful aching in the upper part of my stomach, which I could hardly stand. As I had read one of your Almanacs, I decided Herbs & Iron was what I needed, and I walked to a druggist near by, the Fritz, Hess & Son, and bought one 50 cent bottle of Herbs & Iron, and the second dose gave me relief. I used two bottles and am now in good health. Herbs and Iron did the work.

You must excuse such a lengthy statement, as I don't care to tire you, but it seems that I cannot say too much in regard to such a fine medicine as Herbs and Iron for a stomach that is badly out of order—no way of resting and appetite gone, and in fact feel like you were torn to pieces and life not worth living. I will at all times recommend Herbs and Iron. With best wishes to your success, I remain Yours truly."

W. H. Bull's Herbs and Iron is the quickest and surest remedy for stomach and liver troubles, and is a blood purifier of high merit. Get a bottle at your druggists. Take two-thirds of it and if you are not fully satisfied that it is improving your health return the remainder and the druggist will refund your money.

MY FIRST CHARGE AND ELSE.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

No. 4.

White Plaines was one of my best churches. Rev. Alec Scarborough was the principal man—preacher, steward and class leader. His home was the principal stopping-place for the preachers—a good man with a nice young family. He was most helpful to the young preacher. He passed to his reward on high just a short while after the death of my first wife. Among his last words were, "God bless Brother Lewis." I wrote him of my troubles and sorrows in the loss of my wife; but how the Lord had blessed my family of children and had called five of them to the ministry. He was too far gone to read my letter, so he asked his youngest daughter, Miss Olivia, to read it to him. After she finished reading it, the above, "God bless Brother Lewis," was his comment. While he was several years my senior, both in age and as a preacher, he recognized and honored me as his pastor. Few better men ever lived in that country than Brother Evans and Brother Scarborough.

Among others I soon got acquainted with an old bachelor by the name of Billie Yoes, a kind, good-hearted man known and loved by many. He and I got to be great friends. He joined the church during the year and became a church worker. His confidence in me was so great that he once told some one that that young preacher could do anything with him. He afterwards moved out West.

Bob Saffold was another bachelor that lived in that part of the country. He was in fine circumstances, owned many sheep and cattle, did a good mercantile business, and at one time represented his county in the Legislature. He, though a clever man in some respects, was a very corrupt man. He died some years after the war between the States a very poor man, homeless and friendless. I was told last year that he died in a camp by the side of the public road, without either money or friends. While I abominated his ugly ways, yet I could not but like the man and wish him well. He was kind and good to me.

One time while trying to preach at White Plains, I stopped suddenly, sat down and called on Brother W. G. Evans to close the service. He did so and gave a good talk. He said to me afterwards, "I had just taken a chew of tobacco and settled down to enjoy your sermon, when so unexpectedly to me you called upon me to close the service." It was customary for women who used the weed, to chew, smoke and dip. Some women who used the weed to chew, smoke and dip in the church. Even preachers would chew, spit on the floor, or on the sides of the house. Often I have been forced to look for a decent spot on which to kneel, even in the pulpit. But we are improving along this line. God hasten the day when it will be considered indecent by all good people, as it is now by many, for preachers to use the weed in any form.

Brother Evans and Scarborough were like fathers to me, their young preacher, and I loved them. Today, I feel a special interest in their children. I met this year a Sister Cox, wife of a local preacher, who, after hearing me preach, said, "Brother Lewis, I heard you preach at White Plains fifty-three years ago." She is a niece of Brother Alec Scarborough.

From White Plains I went to Hudson Rouse's. The weather was cold when I made my first trip there. I came to a creek of beautiful, clear water that looked to be about two feet deep, and started across. Before I knew what had happened, I was in swimming water. I just did save my saddle-bags, which contained my wardrobe and library. This was not the only time I found myself in deep water during the year. There were many faithful preachers during and prior to these days who had to swim creeks, bayous and rivers to get to their appointments. Richard Nolley lost his life in 1814, on a very cold day, by having to swim a stream. He was one of the pioneers of Methodism in this country, and was the second one to die while a member of our Conference. God only knows how much I suffered at times from cold, rain, long rides, etc. Yet I never suffered like some others. I never felt like complaining. Often, while traveling in the cold and rain, I found myself singing,

"Joyfully, joyfully, onward I move,
Bound for the land of bright spirits above;
Angelic choristers sing as I come,
Joyfully, joyfully, haste to thy home,"

I was so happy in my work. Now, after fifty-four years in the ministry, if I had to live my life over again, and knew I would have to go through the same experiences of the past, I would go into the ministry more readily and cheerfully, if possible, than I did fifty-four years ago.

Hudson Rouse was steward and class leader. He and I tried to hold a quarterly conference early in the year, but failed. We did not know where to begin, how to proceed, or when to quit. No record was kept of the proceedings of that conference except in our minds. Brother Pipkins, my presiding elder, was unable to be there. During the year I learned how to conduct a quarterly conference. In those days the questions were not put in the Discipline, as they are now. One had necessarily to acquaint himself with the Discipline pretty well in order to conduct the conference right.

From "Rouse's" I went to Flint Creek. Only one place to stop here; that was Tom Evans'. He was a clever man, though not a church member. His wife and daughters were.

"GIVE GOD A CHANCE."

Dear Brother Meek: I read Brother Belk's letter in the Christian Advocate, headed "Do we need God in our work, or does he need us in his—Which?" It seems to me that two of the largest, saddest, small words I ever saw are "Or" and "Which." Bishop Candler said last Sunday in Memphis to a great crowd of people, "The supreme trouble with the world to-day is the want of God," and oh, how true! Moses was the greatest leader a people ever had. Yet he did not for one moment say, "my people," but always, "thy people whom thou broughtest up," and "Show me now thy way that I may know thee." "If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence." Ex. xxxiii. 15. About the first recorded words of the boy, Jesus, were: "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" and he was the Son. But not once did he say, "my business," but always "My father's business."

The husbandman sent laborers into his vineyard. Were they to do their work, or the Master's work? If we are but yielded to him, God has tenderest care for every detail of our lives, even to the numbering of the hairs of our heads. One has said Moses, with his hesitation, and stammering tongue, seemed but a weak instrument. But he gave God a chance, and God made him the law-giver and leader of his people (a great political honor).

Gideon looked with fear and trembling upon the great work before him. Yet he gave God a chance, and God routed a great and mighty host with his puny lamps and pitchers (blessings on the army). David was but a stripling shepherd, shut up in obscurity, but he gave God a chance, and God brought him to a throne (highest honor of a nation). The little lad with the loaves and fishes had but a mite, but he gave God a chance, and the Master brake and brake the morsels until a famishing multitude was fed before the wondering eyes of the grateful boy (material blessings). The man on the Damascus road gave God a chance in that fateful day and God shook the world with him (a great minister). Seven weary fishermen peered through the morning gloaming upon the form of one standing upon the shore. The hour for successful fishing was past, but when the voice rang out over the waters, "Cast the net on the right side of the ship," they yielded to the Master, and he gave them such a catch as they had never known in all their fishing days—when they gave him the chance (again material blessings). One talent yielded is more than ten talents simply possessed.

Have you given pleasure a chance?—has it paid? You are giving ambition a chance—does it satisfy? You are giving money-making a chance—is it for self or God? Have a care. Friend, when you come to the end where the world will have shriveled to its true littleness, and eternity loomed up to its real bigness; when the things which are seen are really found to be temporal and the things which are unseen eternal; when you are on the brink of stepping over into the glory where God is all and in all, then you will be glad, oh, so glad, that you decided that as for me and my life, it shall be as a broken and emptied vessel for the Master's use made meet." (Neh. ii. 20.) The God of heaven, he will prosper us. "For with God nothing shall be impossible." May Brother Belk's strength not be gone, but become towering. If the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth, over what does he reign—over your work, or his work? He is spoken of as the husbandman; is it of your work or his own that comprise his possessions? Saul was the Master's chosen vessel, but he was discarded for one who would do the Master's bidding. I think I Cor. iii. 11-23, shows very conclusively what becomes of our work, and God's work. Yes, we can ask God to bless our work if ours are entirely surrendered lives, but it goes without saying, surrendered lives are not our lives. "Ye are Christ's and Christ's in God's."—Mrs. S. L. Pope.

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 58—No. 50. "Prove All Things; Hold Fast That Which is Good." WHOLE No. 2913.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS.

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

First Day.

The sixty-sixth session of the Louisiana Annual Conference convened in Parker Memoriai Church, Wednesday morning, December 6, at 9 o'clock, with Bishop E. D. Mouzon, of San Antonio, Tex., presiding. Hymn No. 560 was sung, after which Bishop Mouzon offered the opening prayer. After the singing of "A Charge to keep I have" and the reading of the first chapter of Galatians, the Bishop addressed the Conference, basing his remarks on the 11th and 12th verses of the lesson.

"Galatians is the most human document in the Bible. It is the Magna Charta of Christian Liberty and the Apostle Paul's Declaration of Independence," said the Bishop, together with many other helpful and spiritual truths.

After the calling of the roll, Dr. F. S. Parker, editor of the Epworth Era, was re-elected secretary. Dr. Parker named M. C. Holt, R. W. Vaughan, W. L. Doss, Jr., and I. T. Reams as assistants.

By motion of Dr. J. M. Henry, the hours of meeting and adjournment were fixed at 9 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. The entire church auditorium was named as the Conference bar.

A number of communications were referred to the several Conference Boards without reading. The report of the directors of the Louisiana Orphanage was read and referred to the Orphanage Board. It contained much information of interest. A separate home for the manager is planned, and in order to build it and to retire the present indebtedness, a loan of $8,000 will be secured at six per centum interest. The directors are sure that all indebtedness will be paid during the present year. Rev. R. W. Vaughan, the present manager, was endorsed for reappointment.

By motion of N. E. Joyner, the statistical secretaries were authorized to balance the membership totals for all the preachers who fail to do so in their reports.

Question 22 was called: "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?"

The presiding elders were called and reported as follows: Rev. P. M. Brown reported the Alexandria District. On account of the loss of some of the preachers in mid-year, the work of the district suffered some inconvenience; however, the end was for the upbuilding of the kingdom. More than three hundred accessions were reported and the finances were better than a year ago.

Rev. C. C. Miller reported for the Baton Rouge District. The finances are much improved and the year has been a season of gracious revivals.

Rev. J. E. Denson reported the Lafayette District. This district, according to the report, is missionary territory; however, much has been done and progress has been made. More than two hundred members were received.

Rev. S. S. Keener reported the Monroe District. Progress has been made along all lines, and about three hundred members have been received during the year.

Dr. J. M. Henry spoke of the New Orleans District. Many changes have been made in the personnel of the pastors in mid-year. The missionary spirit is predominant and the outlook is very encouraging.

Rev. H. R. Singleton reported for the Shreveport District. The year has been one of revivals, the presiding elder having held eight meetings himself. All the departments of the Church have prospered.

Rev. R. W. Tucker gave the Ruston District report. This district has been in the midst of a building and improving boom, and many new churches have been finished, paid for and planned. Other matters have had equal attention, and the district came near making a full report.

The reports of the superannuates were heard, and their names were referred to the committee on Conference relations.

The hour of 11 o'clock, Thursday morning, was fixed as the time for the hearing of the semi-centennial sermon by Dr. C. W. Carter.

The names of the honored dead were referred to the committee on memoirs.

Dr. J. M. Moore, secretary of the Home Department of the Board of Missions, was introduced.

Question 6 was called and the following were announced as transferred from other conferences: F. R. Hill, Jr., and George D. Anders, from the Mississippi Conference; J. W. Moore, C. M. Thompson, T. H. Morris, from the Texas Conference; W. M. Oakes from the North Texas Conference.

These brethren, together with Rev. Ernest C. Cook, of the British Wesleyan Church; Rev. G. E. Cameron, of Shreveport, and Dr. R. A. Meek, of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, were introduced to the Conference.

The characters of the supernumeraries were passed, and their names referred to the committee on Conference relations.

The hour of adjournment having arrived, announcements were made and the first session of the Conference ended.

Second Day—Thursday.

Thursday morning's session was opening by singing hymn No. 222, after which prayer was offered by Rev. J. D. Harper. After the singing of hymn No. 334, Bishop Mouzon read a portion from the 5th and 6th chapters of Second Corinthians. After announcing his theme as "The Ministry of Reconciliation," he spoke for fifteen minutes to the delight and profit of all.

The minutes of the previous session were read, corrected and approved. After the calling of the roll it was ordered that the calling of the roll in future be dispensed with.

R. H. Wynn and W. J. Porter were named as additional members of the committee on memoirs.

Dr. W. F. McMurry, secretary of the Board of Church Extension; Rev. J. J. Morgan and George Manott, of the American Bible Society, and the Rev. Dr. Summey, of the Presbyterian Church, were introduced to the Conference.

Question 2, "Who remain on trial?" was called. The following, having passed satisfactory examinations, were advanced to the class of the second year: H. W. Jamieson, George P. White, Robert M. Brown, J. Hervy Hoffpauir, George Fox, W. B. Perritt, T. J. Embry, O. L. Tucker, W. F. Roberts, R. R. Fulton and D. C. Bennett.

Question 1, "Who are admitted on trial?" was called. From Baton Rouge District, Thomas W. H. Chisholm; Lafayette District, Louis Hoffpauir; Ruston District, Clyde C. Clark and S. D. Roberts; Shreveport District, James B. Cady and Leonard Griffin.

H. Wade Cudd was elected to deacon's orders and advanced to the class of the third year. A. J. Barnett, J. C. Rousseaux, and J. A. Alford, being in deacon's orders, were advanced to the class of the third year.

The following local preachers were elected to deacon's orders: Pinkney A. Swann and Elmo D. Farraday.

Rev. E. C. Grice was readmitted into the traveling connection.

Rev. John W Faulk was admitted from the M. E. Church, his deacon's orders recognized, and he was advanced to the class of the fourth year.

The following appointments to committees were made: W. S. Holmes, on the Board of Education; G. E. Cameron and C. A. Battle, on the Sunday School Board; W. W. Holmes, on the Board of Missions.

Dr. R. A. Meek, editor of the Advocate, gave his report to the Conference and addressed the body in the interests of the paper. He justly asked for an increase of a thousand subscribers from the Louisiana Conference during the next year. In commending the report and the Advocate, Bishop Mouzon said: "I consider the New Orleans Advocate as one of the very best of the entire connection. I not only enjoy its news columns and its contributed articles, but I enjoy its stirring editorials."

The hour having arrived for the semi-centennial sermon by Dr. C. W. Carter, the platform was cleared, and after the singing of a hymn, the venerable patriarch of the Louisiana Methodism delivered one of the greatest sermons ever delivered before the Louisiana Conference.

Dr. Carter recounted a few of his experiences in joining the Conference fifty years ago, and then seemingly transposed his spirit from the present to the past and lived again in the midst of that splendid body of men constituting the Louisiana Conference a half hundred years ago. He lifted these men to th vision of all present, and in his quaint and forceful manner caused such men as the late Bishops McTyeire, Keener and Parker to live again. From the sketching of characters the Doctor carried his audience to the beautiful truths that these men preached and closed his address on the heights of the sublime, picturing heaven, the angels, archangels, cherubim, seraphim, and these sainted souls saved from sin, with harps quivering with melody of love divine, centered around the Christ, crowning him Lord of all.

Dr. F. R. Hill offered a resolution that the sermon be published in permanent form and to this end that a collection be taken. The publication was authorized and $34 were contributed.

Rev. J. J. Morgan of the American Bible Society addressed the body in the interests of that organization, after which announcements were made and the Conference closed its second session.

The following flashes were caught from Dr. Carter's sermon:

"It is a calamity when a great editor of a church paper is invited to come down and sit in a college of Bishops."

"I am not pining for the past, I do not believe the best is over; to me the golden age is to-day and to-morrow."

"The glory of going to Conference on horseback lost its charm to me, yet you will hear some folks sighing for the 'good old days.'"

"Fifty years ago, most of the preachers came from the farm and were good judges of horses, and in this respect the country preacher has the advantage of the town-raised clergy, who oftentimes do not know a Mexican mustang from a Kentucky thoroughbred."

"A Methodist Conference is the only deliberative body that conducts its business by questions and answers."

Third Day—Friday.

The third morning session of the Conference was called to order Friday morning by Bishop Mouzon. Hymn No. 208 was sung, after which Rev. H. R. Singleton led in prayer. The Bishop read the second chapter of II Timothy and gave an interesting exegetical treatment of the lesson. Hymn No. 506 was sung and the minutes of the previous session were read, corrected and approved.

A telegram from Mr. R. S. Hyer, president of the proposed Southern Methodist University, of Dallas, was read, asking Bishop Mouzon to represent that work as proposed. This was done to the enlightenment of all present. It appears that the Methodists of Texas propose to erect, endow and support a university of the first grade. The matter was referred to the Board of Education without instruction.

Question 2: "Who are deacons of one year?" was called. The following, having passed their examinations, were advanced to the class of the fourth year: J. C. Price, S. S. Holladay, C. B. Powell, R. S. Walton, T. V. Peters, G. A. Morgan, F. R. Power, J. G. Snelling, H. T. Young, R. H. Bamburg and C. V. Breithaupt.

The characters of the following were passed, but,

...ing passed their examinations, they were recommended in the class of the third year: J. W. Harper, J. A. Reformat and L. E. Cross.

E. L. Ayres was located at his own request. The character of T. B. Lipscomb was passed.

Dr. J. R. Hammond, Dr. J. R. Stewart, Dr. Charles E. Bentley, all connectional men, and Rev. J. W. Carwile, pastor of the Carrollton Presbyterian Church, were introduced.

Dr. Bentley spoke on behalf of the Methodist Quarterly Review, and his remarks received the endorsement of the Bishop. Dr. F. S. Parker spoke of the interests of the Epworth Era. Mr. Everett, of Dallas, Texas, called the attention of those present to the display of books of the Publishing House. Bishop Mouzon supplemented his remarks by recommending the following books to all the preachers: Dr. Fitchett's "Wesley and His Century," McTyeire's "History of Methodism," Ambert's "Tongue of Fire," and Phillip Brooks' "Lectures on Preaching."

Dr. J. R. Hammond addressed the Conference on the needs of the Negro race and the plans of the church to establish systematic training for the colored man. A collection was taken to promote the work and $[illegible] was secured in cash.

The characters of A. J. Colvin and T. S. Ratcliff were passed and their names referred to the committee on Conference relations for the superannuate relation.

By motion of S. S. Keener, S. W. B. Colvin was located.

Rev. Ribert Selby represented the Seashore Divinity School in a very thorough manner. By motion of C. C. Miller, the affairs of the Divinity School were referred to the Board of Education.

The report of the Legal Conference was read by Rev. S. S. Keener and showed that the income of the Conference from its various properties and holdings amounted to $1,415.26. After reserving $500 for necessary improvements on one of the plantations and deducting some minor expenses, the balance of more than $1,100 was given to the superannuate fund.

On motion of S. S. Keener, Rev. N. E. Joyner was placed on the Legal Board in the place of Dr. F. N. Parker.

Dr. Edward F. Cook, one of the missionary secretaries; Rev. Mr. Sholl, pastor of Canal Street Presbyterian Church, and Rev. C. M. Thompson, transfer from the Texas Conference, were introduced to the Conference. After the announcements and the singing of the doxology, the third session of the Conference ended.

Fourth Day—Saturday Morning.

The fourth session of the Conference was called to order by Bishop Mouzon. Hymn No. 75 was sung, after which Dr. S. S. Keener led in prayer.

The minutes of the previous session were read and adopted.

The ministerial credentials of Rev. J. E. Denson were surrendered to the Conference and ordered filed in the archives of the Conference. Having changed his relation to the Conference, Brother Denson gave such letters and other matter as concerned the Conference into the hands of the secretary.

Question 14, "Who are elected to elder's orders?" was called. The following having passed satisfactory examinations, their characters were passed and they were elected to elder's orders: C. V. Breithaupt, E. J. McCoy, C. A. Battle, C. F. Sheppard, C. M. Morris, A. J. Gearheard and L. E. McCain.

The characters of the following were passed and they were continued in the class of the fourth year: L. A. Sims, T. J. Holladay, T. M. Wafer and J. L. Sutton.

W. J. Newsom, having passed satisfactorily his examinations, was elected to deacon's orders.

The character of all the preachers whose names had not been thus far called were passed in order, the presiding elders answering for them and no reports were heard.

Rev. W. H. Benton, of Crowley, withdrew from the ministry and membership of our Church, having united with the Presbyterian Church.

A. A. Bernard was located at his own request, made in person.

Dr. Stonewall Anderson, secretary of the Board of Education, and Dr. Booth, of the Presbyterian Church, were introduced to the Conference.

Dr. S. S. Keener read the report of the Joint Board of Finance, which showed that $6,923.56 had been received and dispersed. An itemized statement of the expenditures was read and the checks to the superannuates were distributed.

The class for admission into full connection, composed of H. Wade Cudd, J. C. Rousseaux, W. J. Newsom and J. A. Alford, was called.

Bishop Mouzon addressed the class in words of splendid advice and earnest encouragement. He impressed upon them the necessity of paying more attention to their preaching and urged them to hold the preaching of the Word of first importance over every other department of the Church.

The class was admitted into full connection by a unanimous vote, the Conference voting by standing.

Hymn No. 393 was sung.

Motion was carried that when the morning session adjourned it should adjourn to meet again at 2:30 p.m.

The report of the Auditing Board, read by A. M. Mayo, was adopted, showing the total disbursement report to be $[illegible].

Rev. [illegible] W. Perry was received by transfer from the Mississippi Conference.

The report of the Orphanage Board was read by Rev. John Sholars. The report showed progress at the Orphanage along all lines. An assessment of $[illegible] was recommended to be assessed against the various charges. Rev. R. W. Vaughan was recommended as general manager for the ensuing year. The report was adopted as read.

The report of the Board of Education was read by Rev. M. C. Holt. A motion carried that the report be taken up item by item and acted on by the Conference.

Several items were favorably received, provoking little opposition until the proposal to bind the Conference to guarantee $1,000 per year and interest on $[illegible] proposed bonded indebtedness on Mansfield Female College.

Rev. N. E. Joyner spoke, leading the discussion in favor of the report, and Dr. S. S. Keener, supporting an amendment, which would make the college property, and that only, responsible as the security. The discussion engaged the attention of a number of other speakers and the hour of adjournment found Brother Joyner on the floor in the midst of an address.

After announcements were made and the singing of the doxology, the Conference was adjourned to meet at 2:30 p.m.

Fourth Day—Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session was called to order by Bishop Mouzon. Rev. R. S. Isbell offered the opening prayer, after which the minutes of the morning session were read and approved.

The report of the Board of Education pending was before the house with N. E. Joyner on the floor. Speeches were interrupted by the Bishop's attention being directed to a morning paper report of the illness of Bishop A. W. Wilson at Pensacola, Fla.

Dr. C. W. Carter led the Conference in prayer for the recovery of the beloved senior Bishop.

The discussion was resumed with intense earnestness. C. C. Miller, P. M. Brown, C. B. Carter, N. E. Joyner, S. S. Keener and S. H. Werlein being the principal speakers. The report of the Board on this point was finally adopted as read and the Conference pledged to the raising of $1,000 per year and the interest on a bonded indebtedness on Mansfield College of $25,000.

The next item of the report suggested that steps be taken to correlate Centenary and Mansfield Colleges. The report was adopted.

The different points to be included in the chapter of the correlated institution were read and adopted with a few changes.

The assessment for education was reduced from $10,000 to $7,000 for the ensuing year.

The General Board of Education was asked to give $1,000 each to Centenary and Mansfield Colleges.

Rev. N. E. Joyner was recommended as educational secretary.

The whole report of the Board of Education was finally adopted, after having occupied the attention of the Conference for three hours.

Dr. J. R. Stewart addressed the Conference in the interest of the superannuate's endowment fund.

Dr. Stonewall Anderson spoke in the interest of the General Board of Education.

The report of the committee on Conference relations was read by Rev. C. B. Carter, and, after being amended, was adopted.

The report of the committee on Sabbath observance was read by Rev. J. F. Foster. The report was beautifully written and was a document of stirring truth on a live subject. It was adopted.

A motion to adjourn prevailed and Bishop Mouzon announced the memorial session for Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Announcements of the services for Sunday were read as follows:

Sunday—Afternoon Session.

The Conference met in memorial session Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Hymn No. 157 was sung, after which Rev. J. A. Parker led in prayer. The 116th Psalm was read.

Rev. W. F. Henderson read the memoir of Rev. S. H. Whatley; Rev. J. W. Lee read the memoir of Rev. J. P. Haney, and Rev. E. L. Cargill read the memoir of Rev. Wilson Moore.

The several beautiful characteristics of these deceased brothers were mentioned in tender accents by those intimate with them during their lives.

The obituaries of Mrs. J. P. Haney and Mrs. Robert Randle were read and ordered printed in the minutes.

The Bishop ordained a class of seven to the office of elder.

The Conference adjourned to meet Monday morning.

Last Session—Monday.

The last session of the Conference was called to order by Bishop Mouzon. Hymn No. 557 was sung and the Conference was led in prayer by Rev. Wm. Schuble. The 27th Psalm was read in concert.

The secretary read the minutes of the previous session, which were approved.

Question No. 45 was called, and Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport; Monroe, and Mansfield invited the Conference next year. The Conference voted in favor of Monroe, which choice was made unanimous.

Rev. J. A. Alford read the report on temperance, which was adopted.

Dr. C. W. Carter was called to the chair while the cabinet held a short session.

The statistical report was read by Rev. R. W. Vaughan, which showed the following condition of the Church in the State: Local preachers, 58; members, 23,703; infants baptized, 915; adults baptized, 839; Epworth Leagues—Senior, 47; Junior, 18; Epworth League members, 1,615; Sunday school scholars, 23,431; paid to Conference claimants, $5,185; paid to foreign missions, $5,843; home and Conference missions, $5,925; paid to church extension, $2,850; paid to American Bible Society, $444; paid presiding elders, $14,520; paid preachers, $68,228; paid Bishops, $1,167; number of societies, 373; number of houses of worship, 385; value of houses of worship, $1,029,180; indebtedness thereon, $50,800; value of parsonages, $248,810; indebtedness thereon, $21,376; value of district parsonages, $22,600; indebtedness thereon, $7,779; paid for Conference education, $2,941; educational extension, $517.

Our people contributed to missions per member, 75 cents; for education, 10 cents; for pastoral support, $3.35; for the Orphanage, 27 cents. The report was adopted.

The report of the Board of Church Extension was read and adopted.

Rev. C. C. Selecman, of the St. Louis Conference, was announced as transferred to this Conference.

Rev. R. W. Tucker was called to the chair for a short time.

The Sunday school report was read and adopted.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, J. M. Henry and W. W. Drake were appointed as Publishing Committee for the Conference.

The Epworth League and a number of other routine reports were passed without reading.

The American Bible Society report was read and adopted.

The missionary report, naming A. W. Turner as Conference missionary evangelist, was read and adopted.

The various reports were ordered reduced so as to allow space for their being printed in the minutes.

The district conference records were approved, after which a committee on prison reform was appointed.

R. W. Vaughan addressed the Conference in behalf of the Orphanage.

The minutes of the morning session were read and approved, after which question 49, "Where are the preachers stationed for this year?" was called and answered as follows:

A. Downs, to the Texas Conference.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE NOTES.

F. G. Hocutt, an honored superannuate, was present during the session for the first time in many years.

Referring to the Louisiana habit of drinking black coffee, Bishop Mouzon said: "It seems to take a lot to keep some people awake anyway."

Dr. C. W. Carter says the garden can be made a means of grace, for in a garden was enacted earth's greatest tragedy and triumph.

Rev. R. J. Harp, who has been engaged for several years gathering data for a history of Southern Methodism in Louisiana, reported that all his data, manuscripts, files of church papers, library and other aids were consumed, together with his entire household effects, in a fire during the year.

Bishop Mouzon advised the committee on admissions to ask of each candidate for admission if he would cease to use tobacco or not use it for reasons of ministerial prudence.

Dr. J. M. Moore's address Tuesday night was a masterpiece of modern historical interpretation. "The missionary has inoculated the world with the principle of Christian liberty."

"We should train men, not to leave their present vocation, but to improve and stay where they are," said Dr. Moore Tuesday night.

Dr. C. W. Carter has lost none of his old-time power in preaching. His sermon Wednesday night was rich in logic, full of truth, and running over with the spirit of love.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, the genial host of the Conference, was untiring in his endeavor to make every preacher and layman feel at home.

R. V. Fulton, of the Denham Springs charge, reported that he had baptized forty-one babies. "In that respect our charge has done well," he said.

J. B. Blackburn, who came to the Louisiana Conference last year from the M. P. Church, was reported as having returned to that church during the year.

Dr. McMurry said: "Take the Bible, the Discipline, the Hymnbook, the Church Extension Handbook, and the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and the Devil will have a hard time getting you."

"I didn't know a Conference ever had so much fun; I'm coming every day," said a young lady after hearing Dr. McMurry speak.

All the candidates for admission on trial are abstainers from the use of tobacco but one, and he reported that, while he uses a pipe now, he is trying to quit.

Rev. J. E. Craig reported that he had tended a small crop of cotton with his own horse and hands and presented two bales of cotton to a woman, widowed and sick.

In the past twenty-nine years the Louisiana Conference has paid $42,000 to the Church Extension Society and received from it $77,000. "It seems," said Dr. McMurry, "that Louisiana must have confidence in the good of the Society, or she would not reach out so far after it."

Bishop Mouzon was licensed to preach Nov. 20, 1888. Preceding his being licensed, his father read to him the second chapter of II Timothy, deeming it the most suitable chapter in the Bible for the instruction of a young minister.

Dr. Bulla loaned Bishop Mouzon a gavil made from wood out of the George Arnold house, in which Bishop Francis Asbury died.

Mr. Everett, of the Dallas branch of the Publishing House, says that the worse the country is off financially, the more Bibles are sold.

The sending out of clothes into the slums and homes of squalor where negroes are suffering with consumption and other dangerous and malignant diseases is the dangerous practice of many families who send family washings away from home, is the opinion of Dr. J. D. Hammond.

Rev. Robert Selby, of Moss Point, Miss., was a visitor to the Conference.

Bishop Mouzon gave as his reason for using a gavil the famous remark of the late Bishop Keener: "If a Bishop does not use the gavil, there will be too much gabble."

"I heard a sermon that I did not believe," said Bishop Mouzon. "It provoked me to thinking. I went home and made a sermon on the same text that I did believe. It pays, sometimes, to hear and read things that are not so."

Rev. A. W. Turner, of Mansfield, who has recently undergone an operation, has recovered and is looking well. He attended the Conference.

Rev. W. J. Newsom was quite sick for the first few days of the Conference.

Dr. F. S. Parker delighted a large audience Friday night with another one of his inspiring addreses on the work of the Epworth League. This is the ninth time Dr. Parker has appeared before the Louisiana Annual Conference in behalf of League work.

Miss Lingle, State Secretary of the Epworth League, residing at Shreveport, made a splendid report of her work to the Conference.

There has been an increase of eight organizations, 118 officers and teachers and 1,149 pupils in the Sunday schools of the Conference during the past year.

Dr. Bulla, as usual, was both entertaining and inspiring Friday night.

Dr. Stonewall Anderson's address Saturday night on education was clear in enunciation, logic and spirit. He impressed his hearers with the subject in an inspiring way. His remarks were warmly seconded and supplemented by a masterly discourse by Rev. P. M. Brown.

Rev. H. O. White, one of the honored old men of the Conference, led the love feast Sunday morning.

A class of four were ordained deacons at the close of the morning service Sunday and a class of seven were ordained elders at the close of the memorial service Sunday afternoon.

Bishop Mouzon preached a masterly sermon Sunday morning. The audience was carried right up to the throne of grace and made to feel the love and power of God through the sacrifice of Jesus Christ. His subject was "Self-sacrifice" and none present were unconvinced of the merit of self-sacrifice in the life of a true Christian.

Rev. and Mrs. T. V. Peters presented their baby-boy at the altar Sunday morning for Christian baptism. Bishop Mouzon administered the rite.

Sayings of Bishop Mouzon.

In answer to one of the Bishop's questions, a man's name was given as Willie. "Change it, change it," said the Bishop; "he is a man now and his name is William."

"The habit of every preacher reporting his work orally at Conference is a relic of the past and is obsolete. It properly belongs to the district conference."

"The man who has done the least usually talks the longest. Of course, there are a few exceptions."

"The message of Jesus Christ was centered in himself as the Savior of the world."

"The world needs nothing more than men to preach the gospel."

"Some preacher's sermons are composed of three heads and nine tales; telling stories is not preaching."

"Whosoever makes the preaching of the gospel secondary in his ministry has lost the meaning of the gospel, for the Word says, 'It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believed.'"

A. J. GEARHEARD.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Rev. H. B. Watkins.

When the Mississippi Methodist Historical Society was called to order at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening Central Church, Meridian, was fairly well filled with the advance guard of the Mississippi Conference, many of whom had already spent an arduous day in examinations, either as pupil or preceptor. The service was opened by the vice-president, Rev. T. B. Holloman, at whose request Rev. L. Carley read the lesson and Rev. W. G. Bachman led in prayer. The feature of the evening was the reading of a most excellent paper by Dr. A. F. Watkins on the life of Lewis Hobbs, the paper having been prepared by Professor R. S. Ricketts, of Millsaps College. Readers of the Advocate would doubtless be charmed to see the sketch of this heroic pioneer preacher presented in its columns. It would be especially interesting to the Methodists of Louisiana and Southern Mississippi.

Wednesday Morning.

Promptly at nine o'clock, Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Georgia, called the Conference to order. The Mississippi brethren were delighted to have him, having had many occasions to know and hear him; but never before having had him as president of this Conference. He led the Conference in singing hymn No. 222, offered an earnest prayer, and read a portion of the 14th Chapter of Matthew, commenting with luminous helpfulness on the incident of Jesus' coming to the disciples during the storm on the sea. He closed with a ringing declaration that Jesus wanted no petty crown, but wanted to be crowned Son of God by every human soul.

At the close of his talk the secretary of the last Conference called the roll and 127 preachers and 9 laymen answered.

Rev. A. F. Watkins was elected secretary, with Revs. G. S. Harmon and Robt. Selby assistants, and W. L. Linfield, John A. Moore and J. L. Neill as statistical secretaries.

Among the prominent features of the morning were the reports of the presiding elders, which were cheerful, though they indicated that the Conference had passed through a year of very great financial depression.

Among the superannuates who made their reports were Revs. H. P. Lewis, Sr., Ira B. Robertson, R. B. Downer, C. McDonald, D. C. Langford, W. W. Simmons, W. G. Backus, G. R. Ellis and Dr. W. C. Black. No one enjoys the Conference more than these men, and no one is enjoyed more by their brethren. It was a matter of regret to the Conference that Brothers Sibley, Norsworthy, Sandell, Evans, Caldwell, Nicholson, Jones, Brown and F. M. Williams were absent.

Brother M. L. Burton, who was on this roll last year, was present and in good health, and to the delight of the Conference ready to take work, having spent the latter part of the year filling the pastorate at Gulfport.

Brother G. W. Huff's name was referred to the committee for this relation.

The name of D. S. Halliburton was called, and his presiding elder asked for the supernumerary relation for him.

The calling of the roll brought out the fact that two preachers had died: Revs. J. W. McLaurin and M. H. Moore.

During the morning Rev. George S. Sexton made a splendid representation of the Washington City Church matter. He stated that $221,000 had been raised for this enterprise. The Conference by resolution pledged themselves to raise $5,000 during the coming four years for this cause.

Rev. James Cannon, D.D., of Waynesville, N. C., manager of the Southern Assembly of our Church at that place, addressed the Conference with reference to his work.

Rev. John R. Stewart addressed the Conference with reference to the Superannuate endowment Fund.

The following were appointed by the committee to have charge of the raising of $5,000 for the Washington City Church: A. F. Watkins, Robt. Selby, W. H. Huntley, M. L. Burton, E. J. Bomar, L. L. Lampton, J. W. Griffin, J. L. Dantzler.

C. O. Chalmers, publisher of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, was introduced.

After announcements Rev. C. McDonald pronounced the benediction.

During the afternoon Dr. J. D. Hammond, president of Payne College at Augusta, Ga., preached a very thoughtful sermon.

Thursday Morning.

After the singing or hymn 309, Rev. T. B. Holloman lead the Conference in prayer.

Bishop Candler read a lesson from the 12th chapter of acts, containing an account of the imprisonment and deliverance of Peter.

The minutes of the previous session were read and approved, after which a motion was passed dispensing with the calling of the roll for the rest of the session.

Rev. J. E. Jones, D.D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, was introduced.

Question 2, "Who remain on trial?" was called, and John Lloyd Decell, Hugh Kelly McKee, James Orion Ware, A. J. Davis, W. W. Nelson, Wm. B. Alsworth, J. L. Smith, G. G. Yeager, W. H. Young, A. B. Barry, and J. E. Sampley, having stood approved examinations on the course of study, and having passed in examination of character, were advanced to the class of the second year. H. A. Maples of the same class made a splendid report and had his character passed, but, on account of his eyes failiug during the year, was not able to take the examination, and was continued in the class of the first year.

O. J. Rainey was discontinued at his own request.

Question 22 was called, and the preachers of the Brookhaven District made reports. While finances were short in many cases, in nearly all the membership had gained and revivals had crowned the work of the year.

Rev. J. D. Hammond, D.D., president of Paine College at Augusta, Ga., addressed the Conference relative to the education of negro youth in which he is engaged. His references to sanitary education, to preparing trained nurses among the negroes, and his appeal against the mob spirit in many places received the cordial approval of the Conference. At the close of his speech a collection of $121.25 was taken for his work.

Question 22 was resumed and 20 preachers of the Hattiesburg District made their reports.

Rev. Julius McGrath, missionary to the Hebrews, was introduced, and it was announced that he would occupy the pulpit at 3 p.m.

Dr. T. C. Weir, of the North Mississippi Conference, made some announcements relative to the Veteran Pastors' Association of the North Mississippi Conference, expressing the hope that a like organization might be effected in this Conference.

Dr. Weir pronounced the benediction.

Friday Morning.

Hymn No. 354 was sung and Dr. J. M. Weems led the Conference in prayer.

Bishop Candler read a portion of the 12th and the entire 13th chapter of First Corinthians, emphasizing the beauty, the abundance, and the permanence of love, the most excellent gift.

The names of Revs. W. W. Cammack and G. R. Ellis were referred to the committee for the superannuate relation.

The presence of Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Agent for the Tri-State Methodist Hospital, was noted.

The presence of J. S. Decell, D. C. Hull, T. M. Evans, J. H. Minor and E. E. O'Neal, lay delegates, was noted.

The following were admitted after due process: On trial, H. F. Southerland, W. B. Waldrop, Chas. A. Shultz, S. N. Thomas, W. F. McCrory, Jas. H. Moore and Geo. P. Fikes. Jas. F. Campbell, James A. Wells, Hilary S. Westbrook, and Roy H. Kleiser were elected deacons and passed to the third year. B. F. Crook, C. C. Griffin, L. E. Wicht and W. B. Hogg, already deacons, were advanced to the third year.

E. W. Harrington and A. B. Barry were continued in the class of the second year, it being stated that Brother Harrington was in a sanitarium for an operation, and not able to attend Conference.

J. E. Sampley and H. J. Maddox, already in full connection, were advanced to the third year.

Elmer Coleman Gunn and James Victor Bennett were advanced to the class of the fourth year.

F. L. Applewhite, E. G. Mohler and James W. Price were passed in examination of character, but remain in the class of the third year.

J. L. Neill, Robt. T. Pickett, Chas. T. Noble, Wm. E. Dickens, John W. Chisholm and Jas. M. Corley were elected elders.

H. G. Roberts, M. R. Jones and Chas. H. Herring remain in the class of the fourth year.

Jas. T. McVey, already an elder, was reported as passed his fourth year examination and made his report.

J. O. Winburn, David C. Hull, J. H. Moore, Hugh K. McKee and J. R. Cruthirds were elected local deacons.

Rev. W. Fred Long was elected to local elder's orders.

Dr. D. C. Hull, president of Millsaps College, addressed the Conference relative to that work.

Rev. W. B. Hogg was announced as received by transfer from the Tennessee Conference.

Question 22 was called, and a large number of the preachers made their reports and had their characters passed.

Rev. M. M. Black submitted report No. 1 of the Board of Missions, asking the Conference to confirm the election of L. L. Roberts to fill a vacancy on that Board, which was done.

An invitation was read to the Conference, inviting them to attend a drill and luncheon at the Meridian Woman's and Male Colleges on Friday afternoon.

Rev. T. W. Adams pronounced the benediction.

Saturday Morning.

A quartette of young ladies from Meridian Woman's College rendered a much appreciated selection. Rev. J. A. Bowen, of the North Alabama Conference led the Conference in prayer. The Bishop read and expounded a part of the fifth and sixth chapters of Matthew, dwelling with much emphasis on the need of a personal secret relation with God as opposed to a mere dramatic practice of piety.

Minutes of the previous session were read and approved.

The secretary called attention to the presence of Rev. G. W. Bachman, colporteur, and asked that official recognition be made on the record, as he is regarded as an officer of this Conference.

The presence of S. A. Tomlinson, lay delegate from the Seashore District, was noted. Brother Tomlinson is treasurer of the Joint Board.

Question 22 was resumed and a large number of preachers made their reports. One of the best reports of the morning was made by Dr. T. B. Holloman, of Port Gibson, whose work, as he said, is in the heart of the boll weevil district. Everything financial was in full with a large special for foreign missions. This charge takes a large share in the support of Miss Nell Drake, missionary to China.

A telegram from E. W. Barrington, who had on Friday undergone a surgical operation in New Orleans, announced that he was doing nicely.

The committee on Conference relations recommended the following for the superannuate relation: R. A. Sibley, Ira B. Robertson, R. B. Downer, H. R. Caldwell, W. G. Backus, F. M. Williams, R. L. Phillips, J. H. Evans, R. D. Norsworthy, J. W. Brown, J. W. Sandell, J. T. Nicholson, L. J. Jones, C. McDonald, W. W. Simmons, H. P. Lewis, J. L. Sells, D. C. Langford, W. C. Black, G. W. Huff and W. W. Cammack.

The name of O. G. Halliburton was recommended for the supernumerary relation.

Dr. I. W. Cooper spoke in behalf of Whitworth College, followed by a short talk by H. B. Watkins for the Board of Trustees.

Hardy N. McKippen was received in elder's orders from the Congregational Methodist Church.

Simpson J. Tubby, a local preacher, was announced as having withdrawn from the Church and ministry.

The question, "Who are admitted into full connection?" was called, and Hilary S. Westbrook, Roy H. Kleiser, William B. Hogg, Cornelius C. Griffin, Benjamin F. Crook, James F. Campbell, James A. Wells, Harry F. Tolle, Louis E. Wicht were called to the bar of the Conference, charged by the Bishop and received.

Rev. Geo. H. Galloway, president of the Montrose School, was introduced and made a cheerful report with reference to that work.

Dr. R. A. Meek, editor of the New Orleans Advocate was introduced and made an announcement.

The secretary read the report of the Hospital Commission for the Tri-State Hospital. The report was committed to a committee of five: T. B. Clifford, H. B. Watkins, C. F. Emery, O. S. Lewis, H. Mellard.

James Orion Ware was elected to elder's orders.

The committee on public worship made the following report for Sunday's services:

Whitworth College.

Oct. 26, 1911.

Session 1911-1912: enrollment 232 (two hundred and thirty-two). A few vacancies in the boarding department. One hundred and thirty in the music department. College was never more prosperous than now.

Each graduate of the Brookhaven High School, 1910-1911, entered Whitworth College in September. This is an evidence the College is appreciated at home. The faculty is giving unusual satisfaction. Prospects are good for an enrollment of 265, session 1911-1912—a record of which Whitworth friends are delighted. Send for catalogue. Address,

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,
Brookhaven, Miss.

Highland Baptist, 11 a.m., Robert Selby; 7:30 p.m., D. E. Kelly.

Forty-first Avenue Baptist, 11 a.m., T. J. O'Neil; 7:30 p.m., J. T. Abney.

El Bethel Baptist, 11 a.m., A. B. Barry; 7:30 p.m., A. J. Davis.

A motion to meet in memorial session Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock was carried.

The committee on the Laymen's Missionary Movement was read by the secretary and adopted.

Report of the Laymen's Committee.

To the Bishop and the members of the Mississippi Annual Conference:

We the committee on the Laymen's Missionary Movement beg leave to submit the following report:

While the operation of the Laymen's Missionary Movement within the bounds of the Conference has resulted in the awakening of a deep interest in modern missions and more general activity among our laymen, we feel the need of more diligence and co-operative effort on the part of all lay leaders and of a more systematic giving on the part of the men of the Church. We respectfully urge a continued and prayerful effort to secure the prescribed two dollars per member for the ensuing year.

Whereas the methods hitherto prevailing for raising funds for carrying on our missionary enterprises at home and abroad have proved inadequate and have failed to enlist the majority of our membership in this most Christ-like work of the Church, we recommend that the Mississippi Annual Conference fix its goal for missionary giving at an average WEEKLY offering of not less than TWO CENTS per member for the entire church membership of this Conference.

We further recommend that we pledge ourselves to an earnest effort to put into immediate operation throughout the bounds of our Conference the plans set forth in "A Financial Method for Methodists," which is in harmony with the requirements of our Discipline and is approved by all the general secretaries of the connectional interests of our Church.

We respectfully recommend the appointment of W. D. Hawkins, of Meridian, Miss., as Conference leader for the ensuing year.

Respectfully submitted,

J. M. SULLIVAN, Secretary.

Report of Hospital Commission.

To the Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—

Dear Brethren: We, your Hospital Commissioners, appointed at your last annual session, beg leave to make the following report:

The Commissioners met on Feb. 7, 1911, in the First Methodist Church, in Memphis, Tenn., with twenty-two of the twenty-four members present. A permanent organization was affected by the election of Jno. H. Sherard, president; J. R. Jones, W. S. Lagrone, J. F. Smith and T. K. Riddick, vice-presidents; L. M. Stratton, secretary, and Jno. R. Pepper, treasurer. An executive committee composed of the officers and three members of the commission residing in Memphis was elected, and to it was referred the matters of securing a proper charter, selecting a suitable site and the employment of the field secretary.

Rev. H. B. Johnston was appointed to invite the Arkansas and Little Rock Conferences to join us in the great enterprise, which he will do at their next sessions.

After making many inquiries and considering the merits of several men, we finally elected Rev. H. M. Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference, to the position of field secretary, and he entered on this work during the month of May.

January 28, 1912 (the fourth Sunday), has been set apart for Hospital Rally Day, and the Commissioners earnestly request all our Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, Woman's Home Mission Societies and congregations throughout the four Conferences to suitably observe the day and take collections for this great cause. Our secretary has been requested to communicate with each of these, supplying them suitable literature and urging their co-operation and help. He has already sent a great deal of literature to the pastors.

Most of the field secretary's time has been employed in other work than soliciting, yet $29,000 has been secured, and he has received several tentative propositions, which promise almost as much more.

Rev. H. M. Ellis has been elected field secretary for the ensuing year and we bespeak for him your loyal and hearty support and co-operation. We request that Bishop Candler appoint him to this work.

This is the work of our Methodist Church. We are but its agents in the effort to accomplish the great purpose assigned to us. We believe this to be the greatest work our Church has enterprised in this section. But we cannot accomplish the hoped-for end without your help. We are counting on every pastor to do his best.

We would remind you that the term of your Commissioners expires with this session of your Conference and ask that you elect to fill the vacancies.

We also request the Woman's Home Mission Societies of the interested Conferences to elect their representative on the Commission.

Respectfully submitted,

J. R. JONES,
J. T. LEGGETT.

Sunday.

Sunday thronged the churches of Meridian with expectant crowds. The centre of attraction, of course, were the services at Central. The love feast at 9:30, led by Dr. Black, crowded the house, and when it was ended no one left their places. Fully 800 people heard Bishop Candler on the Witness of the Spirit. He discussed a phase of this great doctrine, as he said, undiscussed by Wesley, namely, the essential need of this experience. It serves a much higher office than mere enjoyment. It furnishes an atmosphere of sunshine to the Christian's heart without which no great things could be accomplished in life or work. Frigid zones don't produce fruit and flowers; there must be some summer, and the world doesn't furnish that to the Christian heart. It is cold and harsh. The witness of the Spirit furnishes in the heart the genial clime out of which grow fruit and happiness.

He pointed out that the world doesn't approve the finer traits of Christian character. They approve common, ordinary virtues, but in the finer points they part with and frown on you. The same thing is true of the finer Christian doctrines and work. The world doesn't approve the Christian's work, nor does the Church itself in its more heroic aspects. Work for fallen womanhood is frowned on by many good people. Young J. Allen was censured for not deserting China in its extremity. Where, then, shall we look for that environment that approves Christian virtue and work. It is to God, who, with his own Spirit, bears witness with the Christian's heart. That's where Jesus looked. He traced the life of Jesus from the time when he was at his utmost popularity until his own disciples protested against his death and he stood alone in his sacrifice. Then it was he enjoyed the experience of the transfiguration and heard the voice of God saying, "This is my beloved Son." To him must we look, too; nowhere else can approval be found. We know his voice like one knows his mother's voice. One can't tell how, but he knows it from all voices. It would be impossible to describe the spiritual uplift of this service, at the close of which there were tears in the eyes of all and shouts on the lips of many.

After the Bishop's sermon, the deacons were ordained. In the afternoon the memorial service was held, and beautiful tributes were paid the memories of Rev. M. H. Moore and Rev. J. W. McLaurin, who had died during the year.

An Epworth League mass meeting was held at the courthouse at 3 o'clock, addressed by J. A. Bowen, Dr. Sullivan and Fred. Long.

At night, Dr. A. F. Watkins preached at Central, after which the elders were ordained.

Monday Morning.

The Conference met at 9 a.m., being called to order by J. M. Weems. Hymn No. 334 was sung and the Conference was led in prayer. Dr. Weems read the morning lesson from the third chapter of Titus.

M. L. Burton read the report of the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home. This report shows 203 children in the home. Total receipts this year, $17,639.37. It also shows $3,270 debt on buildings. R. L. Bennett and H. M. Ellis were elected directors to succeed themselves.

The report of the joint board of finance was read by N. B. Harmon. It showed that the claimants had been paid in full this year and that $9,032.04 had been collected on the assessment; $2,521.46 had been collected for the Bishops.

The auditing report was read by C. N. Guice, which asked that two auditors, instead of four, be appointed.

Paul D. Hardin spoke in behalf of Whitworth College after the report of the Board of Education was read by Dr. A. F. Smith. The report was adopted, including a recommendation that H. A. Gatlin be elected financial agent of Whitworth College.

J. R. Jones was instructed to send a telegram of sympathy to Rev. G. P. McKeown on the death of his father.

Robt. Selby read the report of the Seashore Divinity School. Announcement was made that among the speakers of 1912 at the school will be Dr. Andrew Steed, Bishop Hoss and Dr. A. T. Robertson, of Louisville. Resolutions were adopted asking the State to create an industrial school for fallen women, an industrial school for children who are convicted of misdemeanors and that a committee of five be appointed to co-operate with like committees from other bodies to secure the passage of such laws. The following committee was appointed: T. M. Evans, J. R. Jones, J. M. Morse, J. M. Moore, S. J. Taylor, J. C. Cavett.

The hospital committee report was read by O. S. Lewis. It commended the work of the commission to establish a great tri-state hospital at Memphis. It asked the re-election of the commissioners, J. R. Jones, D. W. Heidelberg, W. E. Lampton, J. T. Leggett, L. M. Dantzler, to succeed themselves. It approved Jan. 28th as Hospital Day in the three States. H. M. Ellis addressed the Conference in the interest of that work.

Hazlehurst was selected as the place of the meeting of the next session of the Conference by a unanimous vote.

Resolutions relative to the coming centennial of Mississippi Methodism were offered by Dr. T. B. Holloman and adopted.

Brother B. F. Goza read the report on district conference records, which was adopted.

Report of the Board of Trustees of the Mississippi Conference Endowment Fund was read by J. M. Morse. It shows a total in gifts and bequest of $7,500.

B. F. Lewis read the report of the Epworth League Board, which was adopted.

E. C. Gunn read the report of the committee on temperance.

John Paul read the report of the state of the Church. It showed a net loss of 52.

The report of the Publishing Committee was read by T. W. Adams.

Dr. Meek briefly addressed the Confereuce with reference to the Advocate.

The American Bible Society report was read by J. J. Golden.

Report of the Board of Missions was read by M. M. Black.

Committee on memoirs was appointed as follows: J. G. Galloway, A. F. Watkins, C. F. Emery, B. F. Jones, H. W. Featherstun, T. B. Holloman, and G. A. Guice.

The following statistics were reported: Number local preachers, 135; Church members, 54,096; infants baptized, 1,193; adults baptized, 1,356; number Epworth leagues, 111; Sunday schools, 448; officers and teachers, 2,959; scholars, 29,602; paid for foreign missions, $9,590; for domestic missions, $8,695; Church Extension, $4,318; American Bible Society, $1,166; presiding elders, $13,730; preachers in charge, $116,113; number of societies, 560; number houses of worship, 519; value, $784,721; indebtedness, $34,624; pastoral charges, 164; parsonages, 144; value, $264,845; indebtedness, $25,094; number of districts, 8; district parsonages, 8; value, $37,000; indebtedness, $12,860.

The report of the Board of Church Extension was read by W. J. Dawson.

Report of Epworth League Board was read by W. B. Lewis.

Rev. C. F. Emery offered a resolution of thanks to the people of Meridian, which was adopted.

W. D. Hawkins was elected lay leader.

Minutes were read and approved.

Where are the preachers stationed for this year was called and the Bishop exhorted the Conference, announced Hymn No. 220, led the Conference in prayer, and read the appointments.

OUR COUNTRY CHURCHES.

To find the solution of the problems which our country churches in many places are facing will test the wisdom and will try the courage of our wisest and bravest men. That the exodus of country people to the towns and cities is increasing with every year is a fact too apparent to be denied. Only recently a faithful country pastor was heard to say that he had lost about twenty per cent of the best of his membership by death and by removal to the several neighboring towns, and that the increased financial claims laid upon his charge, in view of this loss of membership imposed upon him problems well nigh beyond his power to solve.

It is a fact that none can deny that the congregations of our towns and cities are largely made up of men who have been converted at the altar of a country church. We believe that a majority of the preachers of all the evangelical denominations today were converted and called to the work of the ministry at the altar of some country church, and that the bulk of the wide-awake and progressive laity whose influence is felt in the great Laymen's Movement were saved at the same rural altar.

The character of the material that has been turned out by the country church renders its preservation and the enlargement of the scope of its operations of vital importance to Southern Methodism. And yet we fear that the tendency is all too pronounced in many sections to ignore the country church altogether, or to minimize its importance in the economy of our Methodism. To sever connection with the country church has been very aptly compared to cutting off from the rivers the water supplied by the brooks and branches emptying into it along its course.

But it is easier to point out the difficulties in the way of strengthening the country church than to remedy these difficulties. It would seem that the remedy lies in smaller country charges manned by stronger men, and these men adequately supported by our Mission Board. For the most part the country charges cover so much territory that it is a physical impossibility for the pastor, howsoever diligent he may be, to give each church and individual that personal attention that is necessary for the development of the best type for which our Methodism stands. Personal contact is of vital importance in the development of the best type of Christian character, and yet the large number of churches that make up the average country charge render impossible the inspirational element that comes from close personal contact with the minister as the shepherd of the flock.

If our city congregations are made up for the most part by recruits from the country church, then common gratitude to God for what the country church has given to the city church should cause a more liberal outlay of money on the part of the city church for the maintenance of the life of the country church and the enlargement of the scope of its usefulness. We know full well that there are many vexatious and complicated problems facing the city church that demand the wisest and the best trained men of our ministry for their solution. The problems of the city were never more acute than they are today. The mighty tide of immigration setting toward these shores of ours usually breaks against the wharfs of our sea-coast towns and cities. This stream of immigration rarely overflows into the rural sections of our Southland, but leaves in our towns and cities an "old-world deposit" that is a positive menace to our civilization, unless leavened by the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The cosmopolitan and heterogeneous character of our city population presents to the Church and ministry of these centers of population problems that must be solved in the light of the Gospel, or else we can never transmit our governmental ideals and our social and political institutions unimpaired to our children. This is the mighty work of the city church and ministry, and well does it call forth the heroism and the faith of the mightiest men of God. But we must not forget nor neglect the sources from which our city churches have drawn their strength and inspiration. The city church and ministry are to solve the complex problem imposed by the presence of a heterogeneous population from a strange land imbued with strange and undemocratic customs and ideals; but let us remember that the city church has drawn its forces and strength largely from the oft-neglected country church.

SHOULD CONTINUE TO BE A REVIVAL CHURCH.

Rev. E. H. Moore, D.D., in the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

Methodism for more than a hundred years in America was an evangelistic force, and during that time it came to be a national power, recognized by the government and historians. Bishop Asbury and his evangelists transmitted to their successors immense responsibility in the person of young converts and partially organized societies. The building of churches, the care of Sunday schools, education, the infant book concern, missions, settling the details of a church policy, demanded much thought, time, labor and money.

If we are not bold enough to award to Asbury's successes all the credit we delight to give to him, we think it but just to say that in conserving the fruits of his labors they have done a great work, and have done it well. This they should have done, and at the same time preserved the evangelistic spirit and continued that work. In this respect there has been at least a partial failure, and in the loss of members and spirituality as a church we suffer the consequences.

As the bane of Methodism an influence has lifted up its head in high places which casts discredit on revivals, on sudden and exciting conversions, and on all the peculiarities which have from the day of Pentecost to the present time, characterized "Christianity in earnest." Instruction, culture and taste have to a large extent superseded the preaching of the gospel, which is "the power of God unto salvation." An all-embracing self without experience is unable to sympathize with one saved and leaping, shouting and praising God.

It was cowardice, the weakling of unbelief, which suggested that henceforth the Church must look to its Sunday schools for accessions, as grown-up people were too hard and fixed in sin for the power of God as the gospel to save them, and the idea should be scorned from the memory of both saint and sinner alike. We must have an evangelistic agency, if we would realize its results. One of J. B. Finley's or John J. Steadman's camp meeting sermons delivered to a Chautauqua audience might not at once be responded to by a hundred people crying, "God be merciful to me a sinner," but it would form an epoch in the exercises. Thousands of sinners have realized that the exhortations of William Swayze was the power of God unto their salvation. "Preach the word" again, as it is, "quick and powerful" as the divine discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart, making people see and feel that it is with God they are dealing, and soon they will melt into submission; such is always the case.

Methodist people have been accustomed to sudden, bright, happy conversions, and if that day is past to return no more, as dawdlish unbelief would have us imagine, then something else must be put forward as a substitute in this respect. Confirmation, baptism, service, social influence, catechisms, instruction—anything but the Spirit of God—have in Christendom played a conspicuous part; and possibly Methodism is doomed to be awarded by these tinkers a place among dead churches. But I don't believe it. At any rate the Methodist Episcopal Church is sound at heart. It would help very much if our Bishops were more among the preachers and the people. Why don't they not come in and go out among them as Asbury lived among his evangelists? Does the imposition of official duties upon God's ambassador release him from the duty in Christ's stead of beseeching men to be reconciled to God? Caesar and Napoleon on the field were half an army's strength. A corresponding power may be exerted by our Bishops during the long winter which is before us. I hope that from a thousand pastors they will receive the call, "Come over, and help us." If the Holy Spirit shall give to the Church—Bishops, preachers and people—the evangelistic state of mind, all the rest will follow, and the General Conference in May will wear the aspect of revival work. The first period of Methodist history rises before us as proof that this condition of church work is possible. After passing his eightieth year, Bishop Morris delighted in work at the mourner's bench.

THE HIDDEN SONG.

Do you know that some birds are taught to sing by having their cages darkened? Then the little things long for the light and in some way realize they must make a sound that the master of their light and darkness may hear, so they peep a faint note or two. These are always faint at first but they are always rewarded with a brief space of sun. And at length the small songster comes to know that if it would live in light it must sing, and soon it finds that the faint notes have grown strong and clear from the continued plea for deliverance, and finally its song is rare and beautiful and the master is willing it should have much light in return for a little singing.

Are not some of us birds caged in by the limitations of humanity? Is not that cage often darkened by sorrow and disappointment and seeming ill fortune? Yet how is the Master to learn that we love the brighter, better things? Who but would sing with the sun? But who sings for the sun shows clearly his love of it. And in the first note we attempt—be it ever so rude and weak—we gain an ear that is yearning to listen, and a hand that is always ready lifts the shadow, at least for a while.

Like the bird, which after many days of darkness and many days of singing itself again into the light, finds its little voice grown strong and sure, we who sing on through our trials and burdening shall some morning find our own voices sweetened and strengthened from the long practice. The wavering note becomes steady, the harsh tone gently clear. Then do we know, Oh, men and women, that the shadows of this world are sent but to train the weak voices and fit them for their places in the choir invisible.

Of those immortal dead who live again
In minds made better by their presence; live
In pulses stirred to generosity.
In deeds of daring rectitude, in scorn
For miserable aims that end with self,
In thoughts sublime that pierce the night like stars,
And with their mild persistence urge man's search
To vaster issues.

BRICKS AND MORTAR.

Janet Duncan had just come home from college at the close of a school year, and as she was unpacking her trunk, was thinking of the president's words in his address to the students.

"Accomplish things worth while," he had said. "Let your every action be a perfect brick in the building of your character." And Janet, being a practical young person, intended to apply the principle to her everyday life.

"Poor mother!" she said to herself. "She has worked hard to give me a college education and take care of the other children, too, and I'd like to show her that it has been worth while. I can't do anything great or wonderful, but I can take charge of the house and let her rest."

Half an hour later she discovered her mother getting supper, for the Duncans had been poor since Mr. Duncan's death, and could not afford hired help.

"Now, mother," cried the girl, "let me get the supper. Be a nice little momsey, please, and be a fine lady while your young daughter acts the servant."

"Why, thank you, dear," replied Mrs. Duncan, smiling upon the winsome would-be Bridget, "but I think I'd better do it. I've had so much experience that it is easy for me. If you want to help, though," she added, as she saw the bright face fall, "you may peel these potatoes."

"All right, mother," was the cheerful rejoinder. But inwardly Janet was a little disappointed as she saw the chance of "making a brick" slipping from her. She helped in various little ways, and after supper washed and wiped the dishes.

As the days went on, Janet's work proved to be the little, insignificant tasks which any one can do, but which no one wants to do; and as she laughingly observed, she was the "odd-job man." When she offered to sew, she could help most by pulling out bastings; if she was willing to help entertain her mother's visitors, she was needed to keep the children quiet; and so it went all through the summer.

One day Mrs. Duncan stopped her daughter in the midst of dishwashing, and, taking the girl's face in her hands, said: "Janet, dear, do you realize what a comfort you are to me? I couldn't get along without my 'odd-job man,' and I am so thankful that college hasn't spoiled her."

Janet flushed with pleasure; but before she could answer, her mother was gone. "Oh," she breathed. "I'm so glad! Now I don't care if I haven't made any 'bricks.' "Perhaps," musingly, "perhaps the mortar that 'chinks in between other people's bricks does just as much good in the world."—Youth's Companion.

TIMMY.

By Sally Campbell.

Grace Farley taught the supplemental lesson to a class in the primary department. Also she kept the cradle roll.

"The cradle roll doesn't interest me much," she told herself one Sunday. "Neither does Timmy Golden."

Timmy was her latest supplemental scholar. She sighed.

"Why can't I give him away? I never shall be able to get an idea into his head; don't believe he ever had one in all his life."

Now so it was at that moment Timmy Golden was struggling with an idea. It was about the women in the next house. There had been a funeral there the afternoon before. But to-day the scanty white streamer at the front door was gone, the tiny coffin had been borne away, the bereaved father was in the woods drowning his sorrow in drink, and the neighbors had withdrawn to their own concerns.

Sitting up very straight on the top step of the back porch and stretching his lean neck until its veins stood out, Timmy could see the drooping figure on the neighboring porch.

"Mrs. Powell feels bad," he commented. "She's lonesome for her baby."

Timmy Golden was not beautiful, and his grades in his first school year were disheartenlngly low, and his supplemental teacher, as we have seen, found no inspiration in him. But there was something in Timmy that was quick to see trouble and to be sorry with it. And this, in a world of many shadows, is not a quality to be despised.

When Mrs. Powell recognized that the footsteps at the side of the house were bringing only Timmy Golden she was relieved.

"Here are my Sunday school cards," said Timmy, and spread them out between them.

Though his cards were his cherished treasure, he was not very glib at repeating the verses on them. Mechanically Mrs. Powell helped him.

"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not," she prompted.

"Yes, that's it; that's this one. Some thought," explained Timmy, "that he ought not to be bothered with children. But they didn't bother him. He liked them. He—" Timmy hesitated, and his voice dropped; "I guess he's got Billy."

The woman did not answer. Timmy, watching her under his white eyelashes, was deceived by her quiet face and tangled on in honest mourning:

"I miss Billy. He was the nicest baby in the street."

With a low cry Billy's mother pushed the tumbled hair from her dry eyes and spoke fiercely:

"Billy was all I had, and God took him! Why couldn't he leave me my one comfort? He knows how hard life is for women like me. If he cares, why couldn't he leave me Billy?"

Then she covered her face with her hands and wept. Timmy's consternation was great; he would have liked to run away from the tragic questions that he could not answer. But he stayed. He looked down at the Sunday-school cards as though a suggestion ought to come from them.

And one did. When Mrs. Powell had sobbed herself quiet, Timmy stretched out to her the picture of Jesus blessing the children.

"Look," he said, "he's got a baby up in his arms to bless it. Maybe God took Billy for that."

She reached her hand for the picture. Timmy gathered up his other cards and left.

On the next Sunday Grace Farley was busy with the cradle roll when a stubby finger pointed to the name on it of "William Albert Powell."

"He's dead," said Timmy Golden.

"Dead!" exclaimed Grace. "Are you sure?"

"He's dead and buried," said Timmy.

"Why, I didn't know it," said Grace. "I must go to see his mother. When she saw how worn and sad Mrs. Powell was, her kind young heart went out to her in very real smypathy and desire to comfort. They talked long.

"Come to church, Mrs. Powell," said Grace, at the close of her visit.

"I'm going to start right off," Mrs. Powell promised. "I want to learn those things." She was looking at Timmy's card on the mantelpiece. "My baby is safe," she said. "I want the good Lord to put him back in his own mother's arms some day."

Going home Grace waved her hand and smiled at Timmy Golden in the next house.

"I am glad I went to see the poor woman. I am glad Timmy told me. Timmy has his uses, after all. So has the cradle roll."

Her visit had softened her. Grace did not know that it marked another stage in her dealings with her unprepossessing scholar.

"Since our class is the only place for him," she thought, "we must be mean not to help him. Timmy does not seem very worth while. But, of course, everybody is."—From Sunday School Times.

CHRISTMAS IS COMING.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The children are already counting the weeks until Christmas, and the parents and adults are planning their gifts. The question arises as to what the Christmas spirit is. From God's side it is gracious giving, and from the side of a needy, sin-cursed world, it is receiving without meriting the favor. The wise men who knew of God's gracious gift brought of their "gold and frankincense and myrrh" as a thank-offering. We conclude that they who have must, like God, give, in fulfilling the real Christmas purpose, and they who have not may look for a gift from those more fortunate in this world's goods. It is giving, not expecting to receive again, and receiving with a sense of gratitude and undeservingness of the gift. Here is where rich and poor may meet together "and the Lord be maker of them all." Since "it is more blessed to give than receive," the more able can be enlarged in their souls in inviting, God who gave his only begotten Son, and the more unfortunate may be thrilled with joy and love like the man born blind who leaped and praised God in the temple upon receiving his sight. It is a happy time for exchanging gifts with those who give to us, but this is not the real spirit of Christmas.

Some Sunday schools are cultivating the spirit of giving rather than of receiving among their pupils, which it seems to us is far better. The Christmas tree may be had just the same, but the giving is from the pupils to the object decided upon by the school, rather than the school giving to the pupils. Of course, any real needy ones will not be overlooked, but this program seeks objects of charity who are not expected to be able to return the gifts.

The Sunday school as a whole, individual classes, Epworth Leagues, Woman's Societies, and individuals, should begin now to pick out their objects and secure their gifts. If the person needs a church paper, magazine, a Bible, or a book, this would be a good gift; if clothes or food, or the mortgage paid off the home, or the debt canceled, nothing could be more appropriate. If simply love and sympathy, they should be supplied. The orphanage, the infirm and the shut-ins, the widow and meekly suffering poor should not be overlooked. Let pastors and church workers have a council at once and plan a real Christmas program. Get the Sunday School Board's programs and suggestions.

Editorial.

CONCERNING OBITUARIES.

No department of the Advocate occasions the editor more tronble than that which is devoted to obituaries. This ought not to be true, since our rules are plainly stated in each issue, and it would seem that those sending copy of this kind would read them and govern themselves accordingly; but many do not. We permit death notices of two hundred words to appear free of charge, which is as generous an allowance as is made by any journal in the Church, and is as much space as we can afford to give to a single deceased person, in view of the fact that we are serving a Methodist membership of 145,000, and a constituency several times that large. The fact that the individual who passes away is prominent does not alter the case at all. The Advocate must be impartial in the service which it renders. No one should reqnest that favoritism be shown him or his friends. Such discrimination would be unfair, and surely all can see the impropriety of asking it at the hands of the Conference organ. If it is desired to publish a more extended tribute than we allow to appear free, the way is open by paying for the excess at the very reasonable rate of one cent a word. The thing to do is count the words and send the money for the additional space along with the copy. This is not a difficult task, as we care little if precisely the same rule is not observed by all with reference to dates, abbreviatlons, etc. All we require is that the count be approximately correct. Do not send memoirs of undue length and request us to abridge them. That imposes a tax upon our time, which we cannot afford. In such cases, we will retnrn them to their authors for curtallment. Let it be distinctly understood that our rule of two hundred words applies to all, except to preachers, their wives, and the members of their immediate families. Hitherto we have been somewhat lax in the enforcement of the rules governing this department, but hereafter we shall apply them strictly. The interests of the Advocate and justice to all concerned imperatively demand that this shall be done.

BISHOP CANDLER'S WORK IN MISSISSIPPI.

Bishop W. A. Candler has recently given three weeks to the promotion of the work of the Church in Mississippi, and the service which he has rendered has been of a very high order. In the pulpit, in the social circle, in the chair directing the affairs of our Annual Conferences, in the cabinet dealing with interests the most sacred and delicate—in fact, everywhere he has borne himself in a manner which has won the admiration and esteem of both our preachers and people. We have no more effective chief pastor, and none whose influence is more wholesome or more widely felt for good. He has both a great mind and a tender heart; he is both profound and spiritual; and he is thoroughly loyal to the doctrines and polity of Methodism. As an administrator he is wise, patient and firm, and as a preacher it is doubtful whether he has a superior in the nation. He has made a deep impression in the State of his former beloved colleague, Charles B. Galloway, and scarcely less than the Georgians, our pastors in Mississippi love and trust him. He will always find a cordial and enthusiastic welcome when he comes among them. We fear that Bishop Candler is overworking himself and taxing his physical strength too much. He should not allow the brethren to lay too many burdens upon him. His leadership is too valuable to allow his life to be prematurely shortened. Such a man does not often come upon the stage of action, and, when he does, the Church should appreciate him as a gracious gift of God to his people and seek to safeguard him from excessive toil.

BISHOP MOUZON'S PRESIDENCY.

The administration of the affairs of Louisiana Methodism by Bishop Mouzon, both before and during the Annual Conference, has been characterized by wise insight and judicious action. He is a good parliamentarian and maintained admirable order throughout the sessions of the Conference. His morning talks were fresh, suggestlve and helpful, and his sermon on Sunday was pronounced a great utterance by competent judges. We doubt if anyone could have given us a more discriminating and satisfactory list of appointments. It is our conviction that the presidency of this capable chief pastor will tend to give a forward impulse to Methodism throughout the State.

"OUR COUNTRY CHURCHES."

The excellent article on this subject, whlch appears on Page 6 In this issue of the Advocate is from the gifted pen of the Rev. W. E. M. Brogan, of Starkville, Miss., whose name was inadvertently omitted from it. It deals wlth a matter of much importance, and well deserves a careful reading and earnest consideration. The qnestion of how to take care of our country churches is one of the real problems of the day, and, unless an adequate solution is found, is likely to become still more pressing with the passing years.

WILL SOON BE READY.

The Message of the Ecumenical Conference to the Methodist people throughout the world, which was unanimously adoptel by the Conference at Toronto, will shortly be ready for distribution in pamphlet form. Besides the Message, which can be read in about twenty or twenty-five minutes, the pamphlet will contain suggestions of hymns and readings from the Old and New Testaments to be used in the service. The date fixed by the Conference is Sunday, February 4, 1912. Pastors are requested to arrange for this Ecumenical service on that date. The churches in Great Britain and Australasia are planning to have the Message read from their pulpits on that date. It is an inspiring thought that the Message may be read on the same Sunday from 100,000 Methodist pulpits throughout the world. The Message, which was prepared by Dr. J. Scott Lidgett, of the British Wesleyan Church, passed the scrutiny of a committee of experts, and was also unanimously approved by the business committee of the Conference. It is an inspiring Message, reminding Methodists of the real source of their spiritual power, and exhorting them not to allow material prosperity and the mere things of sense and time to weaken the love and devotion of heart and soul to the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is a timely summons to renewed consecration to the service of the Master.

H. K. CARROLL.

New York City, N. Y.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. I. W. Cooper occupied the pulpit of Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, last Sunday, pleasing and edifying the people with his timely and helpful messages.

Pastors who have been assigned new fields should write the publisher informing him what their new postoffices are. In doing this one's old as well as new address, should be given.

Among the worthy laymen who favored our office with a call last week were Mr. P. K. Abel, of Winnfield, La., and Mr. J. R. McLendon, of Lisbon, La. These brethren were in New Orleans to attend the Annual Conference.

Rev. W. H. Huntley, the new presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, is a man of culture and studlous habits. He also has a warm heart and brotherly spirit, and is popular with the preachers. That he will make a wise and tactful leader, is a foregone conclusion.

Dr. F. S. Parker remained in New Orleans for a couple of days after the adjournment of the Louisiana Conference and addressed the Epworth Leaguers of the city at Parker Memorial Church Tuesday night of this week. A large audience was present to hear the distinguished speaker.

Dr. A. F. Watkins and Rev. George H. Thompson were reassigned to Main Street and Court Street Churches, Hattiesburg, respectively, for the fourth year. They are both able preachers and effective pastors, and it is not surprising that their congregations should be disposed to hold on to them.

At the late session of the White River Conference, which was held by Bishop McCoy, Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, who is widely known in North Mississippi, was sent to First Church, Batesville. Brother Ramsey had just served a successful term at Helena, Ark., where he is generally beloved and held in high esteem.

Information has reached us of the death of Mr. James P. McKeown, of Edwards, Miss., which occurred in the seventy-sixth year of his age on Sunday, December 10. The deceased leaves a widow and one son, Rev. George P. McKeown, who is our pastor at Edwards. We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved.

The Hon. Edward Mayes, who is considered the most erudite lawyer in Mississippi, delivered an interesting and impressive lecture on "Real Success" before the Young Men's Christian Association at Jackson last Sunday afternoon. His remarks were based on the history of Jacob, which he handled in a masterly manner.

Rev. John Tillery Lewis has written us for a list of our subscribers at Clarksdale, Miss., where he is pastor, and states that he will at once seek to conduct a campaign in the interest of the Conference organ. This is indeed a good beginning. He states that the return of Rev. W. W. Woollard to the Greenville district has given great satisfaction.

It gave genuine pleasure to the many friends of Rev. M. L. Burton to see him take his place in the active ranks again. He had been serving Twenty-Fifth Avenue, Gulfport, for several months, and was sent back to that congregation. He is a strong preacher and a tireless worker, who never fails to give a good account of himself in any field.

We acknowledge the reception of a folder outlining the plan of Bible study of the Alpha Wesley Class of Tupelo, Miss., for the month of December. The accomplished teacher of this fine class is Mrs. Vic T. Hoyle, whose gifts as an instructor in the divine Word are widely known. She was for several years one of the most active and successful Epworth League workers in Mississippi.

The Monroe people are to be congratulated upon having secured the services of Rev. W. W. Holmes. The whole eight years of his ministerial career have been spent in New Orleans, where he enjoys a degree of popularity scarcely second to that of any other pastor in the city. He is a gifted speaker and possesses an unusually attractive personality. We predict great things for him in his new field, which is almost inviting one.

Brother H. A. Chapman, of Shreveport, honored our sanctum with his presence Thursday of last week. He is the assistant superintendent of the primary department of the Sunday school of the First Methodist Church of that city, and stated that 528 persons were present at this excellent school on the first Sunday in December. Brother Chapman also spoke in terms of high appreciation of the ministry and work of his pastor, Dr. G. E. Cameron.

An observant visitor at the Mississippi Conference in Meridian last week was the Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Birmingham, Ala., who was reappointed Missionary evangelist for another year when the North Alabama Conference met a short time since. Brother Bowen was looking exceptionally well, and seemed to be in buoyant spirits. He preached a stirring sermon one afternoon, and was one of the speakers at the Epworth League rally, which was held on Sunday.

During the recent session of the Louisiana Conference so many of the preachers called at the Advocate office that it was impossible for us to keep a list of their names. We were glad to see every one of them. It greatly pleases us to have the brethren visit us when they are in the city. It is our desire that they shall always feel that the home of the Conference organ is Methodist headquarters in New Orleans, and that we count it a privilege to serve them when we can.

Under date of the 9th inst., Dr. E. B. Chappell, our Sunday school editor, writes:- "Will you kindly announce that the annual meeting of the chairman and field secretaries of the Conference Sunday School Boards will be held in First Church, New Orleans, January 11-14, 1912?" This is a meeting of much importance, and we trust that it will be largely attended by the Sunday school workers of Louisiana and Mississippi. Our pastors would do well to call attention to it from their pulpits.

Apparently Bishop Mouzon agrees with Bishop Hendrix in counting a strong presiding eldership a matter of much importance. In placing Rev. R. H. Wynn on the Lafayette District and Rev. C. B. Carter on the Alexandria District, he put the official harness on two of the most capable young men in the Louisiana Conference. The transfer of Rev. Paul M. Brown to the Shreveport District (perhaps the leading one in the State), was a fitting recognition of the splendid service which he has rendered for the past three years.

While holding the Alabama Conference at Pensacola, Fla., last week, Bishop Wilson was stricken with an attack of illness, and for a time his condition was considered serious. The latest news, however, is that he is better, and that the indications point to his recovery. Let prayer be made for this majestic chief pastor, whose long and able ministry has greatly blessed the Church. Fortunately, Bishop Denny was at Pensacola when Bishop Wilson was taken ill, and the work of the Conference went on without interruption.

When making the trip from New Orleans to Meridian on Friday, December 8, we were fortunate to have as our traveling companion, Dr. W. F. McMurry, of Louisville, Ky., who is as interesting in private conversation as he is on the public platform. This stalwart Missourian is the greatest of our Church Extension secretaries, and one of the most forceful personalities in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It is douhtful whether any man among us is doing more to promote the interests of Southern Methodism than is he.

While in attendance upon the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, the editor was entertained in the attractive home of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Brown, with Major R. W. Millsaps and Mr. J. C. Cavett, of Jackson, and Rev. W. F. Quillian, of the Missionary Training School at Nashville, as associate guests. Our host and hostess were most attentive and left nothing possible undone to contribute to our comfort and enjoyment. Christ is worshipped and honored in this household, and to cross its threshold is a never-to-be-forgotten privilege.

In an editorial on the "North Carolina Conference" in the Nashville Christian Advocate of Decemher 8, Dr. T. N. Ivey says; "The Conference enjoyed greatly the presence and sermon of Dr. F. N. Parker, the new head of the Biblical Department of Trinity Collge." We are not surprised at this. Dr. Parker, hoth in scholarship and preaching ability, is one of the first men in our Church. His many friends in this State are pleased to note that he did not transfer his membership from the Louisiana Conference, in which he is a great favorite.

in sending us a subscription from Mathiston, Miss., Rev. W. A. Clark, the pastor, says: "I will send you other names soon. The work is opening auspiciously here, and I am hopeful of a good year. The new church at Mathiston, which is to be a brick veneer, has the foundation laid. We are in urgent need of $2,000 to complete this projected structure. Persons who have money that they desire to give to a worthy cause, could not do hetter than to aid this commendable enterprise. Even small contrihutions would be much appreciated. Remittances may be made either to me, or Dr. S. R. Lamb at this place."

A pleasant and appreciated caller at the Advocate office Tuesday of this week was the Rev. R. J. Harp, of Shreveport, La., one of the honored veterans of the Louisiana Conference. He came to New Orleans to attend the session of the Annual Conference, which he greatly enjoyed. Brother Harp was formerly publisher of the Advocate, and was associated with Bishops Keener and Parker in its issuance when its influence was felt in every part of the connection. Our readers will be pleased to know that Brother Harp has promised us a series of historical sketches dealing with the past events of Louisiana Methodism.

In commenting upon the work of the year just passed in the Jackson District under the wise and energetic leadership of the presiding elder, Rev. J. R. Jones, the Jackson News says: "The work of the Church within the bounds of this district has prospered in a very satisfactory manner during the past twelve months. The numher of charges is 24, and the numher of churches about 80. There has been ahout $17,000 paid on pastors' salaries, $10,000 on Conference henevolences, and about $25,000 raised for the improvement of churches and parsonages. Between 750 and 850 members were received into the Church."

After two successful years at First Church, this city, Dr. S. H. Werlein has been sent to Alexandria, which many consider the choicest appointment in the Louisiana Conference. He was in high favor with his flock, and this change was brought ahout by the General Board of Missions taking over the First Church, with a view to making it the center of the missionary operations which they are projecting here. New Orleans Methodism has not had in many years a more effective preacher than Dr. Werlein, who commanded the attention of the general public perhaps as largely as any pastor working in this field. He will be missed greatly in the church circles of this city.

From Brookville, Miss., Rev. J. H. Bass writes as follows: "I see in the list of appointments for the North Mississippi Conference appearing in the Advocate this week that I was assigned to Shuqualak. This is a mistake. I am at Brookville, as read out by the Bishop." The change of Brother Bass's name from Brookville to Shuqualak was made in the Advocate at the request of Rev. J. E. Thomas, the presiding elder, who had the permission of Bishop Wilson to make this alteration in the appointments. We are informed that later Brother Thomas decided to let Brother Bass remain at Brookville and Brother Williams at Shuqualak, as was at first announced. No mistake was made in the Advocate; we obeyed the instructions of those vested with the appointing power.

Colonel James H. Jones, a gallant Confederate soldier and formerly Lieutenant Governor of Mississippi, died at his home at Woodville, Miss., on December 10. He was in the 73d year of his age, and had been in feehle health for some time. He was graduated from the University of Mississippi in the class of 1858, and was a memher of the Constitutional Convention of 1890, being a delegate from the State at large. He was a man of worthy ideals, of courtly bearing, and of solid character. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and when in good health took an active interest in its work. He lent his assistance to the establishment of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, and was an intelligent contributor to its support. The deceased leaves a large number of relatives and friends to mourn his departure. May divine grace be vouchsafed to them in this hour of bereavement!

It is doubtful whether our pulpits in New Orleans have ever been better manned than they are for the incoming year. Rev. J. W. Moore, the pastor of First Church, is a vigorous man both in the pulpit and pastorate. He has served acceptably large congregations in Louisville, San Antonio, Houston, and Beaumont. He comes to the Crescent City highly recommended. His assistant, Rev. C. C. Selecman, comes from St. Louis, where he has been connected with the work of the famous Kingdom House Mission. Rev. H. R. Singleton, who will have charge of the Parker Memorial Church, is a strong man both as a preacher and administrator. The new pastor of Felicity Street, Rev. C. A. Battle, and Rev. W. L. Doss, who has been assigned to Epworth Church, are hoth young men of college training and fine equipment. Dr. Henry has succeeded in securing a promising company of workers for the city, and if Methodism does not prosper under their leadership, we shall be much surprised.

Rev. J. H. Holder, of Boonville, Miss., writes: "I desire again to call the attention of our pastors, evangelists, theological professors, ministerial students, and Y. M. C. A. secretaries to the series of hooks on the fundamentals of our Christian faith, which are being issued by the Testimony Publishing Company, 808 LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill. These hooks deal with pertinent questions, and are being written by leading men in the theological world, such as James Orr, Bishop Nuelson, Campbell Morgan, Bishop Moule, Philip Mauro, and others. The only cost of ohtaining them is a letter to the publishers giving your name and address, and stating the character of your work, whether pastor, evangelist, or student, or whatever it may he. These volumes are the gift of two large-hearted laymen who are anxious to stem the skeptical tendencies of the age by setting forth strongly the essential teaching of the divine revelation." These books are, indeed, well worth reading and preserving, and our pastors would do well to forward their addresses to the Testimony Publishing Company, as Brother Holder suggests, that they may promptly receive them.

One of the most enjoyable events at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference was the reception given its members by the Meridian Male and Female colleges, of which Dr. J. W. Beeson and Prof. M. A. Beeson, are the presidents. The exercises consisted of an impressive outdoor drill, participated in by both the young gentlemen and young ladies; an interesting concert in the spacious chapel of the Female College, and an elegant luncheon served in the large dining room of this institution, with covers enough for all in attendance. Dr. J. W. Beeson was the toastmaster on this happy occasion. Appropriate words of greeting were spoken hy Mr. L. P. Brown, president of the Board of Trustees, and brilliant addresses were made hy two lady members of the faculty, after which several of the guests, who were called out, made hrief extemporaneous remarks. The two schools have an attendance of perhaps 800 or more, and are enjoying a large degree of prosperity under the present administration. The buildings and grounds are admirable in every respect, and are far more extensive than we had imagined. These institutions testify eloquently to the energy and capacity of the Beeson hrothers as educators.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE. NOTES.

Brother Bachman represented the Puhlishing House in the sale of "the books." On this subject he is listened to as one having authority.

Rev. John D. Ellis goes to the State Prison as chaplain, having been elected by the Board of Control the day hefore Conference opened.

Mrs. G. G. Yeager, Mrs. C. M. Martin, Mrs. Hugh K. McKee, Mrs. T. B. Clifford, Mrs. J. M. Weems were among the preachers' wives who enjoyed the Conference.

The handsome electrical sign "WELCOME" above the entrance of Central did not near so eloquently indicate the cordiality of Meridian as their unceasing acts of unstinted hospitality.

Among the prominent local preachers, we noted the presence of Brothers W. W. Hopper, J. D. Crymes, S. E. Fiurry, Louie Fayard, A. S. Oliver, Hardy, Norsworthy, W. N. Thomas, David Ulmer, J. D. Winburn, R. B. Breland.

Brother C. O. Chalmers was on hand from the first day representing the business end of the Advocate.

The Missionary Anniversary on Thursday night was addressed by Rev. W. W. Pinson, D.D., and his address produced a profound impression on the great audience that heard him.

Dr. D. C. Hull gave a glowing account of matters at Millsaps College. They are having a splendid session of that great school.

Meridian Methodism did itself proud in entertaining the Conference—there were homes a plenty and yet some more. The resident pastors had things well in hand and managed everything with perfect ease.

The meeting on Friday night was shared by the Laymen's Missionary Movement and the Church Extension Board and were addressed by Drs. Pinson and McMurry. They were both at their best and the great audience greatly enjoyed them.

Rev. Dan E. Kelly, the Conference evangelist, had rounded out a fine year. He reported 24 meetings, 514 sermons, 380 family altars, 583 new members, and 1,600 conversions.

Among the laymen present the second day, we were glad to note Mr. R. W. Millsaps, of Jackson; Mr. John P. Bennett, of Yazoo City; Mr. J. C. Cavett, of Jackson, and Mr. John S. Decell, of Bowerton.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt, who supplied Brookhaven from June to the end of the year, and who was recently readmitted and stationed at Durant, made a fine report from his Brookhaven church. Brother Wyatt has many friends in this Conference, and while they have consented to let him go, they have kept Sister Wyatt for the rest of the session at Whitworth College, where she holds a responsible place in the faculty.

Among the welcome Conference visitors were Rev. W. Fred. Long and wife, of Jackson. Brother Long is the well known Big Brother Fred of Sunday school fame.

Rev. P. H. Howse, of Hattiesburg, and Rev. Dr. Campbell are prominent local preachers at Conference.

Brother George Thompson, of Court Street, Hattiesburg, in reporting a small deficit from his charge, said there was only one stalk of cotton in his charge, but it had eleven boll weevils on it.

Among the prominent young men who came to us this year, none is better equipped than Rev. W. B. Hogg, who has served Madison Station during the latter part of the year. Brother Hogg has spent the last three years in Vanderbilt.

Among the preachers' wives that honored the Mississippi Conference with their presence were Mesdames W. W. Graves, Chisholm, J. T. McVey, L. E. Alford, E. L. Alford, and Oliver.

The Conference was pained to know of the illness of Mrs. D. C. Hull, wife of the president of Millsaps College, in Meridian, during the session. We hope to hear of her speedy recovery. Her illness prevented the ordination of Dr. Hull.

Rev. C. N. Guice was warmly welcomed by the people at Fifth Street, Meridian, in attendance at the Conference. They already know and love him. Happy appointment!

Rev. John A. Moore had a kind Providence with him when he was sent to Magnolia. Newton's loss is Magnolia's gain. He leaves good people, but goes to just as good.

Nothing of all the Conference was more enjoyed than the semi-centennial sermon of Rev. E. H. Mounger, D.D., on Wednesday night. The congregation was immense and thoroughly enjoyed the service. The first half of the sermon was devoted to a sketch of some of the more prominent preachers of other days, among whom he especially mentioned Wheat, Linfield, Napier, Watkins, Carrington, the Millsaps, and others. His description of the Jasper Grays going out from Paulding in 1861 to follow the fortunes of the Confederate army was as beautiful as his description of their return as a broken remnant was pathetic. Dr. Mounger seemed well and in no wise answered to the "aged minister" spoken of in the papers, for all his fifty years of active itinerant labors. He has served Rolling Fork for the past two years.

H. B. WATKINS.

A GOOD RECOMMENDATION.

The Nashville Christian Advocate speaks this high praise of "MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE":

"'Modes of the Heavenly Life,' by Rev. Walter G. Harbin, one of our Southern Methodist preachers, is a timely and helpful book, and we feel sure it will be used by the Holy Ghost. This book honors the Holy Ghost. It consists of five sermons, all bearing on his personality and offices. The sermons are not only exceedingly spiritual and evangelical, but have a literary dress which bespeaks intellectual culture on the part of the preacher. He is a 'winner of souls.' His purpose and power are manifested on every page of the book."

Until Jan. 1, 1912, you can secure this book and A MAN WANTED—one of the greatest of men's sermons—for 50 cents.

Order now. Checks positively will not be accepted.

On Saturday afternoon, November 18, 1911, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Swales, of Edinburg, Miss., and took their darling baby, little ROSA ELLEN, aged thirteen months and nineteen days. Rosa Ellen was an affectionate babe, loved by all who knew her. Heaven is made brighter since she has gone to live there. All that loving hands could do, was done; but God in his infinite wisdom saw fit to take her. We must bow our heads in humble submission, and say, "Thy will be done." We shall see her again. This parting is not for eternity. Rosa Ellen is "safe in the arms of Jesus; safe on his gentle breast." This life is short. Soon will the summons come for us to go. May we all meet her around the "great white throne where parting is no more." Rosa Ellen is waiting for us in heaven.

HER AUNT.

Brother LORENZO DAVID CARR was born in Saline county, Ill., June 4, 1838, and died Nov. 10, 1911. Brother Carr moved from Illinois to Missouri just before the civil war, and when the war came on, though he was reared in the North, he joined the Southern army and made a true soldier in the Southern ranks till the war was ended He belonged to the Second Missouri Regiment and served under Capt. Frank Smith. At the close of the war, having served as a soldier in Mississippi, he decided to make this State his home. Brother Carr settled near McCondy twenty-five years ago and remained there till the Master called him home. He was happily married to the widow Galloway, whose first husband was a cousin to our much beloved Bishop, on the 17th day of November, 1865; and of this union were born seven children—four boys and three girls. Six of these preceeded him to the better world. Brother Carr joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, forty years ago, and remained in full fellowship till death. He was an invalid for seven years, but bore his suffering with great patience, never complaining of his lot; and, though he was bowed down by disease, his companionship was sweet. He has gone from his earthly home to join loved ones beyond the river. God bless the dear wife and surviving son. Be faithful in trust and service, and you will see him again.

HIS PASTOR.

Mrs. MARY COTTINGHAM McINTOSH was born Feb. 12, 1845; was married to John H. McIntosh, June 23, 1874, and died near Crystal Springs, Miss., April 26, 1911. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life; was soundly converted at the age of fourteen, and ever afterwards lived a true Christian life. She was the mother of five children, four of them are yet living. She was the stepmother of eight children. She was sick seven months, and confined to her bed three weeks. Though suffering much, she never complained. Often she would say, "If it is God's will to take me, I am ready to go." I was her pastor in 1903-4. I often visited her home. It was a religious treat to be with such a sweet-spirited Christian. Her children loved her, and of course, she loved her children and desired to see them saved. She loved the Church and seldom failed to fill her place in the church on preaching occasions. It was my privilege to visit her a few weeks before she died. She was calm, patient, resigned. Before passing away she mentioned three songs she wanted sung at her funeral, viz: "Oh, think of the home over there:" "Oh, 'tis sweet to trust in Jesus," and, "Oh, bear me away on your snowy white wings to my immortal home." She requested that Bros. Jas. G. Galloway, J. C. Ellis and myself officiate at her funeral. Miss Tillie, her daughter, in writing to me, says, among other things: "As I sit here I see her familiar place vacant. There by the fireside is her chair, unoccupied. How oft have I seen her kneel there in prayer, and also her Bible is lying there closed." Yes, she loved her Bible; she loved her place of prayer, and the "sweet hour of prayer." She is now safe in the "home of the soul." Let us meet her there.

H. P. LEWIS.

INVEST IN SOULS.

"A man shall be more precious than gold." Hear that, O long-suffering and patient missionary. Your stock will be at par. The poor souls which you dig out from dark caverns of heathenism will be worth millions of such "corruptible things as silver and gold." Did not the mother of the Gracchi present her own children to those who inquired concerning her treasures, saying, "These are my jewels." How much more will the missionary exult in his spiritual children in that day when the Lord shall "make up his jewels," presenting them before the Redeemer and before the angels saying, "These are my riches!"

"Where can I invest most safely and profitably?" is the question constantly asked on 'change. Invest in souls; seriously, deliberately, solemnly we urge you to invest in souls. There is no insurance on gold and silver that will protect them against the fires of the last day. But saved and glorified souls—these are "the gold tried in fire," out of which your crown of rejoicing shall be wrought. Get money, you may or may not, O Christian; but if you care aught for the rewards of heaven, fail not of getting souls. Get them at your own door; get them from the ends of the earth; but fail not to get them!—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

FREE CARS FOR THE ORPHANAGE.

There will be a free car run over the N. O. G. N. R. R. from the Louisiana State line to Jackson, Thursday, December 21, 1911. It will be on the local and stop at all stations and take everything donated to both the Baptist or Methodist orphanages.

The free car from Natchez to Jackson will run December 14, 1911; it will stop at all stations. Tell every one about these cars. Send word out into the country and let people send in all kinds of produce, especially corn, hay, molasses, and all kinds of dry goods, shoes, etc. Fill the cars full. You can do it if you will work up an interest and let the people know when the cars will pass each station.

The people won't know about the cars unless some one tells them. So, appoint some one (a good talker), in each neighborhood to tell the people when the cars will run, and how to get the stuff to the depot, and how to mark each piece, so it will get to its proper destination. If you will follow these instructions at every station one car will not hold all the stuff you will get. Try it, and try it hard. Yours for this work,

W. M. WILLIAMS,
Manager Methodist Orphans' Home.

REJECTED BLESSINGS.

No wonder so many of us are so poor in spiritual things. To our doors evermore come the heavenly messengers, their hands laden with rich blessings, which they wish to give to us. But we are so intent on our earthly ambitions that we do not see them, nor open our doors to them; and waiting long in vain, they at last turn sadly away, leaving us unblessed in our poverty. If we would but train ourselves to take whatever gift God sends to us, we should soon become rich. God's blessings are ever at our doors. He is the giving God. The trouble with us is, that we do not always recognize the blessings when they are offered us. Some of the richest of them come in forms of pain, struggle and sorrow. Let us learn to accept God's gifts, whether they shine in joy or are veiled in shadows.—J. R. Miller, D.D.

The Quickest Cough Cure—Cheap, But Unequaled

A Whole Pint of It for 50c. Saves You $2. Does the Work Quickly or Money Refunded.

For quick and positive results, the pint of cough syrup that you make with a 50-cent bottle of Pinex, cannot be equalled. It takes hold instantly and will usually stop the most obstinate deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. Even croup and whooping cough yield to it quickly.

The user of Pinex mixes it with home-made sugar syrup. This gives you a full pint—a family supply—of better cough remedy than you could buy ready mixed for $2.50. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—full directions in package.

Pinex soothes and heals the inflamed membranes with remarkable rapidity. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative, and tastes good—children like it. Excellent for hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis, and other throat troubles, and has a wonderful record in cases of incipient lung trouble.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a pint bottle, and it is ready for use. Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

THE COUNTRY CHOIR.

"Your choir is a very good one for a place like this," remarked the city visitor, as she walked down the aisle in front of me. I listened for the answer, as Mrs. Brown is wont to express herself in frank, unembellished English.

"They do their best," she replied, "but let me tell you, the country choir is the most unappreciated, the most unpaid and the most self-sacrificing of all the adjuncts of the Church. They sing year after year, and who yet was ever known to speak a good word fof them. If they sing ever so well, people listen complacently, but let them make a false note or drop from the key and how they are criticised."

The city visitor smiled at her hostess' vehement words, but I pondered them in my heart, and decided that I had always unconsciously believed them. I knew the singers went week after week to rehearsals without regard to the weather of the condition of the roads, going from two to six miles. They leave their work to sing at funerals, for unfeeling they would be did they not cheerfully respond at such a time. They must forego the Sunday morning nap, for a tardy choir wonid be a disgrace to any church. All with never a thought of remuneration.

They certainly did sing well, but I could not recall a word of praise from any one. It was not difficult to remember, however, when a slight mistake had occurred, how a smile of morth had swept from face to face like ripples on a pond of water.

Then I resolved upon a new course of action as the sweet-faced organist met me going to her class.

"Your voluntary was fine!" I remarked, heartily. She stopped and gave me a surprised, tentative look, which changed presently to a joyous smile.

"Why! how nice of you to say that!" she said. "I'm sure I thank you. But it is so unusual. I've played the organ for twelve years—ever since I came to town, and in all that time I remember only two people who have told me they enjoyed it."

Then I did feel ashamed and reproved.

"But they do," I assured her, "only they accept it as they do the glorious sunshine, the birds and the flowers."

"We do it for the Master," she said, "but it is pleasant to know that any one likes it."

I hurried on before she took away the last atom of my self-respect. But I determined to experiment farther, and went out of my way to meet the soprano.

"I did enjoy your anthem," I said, "and I want you to know it."

She, too, stopped and looked at me in an uncertain, incredulous way.

"Do you mean it?" she asked. "We did not think it as good as usual, and we've sung it before."

"I liked it," I assured her, "and I was not the only one. The city visitor remarked how well you sang."

Then she flushed with pleasure.

"Why, I don't know as we can bear so much praise," she laughed. "If it had come gradually, but so much at once may turn our heads. Really, though, you have no idea how pleasant it is to hear some one say she enjoys our singing. I must go right back and tell the others. I believe we were feeling a little disheartened, and, you know, you never do your best when you feel that way. That's why I did not stay to sing for Sunday school."

A little praise lubricates the machinery in the wearisome grind of life, and how easy it is, if we only think, to speak it!

Give your choir a word of appreciation, you thoughtless church goers, and see if you ever cut off a larger coupon for the principal invested.—Southern Churchman.

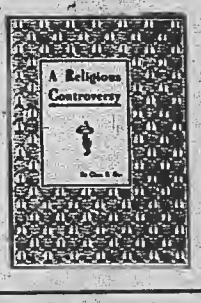
Objections to "The Truth" Do you know what they are, and can you give a convincing Scriptural answer to those who deny the vital principles of the gospel?
A RELIGIOUS CONTROVERSY
By CHAS. E. ORR



Enables the Christian reader to locate the very Scriptures best calculated to show the true nature of Bible salvation to the "objector" and to those unacquainted with the truth.
PRACTICAL AND TRUE TO LIFE
Through hearing the preaching of the pure gospel and the reading of literaure, Mrs. Wiseman receives light that condemns her former life and awakens an intense desire to know God. James Wiseman, having lived forty years with only a Christian profession, is strongly "set" in his religious ways.
The humble life of his wife—her prayers, earnest entreaties and convincing explanation of regeneration, baptism, sanctification and the one church—finally bring about a very desirable change in the Wiseman home.
ONLY TEN CENTS A COPY—The character of this 92-page booklet and the low price at which it is sold make it especially desirable for wide distribution.

THE DAY IS COMING
when you will want a monument, when some loved one will be called to that great beyond—then remember this.
GEORGIA MARBLE
is the only fitting tribute, it is the only material that will perpetuate in reality the memory of that loved one. Fitting because it is beautiful, and because it will stand through eternity as unbroken and unblemished as the day it was erected. It is the most superior American marble and equal to any marble in the world in beauty and durability. It will not smut or decompose—it is proof against time and the severest, climatic conditions.

LOUISIANA MAN TESTIFIES.

Writing under date of May 3, 1911, Mr. R. H. Marcotte, of Bordelonville, La., writes:

W. H. Bull Medicine Co., Dear Sirs:—I took sick the first Monday after Christmas last, and was down in bed for two weeks. I called in my family doctor; he gave me relief for a few days only. My trouble was pronounced liver trouble, with an attack of Dropsy, caused by the liver. After I was up a few days from his treatment, which I only found temporary, I began to feel bad again, followed by an awful aching in the upper part of my stomach, which I could hardly stand. As I had read one of your Almanacs, I decided Herbs & Iron was what I needed, and I walked to a druggist near by, the Fritz, Hess & Son, and bought one 50 cent bottle of Herbs and Iron, and the second dose gave me relief. I used two bottles and am now in good health. Herbs and Iron did the work.

You must excuse such a lengthy statement, as I don't care to tire you, but it seems that I cannot say too much in regard to such a fine medicine as Herbs and Iron for a stomach that is badly out of order—no way of of resting and appetite gone, and in fact feel like you were torn to pieces and life not worth living. I will at all times recommend Herbs and Iron. With best wishes to your success, I remain, Yours truly."

W. H. Bull's Herbs and Iron is the quickest and surest remedy for stomach and liver troubles, and is a blood purifier of high merit. Get a bottle at your druggist's. Take two-thirds of it and if you are not fully satisfied that it is improving your health, return the remainder and the druggist will refund your money.

THE BEST KIND OF FAMILY READING.

For your home, where the right influence counts for so much, choose the reading that quickens the pulse, that tells of deeds of daring, that takes the reader into strange parts of the world, and yet, true manliness, gentleness, loyality to principle, as the things of chief importance in life. It benefits while it entertains.

You will find such reading week after week in the pages of The Youth's Companion, contributed by the most popular story-writers, and by men and women whose names are famous in every field of enterprise and scholarship.

Send us your address on a postal card, and we will mail you the beautiful Prospectus of The Companion for 1812, together with sample copies of the paper.

We think you will agree, when you have read them, that there is no other paper that gives quite so much of such a high quality as The Companion, and it costs only $1.75 now for the 52 weekly issues. On January 1, 1812, the subscription price will be advanced to $2.00.

The new subscriber receives a gift of The Companion's Calendar for 1912, in ten colors and gold, and all the remaining issues of 1911 free from the time the subscription is received.

HORSE PUNISHES THIEF.

The Pittsurgh Dispatch tells a good story of a horse, which not only returned to his owner after having been stolen, but brought with him a substantial compensation for the annoyance which the owner has suffered it says:

"The horse has vindicated himself. One of that genus, the pet of a Chicago owner, was stolen the other day, and after the lapse of a few days turned up at his proper home drawing a spick-and-span wagon and proudly bearing a brand new harness. Inquiries by the owner of the horse for the proper owner of the wagon and harness have evoked no response, which on reflection is not so inexplicable. This indicates the superiority of the horse to the modern inventions that assume to take his place. When did a stolen automobile ever come home with a new motor or set of tires? What stolen aeroplane has flown back to its legitimate hangar with a new set of planes?"—New York Weekly Witness.

FOR THE HOME AND FARM.

Nashville, Tenn., November 17, 1891: "I desire to express my high appreciation of your Gray's Ointment as a most valuable veterinary medicine. Being the owner and controller of one of the largest stables in the country, I have given your ointment a faithful trial in fresh cuts, sores of all kinds, and cracked heels. I do not think that it has an equal, and I most earnestly recommend its use to all horse men. They will find it an indispensable remedy. Yours respectively, J. M. Brown.

THE SUNDAY NEWSPAPER.

The Sunday newspaper is one of the greatest defilements of Sunday. It drives out the great old books which have a right to claim Sunday as their own. It drenches the mind with secularities and trivialities. It pours the flood of the world's crimes and sports and conflicts and tragedies into the mind, which is deluged by them, and does nothing to mend them. The mind should be kept above this tumult, to get its poise once more, and to be purified by God. Its contact with life should be directly with human need, not with the newspapers' story of it.—Robert E. Speer.

AT MOTHER'S KNEE.

Said President John Quincy Adams on a public occasion: "There are two prayers that I love to say—the first is the Lord's Prayer, and because the Lord taught it; and the other is what seems to be a child's prayer, 'Now I lay me down to sleep'; and I love to say that because it suits me. I have been repeating it every night for many years past, and I say it yet, and I expect to say it my last night on earth if I am conscious."

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray, thee, Lord my soul to take.
All this I ask for Jesus' sake."

How familiar these words! We all learned them in childhood. They were taught us at mother's knee. With closed eyes, upturned face, and folded hands, we repeated them. They formed our first prayer. Oh, the simplicity of that child-like trust! We prayed, we slept. God's good angels stood guard throughout the night watches. We believed our prayers were answered. Long years ago that dear mother passed away. We, grown to manhood and womanhood, followed the precious dust to its last resting place, but the spirit returned to God who gave it. But all through the years there has remained the memory of the prayer mother taught: "Now I lay me down to sleep."

A year ago a well-known Methodist pastor, of Vermont, was taken to the hospital at Troy, N. Y., for a critical surgical operation. Before the anaesthetic was administered, the Christian surgeon said to him: "Dr. W——, have you anything to say before we begin?" Taken by surprise, the clergyman, knowing not what to answer, folded his hands, closed his eyes and repeated the prayer learned at his mother's knee: "Now I lay me down to sleep."

There followed the anxious hours of "sleep," but, as in childhood days, God, the Keeper, was faithful, and with the morning's dawn there was light and hope. May we, with John Quincy Adams, not be ashamed of the "mother's prayer," but use it even our last night on the earth.—R. H. Washburne, in The Christian Intelligencer.

Immediate Effect of Great Kidney Remedy is Soon Realized.

According to my experience I do not consider there is anything to equal Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root for kidney affection. Twice it relieved me when I was completely helpless.

The last time I was traveling in Texas when my kidneys became affected, and for ten days I suffered excruciating pain, accompanied with severe chills. Several years previous, having been relieved of a similar attack, I naturally sought relief as before, from Swamp-Root.

After using four of the large size bottles, I was completely restored and went on my way rejoicing and praising Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. This was three years ago, and I have had no indication of the return of the affliction. Yours very truly,

TOPIC FOR DECEMBER 17, 1911.

"A WELL-SPENT LIFE, AND ITS CLOSE."

Rom. xiv, 7, 8; II Tim. iv, 6-8; Num. xxiii, 10.

All through the year we have been studying the Christian's career—his toils, his struggles, his achievements. Coming to the close of the year the theme of the evening is a very fitting one, for if we begin right and live right, we shall come to the end all right, and "finish our course with joy," as did the Apostle Paul.

But if we expect it to "be light at evening-time," we must not live for self—which is to live in vain—but we must live for others, and for Christ.

Living and Dying Unto the Lord.

Sometimes we act as though we thought we could divide our lives up into different sections. For instance, we speak of our "religious" life and our "secular" life. To the mind of Paul there was no difference—all days were holy and all callings sacred. He worked as in the presence of the Lord. In writing to Timothy, Paul, speaking of his adversaries, says: "Notwithstanding, the Lord stood with me, and strengthened me." If every Epworthian could realize that the Lord is with him everywhere and all the time, he would be more careful to do his work as under his eye. Neither did Paul look upon death as "paying the debt of nature," but, as some one says, "rather like bringing a note to a bank to obtain solid gold for it." In this case we bring the body, which in its present state is of little worth, and which you cannot hope to retain long; we lay it down, and receive for it from the eternal treasures—liberty, victory, knowledge, eternal blessedness.

The Christian's Good-by to the World.

In our second reference we have an example of a righteous man coming to the close of an eventful life in triumph. For all these years Paul had been a consistent follower of Chirst. The end is now in sight. He is incarcerated in the inner dungeon of the Mamertine prison, shut away from the light and shivering with cold, expecting the executioner every moment.. Surely if any one ever had an excuse for being melancholy, Paul had; but hear him speak: "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness."

The Death of the Righteous Desirable.

No one in good health cares to think of death—it is not a pleasant subject to dwell upon; and yet we know that all our paths, wind as they may, leads but to the grave. Carlyle, in his "History of the French Revolution," tells of a Duke of Orleans who did not believe in death; so when his secretary stumbled on the words, "The late king of Spain," he angrily demanded what he meant by it. The attendant replied: "My lord, it is the title that some of the kings of Spain have taken." But all who do give the subject a serious thought have, with Balaam, an earnest desire to "die the death of the righteous;" but too many, like Balaam, fall to remember that no one ought to expect, or hope, to die the death of the righteous who will not lead the life of the righteous.

Courage in View of Death.

In the last words of the last sermon preached by Henry Ward Beecher we have this clear message on the subject: "We are all marching thither. We are going home. Men shiver at the idea that they are going to die; but this world is only a nest. We are scarcely hatched out of it here. We do not know ourselves. The immortal in us is crying for the immortal. As in the night the child, waking with some vague and nameless terror, cries out to express its fears and dreads, and its cry is interpreted in the mother's heart, who runs to the child and lays her hand upon it and quiets it to sleep again, so do you not suppose that God hears our disturbances and trials and tribulations in life Do you not suppose that he who is goodness itself cares for you? Do you suppose that he whose royal name is Love has less sympathy for you than a mother has for her babe? Let the world rock! If the foot of God is on the cradle, fear not. Look up, take courage, hope, and hope to the end."

The Theme Illustrated.

A Roman Catholic seeing a Protestant die in peace and triumph, is reported to have said: "If this be heresy, it makes a soft pillow to die on."

The French nurse who was present at the death-bed of Voltaire, being urged to attend an Englishman whose case was critical, said: "Is he a Christian?" "Yes," was the reply, "he is a Christian of the highest and best sense of the term—a man who lives in the fear of God; but why do you ask?" "Sir," she answered, "I was the nurse that attended Voltaire in his last illness, and for all the wealth of Europe I would never see another infidel die.'

Frances Ridley Havergal got her feet wet standing on the ground preaching temperance and the gospel to a group of boys and men, went home with a chill, and congestion set in, and they told her she was very dangerously ill. "I thought so," she said, "but it is really too good to be true that I am going. Doctor, do you really think that I am going?" "Yes." "To-day?" "Probably." She said, "Beautiful, splendid, to be so near the gate of heaven!" Then after a spasm of pain she nestled down in the pillows, and said: "There, now, it is all over—blessed rest!" Then she tried to sing, and she struck one glad, high note of praise to Christ, but could sing only one word, "He," and then all was still. She finished it in heaven.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

"CHIMES."

Thousands of people have been mystified and charmed by A. W. Roper, the piano wizard, imitating chimes of bells on an ordinary piano. Many have insisted that he has bells attached to his instrument. He has given away the secret in a piece of music entitled "Chimes," so that any player can produce the same results. The arrangement includes "Joy to the World," and other music suitable for Christmas services or opening and closing exercises for Sunday schools, etc. Price is 25 cents. F. M. Barton, Publisher, 708 Caxton Bldg., Cleveland, O.

THE CHRISTMAS DINNER.

In spite of the fact that the word dyspepsia means literally bad cook, it will not be fair for many to lay the blame on the cook if they begin the Christmas Dinner with little appetite and end it with distress or nausea. It may not be fair for any to do that—let us hope so for the sake of the cook! The disease dyspepsia indicates a bad stomach, that is a weak stomach, rather than a bad cook, and for a weak stomach there is nothing else equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. It gives the stomach vigor and tone, cures dyspepsia, creates appetite, and makes eating the pleasure it should be.

How to Get Rid of Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way, and it Costs Nothing to Try.

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive, home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty six years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of these. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased mucous membranes and arrests the foul discharge, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not poison the system and ruin the stomach as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you by return mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal headaches, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet. Write him immediately.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Rev. H. W. Jamison, the pastor of the Queensboro Church, Shreveport, some months ago organized a Sunday school at Flournoy, and now has from 25 to 35 in attendance. Mr. Gordon Dennis, the superintendent, joined the Church the same day he accepted the superintendency of the school.

* * *

The Central Christian Church of Shreveport had a Sunday school rally December 3, and had 535 present besides officers and teachers. They have just entered their new church building. Rev. Claud L. Jones, the pastor, is one of Louisiana's most zealous temperance advocates, and an all-around first-class Christian gentleman.

* * *

Our Sunday school at Covington, has made a forward move in electing Mrs. L. W. Alford superintendent of the Elementary Department, and in beginning a Home Department, with Mrs. J. B. Wortham superintendent. Also, a Young People's Bible Class is planned with Mrs. R. A. Stafford as teacher. Immediately after her election, Mrs. Stafford began to equip herself and to hunt for pupils, and before twenty-four hours had passed, she had a list of fourteen, whom she expected to become members.

* * *

The Sunday school organized at Whitecastle, in the early part of the year is doing good work, with Mr. T. J. Clay as superintendent. There is an average attendance of from 30 to 35, and that with no sign of a pastor to help. A Christmas program is being planned, and the Presbyterians will have Rev. W. H. Benton, who resigns from our Church, here next year. Mr. Tyson, principal of the Public School, teaches the Bible class, and Miss Amanda Pierce, another teacher, is organist.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

"The White Gifts for the King" is a beautiful and uplifting Christmas service and one easy to arrange.

* * *

One Men's Class in this North Mississippi Conference will celebrate Christmas by all the members joining the Pocket Testament League. This is a splendid idea and will be very helpful in getting busy men to read the lesson and give it special study.

* * *

The old formula for securing home work has not been improved upon: Assign it; expect it; ask for it; use it; commend it. Of these five points, perhaps the second is the most important, for two-thirds of the lack of co-operation on the part of the pupils is simply a reflection of the teacher's indifference.

* * *

Several Adult Bible classes have lately used a responsive Bible reading for the opening service and the golden text for the close. Repeating three times—loud, a little softer and very, very soft. There is nothing like creating an atmosphere of quiet worshipfulness, and letting the class take it home with them.

* * *

Here is the International Missionary Standard for the Sunday school, and it is one well worthy of emulation by all schools: (1) A missionary committee; (2) adequate missionary instructions; (3) definite missionary prayer; (4) systematic missionary giving; (5) practical missionary activities; (6) securing missionary recruits.

* * *

Quite a number of Sunday schools and classes have sent exhibits to Macon, Mississippi, in pursuance of a request of the Sunday School Board. One boy's class has made a replica of the house-boat they used on a memorable summer camping trip. It is all done by hand and is not only unique and interesting, but prophetic of the vast latent possibilities in boys and their teachers.

* * *

Some schools have changed the old name Sunday school secretary to the superintendent of records. One class and a wise teacher assumed this responsibility in a great school; a map of the town was hung up having blue penciled points where all scholars lived; the boys acted as messengers to look up absentees, and each teacher had a list given her at the close of school of her own absent members and a request to see them at once. That school has been doubled in the last few months by just careful and conscientous work by the secretary.

* * *

A large and enthusiastic W. A. B. Class of men is giving short, pointed talks during the closing service, using technical terms in business with religious interpretations by those who know the subjects. Here are some of them: Time exposure, the photographer; counting the cost, auditor; dividends, banker; punctures, auto repairer; live and dead wires, electrical engineers; misfits, tailor. This is a fine way to develop workers and new ideas, and to create a vivid real work-a-day interest in religion. Try it or work out a similarly clever idea of your own.

The Rayo Lamp

It Never Flickers

The long winter evenings give a woman a splendid chance for sewing or embroidery; but her eyes suffer from the strain unless she has a good light.

The Rayo is the best lamp made.

It gives a strong, diffused light that is remarkably easy to the eyes. There is no glare to it; no flicker. It lights up a whole room. The Rayo is an economical lamp, too.

You get the most possible light-value for the oil burned; and the Rayo itself is a low-priced lamp. Yet it is a handsome lamp—an ornament to any room in the house.

The Rayo Lamp is easily lighted without removing shade or chimney; easy to clean and rewick. Made of solid brass, nickel-plated; also in numerous other styles and finishes.

Ask your dealer to show you his line of Rayo lamps; or write for descriptive circular to any agency of the

ALICE CARY MACKINNEY

SALVATION AS TAUGHT IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

I have heard a great many foolish opinions about the Holy Ghost, and as to how people were saved before Christ's day. The fact that the gift of the Holy Ghost is not salvation is clearly and forcibly taught in the New Testament, but the Jews and many others have not seen this so clearly in the Old Testament. This however, ought not to be so difficult when we consider what salvation is. Salvation is pardon of sin, divine peace and joy in the Holy Ghost, but back of all these there is a fact of divine life in the soul which shows all these unspeakable blessings to be the fruit of salvation rather than salvation itself. When we see that salvation is divine life, which our Savior calls "eternal life," dependent on faith, it is easy to see that it must be by the power of the Holy Ghost and cannot be in any other way. Salvation before Christ was divine or eternal life just as it is now, and must have been the gift of the Holy Spirit just as it is now.

This is not so hard to see in the light of the New Testament. The disciples were commanded to tarry in Jerusalem until they were endued with power from on high. This was the power to preach the Word. (Compare Acts ii. 4 with iv. 31-33). "They spoke the Word with boldness and witnessed with great power." This was the Pentecostal power—preaching power. A knowledge of this fact is of great importance to modern preachers and theologians. What of this power in the Old Testament? Note how frequently the expression, "The Word of the Lord came unto me," occurs, and then remember that Peter says, "Holy men of old spoke as they moved by the Holy Ghost."

We find too that Christ preached in the power of the Spirit, to whom he went and preached to the spirits in the prison of sin and darkness in the days of Noah (1 Pet. iii. 19-20). Noah was a preacher of righteousness and he was moved by the Holy Ghost, and the Spirit was striving with men, those same sinners (Gen. vi. 3.)

To express a little, if any one is in doubt about the expression "spirits in prison" he can get light on the subject by reading Isa. xlii. 7; cxl. 1, and Psalm lxix. 7. When David prayed, "Bring my soul out of prison" it was the same as saying, "Bring my spirit out of prison." David's soul prison was the darkness and bondage of sin.

But to return. It was by the preaching power of the Spirit that David called sinners to repentance. "Take not thy Holy Spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation and uphold me with thy free Spirit. Then will I teach transgressors thy ways and sinners shall be converted unto thee" (Psa. li. 11-13). This call was made by Isaiah: "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." (Isaiah lv. 7). "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow (Isa. i. 18). Joel told the sinner how to obtain salvation. "Turn ye even to me with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning: and rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto the Lord your God: for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repenteth him of the evil. Who knoweth if he will return and repent, and leave a blessing behind him?" (Joel ii. 12-14). Paul speaks the same truth when he says, "Ye are saved by grace through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God" (Eph. ii. 8).

What is faith? It is not a work to be taken in all, simply the natural result of the exercise of those graces that are like a tender vine to the Holy Spirit. The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, [illegible], meekness, temperance. These graces are like [illegible] the Spirit we find [illegible] faith. Faith is a product of the Spirit as the New Testament. There never was a talent of redeemable value that could be saved in any other way than by the power of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost through repentance and faith.

A MERRIE CHRISTMAS.

"A merrie Christmas" to you!
For we serve the Lord with mirth,
And we carol forth glad tidings
Of our holy Savior's birth.
So we keep the olden greeting
With its meaning deep and true,
And wish "a merrie Christmas"
And "a happy New Year" to you!

Oh, yes! a merrie Christmas,
With blithest song and smile,
Bright with the thought of him who dwelt
On earth a little while,
That we might dwell forever
Where never falls a tear;
So "a merrie Christmas" to you,
And a happy, happy year!

—Frances Ridley Havergal.

The greater includes the less. Along with Christ, given us by the Father, comes all else that is needful. He brings with him everything that is required to transform and perfect us, and fit us for worthy service here and the heavenly home in the hereafter. In him we are complete. "He that spared not his own son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him freely give us all things?" (Romans 8:32.) Our inheritance in Jesus, both in time and eternity, is rich and glorious beyond human conception.

The announcement of the Savior's birth was not made to the mighty or the noble, but to humble shepherds at the post of duty. It has been said, "Heaven is ever near the dutiful; they who watch faithfully what has been given to their charge, not seeking some great thing to do, not hurried and restless in their work, but caring for the things, many or few, over which God has placed them, are close to the gate of the celestial kingdom through which there peals the music, 'Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.'"

* * *

The great majority of people celebrate Christmas simply because it is the custom in the countries in which they live. They make of it little else than an occasion of selfish indulgence and social dissipation. The true purpose for which the Master came into the world they utterly fail to apprehend, and the nobler blessings flowing from his incarnation and atonement are by them unappreciated and neglected. They are the beneficiaries of the civilization constructed by the uplifting forces of Christianity; but of the work wrought within the soul by the power of the Holy Spirit, filling it with peace and joy and hope, and giving it heirship to an inheritance in the skies, they know little or nothing. Their view of the mission of Christ is earthy and superficial, and their gratitude, if they have any, is correspondingly shallow. Only those who personally know Jesus as their Savior have a true estimate of the significance of his advent, and are in a position to celebrate it worthily. Any outward attempt to commemorate his birth, while he is shut out of the heart, is inconsistent and of little value.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST EVENT.

The world has had many epochal events—events which have greatly affected mankind and have given direction to the course of human history; but nothing has transpired upon the planet since it came into existence comparable in importance and in the reach of its influence to the coming of Christ in visible form among men. Viewed from an earthly standpoint, the birth of the Babe of Bethlehem seemed an insignificant occurrence. The great nations, occupied with what they conceived to be larger things, took scarcely any notice of it. It took place in an obscure little village, and even in that there was no room in the inn for the parents of him who was coming to be the world's Redeemer. They were forced to find shelter in a stable where horses and cattle were cared for, and it was there that the wondrous Child opened his eyes to the light. Though the Son of the King of kings, he was cradled in a manger; though the riches of the vast universe belonged to his Father, he was born in humiliation and poverty; though prior to his advent he had reigned in superlative splendor over the hierarchies of heaven, he had here no couch upon which to lay his infant head.

But, though thus ignored by the irreligious world, the birth of Jesus was not unexpected or unheralded. The hope of his coming had inspired God's people on earth through the passing of long centuries. Of it, prophets in glowing words had foretold, and far-seeing bards in rapturous strains had sung. It was the one far-away divine event to which all antecedent history had moved. And when the momentous hour arrived when the incarnation was to be begun, no less a personage than Gabriel was despatched from the skies with a message to Mary, who was to be the virgin mother of our Lord. Heaven grew busy preparing for his nativity; celestial visitors became common in and around Jerusalem. Spiritually-minded persons, who communed with God, felt that the long-looked-for day was near at hand, and, guided by a supernatural star, wise men came from the East seeking him who was to be born King of the Jews. Insecure upon his petty throne, Herod, who ruled over Judea, was troubled and anxious. And when at last the marvelous Babe of prophecy and cherished hopes uttered in his lowly birthplace his infant cry, the glory of the Lord shone round the shepherds keeping watch over their flocks by night, and an angel, radiant with unearthly light, said: "Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." "And suddenly there appeared with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.'"

Paul tells us that "when the fullness of the time was come, God sent forth his son, born of a woman." It was when the Old Testament prophecies concerning the Messiah had been fulfilled; when the ceremonial laws and types had worked out their educational purpose; when Greek was well-nigh the universal language of the nations contiguous to the Holy Land and furnished a fit vehicle for the conveyance of the higher truths of the divine revelation; when Rome had subjugated the surrounding countries, had established fine facilities for traveling to and fro through her vast domain, and was maintaining order everywhere, thus furnishing an unparalleled opportunity for the spread of the Gospel. And was it not also fitting that the Prince of peace should make his appearance when the world was free from bloody strife? At any rate, it was so when he came. The gates of the temple of Janus at Rome were closed, and as Milton has sung in his "Ode to the Nativity"—

"No war or battle's sound
Was heard the world around;
The idle spear and shield were high unhung;
The hooked chariot stood
Unstained by hostile blood,
The trumpet spake not to the armed throng;
And kings sat still with awful eye,
As if they knew their souvran Lord was by."

More than nineteen hundred years have passed since the heavenly choir sang its natal song of peace and joy above the Judean fields. Mighty and marvelous have been the changes that have taken place since that memorable day. The Babe that then lay in the manger has become the most conspicuous figure in human history. His name here upon earth is now above every name. He is the center of the world's art, literature and philosophy. The peoples who have accepted his teachings are to-day the most enlightened, moral and wealthy to be found upon the globe. Their ships vex the waters of every sea; their commerce extends to the most distant lands, and they largely control the affairs of the planet. Wars are becoming less cruel and frequent; the triumphs of peace are making lighter the burdens of mankind, and the outflowing streams of philanthropy are decreasing human want and suffering everywhere. It is the lifting, life-giving power of Christ which has given things this upward trend and has wrought this wonderful transformation. He is certainly making here "a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." And he has also opened the heavens, and made for humanity a passageway to the Father's house in the skies. He saves man both for time and eternity—enables him to live worthily and to high purpose in his present sphere, and finally places him among that white-robed throng around the Father's throne, which no man can number. Therefore, we may well celebrate with thanksgiving and joy this season which commemorates his advent. The time of his coming was the crowning day in the annals of our race, and by his visible presence our planet was honored above all the worlds that float in space, if they have had no incarnation.

"Ring, sweet bells of Christendom;
Everywhere the tidings tell
How the Lord to earth did come;
Ring and tell."

In the prayer-life of the Church is found the gauge of the measure of its service. In the redemptive work done for mankind, the Church has never gone beyond the ideals seen by those who have sought, through the ministry of intercession, to know the will and purpose of Almighty God.

IMMANUEL.

Matthew i, 23.

What is it makes him dear to us to-day? What is it makes us never tired of hearing that old story of waiting shepherds and kneeling wise men, of the rough manger? It is this perfect merging of his lot in ours. What is it that in spite of all the changes still bids hope to look to him, and faith cling to him as firmly in these days as did the newer, simpler hope and faith of the first times? Not chiefly his wonder-working power; dearer than his miracles is his cradle; for this is its lesson—that human life, though it begin in a manger and end on a cross, is full of God. For God is with us, not to save us from our human condition, but to fill that condition with a hope and promise it never knew before.—W. S. Rainsford.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

Have you caught the Christmas spirit? Your Christmas will be a merry one only as it is a holy one. The Christmas spirit is the spirit of love. As the Bible is God's great love story to man, so it seems to me Christmas is God's great love day. All the love of the eternal Godhead was gathered up and let down from heaven on that first Christmas day in the form of the manger babe. We can show our appreciation of God's great gift to the world, and can show the Christmas spirit by opening the soul's door and letting all the graces of the soul be bathed in the pure air of heaven.

Christmas is the time when you should let faith, hope and love have just a little more freedom in the parlor of your soul. Too many of us live down in the cellar of the soul. Faith, hope, charity may grow down in the damp, dark cellar, but their life, like the mushroom, is only for a day. These graces to live must be exercised. The glorious thing about Christmas, God's great love day, is that many who open their souls to the sweet influence of Christian benevolence and charity keep the rooms open all the year.—New York Observer.

THE CHRISTMAS STAR.

By the Late Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D., in the Methodist Recorder.

One of the most intensely interesting of my recollections of Palestine is the memory of my ride down from Bethlehem and across the fields that lie eastward towards the Jordan. I said to myself, "It must have been in some of these fields that the shepherds were keeping watch over their flocks on that most wondrous night in the history of our world. Up in the midnight sky hung the star that guided the Wise Men to the sacred spot. And up yonder hillside trooped the shepherds to find that miracle of all miracles, that babe lying in the manger who was the incarnate Son of God!"

How differently has human history read since that memorable night when the Star of Redemption shone out upon a world that had lain in darkness and spiritual death! With that star came the descent of the promised Christ—"God manifest in the flesh!" With Jesus Christ came a new gospel of human brotherhood—a gospel whose keynote was love. With Jesus Christ came a new civilization founded on the Golden Rule. With Jesus Christ came the perfect model for human conduct; with him came the atoning sacrifice for sin and deliverance from the powers of hell. With him came the "resurrection and the life," and the redemption of a countless host of immortal souls into an exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

When the Christ of Bethlehem had finished the transcendent work of redemption on the cross and became the ascending Christ of Bethany, the luster of that star began to be visible beyond the narrow limits of Palestine. Apostles, baptized with the Holy Spirit and with fire, went everywhere preaching the new gospel of salvation The most extraordinary man of the age, with his great soul illuminated by this star, wrote to Greek philosophers and skeptics: "I am determined to know nothing among you but Jesus Christ, and him crucified."

Every minister who has done the best soul-saving work during the past twelve months has done it by preaching the faithful saying that Christ came into the world to save them; he has led his hearers where the star was shining. Not only has he guided them by that star to the only place of pardon, but to the only model and motive for a pure, strong, useful and happy life. To teach sinful, tempted and wayward men and women to steer towards eternity by that infallible and unchangeable star—is not that the great purpose for which pulpits were built and God's ambassadors placed in them?

There are thousands of readers of this article to whom the year now closing has been a year of suffering and sorrow-stricken homes. You have seen dark hours. In one house there is an empty crib, and in another house an empty chair at your Christmas table. No human consolation was even a farthing-candle to cheer your aching hearts. You wanted not guesswork or conjecture—but a light straight from heaven itself—a light that could illuminate the grave, and could bring a blissful eternity into view. And oh, what an uplift it was to you when the star of Bethlehem became the star of Bethany's comforted household and resurrection victory over the tomb!

Over the plot in "Greenwood," where the dust of my own precious children is slumbering, that Christmas star is shining. "I am the resurrection and the life"—"them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him"—"I do not leave you comfortless"—these are the sweet words which the Christmas angels are singing. Our faith, listening to these voices from heaven, answers back again:

"My Jesus, as thou wilt!
Though seen through many a tear,
Let not my star of hope
Grow dim or disappear;
Through sorrow, or through joy,
Conduct me as thine own
And help me still to say:
My Lord, thy will be done."

And now let me tell you that some of you make the sad mistake of crowding your Christmas into one day, or a single week. You ought to have the Christmas star beaming into your hearts and into your homes all the year round. You are generous in giving once a year; why lock up your bounties during the rest of the time? You try to make your children happy at Christmas time; can't you love them as well, and do as much to put sunshine into their young hearts through the other one and fifty weeks of next year? You remember the poor, and make their tables smoke with your bounty, but they cannot live on a Christmas turkey for twelve months. You let the star of Bethlehem gladden your heart and cheer your spirits on one day of the calendar. But you cannot live on that single glimpse of the blessed light and joy that Jesus sheds. The only healthy and happy Christian is the one who runs his or her Christianity through every day's experience and conduct.

Some people keep their religion for Sunday, and on Monday they fold it up and put it away with their Sunday clothes. Some thaw their hearts and purses out on a Thanksgiving day or in Christmas week, and then freeze them up again. Periodical religion is a sham and a reproach. A healthy, vigorous, cheerful working, Christ-serving religion, cannot be maintained on the Sabbath and on festival days alone. Every day has got to be a "Lord's day." Every step has got to be taken by the light of that unerring, unsetting star that rose over the hills of Bethlehem twenty centuries ago. You and I must walk in the constant light and constant love of our blessed Jesus if we expect to reach heaven, or to help others there.

METHODISM PACIFYING AND PURIFYING ANGLO-SAXONDOM.

Nothing can be of greater importance to the world than that the Anglo-Saxon nations shall dwell together in unity and work harmoniously for the redemption of mankind. Alienations between them would be the worst of misfortunes, and war between them would be an immeasurable calamity and an unspeakable crime. By continued peace and good will between them their own progress will be amazingly accelerated, and thereby in the end will be assured the pacification and evangelization of the world. The work of all worthy civilization consists very largely in the elimination of warfare and strife and the consequent liberation of men to pursue the peaceful paths of productive industry and philanthropic endeavor. This blessed work the English-speaking nations, when united in inviolable concord, are prepared to do as no others can. Providence has accumulated power in their pacific hands to the end that they may be at peace among themselves and be enabled to enjoin gently but firmly peace upon others. Pursuing the arts of peace in unbroken harmony with each other, they can create an economic competition so keen and controlling that it will constrain the disbanding of the overgrown armies of other powers, reduce burdensome budgets imposed upon toiling millions by international distrust, and make complete the victory of the industrial and moral type of civilization over the martial and brutal type.

If the English-speaking nations, with their devotion to a civil liberty and their knowledge of spiritual Christianity, cannot lead the way to this glorious consummation, it is certain that no other nation or group of nations now existing on the earth can achieve the mighty triumph. With no other peoples can be found at this time the disposition or the resources required for so great an achievement. Nor can any one of the Anglo-Saxon nations do this world-redeeming work alone. They must stand together and labor together if they are to fulfill this high mission which is so manifestly set before them.

But what shall hold them thus together? Many years ago good Bishop Howley, speaking of Great Britain and the United States, said:

"The surest pledge of perpetual peace between the two countries is to be found in their community of faith and in the closeness of their ecclesiastical intercourse." Without sectarian pride or denominational boastfulness we may surely claim that Methodism, which has been so identified with their rise, is one of the strongest strands in this religious bond by which these two powerful nations must be held together. The broad-minded, devout Dean Stanley affirmed that "the Methodist movement has molded the spiritual character of the English-speaking Protestantism of the world;" and if such has been the case, it must follow that Methodism is a most powerful force making for the unification of Anglo-Saxondom. More recently the English editor of the Review of Reviews said through the columns of that periodical: "Wesleyanism has acted as a cement of the English-speaking race, and thereby it has contributed materially toward the solution of the supreme political problem of our times. The Wesley brothers who founded the Methodist polity are a more living force to-day, constraining the minds of the English-speaking men to brotherly feeling and a sense of national unity than the Wellesleys, although the Wellesleys reared the Indian Empire and crushed the empire of Napoleon." There is in spiritual Christianity an attraction of gravitation which tends "to gather in one all things in Christ;" and this unifying property inheres in Methodism to an unusual degree, especially with reference to the Anglo-Saxon nations, with whose rise and development it has been so closely identified.—From "Wesley and His Work," by Bishop W. A. Candler.

A speaker at the late session of the West Texas Conference said: "When a German becomes a Methodist he becomes a prohibitionist.' So ought every man.

MY FIRST CHARGE AND ELSE.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

No. 5.

From Flint Creek I went to Black Creek. Here lived a good family by the name of Miles. Black Creek was a Saturday appointment. I once heard here a beautiful song sung by two young women which I enjoyed much, and which made a deep impression. Help of this kind I have always used when I was convinced that it was suitable to the services. It helped the young people participating, and it helped me.

From Black Creek I went to Cypress Creek, in Perry county. The Garraways and Lantrips, good people, lived here. When at Cypress Creek, I was a few miles of where Copeland, of the Copeland clan, robbers, were hung for killing a Mr. Harvey. He was hung at Augusta, Perry county, in July 1858, perhaps twelve or more years after killing Harvey. Mrs. Harvey afterwards married a Mr. Bird, who joined the Church under my ministry in 1858. Cypress Creek was a good appointment.

My next and last appointment was Good Hope, on Black Creek. I think Perkinsville, on the G. & S. I. R. R. is near where Good Hope Church was. The Lamberts and Perkins lived here. My predecessor, Rev. J. D. Willis, who died in 1873, held in 1857 a revival meetiug at this place, and took several into the Church. He appointed one of his new members steward and class leader. The class leader killed several fine deer, took them to market at Pass Christian, and bartered same for a barrel of whisky. During the Christmas holidays, before I reached that part of my work, he and his neighbors, so I was told, drank this whisky, and had a lively time. It was at this place that a man threatened to knock the devil out of me, of which I spoke in a former letter. It was also here that a weak brother got drunk—didn't go to do it, but did. Before I had an opportunity to talk to him about it, he met me with a smile, and banded me a dollar, saying: "Here is a present." Well, I saw he was sorry, and really thought he was the best man in that church, so I did not church him. By his saying, "here is a present," I suppose he thought my preaching was all gratuitous, and was not worth paying for.

The only church trial I had during the year was at Hickory Grove, that of a young woman who went astray. The church withdrew fellowship.

I traveled during the year near on to 4,000 miles, preached about 200 times, was kept pretty busy most of the time, and made many fast friends (many of them still living). The work paid me $75. The Mission Board gave me $50. So I got in all $125, and I really thought I was well paid. I was not after money, and yet I appreciated all I got. I was after serving my Lord and the Church the best I could. I never enjoyed myself better on a work. I had a splendid pony, a good saddler, gentle, kind, and we were good friends. I had no board to pay, for I lived much in my saddle; no laundry bill to settle. The good sisters of the Church looked after my laundry. Neither did I have any doctor's bill to pay. In fact, I was kept too busy to get sick.

I often stopped at places where the cooking, eating and sleeping were all done under the same roof, and in the same room. The people as a rule were poor and ignorant, but honest. They did not have to keep their possessions under lock and key. That section of the country was covered with a dense pine forest from one end to the other.

What wonderful changes have taken place in this country within the past fifty-four years! Railroads have crossed it in almost every direction. Several nice towns have sprung up and grown to considerable size. Good schools and churches abound. There are many self-supporting charges now within the bounds of what constituted Black Creek Mission 54 years ago. At that time, my work was in the Covington District, with Barnabas Pipkin as presiding elder. The following year it was in the Biloxi District, with R. J. Jones (father of our Rev. W. B. Jones) as presiding elder. Wonderful, wonderful changes have taken place! Am I growing old? Well, it looks a little that way, and yet my heart is in the work as much as ever.

Below I give a list of appointments as read out by Bishop Paine for Biloxi District on Dec. 15, 1858: Biloxi District, Ransom J. Jones, presiding elder; Sea Shore Circuit, J. N. McNeil; Gainesville, Jas. English; Columbia, H. P. Lewis; Raleigh, Jno. A. Vance; Paulding, J. J. Wheat; Garlands (colored mission), R. J. Jones, Jr.; Leaf River mission, Jno. Boyes; Black Creek, N. B. Young.

I am the only one of the ten now living. The presiding elder, Brother Jones, sent out from his home two preachers, K. A. and Ransom, J., Jr., who, after doing faithful, good work for many years, went home to rest. W. B. Jones, the present presiding elder of Sea Shore District, was quite young when his father died. In due time, he fell in line with the others.

When I applied for recommendation for admission on trial into the traveling connection, there were no questions asked me. My presiding elder and pastor vouched for and recommended me. I was admitted on trial in my absence. No committee took me in charge as is the case now. Why the change? Well, 55 years ago preachers received as a rule rather poor pay, and many who felt called to preach preferred remaining in the local ranks. Now it is different. Preachers as a rule are much better paid, have a more pleasant time generally than they had in former years, and it may be necessary to "guard the door" more carefully. But I am glad of the change. Yet, in spite of ourselves, we get men on our hands who are a hindrance instead of a help to the work.

It was a little difficult in those days for a man with wife and children to get into the Conference. Young men were advised not to marry till they had completed the Conference course of study. Again, a young man was expected to take no steps towards marrying without first consulting his presiding elder about it. I heard this story: A young preacher was in love with a certain woman well known to his presiding elder. The elder advised him to let her alone. The young brother wanted to know why, saying, she was a very nice, religious woman. "True," said the elder, "but the Lord can live in peace with folks that you and I can't." So it is. We have some in our Conference who would have done well to wait, and pray about the matter awhile.

(Concluded.)

THE BLIND BEGGARS OF THE ORIENT.

To fully appreciate the significance of the many references in the Bible to blindness, and especially to "blind beggars," one must see them in the Orient in all their squalor and untold wretchedness. Often it will make one positively sick to see them in the streets and highways. Their cries are things one does not soon forget—literally a wail of shuddering intensity and almost unbelievable sadness. Even now I can hear that queer cry ringing in my ears. No wonder the apostles record so many instances where the touch of the divine hand restored sight. Evidently they did not record each case, for we read that in certain towns and villages they brought out the sick for him to heal, and in others that they "might touch the hem of his garment." It is practically certain that there were blind people there, too, but their very numbers prevented more specific descriptions of cases.

To us blessed with vision, no trial could be greater than the loss of this great faculty. We naturally sympathize most with those who have not, or never had this blessing. Knowing that a large percentage of the blind are so afflicted from early infancy—in fact long before they realized the priceless ness of their possession—it often puzzled me to know why the one cry of the blind is now and has always been, "Lord that I might receive my sight." Yet that prayer is always on the lips of the blind, and silently ascends in the still watches of the night, when only God is near. Why is this so? The answer is easy: people blessed with vision, either consciously or unconsciously, continually impress on the mind of these afflicted ones the fact that they are outside of the one great blessing. They also let them understand by their very sympathy that vision is one of God's greatest blessings, and that to lose it is a disaster of tragic importance. Naturally the blind come to regard vision in a manner that becomes its importance. They would so regard any blessing under the same conditions.

When the Master said that he came that we might have life and that more abundantly, he gave his children the password of the kingdom—"Life, more abundant, more overflowing, more useful, more glorious." It was that our life might be more complete, and that our vision more perfect, that he laid down his life for us. He has opened our eyes, and we can see him in his beauty and majesty, and right here is the heart of the matter. Do we who have light impress on our brothers who yet sit in darkness and sin the great desirability of that light? Is our life such as to make others feel that we have something—a "pearl of great price,"—which is most to be desired, and a priceless possession? Do people coming in contact with us "take notice that we have been with Jesus?" If not, why not? The record says that when Jesus passed on the road to Jericho, the blind beggar asked the meaning of the noise, and the reason for the crowd. Upon being told that the Master was passing that way, he had but one cry, "Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me," and curiously the bystanders tried to keep him from Jesus! What a picture of to-day! But with more than usual persistence, he cried till the Master heard and answered his prayer.

When we make the world feel the magnitude of our blessing, and the greatness of our Lord and his power to open the blind eyes, there will go up a great cry all over the land, "Lord that I might receive my sight." May the Lord hasten the coming of that day! It is coming—all of us believe that he will "bring it to pass." J. C. BALLARD.

Fort Miley, Cal., Dec. 9, 1911.

THE PRESENT STATE OF THE CHURCH.

There is a feeling that there is something seriously wrong with the Church, and there are different causes given for the condition. Liberal men are ready to say that one difficulty is the slowness of the Church to adopt modern thought in its scientific and philosophical speculation. But the answer to this comes quick and sharp in the failure of the liberal churches. Others say that the difficulty lies in the Church's failure to get hold of the working classes by means of modern social methods and ideas.

It ought to be said that through all her history, the Church has held it to be her duty to encourage and labor for the improvement of man's social condition. She has been no more slack to this than to her other duties, although she confesses that she has come far short of her duty in all respects, and is still an unprofitable servant. She has been no more derelict in her duty to the poor man than she has been to the rich man. Indeed, she has ever found her work with the poor man has always been easier than her work with the rich. The poor have been, and now are, as faithful to her as the rich. More work is being done to-day to save the poor than is being done to save the rich. These facts disprove the statement that the Church is indifferent to social needs.

But there are those who would charge the Church with problems which she has no right to undertake, because she has no means for their solution. It is the duty of the Church to oppose all sin and oppression, and to cultivate, foster and demand righteousness among men. But the Church cannot decide questions of civil and commercial rights among men. She cannot determine the number of hours in a day's labor. She cannot say what per cent of margin must be allowed in business transactions. She must refuse to meet such questions as these, as her Lord refused to be a judge of land questions between two brothers.

The heart of the Church is still true. There are some defections within her members. But such defections are found in all ages. The movement of the Church has never been a steady ascent, but rather that of an advancing wave.

The chief difficulty with the Church is in the circumference. The center is sound. There are those hanging on to the outskirts, who dishonor God by dishonoring His Son, His Spirit and His Word, and these changeable people retard her progress by trying hard to derail her.—The Presbyterian.

The authorities of Harvard University refused to let Mrs. Parkhurst, the noted English lecturer on woman suffrage, speak in a hall on the grounds of that institution a few days since. Instead of the usual annual deficit, the Postoffice Department shows for the past year a surplus of $219,118. The first year of Mr. Taft's administration the shortage in this department was more than $17,000,000. That this should have been wiped out and an excess over the expenditures piled up, is a remarkable achievement, especially since this has been done with no curtailment of facilities, but, on the contrary, with important extensions of them. During the present administration, 3,736 postoffices have been established; 186 additional cities have been given free delivery by carriers, and the rural routes have been increased to the extent of 60,679 more miles. The number of employes has been increased by 8,000, and the salaries paid by $14,000,000. The deposits in the 48 experimental postal banks, after having been in operation for eleven months, are now said to foot up the sum of $11,000,000.

The fact that Governor Woodrow Wilson has applied for a pension on the Carnegie Foundation as a retired teacher is subjecting him to criticism in some quarters. Having taught for twenty-five years, he is entitled to go on the list of beneficiaries of this fund, so far as the technical rules laid down for its management are concerned; but it does not seem that the governor of a great State and aspirant to the presidential office, who is not yet an old man, ought to be allowed to become a claimant on resources intended to safeguard those who have given their lives to the work of teaching, receiving small compensation therefor, when advanced age has unfitted them for longer service. Mr. Wilson has also lately been taken to task by Col. W. H. Stewart, a gallant Confederate soldier, for the following statement contained in his "History of the American people." "On the 9th of March these two novel crafts (the Monitor and the Virginia) made trial of each other and the Virginia was worsted." Col. Stewart says: "I saw with my own eyes that battle from start to finish, and I declare that the Virginia won the victory over the Monitor with little injury to herself. I saw the Monitor retreat to shallow water, and she would never more give the Virginia an opportunity to fight her, even when she had another ironclad to assist her."

REFLECTING HIS IMAGE.

Once upon a time there lived in a little hamlet in Japan a young couple. They had one child, a beautiful little girl. While the child was still very young the father was obliged to take a journey alone to a far distant city.

There he saw many things he had never seen before. He desired to take home a gift to his wife, and the most wonderful gift, it seemed to him, was a mirror. He wished to share with his wife the pleasure and surprise he had experienced when he first looked into one.

When his wife looked into the mirror for the first time he asked: "What do you see?" She replied: "I see a very pretty woman. She wears her hair just as I do mine. And she smiles and moves her lips just as if she were talking to me." Her husband told her that the mirror was his gift to her, and that he hoped she would use it every day. But the wife thought it too fine a present to use every day, so she put it carefully away, and never spoke of it to the little daughter, who grew more beautiful and more like her mother as time passed on.

By and by a great misfortune fell upon that little household. The wife and mother fell sick, and it was soon evident that she must die. As she lay upon her death-bed, she called her little daughter, and told her that she was going away forever. She could point to no future life in which they could be reunited, but in the love and simplicity of her heart she did the best she could. She told her little daughter about the wonderful mirror. "After I am dead," she said, "take down that box, and look into the mirror that it contains. There you will see my face. And I want you to look into the mirror every day, that you may never forget your mother, and that you may grow more and more like me."

So the mother died. The little girl did as she had been told, and in the wonderful mirror she thought she saw her mother's face, young and beautiful—not as she had seen her, pale and ill as she lay dying, but fair and fresh, as before the fatal illness. As she looked daily into the mirror, and thought of her mother and her many lovely ways, it came about that she grew to be still more and more like that mother.

As we consider the face of Christ as portrayed in the Bible, we realize more and more clearly that he is indeed risen—a living and loving Lord and Savior. The more closely we study that face, the more we grow into his likeness, till all around us may know that we belong to him.—Sunday School Illustrator.

A GOOD RECOMMENDATION.

The Nashville Christian Advocate speaks this high praise of "MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE":

"'Modes of the Heavenly Life,' by Rev. Walter C. Harbin, one of our Southern Methodist preachers, is a timely and helpful book, and we feel sure it will be used by the Holy Ghost. This book honors the Holy Ghost. It consists of five sermons, all bearing on his personality and offices. The sermons are not only exceedingly spiritual and evangelical, but have a literary dress which bespeaks intellectual culture on the part of the preacher. He is a 'winner of souls.' His purpose and power are manifested on every page of the book."

Until Jan. 1, 1912, you can secure this book and A MAN WANTED—one of the greatest of men's sermons—for 50 cents.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in session at Pittsburgh, Penn., on December 14, emphasized the fact that fifty lives have been sacrificed to lynchers in the United States within the past six months, and by formal resolution called upon the Christian churches to put an end to this practice, and to protest vigorously against all forms of mob violence. The press, North and South, was commended for its brave stand against lawlessness and mobism.

Bishop Hoss calls the tendency of the times in Methodist circles to make special demand for young preachers for pastors in preference to the old tried and experienced men in the ministry, the "popular demand for greens." This fine saying is outweighed only a wee bit by a terse one coming from Bishop Candler. Replying to a clamor of a certain church in Georgia for a young man pastor, in which it was insisted that the Church was greatly encumbered by an aged ministry, the Bishop said: "Oh, no; you are in error about that. Half the pulpits in the State of Georgia to-day are suffering from cholera infantum." —Pacific Methodist Advocate.

MEN AND RELIGION TO DATE.

Sixteen Men and Religion campaign conventions have now been held (in as many cities) that were planned by the general committee, and seventy-four conventions have been held under the extension plan of having deputations from tributary towns attend main conventions and return home to duplicate the meetings. In the cities of medium size it is found in practice that practically all Protestant churches take part. In the cities of largest size 75 per cent of the churches do so. Others have not expressed dissent, but have simply not united.

The average registration of men in the sixteen cities has been 600. These do not include men who merely attend banquets, but only those who take the full week's instruction, and express intention to maintain personal work. Many of them are representatives of smaller cities, and are therefore leaders. At one central convention, that of Cedar Rapids, 110 other Iowa towns that were represented under the extension plan.

The most tangible result of the campaign thus far is a largely increased attendance upon Bible classes. in some churches where no classes for men existed they have been formed. Representatives of the general committee are following up the work in every city where conventions have been held, not to garner results, but to check up the local men and to see that they gather in harvests. These general representatives are also studying effects, and reporting for the advantage of conventions yet to be held. The general and local men are now co-operating in the task of bringing men into the churches and training them for service.

STARTLING CONDITIONS IN CHINA.

Not a community in America but there is in it some particular friend of Christian missionary work in China. Few communities there are that have not furnished one or more of the almost 1,000 missionaries now in that country. The missionary societies report that nothing in the present uprising in China seems aimed at foreigners, while there are many reasons why rebels and loyalists alike will protect them, if for no other one than to prevent intervention by American or European powers and the possible division of their empire.

The committee of reference and counsel of all foreign missionary societies of the United States and Canada, the Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Brown of the Presbyterian Board, chairman, has just sent to churches in both countries requests for intercessory prayer by Christian people, giving as reasons many startling facts. These facts are under three heads:

1. For the people of China, a great and virile nation which, awakened from the torpor of ages by the quickening forces of the modern world, is convulsed by civil war at a time when all its energies are needed for the legislative, economic, educational and moral readjustments which the new era involves. Flood, famine and pestilence are intensifying the tragedy of internal strife. Vast areas have been inundated in the provinces of Nganhwei, Klang-su and Hu-nan, the two former facing desolation and famine for the third time in five years. The Yang-tzse River is 45 miles wide 250 miles from the sea, and thousands of villages have been submerged. Five hundred thousand families must be aided through the winter at an average cost of $15 per family, or ten times more people will die of starvation than of wounds in battle.

2. For the Chinese Christians, who share in full measure the privations and sorrows that are the common lot of their countrymen, and often the despairing reproaches of their non-Christian neighbors, who imagine that these multiplied calamities are due to the wrath of the spirits against those who have abandoned the ancestral faith. Hundreds of Chinese pastors, teachers and evangelists, who have been supported wholly or in part by the Christians on the field, cannot now be maintained by their impoverished people. Churches and schools have been swept away by floods, families have been scattered by war, and multitudes of Christians are without food and shelter for the winter.

3. For the missionaries, who are in positions of extraordinary difficulty, with myriads of ruined and starving Chinese looking to them for provisions and employment. With throngs of the sick and injured daily brought for treatment, with Chinese and foreigners alike expecting them to perform the herculean task of purchasing and distributing food, they must incessantly toil in circumstances of almost unbearable physical and mental strain.

In addition to the special burdens which revolution and famine entail, there are increased responsibilities for the great and varied missionary work under their care, a work which is now represented by 4,298 foreign missionaries, 11,611 Chinese ministers, teachers and evangelists, 3,485 stations and out-stations, 2,029 primary schools, 1,116 academies, colleges, industrial, medical, nurses' and normal schools, 170 hospitals, 14 orphanages, 16 leper asylums, 3 homes for untrained children of lepers, 11 institutions for the blind and deaf mutes, 5 rescue homes for fallen women, 100 opium refuges, 2 industrial homes, one asylum for the insane, 2,341 churches with 278,628 members, a Christian community of 750,000, and property valued at millions of dollars—all this not including the missions of the Roman Catholic Church.

"Christian work," says the committee, "has very greatly prospered, the growth in a decade having been 175 per cent. The missionaries are in immediate charge of this extensive enterprise. The American Minister at Peking has ordered women and children out of the zones of hostilities, but as a rule the men heroically remain at their posts. They feel that they can no more leave at such a time than a physician could leave his patients when contagious disease is epidemic, or a chaplain his regiment in time of war. This is the day when the faithful missionary of Christ is most needed, not only to care for the mission property and work, but to comfort and serve the excited and distressed people and to aid in caring for the sick and wounded."

Speaking for the American and Canadian missionary societies themselves, the committee refuses to emphasize their needs, but reminds Christian people of both countries that societies must stand by their workers, and that famine and other special funds ought not to act to decrease regular gifts, for regular expenditures are being increased as a necessary part of the present situation.—Church News Association.

Let not the blessings we receive daily from God make us not to value, or not to praise him because they be common. What would not a blind man give to see the pleasant rivers and meadows and flowers and fountains that we have met with?—Izaak Walton.

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S CHAIR.

The press report promises us soon another book from the pen of Dr. J. W. Lee—"The Religion of Science." The title captures me. I have only a "bowing acquaintance" with science, and keep my mouth shut in the company of scientific men; but the glimpse I have of the enchanted land where they live and move and have their being makes we long to be there, too. The fact is, Meek, I need a thousand years at least to learn the A. B. C. of what I discover is to be learned here. I had my awakening when I was about eleven years old. My mental pedometer tells me that the sun has crossed the equator fifty one times since then, and for those fifty-one years I have been seeking knowledge as a gold hunter digs for the precious metal, and finding it too, every day! Yet, I feel like Balboa when he discovered the Pacific ocean. Wading out into the shining water and drawing his sword, he waved it above the sparkling brine, and took possession of the sea for his sovereign lord, the king. I have advanced only a few steps into the immeasurable ocean of truth, but, standing on its marge, I draw from the innermost depths of my soul the high resolve, bright as the aboriginal light of God, to explore those seas if it takes a million years! I stand aghast before the tragedy of a mind in the midst of the universe around us that does not love knowledge. I turn with illimitable disgust from the sham religion that pretends to love God and does not feel every nerve quiver with a passionate desire to know His truth. I repudiate, with the indignation of intense abhorence, the libellous maxim that "ignorance is the mother of devotion." The devotion inspired by ignorance is enough to make an angel weep. If a man's conversion doesn't wake up his whole nature, and make him ashamed to be ignorant of what he might know, that man's conversion is vain.

Some years ago I was invited to deliver the annual address to the Chautauqua graduates at Bay View, Michigan. The class numbered nearly two hundred, and the exercises, which were simple and beautiful, were held in the open air on the shore of the lake. Among the graduates that received diplomas were a man and his wife, both well past seventy years old. I learned that he was a farmer, a poor man, from northern Indiana. After the service was ended I went to him and said: "It is a very unusual thing to see a man or a woman at your time of life take up a course of study and complete it. I just want to congratulate you both, and to ask if there was any special reason that led you to do it." I have thought a thousand times on his reply, which was definite, laconic and full of far-sounding sense. He simply said: "Well, sir, d'ye reckon I want to be an ignoramus in heaven!" He seemed to have no doubt about getting to heaven, but to be an ignoramus in the cultivated company he expected to meet there was more than his honest faith could stand, so he and his wife got down to work. There is absolutely no excuse for anyone to go either from Louisiana or Mississippi to heaven as an ignoramus. And yet—may the Lord have mercy on us—we are sending them there in carload lots!

But back to Lee and his forthcoming Religion of Science. I recently read his article on "The Philosopher's Stone," which sounds like it might be a chapter from the book. Skeptical scientists have sometimes reproached Christians for their credulity. But the faith that accepts the supernatural in the Bible is a trifle compared with the faith one must have to accept the statements that Dr. Lee makes in the name of science. For instance: "And while a million billion of atoms are necessary to make up a speck of matter large enough to be seen with the naked eye, yet each atom of this million billion of them has inside itself from one thousand to more than two hundred thousand electrons, or corpuscles, or bits of positive and negative electricity, making revolutions at an unthinkable speed as the planets are turning around the sun in the heavens." Believe it? Of course, I believe it, because men who study these things tell me it is true. But I take it by faith. Nobody, not even the keen-eyed Lee, with his genius for running down these elemental molecules to their last hiding place in the primal ether itself, ever saw an atom, or ever will. All the discoveries of science have been made in the realm of imagination. Anchored to facts, these bold explorers of the mysteries of nature have swung out into the unknown, and from such etherial speculations have built up the solid structure of scientific knowledge. But men who make such demands on credulity cut a sorry caper when they criticise Christian belief in the supernatural. Even at the risk of being thought "poky," it would be well to go slow about the rage over radium. It is too young to put on airs. The constitution of matter is a puzzle yet, and there is a wide difference between facts and the inferences from facts. It is gratifying to know that the trend of scientific speculation is so decidedly in the direction of Christian truth that one can adopt the title, "The Religion of Science." All physical problems are at bottom metaphysical. Science declares that matters is force, and philosophy declares that force is will. Dr. Carpenter's dictum still stands: "Force must be regarded as the direct expression of will." Matter is composed of atom, atoms of electrons, electrons of ether. Here science stops. When Dr. Lee asserts that ether is "the everlasting dwelling place of the eternal," he speaks the truth, but it is the truth of theology. The postulate of the living God is the starting point of all rational thought about the universe. This postulate we get from religion. "Science reveals the method, but not the cause of creation," said Martineau; "Religion reveals the cause, but not the method." Such at least—

Hark! A knock on my door. Enter a visitor, who politely hands me, not a treatise on Lee's dancing corpuscles, but—a bill: Tuning pianos, thirty-one dollars! Honestly, Meek, I thought a college president could study philosophy; but to be unceremoniously tilted over as he is gazing into the abyss of Lee's whirling electrons disenchants him. Lee says "a man is a part of the aurora borealis in pants." Was the man who upset my sublime cogitations on his cosmic lucubrations a part of the aurora borealis? If so, I am glad auroras are rare. Yet pianos must be tuned. So must I. It takes a good deal of work to keep me in tune—especially when pianos get out of tune to the tune of thirty-one dollars. What did I do? I told him to scoot, for I was dizzy from thinking of a million billion atoms making revolutions with unthinkable speed a la Lee! What did he do? He scooted, but—left the bill. There it lies, and for the life of me I cannot discover any resemblance to the aurora borealis. Moral: Don't attempt to follow Lee on a cosmic expedition the first of the month.

I went to the meeting of the synod on the bluff, but was in the unfriendly clutches of the Chickasaw grip, so I was unable to enjoy much of the Conference. They readmitted me, so the bridle is on again. I have almost formed a habit of slipping it. Since the institute over which I have been called to preside is now under the complete control of the Church, it was thought best for its head to be in regular affiliation with the system. I hope it is for the highest interests of all for it to be so. Since the school is to be reorganized, greatly enlarged and improved, the position affords opportunity for that constructive work in which I take most pleasure. I would rather plow than tread the routine method of a finished job. We hope to have elegant quarters for a hundred boarders next year. When I tell you that my musical director, Senior D'Anna, turns his Italian nose up at anything less than a five hundred dollar piano to teach on, you may know what the quality of our work is. When I saw them rolling an Everett Grand into the chapel, I stuck my hands in my pockets, and my eyes grew wide. "First-class work, Doctor, requires first-class tools." Just so, and our motto is, "The Best." But the bills; oh, Meek, the bills!

ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO RESTORE GEN. BOOTH'S EYESIGHT.

Once more the best eye specialists in England are to use the knife on the eyes of Gen. Booth, the aged leader of the Salvation Army, in an effort to restore his fast failing sight. The operation of three years ago for cataract is to be repeated and high hopes are entertained of ultimate recovery. At the present moment the Salvation Army chief is practically blind and is unable even to distinguish the features of a person standing within a couple of feet of him.

But despite this handicap Gen. Booth has lost none of his wonderful vigor and enthusiasm. He is now conducting a campaign in the South of England and, previous to the coming operation, will visit Germany and Denmark for a flying automobile trip.

Typical of the astonishing energy of the man is a meeting which has just been held at Balham, an outlying section of London. Not content with preaching both in the morning and evening, he sandwiched an afternoon lecture in between. In the course of the latter Gen. Booth declared that he wishes no memorial upon his death excepting a huge collection box at the grave wherein those who come to pray and perhaps to shed a tear may drop a few gold pieces for the support of the great movement he now leads. The suggestion was made seriously and will undoubtedly lead to a fulfillment of his wish.

With the failure of his eyesight the General is becoming more and more dependent upon those in constant attendance upon him. Always a hard man to please, he now tries his immediate family and private secretaries almost beyond endurance. Finding it impossible to sleep at night, he often awakens the whole household and demands that the several members get to work. Much of his dictation is done in the small hours of the morning, when, dressed in a tight-fitting dressing gown, he composes letters, sermons and lectures. Although most of the harder work of administration has been taken over by Bramwell Booth, his favorite son, the General still insists upon keeping autocratic powers of control well within his own hands.

As the autumn of the famous old man's life draws to a close it becomes more and more evident that the oft-debated secret of his successor, or successors, is no secret at all. The recent trend of affairs within the army has made it obvious to all that Bramwell Booth will step into the shoes of his father, with perhaps considerably restricted powers. The son is not a strong enough man to impose upon the Salvation Army the form of despotism practiced by the father, even if the latter intended such a development. Undoubtedly the vast properties of the organization at present in unrestricted control of Gen. Booth, will be invested in a committee, but the routine management of the affairs of the army will be placed in the hands of Bramwell Booth.—Times-Democrat.

The Home Circle

AT CHRISTMAS.

Old Christmas time's come round again,
I'm awful glad, I guess! for then
Our teacher gives us holidays,
An' we skip home by cross-cut ways
To help do chores an' get the wood,
An' feed the hens and help. I should Think pa and ma 'll find it fine
To have us home at Christmas time!
But our hired man, he says, says he;
"I'm not so sure 'bout that, maybe!"

Old Santa Claus!—that's all a bluff
To fool us boys; we're old enough
To know some things, but we pretend
We're sound asleep. It's dark as ten
Black cats, but we can feel and guess
What's in my sock an' what's in Seth's.
It's lots of fun! I guess our folk
Are glad they've boys like us to joke.
But our hired man, he says, says he;
"I'm not so sure 'bout that, maybe!"

Christmas Day—it's great's can be!
There's ma an' pa an' Seth an' me
An' the hired man, at dinner time,
To eat the goose, with dressin' fine,
An' gravy, an' 'taties, an' puddin', too,
With sauce an' nuts, an' raisins through;
We don't eat much, us boys—but pa
Heaps up our plates an' winks at ma—
'Nen the hired man, he says, says he:
"I'm not so sure 'bout that, maybe!"

—The Christian Guardian.

IS THERE A SANTA CLAUS?

No Santa Claus? Yes, my little man, there is a Santa Claus, thank God! The world would indeed be poor without one. It is true that he does not always wear a white beard and drive a reindeer team—not always, you know—but what does it matter? He is Santa Claus with the big, loving, Christmas heart, for all that; Santa Claus with the kind thoughts for every one that make children and grown-up people beam with happiness all day long.

And shall I tell you a secret which I did not learn at the postoffice, but it is true all the same—of how you can be sure your letters go to him straight by the chimney route? It is this: Send along with them a friendly thought for the boy you don't like; for Jack who punched you, or Jim who was mean to you. The meaner he was the harder do you resolve to make it up; not to bear him a grudge. That is the stamp for the letter to Santa. Nobody can stop it, not even a cross-draught in the chimney, when it has that on.

Because—don't you know, Santa Claus is the spirit of Christmas; and ever and ever so many years ago when the dear little Baby was born after whom we call Christmas, and was cradled in the manger out in the stable because there was not room in the inn, the Spirit came into the world to soften the hearts of men and make them love one another. Therefore, that is the mark of the Spirit to this day. Don't let anybody or anything rub it out. Then the rest doesn't matter. Let them tear Santa's white beard off at the Sunday school festival and growl in his bear skin coat. These are only his disguises. The steps of the real Santa Claus you can trace all through the world as you have done here with me, and when you stand in the last of his tracks you will find the Blessed Babe of Bethlehem smiling a welcome to you. For then you will be home.—Jacob A. Riis.

THE BIRD'S CHRISTMAS TREE.

In many places in Great Britain and Ireland, in the United States, Canada and Germany, and some other parts of the world, when Christmas comes, with all its joy and happiness, boys and girls, and older people as well, do not forget that the dear little birds out in the cold ought to be remembered by Santa Claus and they make a Christmas tree for the birds. This is a most beautiful custom, I think, because the birds have all they can do during the long winter months to get enough to eat, and it is a cause of wonderment how they live through some of the very cold nights. When we are all snuggled down among the blankets, these little fellows pack themselves away into some little corner of the house-eaves, or among the close branches of the cedar or spruce trees, and there they sleep all night, with tiny heads under their wings, holding on tight so that the fierce wind will not blow them off. Don't you think that it is marvelous that so many of them live to rejoice with us when the bright spring days come again?

Some kind hearted people throw out crumbs and seeds for the birds every day during the winter, and the little chaps soon learn to know their friends. They will come and chirp and call, and if breakfast seems a little later than usual, they will scold and say all manner of strange things about the slow people inside the house. Sometimes they get tired waiting, and will fly away as if they were all very much vexed, but they generally leave one of the flock to watch, and when he sees breakfast put out, away he goes and tells the others. Now, that is what happens every morning where these kind, thoughtful people live (and we wish there were more of them), but when Christmas comes they think the birds also should have something extra.

How is the "birds' Christmas tree" made?

Well, in a number of ways. A little fir tree, or some other small evergreen, is put into a pot or box of earth or sand. Then little bunches of grain are tied to the branches, or pieces of soda biscuit, small bones with gristle or meat on them, little tin buckets of bird seed, crushed sun flower seed, pieces of apple or orange. This tree is generally placed on something high, so that the cats cannot easily spring at the birds. Among the farmers it is customary to save several sheaves of grain, and one of these is fastened to a tree branch or on a pole. A handful of coarse sand is acceptable.

Can you thing of anything much more joyful than to be able to watch all the fun that the birds have over their Christmas tree? Even if you cannot get a tree ready you can sweep away the snow and throw out some bird seed or soda biscuit crumbs.

I wonder how many of the homes will remember the birds on Christmas morning?—The Christian Guardian.

A MAGIC CHRISTMAS TREE.

Once there was a Magic Christmas Tree set right in the center of the world, and when all the candles were lighted the children came running and singing and laughing to see the beautiful tree. The world was very small, and they could all come quite easily except that some little girls had bound feet and stumbled and fell; and some very little ones were shut up in dark houses because they were married; and some had to carry heavy burdens; and ever so many were in mines and mills, but a great many happy little children were there and had such a lovely time. Then the One who gave the tree asked, "But where are the others?" Then they were all very still and one said, "Why, you see, they couldn't come. Too bad, poor little things!" and another said, "Perhaps they wouldn't care much about a Christmas tree, anyway." And one of the boys said, "We need all these presents ourselves; there are not enough to go round." And one of the girls said, "They are perfectly horrid children, not a bit clean or nice; this is our tree."

Then the One who gave the tree said, "But I want ourselves and become interested, if we are not al- when the children saw how sorry and disappointed he was, they ran as fast as their feet would carry them and every one brought some one else who couldn't come alone. The boys ran down into the mines and mills and called the others. The girls found the little tired ones doing up Christmas packages in stores and delivering them at homes, and those with bound feet, and the little ones in the dark rooms, and all came running together to the tree. Then the Magic Christmas Tree grew bigger and bigger and brighter and brighter, and the candles sparkled like stars, and there were presents for everyone. And all the children from all the world stood under its branches and sang, and the shining angel on the top of the tree sang too, but the One who gave the tree was happiest of all.—Everyland.

SOME IMPORTANT MATTERS.

I have on hand a hundred or more copies of the annual report of the Board meeting. I do not care to be at the trouble and expense of sending them where they are not needed, but any one desiring any number of the same, may secure them from me by sending necessary postage; three cents per copy at least.

Congressman R. P. Hobson, of Alabama, has introduced in congress a joint resolution for national constitutional prohibition, which was ordered printed. If every Christian in Louisiana will write to our congressmen and senators asking them for a copy of these resolutions, it will not only prove to them that we feel a lively interest in the matter, but compel them to look up the resolutions even though they may be "tabled." This may seem scarcely worth while to some, but it may help the cause to win, and every effort for the Master is worth while. Three of our dry parishes have gone back to the wet column; we are losing ground. Let us bestir ed all the children, every blessed little one." And ready so. "Do it now."

Editorial.

Bishop Candler said at Meridian that he was converted in the meeting of a Greek letter fraternity.

* * *

In commenting upon the oratory of John Bright, the famed British statesman, Sir Charles Dilke is reported to have said: "Take away Bright's voice and you have nothing left." Unfortunately there are some public speakers other than politicians to whom this remark is applicable.

* * *

A man is apt to suspect in others the things of which he himself is guilty. If he is prone to imagine that his fellow-men are dishonest, his own honesty will bear inspection. If he is quick to ascribe to others unworthy aims and motives, it is an indication that he is actuated by them. In our estimates of our brethren we frequently unconsciously take our own measure.

* * *

Dr. Spencer, the versatile editor of the Central Christian Advocate, thinks it would be well for Methodist churches to construct baptistries where persons may be immersed who prefer that mode of baptism. We suggest that our confrere should except from this requirement the churches of the Far West, where the only way of getting water into these indoor contrivances is said to be by means of an expensive windmill.

* * *

The Western Christian Advocate says: "A writer in the Chicago Tribune makes the following sensible comment on the habit of so many American women of overloading their fingers with jewelry: 'There is one thing in the world that I do hate, and that is to see a woman's hand covered with jewelry. I think there is nothing so beautiful as a woman's hand, and no woman who has a fine shaped hand and who has any artistic sense should ever put a ring on at all except the plain gold band she gets from the man she loves the best.'" Finger rings are bad enough, but what of earrings and protruding hatpins?

* * *

That men professing to be Christians should quibble about the virgin birth of our Lord is passing strange. If God stooped to take upon himself the human form, the mere manner of his assumption of it, in the presence of so great a miracle, ought not to stagger even the weakest faith. Indeed, should we not rather expect the entrance of Deity into our world and exit from it to be made in an unusual way? If the Divine Being moved and acted always upon the same plane as man, how could his presence upon earth be recognized? God, limited to our thoughts and methods, would be God no longer. The fact is, there is absolutely no escape from the miraculous. The universe must have had a beginning; the coming into existence of its mighty suns and systems, whether suddenly or by slow process, was a stupendous miracle. So was the formation of the first man out of the dust of the earth, whether it was done by an instantaneous creation or through ages of evolution. Nothing could be more foolish than to try to whittle the grand truths of revelation down to the comprehension of the human understanding. The contention that what is done now has always been done and always will be, is a puerile sort of logic. Even men vary their methods.

LET WATCH-NIGHT BE OBSERVED.

The watch-night has long been an appreciated service among the people called Methodists. It was originated in 1740 by James Rogers, a pious Kingswood collier. Such a meeting was then held monthly. Mr. Wesley thus refers to the practice: "Some advised me to put an end to this; but upon weighing the thing thoroughly, and comparing it with the practice of the ancient Christians, I could see no cause to forbid it; rather, I believed it might be made of more general use. The Church, in ancient times, was accustomed to spend whole nights in prayer, which nights were termed vigilae or vigils." Referring to a particular occasion, Mr. Wesley again says: "We concluded the year wrestling with God in prayer, and praising him for the wonderful work which he had already wrought upon the earth."

The present year will close on the Sabbath, and on this account our pastors will have an exceptionally favorable opportunity for conducting such a meeting, and it is to be hoped that all who can, will do so. The crying need of the Church everywhere is for a deeper spiritual life and an increased spiritual power. This can come in no other way than by heart-searching and prayer. It will be a happy day for us when we learn the futility of the various petty devices which men are conjuring up to bring prosperity to Zion, and turn with true penitence and faith to God, in whom alone is our strength.

Bishop Berry has given out the following ringing exhortation to the pastors and people of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which is also equally good for ours:

"I hope every pastor will plan to hold a watch-night meeting this year. The old year goes out on Sunday night. This fact will make it much easier than usual to secure a good attendance. The public worship on that evening may begin an hour later. If the program has variety and intensity no one will grow weary. The theme everywhere should be that of evangelism. The membership of our churches should be upon its knees in a united cry for the quickening of the spiritual life, and for the anointing of the Holy Spirit for service. The fact must be pressed home upon the people with tremendous earnestness that if the tasks of evangelism are left to the ministry alone the progress of the Church must continue to lag, and the number of our converts be pitiably small. It must be made clear that every Christian is logically and necessarily an evangelist, and must co-operate to the limit of his ability with the ministry in the great work of reaching the lost. Twenty thousand glowing fires of revival should be kindled at these watch-night meetings. And from these altars of dedication there should go out a million flaming evangelists."

A NEW MISSIONARY MOVEMENT.

Mr. Timothy Richard, who as a missionary to China is said to enjoy an excellent reputation for practical insight and sanity of judgment, has issued a call for one hundred missionaries to devote themselves entirely to literary work in the Chinese Empire. The fruits of a full century of Protestant missions and three centuries of Roman Catholic missions in this most populous country are estimated to be about a million and a half converts. These are said to be chiefly from among the poorer and more illiterate classes, and Mr. Richard has the conviction that Christianity can never reach the more substantial element of the population and become in the Orient the force that it deserves to be except through an appeal to the intellectual life of the people. In other words, he thinks it would immensely strengthen the cause if a wholesome and attractive Christian literature could be produced in the Chinese tongue. This literature he does not desire to make openly hostile to the faiths and traditions of China, but would have it set forth the teachings and exhibit the spirit of the Christian religion in a kindly and conciliatory manner. We are not an authority on missionary conditions in the Far East, but it strikes us that this proposal, if it could be carried out, might indeed prove to be a wise and timely one. We have in the case of France an object lesson of how a vicious literature can curse and degrade a people; why should not a clean and sound literature prove equally potent to bless and uplift a nation? As Victor Hugo has said, "and invasion of bullets may be resisted, but never an invasion of truthful ideas."

NEWCOMB HONORS ITS NAMESAKE.

The thirty-sixth anniversary of the death of Miss Harriet Sophie Newcomb, which occurred December 16, 1875, and for whom the Sophie Newcomb College of this city was named, was appropriately commemorated last week by the students of that institution. The exercises, which consisted of a sermon by Dr. R. S. Coupland, the rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, and a number of sacred songs appositite to the occasion, were conducted in the chapel, which was tastefully decorated. The custom of holding such a memorial service has been in vogue for about ten years.

The circumstances which led to the founding of Sophie Newcomb College, which is said to be the best endowed female college in the South, was quite similar to that which led to the establishment of the Leland Stanford, Jr., University in California. Miss Harriet Sophie Newcomb was the only daughter of Mrs. Sophie Newcomb, and died while a girl yet in her teens. This blow so touched the heart of the mother that she placed in the hands of the Board of Administrators of Tulane University the money to establish in New Orleans a college for the education of young ladies. The school was named in the honor of her dead daughter. Thus out of a great sorrow came this splendid institution which is doing so much for the young womanhood of Louisiana and the South.

THE REPORTS OF CONFERENCE BOARDS AND COMMITTEES.

It is not our purpose to print in the Advocate the reports of boards and committees at our recent Annual Conferences, unless we think there is a special reason for doing so. These reports have already been heard by the brethren in the Conference sessions, and will soon appear in the printed minutes. Were we to publish these documents for our three patronizing Conferences, they would fill our columns for several weeks. We do not think this is the best disposition that we can make of our space, though many of these papers are well written and interesting. It is our desire to give our readers first-hand articles on important topics, and live news, fresh from the field. And in trying to do this, we desire the assistance of both our pastors and people.

THE NATION'S BOOK OUTPUT.

Many journals throughout the country have recently issued a book number, which tends to emphasize the fact that this is a reading age and that we are a nation of book makers. Even the most omnivorous reader cannot now pretend to keep up with the stream of volumes which are being issued from our presses. It is stated that over a million copies of nine novels have already been printed, and that for this purpose over five hundred tons of paper have been consumed. During the year 1910, 13,470 books were published in the United States, and of these 9,209 were by American authors. They were divided according to the principal subjects treated as follows: Literature and collected works, 1,352; fiction, 1,303; juvenile, 935; theology, 894; political and social science, 748; poetry and drama, 721; physical and mathematical science, 644; biography, 631; law, 620; description and travel, 544; history, 526; education, 504. Commenting upon the magnitude of our book output, Dr. William Bailey, in the Independent, says: "If the adult population of the United States and Europe worked ten hours a day with the processes in use before the discovery of movable type, they could not accomplish the work done by the printing presses of this country alone." Never was there a time when one needed to exercise as much care in the selection of reading matter as one does at present. It is quite easy to read much and be profited little.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, requests us to state that for the present his address will be Mer Rouge, La.

Rev. C. A. Battle, the new pastor, preached his initial sermon at Felicity Street Church of this city last Sunday. His discourse was a scholarly and impressive one.

The White River Conference has inaugurated a movement looking to the abolishment of one Annual Conference in Arkansas, leaving two, instead of three in the State.

The Mississippi Conference elected Rev. M. M. Black, of Philadelphia, Miss., a trustee of Millsaps College to succeed his honored father, Dr. W. C. Black. This selection is an admirable one.

Rev. R. C. Morehead has been returned to the First Methodist Church of Searcy, Ark., hy Bishop McCoy. This ex-Mississippian seems to stand in the front rank in the Conference of his adoption.

Our two preachers at Vicksburg, Rev. C. W. Crisler and Rev. W. H. Saunders, were returned to their posts in that city. They are both choice men, and each of them is doing excellent work in his charge.

The pulpit of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, was occupied last Sunday at 11 a.m., hy Rev. J. G. Snelling, the pastor. At the evening hour it was filled by the Rev. George Jackson.

Rev. A. G. Shankle enters upon his second year at the Rayne Memorial Church, this city, with a bright outlook. He is in high favor with his people, who were most anxious that he should be returned to them.

Our First Church at Baton Rouge, La., will have a vigorous and forceful leader in the person of Rev. W. W. Drake. It is a matter of no little importance that Methodism should he well represented in the capital city of the State.

Under date of the 18th inst., Rev. J. D. Simpson, of Pickens, Miss., writes: "The work has started well in my new charge. We had a fine day yesterday—preached to two good congregations. The Pickens folk are all first-class. We are looking forward to a good year."

Mr. T. M. Bahington, of Franklinton, La., has our hearty thanks for a list of fourteen subscribers. We are pleased to have our paper find its way into the homes of this goodly town in Washington Parish, and we pray that it may carry to each one of them a weekly blessing.

The Southwestern Student Conference of the Young Men's Christian Association will he held at Ruston from Dec. 22 to Jan. 5, inclusive. Every college in the Southwest is expected to send delegates, and it is thought that not less than 350 workers in this organization will he in attendance.

Lake Charles, which is one of the most suhstantiol towns in Louisiana, will doubtless enjoy the ministry of Rev. T. J. Warlick, who is said to excel in his pulpit utterances. Brother Warlick reported a large number of conversions and accessions as a result of his labors at Baton Rouge last year.

The Gulf Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church met last week in Marshall, Texas. It voted overwhelmingly against the constitutional amendment changing the date of the meeting of the General Conference of this denomination from the first Monday in May to the first secular day in May.

We desire to express our appreciation of the reports of the proceedings of the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences furnished the Advocate last week hy Rev. A. J. Gearheard and Rev. H. B. Watkins. We feel sure that the readers of the Advocate will join with us in saying that the work was well done.

In a letter written on the 13th inst., Dr. D. W. Jones, of Brookhaven, Miss., says: "We are very much pleased at the prospect of having Rev. Robert Selby as our pastor for next year, and are preparing to give him a cordial welcome." Our friends have indeed fared well at the hands of Bishop Candler and his cabinet.

Rev. E. W. Barrington, our pastor at Woodville, Miss., and the president of Edward McGehee College, favored our office with a call one day last week. Brother Barrington has been in the city for some time for medical treatment, and recently underwent an operation. He is much improved, hut is not yet entirely well.

Dr. S. H. Werlein gave his farewell message at the First Methodist Church of New Orleans last Sunday at 11 o'clock. It is reported as having been worthy of the man and the occasion. At night this pulpit was filled hy Dr. George W. Grannis, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of the United States, who made an earnest plea for the preservation of the holy Sabbath.

At the recent session of tho Mississippi Conference a committee was named to consider the question of the correlation of the several institutions of learning under its control. A willingness to bave its Board of Education confer with the Board of the North Mississippi Conference concerning any educational matters of common interest was also expressed in the report adopted.

Why not send the Advocate to your friend or loved one as a Christmas or New Year gift? It will make fifty-two visits during the year, reminding him to whom it is sent of you each time it comes. It will also speak weekly of Him who alone can give peace and salvation, and of the Church which he hought with his own precious blood. No one's list of periodicals is complete unless it includes a religious journal.

The last issue of the Nashville Christian Advocate contained an interesting account of the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference from the facile pen of Dr. H. G. Henderson, our pastor at Columbus, Miss. Though he has iately come among them, Dr. Henderson has made a most pleasant impression upon the Methodists of the Magnolia State. He is an affahle and brotherly Christian gentleman, and a good preacher.

Among those who have done valuable work for the Advocate since the Annual Conferences were held are Rev. Eugene Johnson, of Ripley, Miss.; Rev. W. W. Graves, of Homewood, Miss., and Rev. J. O. Bennett, of Jennings, La., who sent us several subscriptions from his former charge at Bernice. To all of these hrethren we make our most respectful bow, and pray God's richest blessings upon them. We shall not soon forget their kindness.

From the Fayette Chronicle (Mississippi) we clip the following: "Rev. J. E. Gray, pastor of the Methodist Church at this place, has been assigned to the same work for another year, greatly to the gratification of his own congregation, as well as the people of the town generally. During their residence here, Mr. Gray and his estimable wife have made themselves quite popular, and we are glad to know that his pastorate will be extended over at least another twelve months."

The return of the Rev. V. C. Curtis to Kosciusko, Miss., for the second year has greatly pleased the people of that enterprising town, irrespective of denominational affiliation. The Herald, which is published there, says of Brother Curtis: "He is not only a strong preacher, but has few equals as a pastor and as a man. Every department of his church work has prospered under his leadership, and his personality and deep consecration have had much to do with bringing ahout this result."

After one year spent on the New Albany circuit, Rev. R. M. Evans has been assigned to the South Side Church, at Corinth, Miss. The local paper, the Union County Times, states that Brother Evans did excellent work in the field which he is now leaving, and that he and Mrs. Evans made many friends thereahout, who regret to give them up. The editor also heartily commends them to their new parishioners. That this faithful itinerant deserves the good things said of him we do not for one moment doubt.

Sister S. E. Wimberly, who formerly resided in this State, hut who now lives at Port Arthur, Texas, with her son-in-law, wrote us a most interesting letter a few days since. She stated that her husband died in August, 1910, and that her own health is now far from good. She spoke in terms of appreciation of the pastor at Port Arthur, but said that she greatly misses the Louisiana preachers, whom she knew and learned to love in the days agone. We are grateful to Sister Wimberly for her kind words concerning the Advocate, which, she assures us, has helped her in her spiritual life.

In a personal note received a few days since, Rev. R. O. Weir, who was for many years a member of the Louisiana Conference, but who is now stationed at Conroe, Texas, says: "I regretted to miss the gathering of the Louisiana brethren in New Orleans. I part with them with a tinge of sorrow. The Texans have received me kindly. This is a great State. We expect soon to begin the construction of a new $12,000 church at this place." We regret to note that Brother Weir has recently heen indisposed with a severe cold, and we trust that ere this he has regained his normal health.

Rev. W. M. Young is in place at Amory, Miss., his new charge, and sends a glowing account of his reception. He was met at the depot hy a committee and escorted to the parsonage in an automohile, where a sumptuous dinner was served by a number of the ladies. On Sunday, Dec. 10, there were 132 present at Sunday school. The Epworth Leagues (both Junior and Senior) are well organized and in a flourishing condition. The latter, especially, has a fine body of workers, including several of the teachers in the public school of the town. The new pastor was greeted hy good audiences at the preaching services.

Rev. J. H. Bass, of Brookville, Miss., under date Dec. 15, writes: "We received this morning the sad news of the death of Mrs. John Carr, one of our choicest memhers at Ex-Prairie Church, which took place at St. Joseph's Hospital in Memphis, where she had been under treatment for several weeks. Her remains will he laid to rest in the Macon cemetery to-morrow at 2 p.m. Sister Carr was a fine Christian character and one of the most energetic church workers in the State. Her place will he hard indeed to fill." We extend sympathy to the stricken relatives and friends, and pray that the Heavenly Father may sustain them in this trying hour.

The Union County Times thus comments on the return of Rev. L. M. Lipscomb to his former pastorate at New Alhany, Miss.: "The Rev. Mr. Lipscomb, who has been stationed here for the past two years, will preach here for another year. This fact comes as good news not only to his own people, but to the entire community, for by his upright walk and conversation he has so endeared himself to the people that some were afraid that he might be sent to another field. Mr. Lipscomb is not only a devoted Christian, but is also one of the best preachers that New Albany ever had. He is always ready and willing to do his part in everything that tends to the uplift of humanity."

On account of the illness of his wife, Brother D. M. Floyd, who for a numher of years has done good work as a supply in the North Mississippi Conference, deemed it best not to accept an appointment at Macon. He finds himself, however, somewhat ill at ease with the harness off, and he requests the brethren to pray that conditions may become such next fall that he may again be able to take his place in the ranks and move about, as the authoritics may direct. He thinks he will be in a condition to aid some of the pastors in their revival meetings next summer, if not sooner, and will be pleased to correspond with them on the subject. His address is Springville, Miss.

The report of Rev. P. O. Lowrey, the field agent, to the Sunday School Board of the Louisiana Conference shows that he did not allow any grass to grow under his feet during the past year. He traveled by buggy and rail 15,858 miles; delivered 143 addresses; organized 13 Sunday schools, 42 home departments, 18 teacher training classes, 24 adult classes, and did a considerable amount of other detail work. Some of Brother Lowrey's recommendations to the hoard were as follows: A Sunday school council in each district; a permanent Sunday school institute; that the work of grading the classes be still further extended; that a Sunday school sermon be preached to every congregation at least once a year, and that more help be given the negroes in their work.

The First Methodist Church of Jackson, Miss., enjoyed a large degree of prosperity during the year past. There were 178 additions to the Church, and this congregation now numhers 1,250. The amount contrihuted to missions was $1,525, and more than $1,000 was raised for connectional work outside of the local community. The building fund of the proposed Galloway Memorial Church already approximates $50,000, and it is expected that plans and specifications for the new structure will be adopted in the near future. The Jackson Daily News, in referring to Dr. A. F. Smith, the pastor, says: "The pulpit of this church was never filled hy an abler or more popular memher of the clergy, and he has done a splendid work since assuming charge here." Dr. Smith is also fast identifying himself with the various interests of the Annual Conference of which he is a member, and is already a good Mississippian.

A recent issue of the Hattiesburg News contained the following: "The News extends congratulations to the public at large and joins in the general rejoicing that Bishop Candler, in his wisdom, saw fit to return to their work in this city Dr. A. F. Watkins, of Main Street Methodist Church, and Rev. George H. Thompson, of the Court Street Church. They are men, both of them, worthy of their high calling, and in whom not only their congregations, hut Hattieshurg is well pleased. They are men of strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands, who live above the fog in public duty and private thinking—men of strong convictions, and have the courage of their convictions; and yet hroad and tolerant enough to reason with those whose convictions are not the same as their own. * * * And in the entire Conference there is not to be found a more consecrated servant of the Master, going ahout doing good, than Rev. M. B. Sharhrough, returned to this district as presiding elder. He is old-fashioned and simple in his sermons. It is like going back home and drinking sweet water from the old well, to hear him tell the 'old, old story, of Jesus and his love.' He is in truth a man after God's own heart, and he proclaims the Word from a heart full of love for his hrother-man, and with an unction from on high. The News wishes for these preachers and pastors and for all co-laborers in God's vineyard a happy and prosperous year, and may the message not return void to any of them."

SOURCES OF THE BELIEF IN THE FUTURE LIFE.

The presence in the mind of humanity of the belief and the longing after immortality.

The incompleteness and tragedy of human life without it.

The assurance that the universe is sound at heart and not dust and ashes.

The certainty of an unseen world, because its manifestations are everywhere seen in the natural world, in the psychic life of man, and in the orderliness of the universe.

The practical certainty that there is communication between that world and this.

The teachings of the New Testament in which we have confidence because we have demonstrated its teachings upon other subjects.

The practical value to humanity of the helief in immortality; its comfort, its heartening power, and the way in which it gives time and opportunity for the development of human life.—Epworth Outlook.

MINNIE BELLE SIMMONS.—As the last hour of September 11, 1911, was passing out into eternity, it carried with it the soul of this dear little girl. Minnie Belle was born July 23, 1904, and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Simmons. After an illness of only two days, she died at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Laird, on Bayou Rapides. She was laid to rest in Fellowship cemetery by Robert M. Brown, pastor of the Boyce and Lecompte circuit. Minnie was a bright, sweet child, and was the special pet of her grandmother, from whose arms she passed to the arms of Jesus. Her childish laughter has ceased to awaken an echo in the hearts of dear ones; her short life was too quickly cut off, the grief-stricken ones may think, but there is a Greater One, who knoweth best and loveth best, and we can but submit, knowing that if we live as he would have us live we may some day be with Minnie, who, after all, is only "lost awhile."

MRS. ROBT. M. BROWN.

Mrs. SARAH JUDSON FORD (nee Adam) died at the family home in Shreveport, La., Oct. 10, 1911. Mrs. Ford was the daughter of Margaret and Lucien Adam, and was born in Mobile, Ala., in 1848. Sister Ford was a devout Christian and loyal Methodist. She joined the Church during her early childhood and remained true to her Lord all during her life. She was a devoted wife to a noble husband, and a loving and sacrificing mother to her sons and daughters. During her last long spell of sickness and suffering, she was ever patient and resigned, not prone to complain, but courageous and blessed with Christian fortitude. For her to live was indeed Christ, in that she would reflect and glorify him, and we may know that her death, while our loss, was her gain. Her remains were interred in the Greenwood Cemetery at Shreveport; her burial was conducted by Rev. C. L. Jones and the writer. She is survived by her husband, five sons, three daughters and a large number of grandchildren and a host of friends who mourn her death.

HUGH W. JAMIESON.

Among the richest heritages of the Church of Christ are its holy women. They are the basic rock of social righteousness, and their christly hands have wrought the collossal pillars that uphold the temple of national greatness. Mrs. JULIA P. PITTS was born December 15, 1836, in Marengo county, Ala.; was married to Dr. J. R. S. Pitts on June 22, 1850, at Ocean Springs, Miss. Nine children were born unto them, of whom six are living. She died on August 16, 1911, at Waynesboro, Miss., where her body was buried. Her age was seventy-four years, eight months and one day. The Rev. G. S. Harmon conducted the funeral services. The Rev. P. P. Bowen, a Baptist minister, was her father, and Frances Bowen her mother. Being highly endowed intellectually, she consecrated to Christ all the treasures of her mind. As a devout and diligent student of the Bible, she often employed her graceful pen in the discussion of Scriptural and other themes to the enrichment of the people of God. As a wife and mother she was faithful and loving. In her home her virtues shone with the divinest beauty; there among her bereft loved ones, the influence of her christly character will ever abide as a holy legacy. In early childhood she was converted to God, and joined the Methodist Church. She was an unusually pious child, and grew into a beautiful and deeply spiritual young woman. Worldly pleasures never fascinated her, for her pure young heart had been won and wedded to Christ, her divine lover. From early childhood down to old age, her devotion was so constant that, like Mary of Bethany, she was ever sitting at the Master's feet learning of him. A number of years after her conversion she obtained the grace of entire sanctification, and ever after meekly professed the experience, and lived a beautiful life of "perfect love" before God and man, and died in the fullness of Christ. The fruits of the Spirit—meekness, patience, submission, gentleness, kindness, humility, and love—shone as a brilliant constellation in her character. To the poor she was kind, sympathetic, and dealt to them out of an open hand. In the Church, Missionary Society, and Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and the community, she was an active, diligent worker for Christ, until bodily affliction prevented. To live and work for Christ was her supreme ambition. In the militant church her bright star has sunk down beyond the sea of time, only to rise and shine with eternal radiance in the firmament of the glorified Church. In the beautiful garden of true friendship her name lingers as the aroma of the choicest flower. The Rev. O. D. Bowen, her brother, pays this beautiful tribute to her as a Christian: "In her whole life as a Christian, from early childhood to young womanhood, to wife and motherhood, and through every stage of life, to old age, she gave an exhibition of the beautifying and sanctifying power of the gospel of the grace of God." Mrs E. J. Davis esteems her thus: "Through an intimate acquaintance with her of forty years, worshiping at the same altar, I had the opportunity of knowing that she was an active Christian, and I never saw anything in her life but devotion to God." For about twenty-five years before her death she suffered great bodily affliction. Like her Savior, she knew sorrow and "was acquainted with grief." Every phase of bereavement, affliction and trouble was mingled in the bitter cup of her experience. While she walked through the fiery furnace, her faith in God never failed, and without murmuring she bowed submissively to the will of her Heavenly Father. As flowers are sweetest when bruised and beaten to the earth by the wings of the storm, so this flower of God, crushed by the storms of Providence, and laid in the arm of Christ's sufferings, yielded its holiest incense. But the patient sufferer is now at rest with Jesus, and her works will follow on to enrich the eternal crown. W. W. HOPPER.

NEW ALBANY, MISS.

We have entered upon the third year's service at New Albany. Our reception was most cordial on our return from Macon. The 'phone rang and rang until I could hardly finish my supper the evening I returned. Every time it was a happy salute and warm greeting. They said: "We are so glad," "we are happy over it;" "they did what we wanted them to do;" "all the people are delighted," "the——" and so on it went for quite a while, until I got happy standing at the phone and listening to such kind, affectionate, appreciative words of love and esteem, all unmerited, but all sincerely and warmly appreciated, because I knew the candor and honesty of the open hearts from which such words poured. I am in no sense worthy of such esteem, confidence and love, but it warms my heart like the spring-time freshet and makes my soul blossom with a mighty kind feeling to the violets peeping beyond the sod to greet the genial sun—turning from the star beds to warm and make fragrant their tiny and obscure life. I have never before been given such a cordial reception.

I desire to fully reciprocate and return large measures of love and service. The prospects are bright for a pleasant and prosperous year. The relation between the different churches here is most harmonious and fraternal. Rev. E. L. Wasson, of the Baptist Church, and Rev. Thos. McDill, of the Presbyterian Church, are warm-hearted, noble men, greatly beloved not only by their respective members, but by all the people in the community. Then, it is a rare benediction to have the association and fellowship of Brother Thos. Cameron. He is a superannuate of great honor, fidelity and loveliness of character and spirit. No one in New Albany is more genuinely loved and respected. They love him for what he is, the soul of purity and godliness. I am happy, Mr. Editor, over my return and the abundant evidence on every hand of the pleasure and satisfaction of the people in the matter. Yours for a great year,

L. M. LIPSCOMB.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TEMPERANCE REPORT.

To the Bishop and members of the Mississippi Conference of the M. E. Church, South: Brethren—

We, the members of your committee on temperance, beg leave to submit the following report:

Whereas the illicit sale of intoxicating liquor is being carried on in many places in the State of Mississippi; also at many so-called cold drink stands and clubs; therefore be it resolved:

First—That we request the next legislature to so amend the laws of the State as to require all cold drink stands to be licensed by the board of supervisors of the county, or by the mayor and board of aldermen of the municipality; also to prohibit the licensing of any but reputable persons, requiring bond to be given by the keeper of the stands not to violate the law of the State or the ordinance of the municipality; making said bond liable for the penalty prescribed by law for the illicit sale of liquor, and further providing that said license or permit shall become void upon the violation of any law of the State, or ordinance of the municipality.

Second—That it be made a violation of the prohibition laws of the State for any club, chartered or not chartered, to permit what is commonly known as lockers, or to permit intoxicating liquors kept in any form, in or about the premises of said club or society; and that said club or society shall be indictable for the illicit sale of intoxicating liquors upon the proof of the keeping of such liquors or lockers.

We request the further amending of the laws so that it will prohibit the keeping, or carrying around, intoxicating liquors put up in salable quantities, even if there be no proof that it is being carried for sale. We further request that the penalty for the violation of the prohibition laws be placed at the present maximum penalty, and that the present minimum penalty be removed; and further that each subsequent offense be punished as a felony.

We recommend the passage by the coming legislature of a scientific temperance instruction law.

We further recommend that the coming legislature pass a law raising the age of consent from the age of 12 to the age of 18 years.

We further recommend that the coming legislature establish a juvenile reformatory court.

We urge a full attendance at the State Prohibition Convention to be held in Jackson, Miss., January 1, 1912, one day before the meeting of the legislature.

We recommend the appointment of R. W. Millsaps, A. F. Smith and N. B. Harmon as an advisory board of the Anti-Saloon League.

We recommend that this Conference endorse the work of the Anti-Saloon League in enforcing the prohibition laws of the State; and in organizing the counties and precincts for the purpose of saving the State from the return of the open saloon.

This committee is of the opinion that this organization will be a great force in opposition to the saloon powers, and should have the support of the Conference.

Signed:
C. N. GUICE, Chairman,
ELMER C. GUNN, Secretary.

FIFTH STREET, MERIDIAN.

The time limit has broken the dearest ties, and I leave Fifth Street, Meridian, and come to Summit and East McComb. My loss in personal presence at Fifth Street will be repaid in happy memory, and the love and confidence the Church will give to my successor, Brother C. N. Guice. The good women are busy already, as I leave, getting ready to receive their new pastor.

Hope you may have a thousand new subscribers as a Christmas gift. A word from Summit later. Yours fraternally, C. M. CHAPMAN.

REMEMBERS BROTHER HARP.

In the New Orleans Christian Advocate of December 7 occurs the following: "Rev. Robert J. Harp, who was one of our best preachers and most active workers in the early days, is still with us, and, like the others of our beloved superannuates, is awaiting in great peace the summons home." He is the only contemporary of mine now living of the preachers of those "early days," whom I can call to mind. It was about sixty years ago at our Conference in Memphis that I first met with him. I had been appointed to preach at what is now Second Church, then only a little shanty made of clapboards. Meeting with Brother Harp on my way to preach there, I requested him to accompany me and make music for me in song, as I could not sing. He readily consented to do so.

This may be regarded as a trivial incident, but these recollections and associations are very precious to those who are said to live in the memories of the past. We were only Conference acquaintances and he may not remember the writer or the incident; but should he see this, I would be glad if he would write to me at Somerville, Tenn., Rural Route, No. 5. Early associates, as they become fewer and fewer, become dearer and dearer, as they patiently await the summons home above.

R. V. TAYLOR,
A superannuate of the Memphis Conference.

BISHOP CANDLER AND ELSE.

Dear Brother Meek: Your editorial in last weeks issue of the Advocate relating to Bishop Candler expresses my sentiments exactly. It has been my good fortune to meet and hear some of the great men on "both sides the sea," but none of them have impressed me quite so forcibly as our beloved Georgia Bishop. My prayer is that he may long be spared to lead the hosts of Israel and to bless the world.

In a ministry extending through twenty years I have never met quite so enthusiastic a reception as was accorded me recently upon my return to Yazoo City for the fourth year. Jews and Gentiles, Roman Catholics and Protestants have alike extended to us a most cordial welcome.

The Methodists hereabouts send you greetings and wish you a joyous Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Fraternally,
THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

THE BIBLE IN STATE SCHOOLS.

As the New Soutb Wales system of Bible reading in State schools is attracting much attention in New Zealand, Victoria, and also America, the following is interesting as well as authoritative:

During his visit to England, the Hon. James McGowan, Labor Premier of New South Wales, explained his views in "Tbe Treasury," a magazine published in London. Asked to tell something about the education system of New South Wales, he says:

"It is rather a long story about the working of the education system, if we begin at the beginning, and it really began in the 'sixties,' when the watchwords of the party of popular education were free, compulsory and secular.' They were not irreligious nor hostile to religion when they said 'secular,' but they had not found an answer to the argument of those who said it was not the business of the State to teach any particular form of religion. But they held strongly that it was the duty of the State to make the most of its citizens; that education was a valuable national asset, and ignorance a national danger. It was the ideas of the old Chartists that perhaps inspired our early leaders in educational matters. All our schools are free. It was not so at first; we charged a fee of three pence, allowing exemptions to those parents who were unable to afford it. But this method ultimately had to give way to sounder policy, and in our elementary schools free education is law, and every child has the right to be taught the religion of his parents, if the religious body to which the parent belongs will claim the right—and it works. Teachers of religion in our schools need not always be clergymen; if they are accredited by their Church, that is enough for us. When their day comes round, the particular children whom they have to teach are taken to classrooms by themselves. If the teachers do not turn up at the time expected, then the child goes on with the ordinary secular teaching, whatever that may be. So you see, if the children do not get religious teaching you cannot blame the State, you must blame the churches; they are free to come in and give it."

"And do they give it?" asked the interviewer.

"Yes, they do; they do their best to deal with difficulties which you here may find it hard to understand. There are great districts in New South Wales that are very sparsely populated. Why, we have one parish called Wentworth that is nearly as large as England. Consider the physical difficulties in a case like that. In the towns it is naturally much easier for the religious bodies to do their work; it is not so easy in the districts where the people live miles apart. It is really pretty to see, as you may sometimes in the summer, parties of children going on ponies five or six-mile journeys to school; but if you will realize that picture, you will realize also some of our difficulties. But the State must do its duty by its citizens. If it does, then it has a claim on them for duties in return."

The following is a copy of the New South Wales Act:

Clause 7. The school teacher in school hours gives selected Bible lessons from a book provided for the purpose, but is not allowed to give sectarian teaching.

Clause 17. Any minister of religion is entitled in school hours, on days to be arranged with the school committee, to give children of his own denomination, separated from others, an hour's religious instruction.

Clause 18. Any parent may withdraw his child from all religious teaching if he objects to such religious instruction being given.

THE BEST INVESTMENT FOR $1.75.

There is no other way to spend $1.75 and get so much in lasting pleasure for every member of the family as for a year's subscription to The Youth's Companion.

For the boys there are the fine articles by experts in athletic sports on the best practice in football, the knack in pitching, new "kinks" in swimming and sprinting—everything that interests the active, high-minded boy. For the girls there is encouragement for all wholesome activities indoors and out, from dainty dishes to dainty dress. For the household there is good advice about gardening, handy contrivances, ways of stretching the nickels and dimes.

This reading is all in addition to the ordinary treasury of stories, articles by celebrated men and women, the unequaled miscellany, the invaluable doctor's article, the terse notes on what is going on in all fields of human endeavor.

It will cost you nothing to send for the beautiful Announcement of The Companion for 1912, and we will send with it sample copies of the paper.

Do not forget that the new subscriber for 1912 receives a gift of The Companion's Calendar for 1912, lithographed in ten colors and gold, and all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1911 free from the time the subscription is received.

Only $1.75 now for the 52 weekly issues, but on January 1, 1912, the subscription price will be advanced to $2.00. N. O. Christian Advocate, 512 Camp St., New Orleans.

CHRISTMAS MONEY FOR THE BOY ON THE FARM.

Few people know the magnitude of the Fur Business in America. This is the time of the year when the boy on the farm not only gets a great deal of pleasure out of trapping and hunting, but quite a bit of pocket money besides.

Many people are under the impression that the Fur Bearing Animals of America are being exterminated, but the supply seems inexhaustible, and with the present Game Laws going into effect in every State, America bids fair to be one of the largest sources from which the world will draw its supply of Fur.

Louisville, Kentucky, is considered one of the largest Primary Fur Markets of the West and Middle South. There are two firms in Louisville who are considered among the big factors in the Raw Fur Trade of America. The firm of M. Babel & Sons, dealers in Furs, Hides, Wool, etc., is one of the oldest houses in the trade. This house was established in 1856. This firm is perhaps the only house in America that issues a Weekly Price List, thereby keeping shippers thoroughly posted on every change in the market.

Born to raise the sons of earth,
Born to give them second birth."

We have come again to the happy Christmas-time, and while we are exchanging gifts with one another it is hoped that the Epworthians will not forget the greatest Christmas gift that was ever made. It is feared that some of us too often forget the real significance of the Christmas-tide. It is certain that we will miss the real meaning unless we do have the Christmas spirit in our hearts.

The Testimony of John.

In our first reference we have the last words of the last apostle. John had been with Jesus from the beginning. He was personally acquainted with him. He knew of his miraculous birth, when the angelic host who announced it sang: "Peace on earth, good-will to men." He had been with him during the eventful years of his gracious ministry, and had heard him speak as never man spake. In these closing words the apostle sums up all that we need to know about God—"This is the true God," and the sum of his gift to us—"eternal life." He says, in effect: "We looked long for God in earth and sky and sea. At last he came, and unveiled himself in the figure of Jesus Christ. There could be no deceit about the appearance. We saw, we heard, we handled. He remained in the world long enough to vindicate his claim. Then, slain in the body, he rose from the dead. After a sufficient period to prove that it was he and not a phantom, he ascended to the majesty on high. In him we saw God. And while we perceived omnipotence in his works, and omniscience in his wisdom, we saw something else of which no philosopher ever dreamed—his love. This he revealed in acts of mercy, but especially in his voluntary sacrifice for our sins. 'Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us.' Not only so, but he has set us in the right angle to know God. He has given us an understanding. His love has illuminated our minds. We know that we know his character. In this atmosphere of love which he has created, we know him that is true."

The Name of Jesus.

The sweetest name on mortal tongue, the most precious name man ever heard, is the name of Jesus, which means Savior. This is the personal name of our Lord, in distinction from Christ, his official appellation. He came into the world to seek and to save that which was lost. He died that we might live. Should not each and every one, at this glad Christmas-time, sing forth his praises?

"Sing to the Lord a glorious song,
Sing to his name, his love forth tell;
Sing on, heaven's hosts, his praise prolong;
Sing, ye who now on earth do dwell;
Worthy the Lamb for sinners slain,
From angels praise, and thanks from men;
Worthy the Lamb, enthroned to reign,
Glory and power! Amen, Amen!"

Let us not lose sight of the important truth contained in this reference—that we are to be saved from sin, not in sin, as some seem to imagine. "The latter is like saving a man from drowning by keeping him under the water which is destroying him; or like recovering a man from sickness by leaving him under the malady which constitutes the complaint."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

He has nothing to sell or give; only tells you how he was cured after years of search for relief. Hundreds have tested it with success.

MERIDIAN COLLEGES.

On Sunday we had the pleasure of having Brother J. M. Morse fill the pulpit at the colleges, preaching to us at 11 o'clock in the morning. He preached an excellent sermon, which was enjoyed very much by both faculty and students. At night we were delighted to have Brother Quillian, of Nashville, Tenn., to preach, and tell us something of the Training School there.

The Mississippi Conference, which met here in Meridian, Bishop Candler presiding, has just closed. The Conference was a great blessing to the town, and we were glad for our students to have the opportunity to attend it while in session, and have the Conference as our guest at a public drill, concert and luncheon on Friday afternoon.

We have in school about thirty or forty young preachers, most of whom are going into the Methodist Church, and eight or ten missionaries. Glad to state that this is the best year in the history of the schools, and our prospects for students after Christmas are bright. In both colleges we have room for a few more students, and we are making special offers after the holidays. Those wishing to attend after Christmas will drop us a card, and we will be glad to send catalogue and give our special rates.

AN ASPIRATION.

Oh, Gracious Father, keep me through thy Holy Spirit; keep my heart soft and tender now in health and amidst the bustle of the world; keep the thought of thyself present to me as my Father in Jesus Christ; and keep alive in me a spirit of love and meekness to all men, that I may be at once gentle and active and firm. Oh, strengthen me to bear pain, or sickness, or danger, or whatever thou shalt be pleased to lay upon me, as Christ's soldier and servant; and let my faith overcome the world daily. I pray for this, and for all that thou seest me to need, for Jesus Christ's sake. Amen.—Thomas Arnold.

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

To save the boys and girls is to perpetuate a Christian nation.

* * *

"'Twas doing nothing was his curse.
Is there a vice can plague us worse?"
—Hannah Moss.

* * *

Rev. R. P. Neblett's fine and progressive Sunday school had a most interesting and helpful exhibit at the Annual Conference.

* * *

Prof. Rundle, of Louisville, Miss., has organized an enthusiastic Men's class, with 20 charter members.

* * *

A very fine book for the Primary Department teacher is called "Our Primary Department," by William D. Murray. It is No. 10 in the Sunday School Times Handbook. 1031 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

* * *

Brother R. I. Collins was presented a Bible at the Annual Conference in Macon, having brought in more Children's Day money than any other charge. The Sunday School Board presented this Bible with much pleasure.

* * *

Miss Janie D. Miller, of Eupora, Miss., has organized a class of 12 fine boys, and inducted them into the preliminary mysteries of the Boy Scout Movement. This class promises loyal assistance to Mr. T. W. Cooper, their much loved superintendent.

* * *

The First Methodist Sunday School in Corinth took first prize on the Sunday school exhibit as a whole and for each class. Some were most unique and attractive, and the Primary Department, Boys' Class, Alpha Beta Class, Young Woman's Bible Class, Galloway Memorial Class and Young Men's Bible Class deserve much credit for preparing these handmade exhibits at the most busy season of the year.

* * *

The beginning of a new Conference year witnesses the beginning of new records in many schools, and every time a new beginning is made in any organization that wants to grow greater care should be taken to perfect that organization in every detail. If the secretary is not inspired to do better and his records are inaccurate, there is little hope for securing data for future reference and present progress. The secretaryship is a great office, and its responsibility should be keenly and prayerfully felt.

* * *

Mrs. F. A. Thompson, of Macon, Miss., has made a beautiful and attractive room of a vacant one in the old parsonage at this place. Sunday school convenes at 10 o'clock, but she goes at nine and suggests that all who can, come at that time and do the handwork and memory verses. Many come and follow the graded lessons plan. There are two homemade kindergarten tables, which seat 20 or more, and a teacher presides at each table. When twenty folding and illustrated pages have been made by the children, Mrs. Thompson makes an attractive cover and ties the book well together, and the delighted child has a handmade book to add to his juvenile library. The mothers are all interested and assist this far-seeing and busy teacher in every way.

Advantages of Class Organization for Boys.

(1) It takes advantage of the gang instinct in the boys of the teen age and uses it for good; (2) develops true leadership in the boys; (3) gives each one something definite to do; (4) divides responsibility; (5) provides for the boy's need of social life and directs it in the best way; (6) gives the teacher an opportunity to get into touch with the home life of the pupils; (7) encourages clean athletics under favorable and wholesome environment; (8) gets boys to work for boys; (9) solves the problem of order, regularity and system; (10) appeals to the boy's love of a name, pin, secret grip, password, whistle, class song, class yell, etc.; (11) gives purpose and aim to the class; (12) develops a strong class spirit of loyality among the members of the class, to the teacher, school and Church; (13) makes Bible study interesting; (14) brings Bible truths down into practical daily life; (15) shows them that boys can be religious and yet have an all-round good time; (16) gives the teacher such a hold upon the boys as to prepare the way to win them to Christ and keep them with him—their hero supreme.

COMPLIMENTARY RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Quarterly Conference, Brookhaven M. E. Church, South, December 9, 1911.

Whereas, Rev. J. M. Wyatt has been called to a new charge by order of his Conference, therefore, be it resolved:

First—That we, the representatives of this church, express to Brother Wyatt our sincere appreciation of the excellent work he has done as our pastor. In less than a year he has won the love and esteem of all our people, and has done much to bring about a feeling of fellowship and good-will between all denominations.

Second—That we commend Brother Wyatt to the people of his new charge as in every way worthy of their confidence and love. We assure them further that they will find his familiy a charming addition to the social as well as the religious life of the community.

Third—That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this conference, a copy handed to Brother Wyatt, and a copy sent to the board of stewards of the Durant M. E. Church, South..

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas the death angel visited the home of our Brother and Sister Herlong on Friday, Nov. 17, 1911, and called home their only child, little HENRY EARL, therefore, be it resolved,

First—That the Tylertown Sunday school, together with many other friends, express our sympathy to the bereaved parents.

Second—That though her little form will be seen no more by those who love her dearly, and though her sweet voice will be heard no more in the home, we beg you to look unto him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me," we beg the loved ones to weep not, because they know where to find their little darling, "safe in the arms of Jesus."

Third—That a copy of the resolutions be sent to the family, and a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed: Mrs. W. W. Morse, Hazel Brumfield, Lois Caraway.

CHRISTMAS AT THE ORPHANAGE.

To Louisiana Methodists:

To those of our friends who desire to send boxes to the Orphanage for the Christmas holidays, we suggest that they send such things as will be useful. Of course, the toys will be acceptable and will make happy the hearts of many of our children, who have no one to remember them in this time of rejoicing. But things more substantial are in greater need—anything in the grocery line, such as rice, sugar, grits, and all kinds of canned goods, except tomatoes. We will be especially grateful to those who desire to observe the Christmas festival by making donations in money.

There are sixty-three children without the natural parents and affection that make most of the children of the State rejoice in this Christmas time. It will bring unspeakable joy to the hearts of these children if over the state there are those who will remember them, and thus let them know that somebody cares for them.

All contributions in money should be sent by check or money order, and all boxes can be sent by express. Address all communications and boxes to the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, Ruston, La.

COUSIN OLIVE'S WAY.

"Amy, how do you manage to keep your things in such good order?" groaned Ethel, as she watched her cousin neatly and quickly fold away her belongings in the little dresser Mrs. Gilbert had set aside for her use. "I just open the drawers, and throw my things in anyway. I just hate to be tidy!"

"I used to feel that way," laughed 'Amy Procter, "but Cousin Olive reformed me. It's a way she has with her young relatives, and it certainly is very effective."

"How does she do it?" demanded Ethel.

"I won't tell," said Amy, "because you are to visit her next month, and you'll find out."

"She won't reform me—I won't let her," declared Ethel. "I don't like to have things in order."

"Wait and see," warned Amy. "She has a way about her that accomplishes many things. Everybody says so."

Ethel registered a little vow that all Cousin Olive's ways would not move her, and then she forgot all about it in the delights of nutting frolics, picnics, and other good times planned for her Cousin Amy. She loved Olive Peterson dearly, though she was more than twice as old as herself, but she had never visited in her home, and she felt that if Cousin Olive thought it her duty to reform all her relatives, she would find herself mistaken in one certain thirteen-year-old girl. The whole family had labored with Ethel to no purpose, so it was not likely that a young lady, and almost an invalid at that, could do much in six or eight weeks.

"Ethel, dear, my Embroidery Club meets here this afternoon," said Miss Peterson the second day Ethel was with her, "and I wish you would show them upstairs to take off their wraps, if you will. Just take them to your room, as the guest-chamber is cold when the wind blows from the west. I suppose I should have had a fire started in the furnace, but the grate fires are much more cheerful."

"I will be glad to do it, Cousin Olive," said Ethel heartily, and then she thought of her room. "How—how soon will they be here?" she faltered.

"About two-thirty, I think. They usually meet at that time."

Ethel flew up-stairs in haste, for it was then one o'clock, and everything was in disorder in the pretty room. She crammed the dresses and shoes hastily in the closet, and shut the door, and then she disposed of the other belongings in drawers and boxes as fast as she could. She was barely through when the door-bell rang, and she had to scurry down to usher the guests in and up the stairs. She pulled down the shades to hide anything she might have missed in her haste, and rejoiced that the day was dark and gloomy.

Next day the room was as disorderly as ever, and Ethel was shocked to hear her cousin say to a neighbor who happened in for a little chat: "Mrs. Burt, you wanted to see that blue frock of Ethel's when you were here yesterday morning, but she was away from home. If you have time now Ethel can take you up to her closet, and show it to you."

Ethel fairly gasped as she thought of that closet, but Mrs. Burt relieved her by her answer. "I am in a hurry this morning, Miss Peterson, and if Miss Ethel will be home this afternoon, I'll come then."

Ethel spent the rest of the morning putting the closet to rights, and then she turned to the bureau drawers. "I might as well get these ready," she grumbled; "there's no telling who'll want to nose around in my possessions next."

The "next" person happened to be her new-found friend, Cecilia Morgan, who offered to help her dress for a hastily-arranged drive ending with a hot supper at a little country inn. It's no wonder you said you could be ready in five minutes, Ethel Gilbert," she said. "If Miss Peterson keeps your things in this beautiful order and everything right under your fingers, you needn't take any credit for your hurry. Joe. Blake said yesterday that you were the most sensible girl he ever saw, for you didn't keep the crowd waiting hours when you went any place. I shall tell Mr. Joe to thank Miss Peterson for it all."

"You can save yourself the trouble," laughed Ethel. "I put those things in order myself." She did not mention that her neat ways had been painfully and quickly required, but she did rejoice that she was able to be ready for the hack when it came, and thereby win for herself a shower of compliments from her chaperone and the boys of the party. "I'm glad I had that scare, and put things in order," she said to herself. "I wonder whether it wouldn't be a good thing to keep things straight all the time."

Ethel had a most delightful visit with her cousin, and when she went home the family remarked about her improved appearance. "How beautifully you have kept your clothes, dear," said Mrs. Gilbert. "Cousin Olive must have tried her magic way on you."

"Yes," said her young lady sister Mary; "it is a joy to go into Ethel's room now. Everything is neat and tidy, and her belongings are properly cared for. I think somebody should write and thank Cousin Olive for her kindness."

"Cousin Olive had nothing at all to do with it," said Ethel loftily. "She never said one word on the subject of keeping things in order. She is just lovely, and never scolds a bit. In fact, she never mentioned my room, nor how it was kept. I did it myself."

"Well, that is remarkable," said Mrs. Gilbert with a little smile. "Cousin Olive has such a persuasive way with girls that I felt sure she must have tried it on my tall daughter, to work such a complete change."

"Well, she didn't," said Ethel complacently. "I just saw how much nicer it is to have things in order, so now I keep them that way."

"Didn't Cousin Olive ever send anybody up to your room, Ethel?" said Mary Gilbert striving to keep the smile out of her voice and eyes. "Didn't she ever—"

"Is that the way she does it?" cried Ethel as a sudden idea penetrated her quick brain. "Why, I wonder whether that was what made me always have things in order. It must be, and I thought I did it all myself!"

"That is Cousin Olive's way," said Mrs. Gilbert. "She always allows the girls to think they did it themselves. But it doesn't matter who did it, dear; I am very happy to know that my big-little girl is getting neat and orderly habits, and that is enough for me."—Hilda Richmond, in Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

A lady once attended a quarterly meeting at a country church, arriving there after the services had begun, and, the presiding elder being absent, the pastor preached. When the services had closed, the said lady went up, introduced herself, and, thinking that he was the presiding elder, said: "O, you did preach such a fine sermon." A brother, taking her aside, said "That was not the presiding elder who preached; that was the pastor." She replied: "Well, I thought that that was one of the poorest sermons that I had ever heard." A good illustration of how little many of the sentiments that we hear expressed are worth.

Christian women, when your husbands and sons return to you in the evening, after buffeting the waves of the world, let them find in your homes a haven of rest. Do not pour into the bleeding wounds of their hearts the gall of bitter words, but rather the oils of gladness and consolation. Be fond of your homes. Be attached to your homes. Make them comfortable. Let peace and order and tranquility and temperance abound there.—Cardinal Gibbons.

The time of the first sorrow is to every life a most critical point, a time of great danger. The way is new and untried, and over which the feet have never passed before. * * * Many lives are wrecked on the hidden reefs and the low, dangerous rocks that skirt the shores of sorrows sea. * * * It should be received as God's own messenger; and we should welcome it, and listen for the divine message it bears. * * * If we are wise, we will give sorrow as cordial a welcome as joy; for it is from the same loving hand, and brings gifts as good and golden.—Rev. J. R. Miller.

NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 58—No. 52. "Prove All Things; Hold Fast That Which is Good." WHOLE No. 2915

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1911 CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

Our work may seem but a discord,
Though we do the best we can;
But others will hear the music,
If we carry out God's plan.
—Congregationalist.

* * *

Not a few in this day seem to have a prejudice against supernatural and instantaneous conversions. But this is about the only kind we read of in the New Testament. And they occur now, when the gospel is faithfully preached in power and demonstration of the Spirit, just as they always have done.

* * *

Whether we carry them out unfailingly or not, let us form new and high resolves with the opening year. Even though they be short-lived, lofty aspirations show that there is still good in the soul. Those who are never moved inwardly to strive for better things are greatly to be pitied. There is no hope for the man who is so perfectly contented with himself at present that he has no ambition to move upon a more exalted plane in the future. The standard which Christianity has set for us is "perfection," and toward it we should unceasingly climb.

* * *

The test of any teaching is its fruit—what it accomplishes. The higher critics claim that they have made the Bible a new book. This theoretical contention sounds well, but what great revivalists do these gentlemen number in their school? How many people have they led to Christ and into the Church? If they have poured such a flood of light upon the sacred writings, as they insist they have, surely these writings, thus illuminated, should prove more effective in impressing and reaching men when expounded from the pulpit. A sound theology must be a workable theology—it must produce results. Where are the triumphs of higher criticism in the field of actual service? If it has any such credentials, it is high time its votaries were bringing them forward. It sadly needs something else to sustain it besides oracular assumptions of scholarship.

* * *

It is not the physical man alone which suffers from the activity and mad rush of this modern day. It also militates greatly against the spiritual life. No person can rise to the highest attainments in grace without a daily season apart from the world, in which he reads the Bible, searches his heart, prays, and communes with God. The Christian who ceases to go to the secret closet will soon find himself growing materialistic and weak. Had they not tarried at Jerusalem, the early disciples would never have startled the world with their mighty achievements. The secret of Wesley's unsurpassed zeal and work for the Master finds explanation in the constancy and ardor of his private devotions. If every worker in the various branches of the Christian Church would daily find his way into God's presence and consciously commune with him for a brief season during the year 1912, we dare say the results at its close would silence completely the charge that the gospel of Christ has lost its power.

A NEW YEAR HOMILY.

We wish for every reader of the Advocate a happy New Year, or what is better still, we pray that each of them during the year soon to begin may accomplish much for the Master, and in experience and character move forward to larger and better things. Happiness is much to be desired, but it is not necessarily the highest good. It is better to be noble and useful than to be happy, though God has so ordered it, that in purity of heart and unselfish service the utmost attainable earthly peace and joy are found. The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews characterized properly sinful pleasures when he represented them as being for "a season." No fancied happiness, springing from outward conditions and leaving God out of the reckoning, can be otherwise than short-lived. The only soul that has an abiding and deepening contentment and joy is that in which Jesus dwells and reigns.

The present life is a building time. Every human being is constructing a character. Whether we would have it so or not, this work goes steadily on. "Our to-days and yesterdays are the blocks with which we build." This task engages alike the good man and the bad man. Whether it be founded upon the sand or upon the rock, whether it be an evil or a worthy structure, it progresses toward completion with every passing hour. May we, each and all, build wisely during the year 1912, making sure that our foundation is well laid on the imperishable "Rock of Ages," and that we use no faulty material. Let us ever remember that our characters must pass muster before the Supreme Architect of the Universe. Not the slightest flaw can be hidden from his all-seeing eye.

This earthly existence is also a period of opportunity. The Heavenly Father has opened before us wide reaching fields of service, and they who toil faithfully therein may increase the magnitude of their reward in eternity. "He that reapeth receiveth wages." Sometimes they who journey abroad gather up treasures here and there and send them back across the ocean, that they may possess and enjoy them when they return home. So may we store up unfading treasures in the Father's house to await our coming. There are people who enter heaven rich, just as there are persons who are born millionaires on earth. But the heavenly wealth is not bequeathed; it must be acquired. Much to be commiserated is the man who, amid the abounding opportunities which God here giveth, neglects them and faces the future in old age, bankrupt and with empty hands.

This life is, furthermore, a pilgrimage. None may hope to abide here. We are all travelers; we no sooner set foot upon the soil of earth than we begin to go hence—there is no such thing as standing still. Childhood, youth, manhood and old age are the successive stages of the unceasing journey. The succeeding years are the mileposts along the way. Longfellow voiced the truth when he wrote:

"Art is long, and time is fleeting,
And our hearts, though stout and brave,
Still, like muffled drums, are beating
Funeral marches to the grave."

But the grave is not the end of our pilgrimage—it is not a goal, but a passageway. We are pilgrims to eternity; we are either moving up the "narrow road" to a mansion in the sky, or down the "broad road" to the drear abode of the lost. Fellow-traveler, whither are you bound?

In view of the foregoing reflections, we can frame no better wish for our readers than that when the New Year shall have come and gone, its close may find each of them with an enriched experience, a sturdier and more majestic character, a larger store of treasures laid up in the land where moth and rust do not corrupt, and a twelve-months' nearer approach to the glorious city, where God reigneth and no evil thing cometh.

THE YEAR'S BENEVOLENT GIFTS.

Undoubtedly there is more philanthropy in these opening years of the twentieth century than in any former period of the world's history. Large gifts are not now uncommon, and it has become the custom of the press as each year draws to a close to sum up the contributions of this character which have been made during its passing days. The list for 1911 is set down as follows:

The public benefactions of 1911 have amounted, in this country, to more than $150,000,000. This total was never exceeded except in 1909, when the aggregate approximated $175,000,000.

Andrew Carnegie has this year given away more than $40,000,000 of the remainder of his fortune. His largest gift was $25,000,000 to the Carnegie Corporation of New York, specially organized by the Legislature at Albany to carry on the iron man's charities.

Mr. Carnegie, who is now a little more than seventy-seven years of age, has given to the public over $221,000,000.

The elder John D. Rockefeller's publicly announced gifts this year have not amounted in all to more than $3,000,000, of which $1,315,000 went to Chicago University and $1,000,000 to the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research in New York City. The rest was to colleges in the far West and South.

The third largest individual giver was Frederick C. Hewitt, who left $2,000,000 to the Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital and $2,000,000 to the Little Missionary Day Nursery, both New York institutions.

The missionary societies of America reported that their gifts have exceeded $13,000,000 during the year.

The colleges have been large gainers through the generosity of their wealthy graduates. Columbia University received $2,535,000. Harvard and Princeton universities were left more than $1,700,000 apiece, and Chicago, Yale and Johns Hopkins universities inherited more than a million each.

The crusade against tuberculosis got a lift to the extent of $2,000,000 from James A. Patton, the Chicago grain operator.

Prominent women were large givers to public purposes. Mrs. Russell Sage provided $300,000 for a new dormitory at Cornell University. Among her other donations were $150,000 to Vassar College and $100,000 to the New York Exchange for Women's Work.

Mrs. Rhinelander King, of Great Neck, Long Island, provided nearly $1,500,000 for church charities.

Mrs. E. H. Harriman has made no definite announcement as to the report that she would found a university, but she gave largely in other directions, including $200,000 to the hospital department of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and $125,000 to Yale University.

THE NEW YEAR.

How shall I walk the course of my life in the year which is before me?

1. Walk with God. Let the year begin with God. Everything should begin with Him. That which is not begun with Him is not properly begun, whatever other preparation may have been made. We should begin our education with him. With him we should begin every new enterprise and every new year. Have we God with us, in our hearts and lives? If not, we are not prepared to begin the year. If he be with us we have no need to fear. He is more than a match for all that can be against us.

2. Walk uprightly. One who walks with God will surely walk nprightly. We have to regret the crooked paths onr feet have made in the past. Too often we have yielded to temptation. We have indulged in uncharitable and evil thoughts, and given utterance to words which were not right. Perhaps we have done many things which will not bear the light. Let the past go if we have sincerely repented and found pardon. We need not spend time regretting the past. The time to come is our care. Let there be no more crooked paths. Walk nprightly, because the way is short.

3. Walk in love. Let the time past suffice wherein we have walked in bitterness and envy and hatred. Life is too short to waste in ways that are dark. Hatred and strife are of the evil one. Love is of God, and God is love. If we walk with God we must walk in love. There is a lond call for love. The souls of men are weary with hate and strife. Men, women, and little children are pining away for kindness and tenderness and benevolence and charity. Love alone can make the world better. This is the sunshine that will drive away all darkness and melt all cold and hard hearts. Let the year be one of uninterrupted love. Let love to those in the home, to neighbors, to the lost, to the wicked, to enemies, characterize all we do and say. Let every step be taken in love, and the year will be all bright and warm and happy. It will be a year of service, a year of usefulness, a year with a noble record.

4. Walk in faith. We cannot see the end from the beginning. We can imagine many hard and rough places in the journey. The way may be rough and steep and thorny. But we need not be discouraged. We need not fear. Our Father, whose hand we hold, has made many great and precions promises. He has said, "My presence shall go with thee;" "I will guide thee with mine eye;" The Lord is thy keeper;" "As thy days, so shall thy strength be;" "My grace is snfficient for thee." Have faith in God. Firmly believe that what he hath promised he will surely perform. Walking by sight, we cannot enjoy peace. But God will keep him in perfect peace him whose mind is stayed on him. Look to the hills whence cometh all onr help, and march on right boldly.

5. Walk in gladness. It is our privilege to look for better things in the futnre than we have yet seen. We have not exhansted the resonrces of the Almighty. He tells ns that we have asked nothing, and charges us to ask largely. The storehouse is infinite. There is more grace, more love, larger, sweeter, richer life than we have yet enjoyed. Afflictions may come, but we have learned that all things work together for good to them that love God. The worst that can come will only make our jonrney shorter and onr eternity brighter.

> "Let cares like a wild deluge come,
> Let storms of sorrow fall."

We may glory in tribulations, and sing in the darkest hour. Let no dark clonds frighten us. Welcome the new year with a song, sing on as the days go by, and when the end of the year approaches still sing the praises of him who has brought ns safely on our way.

Walking thus we shall have a happy new year. It will be a year of service. We shall find many weak ones whom we can strengthen, many weary souls whom we can rest, many walking in darkness upon whom we can shed a ray of light. It will be a year of victory. We shall meet enemies, but no enemy can defeat us while the captain of our salvtaion is our leader. If death should come dnring the year we shall be able to sing, "Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."—New York Christian Advocate.

SOME AFTER-CONFERENCE REFLECTIONS.

By H. P. Lewis, Sr.

Well, the 98th session of the Mississippi Conference is a thing of the past—passed into history. Conference occasions are always occasions of interest, and, to some of us, profit. The one just closed was my 54th. The men who composed the Mississippi Conference in 1857 are all gone except two, viz., R. A. Sibley, Sr., of the Mississippi Conference, and Joseph Newsom, of the North Mississippi Conference. It took about two days longer to transact the business of the Conference fifty years ago than it does in our day. Usually, if we got our appointment the eighth day we were doing well. We transact more business now in six days, including Sunday, than we did in eight days fifty years ago, and in most instances do it better.

I feel sure onr brethren want to be honest—do the right thing; yet in the jndgment of some, things are done in the cabinet that, perhaps, ought not to be done. But, presiding elders can't always have their way in the cabinet. I call to mind a thing that happened in the cabinet fortw-two years ago. Conference met in Jackson that year. The first night the cabinet was in session the Bishop called on the presiding elder of the Jackson District to nominate a man for Canton. C. G. Andrews was nominated. Brother Andrews had served the charge the year before, and the people desired and fully expected his return. The Bishop did not take a vote on the nomination, but kindly asked the presiding elder to make a nomination for another place, which he did. The same thing happened three or fonr times during Conference. The Bishop wanted Dr. Andrews for Jackson, while the Canton people fully expected his return to them. The matter was discussed by the Bishop and presiding elder many times during Conference, each one intent on carrying his point. The last night of Conference came, and Jackson and Canton had not been provided for. Things began to be a little interesting. Dr. A. seemed determined to hold Andrews for Canton, and the Bishop was equally determined to put him down for Jackson. The Bishop sat for quite awhile with pencil in hand, apparently scribbling on a blank piece of paper, while the presiding elder was urging the importance of the brother being returned to Canton. But there is an end to all discussions of every character, however interesting or uninteresting they may be. The Bishop finally said, in unmistakable language: "Brother A. goes down for Jackson," and at the same time wrote his name opposite Jackson. The presiding elder was on his feet in a moment and said in an excited tone: "That wont do, Bishop; that wont do." "Why," said the Bishop, "wont Brother Andrews do for Jackson?" "So far as Andrews is concerned," said the presiding elder, "he will do for Jackson, or any other place, but he ought to go to Canton." "No," said the Bishop, "he goes to Jackson." That settled it, and Brother Adams was sent to Canton. The presiding elder said to me as we were going to our rooms that night, "Bishop McTyeire is a good presiding officer in the Conference room, but the poorest cabinet officer I ever saw."

It is utterly out of the question for the Bishop and his advisers to give universal satisfaction. It is true some men are moved just to make room for some other brother. A thing of that kind occurred in our Conference some years ago. Just before the adjournment of Conference the fact dawned upon the cabinet that a certain prominent brother had not been provided for. Now what? Every station of great importance was supplied. To relieve the situation a good brother who had been in a certain station, perhaps two years, was lifted and sent to a place of less importance, where the salary was far below what he had been receiving, and the other one took his place. Did it hurt? Of course it did, but what else could the Bishop do?

I once advised a good brother who had been moved to make room for another, and whose wife, as well as himself, was much troubled about it, to say nothing about it; but to go to his new charge, go to work, and make the best of the situation he could. He had been only one year on the work, had a long and expensive move the year before, which crippled him in his finances, yet he did a fine year's work, the people loved him, and asked for his return, etc., and fully expected his return. Yet he was sent to another field, which paid less than $600 salary, with a parsonage worth less than $400. He moved out of a parsonage worth $2700. Well, I had a similar experience more than twenty-five years ago—moved ont of a parsonage worth $1,200, well furnished, into one worth about $300, poorly furnished. The move we made was a long and expensive one. No presiding elder was responsible for that move. I moved to my charge full of love to God and my brethren, and have ever felt thankful that Bishop McTyeire took the matter in his own hands and made my appointment independent of all the presiding elders. The hand of God was in it all. So let me say to any brother who feels that he has been mistreated, if any such there be: Go to your work in the name of Christ, trust him to lead and gulde, do the best year's work of your life, and quite likely yon will be glad before the year is gone that you were moved.

I love you all, and I feel sure many of you love the "old man." Let us all take a new start in life, love each other more, pray for each other oftener, and pray heaven's richest blessings upon our labors. Let us thank God we were not sent to "Simmion's," and pray for the unfortunate brother who was. It may be, some of us think more highly of ourselves than we ought. Let us think soberly. Let us condecend to be men of low estate. The Book says: "Be not wise in your own conceit. Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men. If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men."

THE SHEPHERD PSALM.

Bishop William A. Quayle, in Zion's Herald.

David, poet laureate for religion, has written a song. This is his laureate poem. If there be a sweeter one written by any poet, certain it is none ever penned was read by so many, loved by so many, leaned on by so many. Sometimes a single floating spar tells of a wrecked ship. So one floating phrase tells of a life which otherwise had been clearly forgotten. One psalm fluting from a poet heart will serve to keep his memory young while earth endures. This Shepherd Psalm is such. Poet David can stay. Nobody but will want his company after this.

Burns comes in among us with his laverock note and his plowed-up daisy flower, and he may sit down. He is wanted here. He is rural. The smell of the new-plowed field is on his garments; the clean dirt of the plowing is on his hands. The page on which is written "The Daisy" is punctuated with ink spots of the earth out of which the daisy grew. Burns has the plow breath in his song and the plow soil on his feet, and you may settle to it that the world loves the plowman and his field ridged with the windrows of fresh-turned soil.

Poet David, come and stay. You have brought a nosegay for the heart. You have seen many things. You have remembered all yon saw. You bring us memory of the far fields, and the Bethlehem hills, and the bleating lambs, and the anxious mothers, and the swift green of pastures wet with dew, and fresh winds blowing gently at evening and at morn, and the shepherd with his rod and staff. You have written a pastoral poem which puts Theocritus to defeat. That lark of Greece never caroled like this.

Poet David has written a poem for the heart. And can we wonder? Have we not seen what a roomy heart he had? Men competent for heart-break are competent for poetry. Heartbreak is poetry. All who practice poetry may not be able to write poetry. David can do both, and has done both. He has gotten things by heart. To him, as to all poets, the pungent appeal was the heart appeal. The iogicians may out-argue the poets, though the poets convince us, as the iogicians fail to do.

Often, as a preacher, I have asked varying companies of Christians what portion of Scriptures was their favorite, and so very many answered: "The Shepherd Psalm." And why? Because it was the answer for the heart. Heart-hunger is there writ down. It is David's heart which is out upon the hills. He is out looking for a Heart-Shepherd. He is out, and the Heart-Shepherd has come out to him. A heart at rest is what makes the Shepherd Psalm so calm. The Shepherd and his one lost lamb—aye, the Shepherd and his whole glad flock. The psalm says: "My heart, thy Shepherd is God; fret not nor fear. No now nor then holds any loss to thee. Thou art safe-guarded against the stress of winter weather and the burning heat of any tropic day. By night, by day, thy safety is assured. Thou hast no need to bleat like a iost lamb, motherless. Thou hast no need to keep an all night vigil against the prowling iion and shambling bear. Thou hast a Shepherd, and his name is God."

We call this poem a psalm; and we do well. Psalm it is. It sings itself. You need no tune to be set; for the poem is its own melody. Read this poem you cannot; sing this poem you must. I hear the dreaming of David's harp. I hear the drip and drip of its exquisite and tearful tune. I hear the hum of David's voice, harp and voice at song; and leaning to catch the tune and words I hear:

"The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters.

"He restoreth my soui; he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

"Yea, though I waik through the valley of the shadow of death, I wiil fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

"Thou preparest a tabie before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

"Sureiy goodness and mercy shali foliow me ail the days of my life; and I wiil dweil in the house of the Lord forever."

So soon ended, sweet poet-musician? Sing it again. End not so soon. We answer to thy wonder cali. You bring a sob into our throats and triumph into our hearts. Sing, sing once again, "The Lord is my shepherd." Not all the lyrics in "The Princess," although those songs are dreamy sweet, are as sweet as this laureate lyric of David, the song of the Shepherd.

And is this not strange that in this poem, written by a warrior king, there is no hint of kingship or soidiery? No clash of arms, no tinsel of a crown. Life grows too big for remembering things iike that when it enters into the presence of the Shepehrd. There is a word of enemies, and there is an anointing the head with oii in remembrance, doubtiess, of the day when from the sheepfield Samuel summoned the ruddy lad and poured the coronation oil upon his abundant locks of gold. but through all there is the breath and memory of the sheep and the shepherding. David, king, furrowed with care and cut deep with the sword of mighty achievings, harks back to the shepherd boy, and the harp, and the flock, and the sunlight on the meadow, and the quiet stream where waters murmured not at noon, but feil fast asieep like a shepherd boy in the sun. Had Poet David written a kingly ode, the few would have read it. He has written a quiet, pastoral, and it is read by aii the world.

This poem rests the heart like a touch of prairie wind. The king's court and the obsequious throng, and the rush of battle, and its hazard and victory, forgot, forgot! They have siipped away like rain down a leaning leaf. The sheep and the shepherd. The Shepherd and his sheep. No want anywhere. Quiet everywhere. Balm by dark or day. The ieading in the holy paths of righteousness. The independency of the foe so that there is sitting down at a spread tabie where the foes are thick. The valiey of the shadow of death shined across by the Shepherd's presence; the calm comfort of his rod and staff—they comfort me.

Goodness and mercy following while the Shepherd goes ahead; and then the dwelling in the house of the Lord forever. The Shepherd and the sheep, foided and at peace.

It has been said that "old people live in the past and talk of the past, and write of the past, when they write," and I am sure there is some truth in it; and this scribe proposes writing a few reminiscent sketches, if he is physically able to do so, but their publication depends upon tho patient editor of our Advocate.

In August, 1861, Lieutenant Little came from Pensacoia, Fia., to Bahala, Miss., his home, and where I was engaged in teaching, as a recruiting officer. The war between the States had begun. The Tenth Mississippi Regiment had gone from Bahala, some months before, and now Lieutenant Little was back soliciting recruits. He gathered up a few, the writer included, and on Sunday, September 1, 1861, our train pulled out amid sobs and tears and the waving of handkerchiefs, and reached Jackson, fifty miles distant, where, from some cause, we spent the night lying and sitting around in the waiting room. We did not sieep much. The next morning our luncheon remnants were unpalatabie, so we discarded them and broke our fast at a restaurant. We took in the nice little city of Jackson that day, but left for Mobile, via Meridian, which then had perhaps a dozen houses altogether.

The next morning about good, broad daylight, we rolled into Mobile and were stormed immediately by hack drivers and hotel drummers. The Battle House and the Roper House were the chief hotels in Mobiie fifty years ago, and they were fine. The hack drivers wouid yeil on the arrival of a train: "Here's the way to the Battle House! ("Here's the way to the Roper House!) Good beds, gentlemen, and fish, flesh and fowi, oysters, crabs, gophers, and everything our market affords. Roll up, jump up, tumble up, any way to get up. Foliow me, gentlemen."

We decided to go to the Battle House for breakfast, and we got it. The building was magnificent in appearance. The office was a nice one, and the dining room was superb. What of the breakfast? Do I remember? In part—fine rolls, fragrant coffee, steak, mackerei, fried fish, potatoes, cut in square strips, and fried nice and brown, etc. The soidier boys were all seated near each other, and while we were enjoying our meal one of the boys said, "Weii! They must have been looking for company." Another repiied: "Its my opinion, whether they iooked for it or not they've got it."

BreaRfast over, our recruiting officer busied himself about our transportation to Pensacoia. Our oniy way proved to be by the way of Montgomery, and we had to make the trip by boat up the Alabama River, about four hundred miles. What a trip! I believe we were four days and nights on the way. Our boat was an ordinary one, and our roustabout manner of travel was out of the ordinary. We ascended to the cabin and descended to the lower deck, just to kill time. We iay and napped, sat and taiked, and sang. Our recruiting officer, dressed in his nice Confederate uniform, had a smattering knowledge of generai literature, and endeavored to entertain aii who would iisten, with his poetic effusions. Montgomery was reached one forenoon, and we boarded a train the same afternoon, and arrived in Pensacola about midnight on Monday, September 9. Now, one could in iess time travei to London or Paris. More of these sketches, if—

"IMMERSION DOGMA BREAKING DOWN."

An editoriai articie with the above heading appeared recently in The Presbyterian Advance. The greater part of the articie consists of extracts from The Christian Century of Chicago. Of this paper The Advance says: "It is a ioyal exponent of the Disciples, or 'Christian' Church." Coming from such a source, the extracts given in The Advance are striking, if not startling, and suggestive. They set forth some facts that extreme immersionists wouid do weii to ponder seriously. The Christian Century says: "There is a deep-rooted and rapidly spreading conviction among Disciples of Christ that both our historic plea and the demands of the age into which we have come call for the casting away of this last survival of sectarianism in our practice—the practice of selecting from among Christ's foiiowers only the immersed and rejecting all others from our fellowship. . . . There is a widespread disiilusionment with regard to the immersion dogma. The sanctions for this dogma are breaking down."

The New Testament facts are against it.

The spirit of Christianity is against it.

The spirit of the age is against it.

The vital, effective, triumphant movements of to-day ignore it.

Not one great modern interpreter of the social ideals of Christianity has an ounce of interest in it.

Not one great modern interpreter of the inner life of the soul has an ounce of interest in it.

Not one great modern interpreter of Missionary passion and the missionary enterprise has an ounce of interest in it.

It wouid seem as if there is almost no exception to the ruie that as an immersionist goes farther into the field of social or missionary service or deeper into the spirituai mysteries of the soul of man, he looses interest in, if he does not develop a contempt for, the dogma of immersion.

The immersion dogma is a sectarian obsession in which the big, sane-visioned men and women of the world who are working at the world's real tasks—have no interest.

So long as this dogma obsesses the mind of a Christian community that community wiii not fiing itself with complete abandon into the great brotherly enterprises that reaiiy carry the world up toward God. Such a community will be finicai, hair-splitting, sectarian in temper, exclusive. It may gain adherents, but it wiii be too particular about technicalities to render its full meed of service. Its intake from the world may be worthy of boasting, but its output into the world will be an occasion of shame.—Presbyterian of the South.

The effort to increase the endowment of Depauw University a half-million dollars is succeeding admirably. Several days ago it was announced that $480,000 had been secured.

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps" and many other books, has resigned the pastorate of the Central Congregational Church at Topeka, Kan., of which he has had charge for twenty-three years, and will make a tour of the world, visiting missions and Young Men's Christian Associations.

Dr. J. A. Rice, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, at Fort Worth, Tex., at a recent preachers' meeting in that city, reported that he had sixty-five men pledged to personal evangelism. This has the right ring. The evangelism that is needed is one which shall enlist the membership of the Church generally. It was this kind that made Christianity such a power in its incipiency.

Steps have been taken to looking to co-operation in Christian work between the Presbyterian and Dutch Reformed Churches. The leader in this movement, which some think may finally result in union, is the Rev. Dr. Henry Sloan Coffin, a young Presbyterian pastor, who comes from the well-known Sloane family of New York. The Presbyterian body (the Northern) has about 1,500,000 members, and the Dutch Reformed about 140,000.

Bishop Candler's remarks to the Methodist Conference of Mississippi upon the enthusiasm of the missionary spirit that sends missionaries to Africa and neglects the big field for missionary work presented by the negroes of America, were pointed. There is a good deal more glory in foreign missions, but who shall say that better work can be done on India's coral strand or Congo's muddy bank than in and about Augusta, Ga.?—Mobile Register.

Three men have been placed in the field to press the work of raising an adequate endowment for the Southern Methodist University at Dallas. They are Dr. H. A. McClure, who is expected to canvass chiefly within the limits of the Texas Conference. Mr. Dora Roberts, of Big Springs, Tex., has recently made a donation of $25,000 to this cause.

From the Western Christian Advocate of December 20 we take the following: "Bishop E. R. Hendrix, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was the guest of honor of the First Church of Brazil, Indiana, on Dec. 10. The Bishop was on his way to the meeting of the Church Federation Board at Pittsburgh. He has been much interested in the great Sunday school at Brazil, and came to make a study of its methods and to catch something of the inspiration which has built up so great a school. He preached to the delight and edification of the congregation, both morning and evening. His visit will not be soon forgotten."

Bishop Kilgo, at the South Carolina Conference, touched what ought to be a live subject when he took occasion to ask the preachers to exercise more care with parsonages and laymen to take more pride in caring for buildings and grounds of country churches. One of the chief causes of a lack of interest in the church and its work in many places in the country is the tumble-down condition of the house of worship or its filthy, unattractive and unkempt condition. As with the Jews under Josiah, a movement for repairing and clearing away the rubbish about the Lord's house might lead to the discovery of the long-forgotten law of God and terminate in a great revival of religion. We have seen it so in more than one instance.—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

The Rev. Dr. Robert S. MacArthur, of New York, has just sailed for Russia on a mission unlike any which an American citizen, certainly an American divine, ever entered upon. He is the new president of the Baptist World Alliance, and in a real sense represents Christian people by the hundreds of thousands, even millions, as might be possible in no other religious body. His mission is first to Russia, but it is even broader than that. He goes, bearing letters to world rulers from President Taft, and letters from Secretary of State Knox to Ambassadors in all countries in Europe and Asia which he expects to visit. The Alliance president's mission to Russia is to ask the Czar and the Russian Government for a larger measure of religious liberty for all peoples of all faiths within his vast empire. He will present, he says, a written statement and will back it up with an oral one in case he is permitted to do so. He is famous throughout the Roman Catholic Church in America for having preached and spoken many things against it. He says that now, however, he will ask the Czar for larger liberty for Roman Catholics in Russia, of which there are many thousands, and especially for better treatment for Jews.

THE METHODIST HOSPITAL, MEMPHIS, TENN.

Action of the North Mississippi Conference.

I had the pleasure of meeting the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference in its recent session at Macon, Miss., and addressing them briefly on our Methodist Hospital enterprise, in which they share. That they are in the work heart and soul can easily be seen from the following report, brought in by a special committee, and adopted unanimously by the Conference:

"Your committee beg to report that, having considered the report of the Hospital Commissioners, it is gratified with the progress that has already been made with this noble enterprise, and it is greatly to be desired that it be pushed to an early completion. The plan of engaging in this form of Christian endeavor has passed the tentative stage, and is now the fixed policy of our great Church, and the opportunity presented to the Conferences, committed to the movement with which we are connected, is one full of promise for the largest usefulness to suffering humanity. Your Committee thinks it well to remind you that this particular movement had its origin in this Conference, which was induced to initiate the plan by that large-hearted layman, Mr. John H. Sherard, to whose untiring efforts and unfaltering faith under many difficulties the present flattering conditions are largely due. We are pleased to note that proper appreciation of Brother Sherard's services has been shown by his election as chairman of the Hospital Board, and we believe that his leadership is a guarantee of success.

"The Board has been fortunate in securing the services of Rev. H. M. Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference, as field secretary. His labors have been abundant and directed by wisdom, and the co-operation of the Church in the entire field covered by this movement should be ungrudgingly accorded to him. Nothing less will accord with the formal action of the Conferences by whose authority he entered this field. Without special effort, a goodly sum has already been contributed to the Hospital Fund, but the importance of this great work must be impressed upon our men of wealth in such a way that they will be moved to contribute liberally out of their abundance for the relief of suffering humanity. All, indeed—both rich and poor—must be led to share in this great work.

"We cordially approve the fixing of Jan. 28, 1912, as Hospital Rally Day, and urge that on that date, or as near thereto as practicable, every Sunday school, Epworth League, Woman's Home Mission Society and congregation observe the day with appropriate services and take liberal offerings for this cause. Let the presiding elders and pastors see that this order is carefully and generally observed. Brother Ellis has prepared literature and will furnish it upon application, and he will gladly co-operate in every way upon request.

"The administration of the Board of Commissioners is to be approved and commended, and we would nominate the present members: John H. Sherard, Rev. J. W. Dorman, Rev. W. S. Lagrone, J. D. Barbee and J. R. Bingham, for re-election for the ensuing year and until their successors shall be installed.

"Resolved, That we renew our pledge to heartily support the enterprise; that we commend the work of the field secretary, and that we invite Brother Ellis to visit our territory freely and co-operate with us in raising the funds necessary for the complete and early success of the Hospital.

"Respectfully submitted,

Wm. L. DUREN, Chairman."

Note specially two points of this excellent report:

First—Hospital Rally Day, Jan. 28 (fourth Sunday), 1912, is to be observed appropriately and liberal offerings made by every congregation, Sunday school, Epworth League and Home Mission Society in the Conference. This is an ideal time. It is nearly upon us. No day can be lost if the very best is to be made of it.

Second—The North Mississippi Conference, in the last paragraph, plainly recognizes that the responsibility for the success of this great enterprise is on the membership of the Church, and that the field secretary is to co-operate and assist in any way he can. This is as it should be, and I am ready to do everything in my power to help in any field at any time. My address is 996 Union Avenue, Memphis, Tenn.

H. M. ELLIS,
Field Secretary.

This committee will report to a meeting of the judges to be held next April. This is unquestionahly a movement in the right direction. If the punishment of crime in this country could be made as certain as it is in England, we would have much less of it, and also fewer lynchings.

A writer in Harper's Weekly says that the tallest trees in the world are the Australian eucalyptus, which attain an aititude of 480 feet. The biggest are the mammoth trees of Californla, some of which are two hundred and seventy-six to three hundred and seventy-three feet in height, and one hundred and eight feet in circumference at the base. From measurements of the rings it is helieved that certain of these trees are from two thousand to twenty-five hundred years old. The oldest tree in the world is said to exist on the island of Cos, off the coast of Asia Minor. It is several thousand years old, but just how many no one has dared to say. The tree is carefully preserved by a wall of masonry round it, and the trunk is thirty feet in circumference.

The amount spent by New Orieans alone was $2,928,360, or more than half of the entire amount, according to the figures shown. The exports of the United States to the countries of the rest of the world during the eleven months of the current year ending with November exceeded the imports by somewhat more than $475,000,000. The value of the exports was $1,867,314,510, while the imports were worth $1,392,550,228, according to statistics issued by the Department of Commerce and Lahor. During the corresponding period last year the exports exceeded the imports in value by about $211,000,000. The imports for the eleven-month period of the current year show a falling off of about $33,000,000 from those of last year, while the export trade increased hy about $30,000,000.

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION PROPOSED.

The following resolutions concerning the Centennial of Methodism in the Mississippi Conference were passed at the recent session of that Conference in Meridian:

"Whereas the Mississippi Annual Conference, then embracing the territory now within the States of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, was organized near the town of Fayette, in Jefferson County, Miss., at the home of the Rev. Newet Vick, on Nov. 1, 1813; and whereas we are now within two years of the centennial of this event; therefore,

"Resolved, first, That it is the sense of this hody that we should give suitable recognition to this great event in our eccleslasticai history.

"Second—That we request the Historicai Society of this Conference to prepare a program in keeping with this occasion and give such suggestions as in its judgment may be best.

"Third—That we believe that greater interest would be taken in this celehration of our one hundredth birthday, could our session of 1913 be held in the territory contiguous to its organization."

AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

To the Members of the Louisiana Conference.

Dear Brethren: At the recent session of our Conference your Board of Missions elected and the Bishop appointed Rev. A. W. Turner as Conference missionary evangeilst. Brother Turner is to give his entire time to this important work. His salary is guaranteed by the Board of Missions, but as this is paid out of appropriated funds, we expect places making use of his services to contribute to our "evangelistic fund," which contributions will become sufficient to cover all salary and expense items of the evangelistic work directed by the Board. As we shall have more requests for Brother Turner's services than can he complied with, and as the first few weeks of the year will he less crowded with dates than later, let me respectfully request that as many as can conveniently do so, arrange for a revival at an early date. Who wants Brother Turner for a meeting to begin on Sunday, Jan. 14?

You will see a notice elsewhere from our secretary, directing you to whom to write, etc.

Yours for a great year in our Master's service,

Wm. H. COLEMAN,

Chairman Board of Missions and Evangelistic Committee.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE AMERICAN PEOPLE?

By James W. Lee, D.D.

Three days before leaving England last summer, I made a pilgrimage to the ruins of the old Gorhambury palace, where Lord Bacon lived and where he died, at St. Albans. It is a grand old ivy-clad pile, and is one of the most famous places in Great Britain. Here it was that Queen Elizabeth was accustomed to visit Sir Nicholas Bacon, when Francis, his son, was a boy. I saw not only the ruins of the present earl of Verulam by the earl himself, but had the privilege of seeing the pictures of his ancestors for five hundred years, and each one of them painted by a master. I refer to this because I know of not a case in English history that so well illustrates the respect for law on the part of the English people, and so well serves to point out the danger of violating the law, as that furnished by the fall of Lord Bacon. He had reached, in his upward climb to position, the pinnacle of greatness. He had been raised to the peerage as Lord Verulam and had been created Viscount St. Albans. He was next to the king himself in honor and wielded more power than the king as a distributer of patronage.

At the meeting of parliament in 1621, a demand was made for reform in connection with the oppressive monopoly patents. Bacon was accused of being a party to disgraceful transactions by which the nation had been robbed. The chancellor had done nothing more than hundreds have been doing in this country, within recent years, who have been untouched by the law. But, in the case of Bacon, nothing could save him. He had used a high place for personal advantage. He was condemned and fined $200,000, and imprisoned in the tower during the king's pleasure. Besides, he was declared incapable of holding office in the State, or of sitting in Parliament and that never again should he come within the virge of the court. He was a disgraced man forever. That was three hundred years ago. But the same strict adherence to the letter and spirit of the law prevails in England to-day that hurled Bacon from position into disgrace in 1621.

There is no respect in which the contrast between England and the United States is more striking than that which one observes between the respect for and obedience to law in the mother country, and the disregard of it in our own.

On August 26, the day I sailed for New York, I secured the London daily papers. These gave a record of a day's doings in England for August 25. On September 2, I glanced over the New York dailies. These gave a record of a day's doings in the United States for September 1. I am not overstating the truth when I say that more lawlessness was recorded as having taken place in any one of our large States of the American union, with, say, its 4,000,000 of population, in one day, than was represented by the papers as having taken place in all England, with its forty-odd million population, in one day.

I.

There must be some underlying cause for this difference in the matter of lawlessness between the two countries. We are the same people, mainly, as to blood and traditions and ideals. We answer by the same Bible, we worship God after the same doctrines, hold to the same fundamental, political and religious conceptions. Why do our ancestors over the sea keep up the practice of our doctrines, political and other that we hold in common, while we, their descendants, maintain the doctrines in our heads and professions, while we have departed from them in our hearts and practices? This question brings before our minds something to study about. This is a matter for the most searching inquiry of which we are capable.

It is bad enough to rush hellward at all, if we are to represent our modern American activity by the lurid and picturesque word used by one of our recent orators, in defining the region toward which the American people are moving, but to move hellward without asking ourselves about our destination; without seeking to acquaint ourselves with the character of the place toward which we are headed, indicates that we have not only lost our chart, but our pilot; that we have not only lost our noble impulses, but our towering heads. To go to hell with our eyes open is possible, but then we but reap the consequences anticipated. To go to hell, on the other hand, with our eyes shut would imply that we were silly sheep and not rational human beings.

In the language of Colonel Roosevelt, the American people, in the main, are sound in heart and disposition. They are not silly sheep, nor are they rushing blindly to hell. There have been recent perverse expressions of the national life, but these furnish no grounds for pessimism, but reasons for universal heart-searching on the part of us all. It it a time not for manning the life boats and jumping overboard, but for every man and woman to get busy stopping the leaks and mending the ship.

II.

A time of national awakening, thank God, has arrived, both in political parties and in churches. The conscience of all people is stirred as not before perhaps in the history of our country. From grafting and jobbing and duplicity and political wickedness, sane leaders are crying: "Good Lord, deliver us!" From cant and coldness and spiritual indifference, earnest preachers are praying: "Good Lord, deliver us!" The deliverance will come. We will again be clothed and established in sanity, simplicity, soberness and righteousness. The national ship is freighted with too much precious merchandise in which all mankind is interested to be wrecked but a few miles from shore. As a people we are hardly out of sight of land on the voyage our fathers planned for us only yesterday, in the lifetime of nations. There is no time for panic among the passengers. This is no time for leaders of the people to wail and wring their hands. Our machinery of state is not old, it has just been put together. The structure of our union is seaworthy. There is no trouble outside of us, either in sea or running gear. The only trouble is inside. The passengers have not been respecting one another's rights. They have not been pacing the deck in sight of the stars enough. They have kept themselves too completely down in the stuffy state rooms, and have not been taking into their lungs enough of ocean ozone. But the beauty about our situation is, we are beginning to feel that we cannot stand it much longer. This sense of inability to breathe under unhealthy conditions is driving the people up-stairs. We will get normal and vigorous and sane in a little while. Then the joy of living will come back to us.

III.

Still, it is the duty of rational people to consider the causes which have brought about our confusion.

We cannot do better than to pay careful heed to the methods and habits of the people of our mother country. There they are on their little island still ruling the world. There they are, still sane and serious and masters of themselves. They are said to be slow and dull and dense enough to have American humor explained to them. But it strikes an impartial observer, that while they do move with cautious step, the point they are slowest about reaching is the perilous one at which an Englishman can make up his mind to do wrong or to violate the laws made to regulate his conduct. I cannot see that a citizen of Great Britain steps any slower when moving toward a dollar he has honestly earned than an American. At least England manages to maintain its place as the clearing house of the world's money.

The English are not particularly tardy when they are moving toward the solution of great financial, social, political and scientific propositions. It must be remembered that the British Association, which is an institution of Great Britain, is doing more to advance the cause of thought in the modern mind than all other similar institutions on earth put together.

Much has been said about the dullness and density of the English people, but if there is any high and honorable and rational and beautiful and good thing known among men that they do not get to as speedily as the people of any other realm, ancient or modern, I wish some alert American would point out what it is.

In my two month's observation last summer one thing became clearer to me than ever before, and that is, more English people find their way to Church every Sunday morning, and reach the altars of God earlier and more speedily than do the inhabitants of any other country on the planet.

The only thing the English are slow about is breaking the law. If he does happen to forget himself sufficiently to do it one time, then as sure as fate, the only hotel he will ever put up at any more is the jail. This was so before Lord Bacon; it has been so ever since. They would cut off King George's head to-day just as quickly as they did that of Charles I, if he swerved from the straight way mapped by the law. From the king down to the veriest denizen of the slums, everyone in England must keep the law, or else pay the penalty of its violation, as sure as the sun rises and sets. Everyone recognizes this, and hence, everyone obeys the law. The result is the English people are disciplined. They are not offensively self-assertive. They are kind and polite. A policeman has the manners and the considerate speech of a first-class gentleman. Life is not cheap. Every railroad and every automobile must respect it.

IV.

The high level of national greatness occupied by England is due to the fact that her people respect and observe the law. They seem to have sense enough to recognize the fact that there is a moral order over and around them as really as there is a physical order over them and around them. They appear as little inclined to violate the moral order as the physical. They appear to respect the Ten Commandments as completely as they respect the laws of gravity. They seem to know as well that if they do wrong morally, they will be punished, as they know if they climb to the top of a church steeple and jump to the pavement they will be punished. "Lawlessness is a reproach to any people." The present trouble with all people of the United States is lawlessness. This is not so much because our people are meaner than the English, their impulses are just as fine, but it is largely because we are not disciplined by long practice in the observance of the law. We have been swayed too much by the stupid and senseless rage of the mob. As a consequence, judicial blindness has fallen upon whole communities of our people. Judicial blindness is often found side by side with noble and generous feelings. A man is afflicted with judicial blindness when his intellectual wheels have ceased to turn, and when he is at the mercy of any chance impulse that happens to be imported from the mob into his emotional self. Such a man is stupid and dense enough to think that murder committed by a mob under so-called lynch law will wipe out the wickedness of murder committed by an assassin. Anyone with a spark of reason to light up his mind is obliged to see that lynching by a mob is just as much murder as is the cold-blooded act of the assassin in taking the life of his fellowman. The English have sense and training enough to see this. Hence there has not been a case of lynching in England, so far as I have read, in five hundred years, and not in Canada since the country's foundation. And yet English and Canadians are of the same blood as our people. They differ not because they are naturally any better than our folks, they simply have more trained intelligence. Our people are lawless because they are ignorant, untrained, undisciplined.

The English people have maintained their respect for law through the hundreds of years of their history because they have been perpetually taught in home and church and school to reverence those in authority and to respect and keep the laws. The English people have not advanced beyond the sense of duty resting upon them to attend regularly the Church services. Everywhere I went, I found, whether in city or village, practically all the people accustomed to go to Church. The places of worship were full of reverent, devout people. They are so far behind the times over there that every person, upon finding his seat in Church, has no more idea of progress than actually to bow his head and pray. They are so backward and belated in England that no person ever speaks to another in the house of prayer until the benediction is pronounced, and then whatever may be spoken is in a whisper, as if the hush of eternity was on his life.

The fonndation of English order and obedience to law in the country is the religion for which their chnrches stand to foster and feed. Take the chnrch-going habits from the people and they will become as lawless as their kinspeople in America have become in the past fifteen years. This indifference to religion and the Church is a new thing with us, and it is not becoming. It is making way for tho sort of moral and spiritual relaxation that leads to lawlessness. We are young and will get over it, just as a man will learn to quit mince pie for snpper, when he finds out that his constitntion cannot stand it.

The human constitution breaks down very soon in its attempts to digest lawlessness. It is not wholesome; it cannot be assimilated and turned into good, healthy blood and muscle. The people of this country have already had about all they can stand of the mince pie lawlessness; they are turning from it with loathing and deep disgust. They are beginning to see that it is better to go to bed on plain mush and milk and secure pleasant sleep and sweet dreams, than to retire on a wrong diet to dream about ruin and jails and falling into the clutches of old Satan all night. Evidences of returning to sanity are to be read on every hand. A better, brighter day is soon to dawn on our great country. Our people will find their way back to the deserted altars of religion. They will cut away the briars which have choked up the gateways to them. They will again wear paths over the same old lines our fathers trod to the houses of God. The windows in the old buildings will be repaired. The sense of broken trust, of old memories despised, of God's altars stained and dishonored, will pass from inside the deserted shrines our fathers were tanght to pray in, when we return from our wanderings and make up our minds no longer to live on husks intended for swine and not for immortal souls.

I attended, while in England, Church of England cathedrals, Congregational houses of worship and Wesleyan Methodist chapels. I could not have told from anything I heard from any single preacher of any denomination that there was such a thing ever discnssed as higher criticism, evolution, or advanced thought. The preachers, without a douht, have adjusted their minds to all new truth discovered in all fields of human search. But these questions never find their way into the pulpit. They preach to-day the same gospel Chrysoston, archbishop of Constantinople, might have preached in the fourth century. Their messages appealed direct to the consciences of their hearers. Their efforts seemed to he concentrated on the one object of arousing the people to accept the spiritnal and eternal order represented by Jesus Christ as their only hope from barrenness and death in time and eternity. They neither defended nor fought higher criticism; they ignored it. They seemed to be bent on advertising no nostrums, or facts, or so-called new ideas; what they did was to call the people from sin to holiness, from death to life, from animality to spirituality; instead of seeming to think the old gospel had lost its power, they preached it with a winsomeness and a dynamic intensity that led one to feel that the a, b, c's of the gospel had not yet been learned by the average preacher even. There were no apologetics, no half-way tentative sort of positions taken; every utterance was as positive and clear-cut as a policeman's club. They apologized for nothing, no more than a sheriff would apologize for the severity of the law, when arresting a criminal. They were making known a tried and wellworn way all civilized leaders had followed. To doubt its value as the only way to walk in, in order to get anywhere, was not only to write one's self down as wicked, but as utterly stnpid. The wishy-washy, goody-goody, flabby sort of hearer one often meets over here, could not have endured such messages. They would have heen declared as out of date and belonging to a hy-gone time. But the English, being serious-minded and accustomed to think, accepted the sermons as sound and capable of being transmuted into the solemn duties of practical life.

One could not douht where the secret of the strength of the people lay after seeing them in their churches and recognizing the sort of spiritual food they were accustomed to take from their ministers.

St. Louis, Mo.

A LESSON IN PATIENCE.

"We'll set to work now, Essie," said grandma, after school, "and see if we can't get an hour or two on your party dress before supper time. How pretty it is, to be snre," she added, shaking out the shimmering pink folds.

It was a cool, crisp Septemher afternoon, when work seemed like play, and the shining needles were soon flashing busily in and out. But only a few minutes had passed when Louise's voice called from the library, "Oh, grandma, I've tried to play this piece over and over and I just can't get the time right. Won't you please come and count it for me?" And a moment later grandma's cherry voice echoed hack from the library. "It is a hard kind of time; I remember trying it when I was a girl," she said; "bnt it's so bright and pretty when you do get it that it pays for the trouble. One—two—three; now, deary, isn't that better?"

"The child is improving every day, Essie," said grandma a few minutes later picking up her sewing.

Again for five long minutes the needles flashed on their way; then Rob's curly head appeared in the sitting-room door.

"I've heen working at this problem ever since school," he said, fretfully, "and it just won't come out right. Don't you s'pose you could help me a little, grandma? I never did understand long division."

"It's been a good many years since I studied long division," said grandma, smiling, "hut sit ye down here, my lad, and we'll try. There you are," she added, after the brown head and the gray had bent over the slate together for a few minntes. "Who says we can't do long division?" And her smile was as delighted as the child's.

"We won't get done very fast at this rate," said Essie, frowning at Rob's disappearing figure.

"I have one sleeve almost basted," said grandma.

Just then little Ted's voice was heard in a shrill scream from the back yard. "Oh, I've stepped on a piece of glass and my foot's a-bleedin'. Oh! Oh! Oh!"

Of course grandma was out in the yard in no time with a soft bandage and her favorite liniment. "The poor little fellow has got a pretty bad hurt," she said when she came back at last.

"How can you have so much patience, grandma," said Essie; "always running from one thing to another, with never five minutes to call your own?"

"Do you think I have, child?" asked grandma, her dark eyes shining with pleasure. "Well, I didn't always have as much as I have now; bnt you see, deary, I've lived a long time and I've learned that sometimes the little things that bring comfort and happiness to others and smooth out the hard places mean more in the Lord's sight than the big tasks we lay out for ourselves. We'll get the dress done before the party, never fear, hut we'll not neglect the music and the problems and the dear little cut feet, either."

Just then Ted's round face appeared in the doorway with the traces of tears still on the rosy cheeks. "My foot's better, some," he said "but I'm awful thirsty and I can't reach the bucket."

"Bless his heart, I expect he is," and away bnstled grandma, leaving her little sermon only half finished. —The King's Builders.

THE EAGLE'S FLIGHT.

For weeks and weeks Lawrence had been waiting for a chance to try his new box kite that had been given to him on his birthday by his Uncle John. The wind had come in sudden gusts, or it had rained, or he had been in school; bnt at last there came a nice day, with a lot of wind, and Lawrence took ont the big kite, which was named the "Eagle," for its first flight. He was alone, for he felt sure that he knew all about kites, and he was so anxious to see it sail into the air that he could not wait for the other boys to come and share the sport.

Lawrence placed the Eagle on the ground at the end of the hig garden, and taking in his hand the long cord which was attached to it, he started to run. Almost as soon as he dragged the kite from the spot where he had placed it, the stiff wind caught it and lifted it upward. Then it began to soar higher, and Lawrence ran faster and kept paying out the rope. Suddenly the kite flew skyward with a great jerk. The rope was wound round his wrist, and in some way it became caught so that he could not at once untangle it.

Then a stronger gust of wind seized the Eagle, and in spite of all he could do, Lawrence's arm was pulled far above his head, and he was almost lifted from the ground. Still he did not think of danger, for who ever heard of a kite carrying off a boy, as a real eagle might do? But the Eagle suddenly looked very big to him as he glanced up at it. And then came a stronger gust of wind, and this time Lawrence felt himself taken into the air.

It happened so quickly that he had no time to be frightened or to cry out. Almost before he could turn his head to look downward at the ground which he was leaving behind, he felt the branches of a tree brushing his face, and hlindly he clutched at them and held on with both hands and legs. The kite tugged away, but he clung all the harder; and now he opened his mouth and shouted loud and long for help.

It was a very frightened mother who ran to the back door and saw Lawrence high in the branches of the old elm, and the Eagle soaring away at the end of its rope. Her cries, added to his, quickly brought a neighbor to the scene, and soon a ladder was at hand.

"Hang on till I get there!" shouted the man.

But Lawrence did not need advice of that kind, for he was as securely tangled in the tree as the cord of the kite was about his wrist and arm. A moment or two later he was safely back on the ground, a little scratched and lamed, but really none the worse for his exciting adventure.

"You are a lucky boy that the tree was so handy and obliging," said the man, as he carried off his ladder.

The Eagle looked very innocent and harmless as they carried it hack into the house. "I guess I'll wait until I weigh more, or else until I learn more about kites, before I fly it again," said Lawrence. And his mother agreed that that was a most sensihle resolution.—Marion Hallowell, in Youth's Companion.

THE HARBINGER.

"Why, good morning, Mr. Sparrow, good morning! How goes the world with you?"

"Not very well, I assure you; but I'm glad to see you back, Mr. Bluebird."

"I am indeed glad to be back, and to meet you again, but I don't hear you singing."

"Singing? Well, I guess not. I'm no singer at the best of times, as you are, Mr. Bluebird; but talk about singing this gloomy day, with snow on the ground and more coming, and the wind cold enough to freeze one's very feathers! But you're welcome to sing if you feel like it."

"I am going to as soon as I look about a bit. I've been spending my summers here for some years, and I have grown very fond of this old farm. I get really homesick for it, and hurried to get back from the South; hut I flew so fast this time that I got ahead of spring herself, but she's on the way, so cheer up, Mr. Sparrowbird, cheer up!"

"I just can't brace up. You wouldn't feel so pert, either, if you had been here all winter. Why, some of my dearest friends have died on account of the terrihle cold and the lack of food."

"Oh, what a pity! I'm very sorry for them and you."

"I should have starved, too, if the good people in that house hadn't thrown out scraps of bread and meat sometimes; but they're clear discouraged now. I've heard a lot of their talk; they've had sickness and losses, and I've felt very sorry for them."

"Well, I'm going to tell them some good news now, and yon'll see how heartened up and delighted they'll be."

And the Bluehird flew to the lilac hush near the gate and sang—sang of all sweet things.

The dejected farmer on his way up from the harn could scarcely believe his ears, and stopped and listened breathlessly; then he hastened to the house, calling softly:

"Come, hear the bird; there's a hinebird singing; he's telling us good news, for sure."

The wife hastily wrapped a shawl about herself and the bahy and called to grandmother knitting hy the fire:

"There's a bluehird singing down by the gate."

"What say, a bluebird? Why, I want to know!"

Grandmother was dnll of hearing, hut she had caught the joyful words and limped over to the window.

"I wish't I could hear him, but—law sakes, I can see him, a scrap of the hlue there on the laylock hush. I'm dredful glad, for spring'll be right along now I shouldn't wonder! How I used to reckon of spring, an' going' out to dig in the flower heds, an makin' garden. I don't believe it's goin' to snow today after signs of it, either."

And even while the bird was singing, the wind quieted and the sun lightened the clouds and the hearts of the listeners thrilled with new hope and courage for the future.

Even Mr. Sparrow was cheered, much to his own surprise, and spreading his stiffened wings flew over to the lilac hush for comradeship with the sweet little harbinger.—Emma A. Lente, in Advance.

THE DOCTRINE OF SIN.

In this day of attempted theological reconstruction, a sane discussion of the old-fashioned doctrine of sin is opportune. If it be true, as we have been informed by one, that "the crack of creeds is heard in most of the educational centers and in the ministers' studies of Christendom," it behooves all who hold the truth in righteousness "to note the line of cleavage to see what things the wise ones will allow to remain."

All close students of Holy Scripture will agree that "the place of sin in every theological system is an important one." One of England's profound theological thinkers has aptly said that "the great mass of the doctrinal error of all ages of Christendom has grown up around superficial views of sin." Jerome tells us that "false views of sin produced the false views of God and redemption," by which his century was marked. Our own peerless Mississippi Bishop, of precious memory, has said that "if sin be a mere trifle, the mission of the world's Redeemer was a stupendous blunder, and he himself was mistaken as to the purpose of his coming into the world; for he believed and taught that he came to save his people from their sins."

Underlying the teaching of the Holy Scriptures, are the two master ideas of sin and redemption. Upon these "all revealed truths converge, or from them take their departure." In the light of these two ideas, the Holy Scriptures become the divinely inspired and divinely preserved world-history of sin's awful tragedy and redemption's glorious triumph.

As a schoolmaster from heaven, the Holy Scriptures treat sin as the tranagression of the law; as "the abominable thing that God hates," and as a parasite eating out the heart of all virtue, and poisoning the very sources of all life itself. Everywhere sin is treated as a break with a divinely established order; as a repudiation of a heaven-imposed obligation; as the abnormal in man's moral conduct and character; as the choice of less than the best in the exercise of man's sovereign will; as a deadly microbe utterly destroying the spiritual organism upon which it feeds; and as a destructive force in the universe of mind and of spirit, withering human hopes and desolating human lives. Everywhere the Scriptures face sin as a lawless force and a universal fact in the world of rational creatures, "reinforcing itself by contagion from without, and perpetuating itself in the racial organism." Nowhere do the Scriptures soften the rigor of the law in its tremendous denunciation of sin in man's moral conduct and character; nowhere do they treat sin tolerantly, or condone impenitence in man by passing over the mutinous spirit that seeks to dethrone the Lord of Heaven, and turn our earth to hell.

Many of our modern-day philosophers, like Emerson, for instance, will gaze over the vast arena where sin's awful ruin and wreck has been wrought, and will calmly tell us that sin is "non-existent," that it is a mere "harmless negation," an unavoidable and inconsequential defect that attaches to the soul's upward progress. But the Holy Scriptures represent sin as a spirit of lawlessness and mutiny at work in the universe of God, seeking to wrest from him the scepter of control, and destroy the moral government of heaven. They represent sin as a plunge downward; and by the burning testimony of the mighty spirits who have "enacted the real Iliads of Christian history," sin is shown to be a desolating fall from a higher to a lower estate of moral goodness.

The theory that does not take into account the full gravity of sin "will attenuate the Gospel message and make it impotent and ineffective." The fearful tragedies that sin has enacted with each recurring day, the riot and havoc that it has wrought in the world of human affairs, the utter wreck of moral character that has marked its progress down through the centuries, and the desolation it has wrought in human lives from the beginning of history are sufficient to warrant the tremendously clear and terrible tones in which the Gospel speaks to the race of men. In David's outcry of despair, in Isaiah's confession of unclean lips, "in Paul's great struggle with his body of death," in the self-accusation and passionate contrition that tore the heart-strings of the mighty spirits of apostolic and later days, the truth of the Gospel's tremendous message that "the wages of sin is death" finds ample verification.

But the function of Holy Scriptures is to create, first, a distinctive sin-consciousness in the realm of man's moral nature; and then, facing squarely this created sin-consciousness, to speak to it in the terrible and yet gracious words of lawgiver, prophet, and psalmist, with which their pages are replete. The Scriptures do not recognize what many modern-day theological optimists are wont to call "man's innate moral immaculateness." Rather the Scriptures address man only as a sinner, except where God has changed him by the power of converting grace. In clear and in unmistakable tones, the Scriptures declare that all their remedial measures are "directed toward an extremity," and are made necessary because of man's total moral and spiritual failure and collapse.

With the created sin-consciousness, the Scriptures easily make intelligible to man the certainty of sin's penalty. The age-long testimony of human experience is that sin brings its penalty as surely as night follows day, or effect follows cause; and that the moral law passes over no breach in man's conduct and character, but "matches transgression always with pain and loss and death." Entrenching itself in the will of man, "sin stabs to death the soul's finest capacity for happiness." Along the pathway of the ages, we see the ruin and wreck that sin has wrought, and the misery attendant thereupon. The experience of the race will prove that the finest powers of the soul have been "weakened by the staggering blows of moral evil," and that all that is high and noble has gone down under the stroke of sin and left to perish in its grasp.

But the Holy Scriptures not only speak to the distinctive sin-consciousness that they have created and burned into the life and thought of man; they also tell the story of redemption from sin's thraldom. The despairing cry of the great apostle, "Oh, wretched man that I am; who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" would ring through the world like the wail of a lost and helpless spirit were it not for the apostle's accompanying exclamation of joy, "I thank God through our Lord Jesus Christ!" In all the ages of Christendom, the mighty who "have turned the currents of the world's history into new channels for good" have been those who have shared with Paul the consciousness of sin's desolating presence, and have felt with him the power of sin's tremendous curse, and have known with him the efficacy of the blood of Jesus Christ to wipe out sin's polluting stain. The weapons by which the prophets and apostles and martyrs of old have won the victories of faith have been forged in the fierce heat of "the hissing fires that have burned on the field of the world's moral conflict." God was let down into the generations of men in order that the wisdom of him "in whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily," and the strength of him to whom all power in heaven and in earth was committed might be directed toward the solution of sin's stupendous problem. In one mighty death-grapple, our incarnate Lord expended the full force of his great redemptive life, and he came forth from the mortal conflict the all-conquering and triumphant Christ. He bore our sins in his own body on the tree, and by his death he destroyed the power of death. Therefore, in him standeth our salvation, and he becomes our sure and everlasting atonement.

MISSED HIS CALLING.

Some years ago the Rev. R. J. Campbell, widely known as the successor of the renowned Dr. Joseph Parker, set out to reconstruct the theology of Christendom. A late number of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate contains the following reference to this would-be theological reformer:

"Rev. Reginald Campbell, of England, he who caused such a stir some years ago in England by announcing a 'new theology,' is now in this country. The Continent, in a recent issue, sizes up Mr. Campbell after this fashion: 'His theology is neither constructive nor destructive; it is simply vaporous, almost non-existent. By all signs, the Lord never made him for a theologian at all, and the only pity is that Mr. Campbell did not find it out sooner. One judges, however, that he is beginning to suspect it now, and by virtue of that suspicion there is hope that his future career will produce less newspaper copy and more spiritual fruitage than the earlier years of his City Temple pastorate.'"

A SAINT TRANSLATED.

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, our pastor at Greenville, Miss., has informed us of the death of Mrs. A. B. Finlay, which occurred in that city on Friday, Dec. 15, after an illness, due to paralysis, covering a period of several months. Her remains were laid quietly away in the cemetery at that place on the day following, in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends. Thus, at a ripe old age, passed from earth one of the choicest and most saintly spirits that it has ever been our privilege to know. Practically her whole life was spent in Greenville, and her name was "as ointment poured forth" in that community. She was one of the matriarchs of Methodism in that city, having watched its earliest beginning and having been one of the most faithful workers to effect its establishment there decades ago. Her devotion to the Church was ardent and constant; nothing pleased her so much as its spiritual prosperity. Her piety was beautiful and winsome; though unostentatious, it shone with a steady flame, giving light to all around. Heaven was in her face, and she carried everywhere she went the perfume of the skies. To know her was to love her; to enter her presence was to be made better. She made no such profession, but we do not doubt that she had attained to Christian perfection. The thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians found embodiment in her character and life. With a shining record behind and a luminous prospect before, she has gone from us. But her influence will long abide, helping to make the world brighter and better. May the Heavenly Father bless and strengthen those whose hearts have been saddened by the "sweet release" and triumphant ascension of this weary saint, who has gone to be forever with her Lord! If true to the Master, they shall soon see her again in "the house not made with hands."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. S. Gale announces that he has met with a warm welcome at his new charge in Ellen, Miss.

The Rev. Hugh Jamieson, of Shreveport, spent Christmas with his mother, who resides in New Orleans.

Rev. and Mrs. E. K. Means spent a portion of the holidays in New Orleans, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Crebbin, of the Seventh District, this city.

Rev. L. I. McCain and wife spent a few days in New Orleans last week. Brother and Sister McCain paid the Advocate office an appreciated call.

Rev. W. B. Alsworth preached his first sermon at Leakesville, Miss., last Sunday and left Monday to spend Christmas with his parents in Purvis.

Invitations are out announcing a reception to be given Friday night of this week by the Parker Memorial Church to its new pastor, Rev. H. R. Singleton.

The Rev. Paul D. Hardin was warmly welcomed by his people at McComb City, Miss. The Presbyterian and Baptist congregations and pastors joined in a welcome service last Sunday night.

Rev. W. J. Wood has found the "best people on earth" in his new charge at Potts Camp, Miss. He enciosed the price of a year's subscription for the Advocate, given by a mother to her son as a Christmas gift. A wise gift, indeed.

E. L. Cargill, who served Jena very acceptably last year, has arrived and is happily domiciled in the parsonage at Colfax.

Rev. A. W. Turner, who was appointed missionary evangelist of the Lonisiana Conference, will make his home in Pleasant Hill, La.

A warm personal note from the effective presiding elder of the Ruston District, Rev. R. W. Tucker, flashes with reverent optimism for this year's work on the district.

Rev. R. H. Wynn, the new presiding elder of the Lafayette District, will live at Crowley, instead of Lafayette, to which place all letters intended for him should be addressed.

The people of the Utica, Miss., charge have fixed the assessment for pastor's salary at $1000 per year. John W. Ramsey, the pastor, has struck a responsive chord in the hearts of his people.

The ladies of the Arcadia church have recently pieced a quilt out of silk blocks on which was embroidered the names of all the members of the church. The quilt was given to Rev. and Mrs. A. I. Townsley as a Christmas present.

The people of Bogalusa, Louisiana, gave their retiring pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Alford, as an expression of their esteem, a chest of handsome silver. Brother Alford served this charge for three years, and leaves for his new field at Rayville with the esteem and good-will of all.

Our worthy colporter (who is said to be the best in the connection), Rev. G. W. Bachman, sent us a few days since several names to go on our snbscription files, and at the same time wished all the Advocate force a happy Christmas and New Year. We thank him for his kindness and reciprocate his good wishes.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, who rendered effective service at Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans, for four years, crowning that service by performing the duties of host to the Louisiana Conference, has left the city and has been received gladly by the good people of Crowley. He preached his first sermon there Sunday, the 24th.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt has entered upon his work at Ackerman, Miss., with characteristic energy and enthusiasm. He writes appreciatingly of the people of the charge, and expects a good year. Already he has begun to introduce the Advocate into the homes of his parishioners. As a pastor and tactful spiritual leader, Brother Wyatt ranks with the best.

So many Christmas and New Year greetings have reached the Advocate office that it is impossible for us to specifically mention each of them. Suffice it to say that there was not a single one that came that was not thoroughly appreciated. Callous, indeed, must be the heart that does not respond to cordial expressions of good will and friendship. They tend to lighten life's burdens and cheer us on the way.

We call special attention to the able and timely communication appearing in this week's Advocate from the gifted pen of Dr. J. W. Lee, the pastor of St. John's Church of St. Louis, who is perhaps the most accomplished and widely known writer in Southern Methodism. Our readers are indebted for this interesting discussion to Dr. Theodore Copeland, of St. Louis, at whose instance Dr. Lee so kindly forwarded this appreciated contribution.

In forwarding his first round of appointments, Rev. J. E. Cunningham, the genial presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, took time to add the following: "May the Christ-peace attend the forces of the Advocate this Christmas-tide, filling their hearts and homes with goodness, and may his Spirit lead the work of 1912, bringing the blessings of health and success." In return we pray that the pathway of our brother during the new year may be strewn with God's richest gifts, and that the Master's canse may prosper greatly under his faithful leadership.

Most of the new pastors assigned to New Orleans churches were in their pulpits last Sunday, and were greeted by good audiences. Dr. J. W. Moore conducted the 11 o'clock service at First Church, delivering an impressive discourse from Hebrews 2:16-17. The speaker at the evening hour was the associate pastor, Rev. C. C. Selecman, who is a native of Missonri and who was educated at Central College. At Parker Memoriai Church Rev. H. R. Singleton gave his new congregation a beautiful and stirring Christmas message, using as a text Luke 2:8-10.

In the report of the proceedings of the Mississippi Conference which appeared in the Advocate of Dec. 14, Rev. P. H. Howse was referred to as a local preacher. This was an error. Brother Howse writes that it has been twenty-two years since he was in the local ranks. At the recent session of the Conference he was assigned to the Seminary charge, and has already visited the work and looked the field over. He thinks the outiook is encouraging, and anticipates a year of great success. Brother Howse's address will be 316 Jackson Street, Hattiesburg, Miss.

The Chicago Record-Herald says: "The prediction is made by an eminent British surgeon that everybody will, in the remote future, be one-toed. We wish that something could be done to cause the fingers of the pick-pockets to disappear." The zoologists teach that the horse was once a five-toed animal. Perhaps the surgeon referred to has stumbled upon this "old chestnut" and is trying to extend the alleged process of evolution to include the human family. As builders of vagaries, the men of science are not behind any other class on the planet.

From a dispatch sent from Magnolia, Miss., to the Times-Democrat on the 19th inst., we take the following: "Rev. H. B. Watkins preached his farewell sermon here Sunday night, and will leave this week to take up the work as pastor of the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez. No service was held at the other churches, the pastors and congregations attending the Methodist Church in a body. At the conclusion of Mr. Watkins' sermon, Rev. A. F. Laird, pastor of the Presbyterian Church; Rev. R. L. Bunyard, pastor of the Baptist Church, and Mr. B. F. Goza, steward of the Methodist Church, delivered brief addresses."

Writing from Winona, Miss., on the 21st inst., Rev. B. P. Jaco, the new presiding elder of the Winona District, says: "I shall have to bestir myself to measure up to the standard set by my good friend and brother, Rev. E. S. Lewis. I had a most enjoyable day at Greenwood, which was my first appointment in the district. There lives no finer Christian gentleman nor brotherly preacher than Rev. H. S. Spragins. I shall be glad every time when the opportunity comes to visit this choice charge and to enjoy the fellowship of its good people. Rev. O. W. Bradley moves off well at Winona. Rev. W. S. Shipman is delighted with Indianola. Other preachers report good beginnings."

The following, taken from the Texas Christian Advocate of December 21, will be read with interest in North Mississippi, where Brother Johnson was born and reared: "Rev. W. J. Johnson has already pitched his tent on the field at Beaumont and he is adjusting himself to the situation. Beaumont has forged to the front with magic strides within the last few years. Its improvements are a marvel, and they are of a permanent and progressive nature. Our Methodism there is virile, and handles much material wealth. They have a phenomenal church plant, and among them are many of the best and most devoted people in our Texas Methodism. And they have the pastor and the preacher to help them do things for Christ. Brother Johnson believes in the extension of the kingdom, and he is connectional in spirit. Therefore, under his administration, we are expecting large things of Beaumont Methodism."

For the information of the many friends who have sympathized with us and prayed for us during the several weeks of trial and anxiety through which Mrs. Meek and the editor have lately gone, we desire to state that our son is greatly improved, and now has every prospect of a speedy and complete recovery. It has been impossible for us to answer the many kind and comforting letters which have come to us, but every one of them was greatly appreciated, and will not soon be forgotten. Dreary and desolate, indeed, would life be without such manifestations of interest and sympathy, especially when the shadows thicken above us. That our loved one has been given back in direct answer to prayer, we entertain not the slightest doubt. It is as true to-day as in the olden time, that God hears and answers his people. And the exclamation of our hearts at this happy Christmas-tide is: "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable goodness!"

The following appeared in a recent number of the Western Christian Advocate: "WANTED—A barrel of postal cards to send to the General Conference from Methodists who prefer the historic name, 'Presiding Elder,' to that of 'District Snperintendent.' I will furnish a good barrel and pay the cost of transportation. Do it now!—F. M. Westhafer, Hartsville, Ind." This brother is evidently desperately in earnest. We wish him success in the task to which he seems so to have set his hand. In this, as in many other things, we think the old way is preferable to the new way. When a title has a history and serves its purpose well, what sense is there in changing it? This is one reason we have never looked with much favor upon the phonetic system of spelling. There is too much interesting history in words to fling it away to accommodate those who are too lazy to master our time-honored orthography.

We have in hand a printed copy of the report made to the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference by Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, the field secretary for that Conference. It shows that during last year this busy worker traveled in her own territory 6363 miles by rail and 221 in the country by private conveyance (she also traveled 13,600 miles outside of her own immediate field). Some other items of the report are as follows: Pastoral charges visited, 70; churches visited, 125; pastors conferred with personally, 103; superintendents personally conferred with, 175; meetings conducted for officers and teachers, 75; institutes condncted, 30; districts visited, 8; district conferences attended, 6; addresses made in conferences, 200; addresses made outside of conferences, 75; letters written, 5840; articles written for the New Orleans Advocate, 51; articles written for general Sunday school work, 100. Certainly this is a most creditable record, and we congratulate both the Board and the field secretary upon the success achieved.

OUR ANNUAL HARVESTS.

The Department of Agriculture gave out a few days since the following estimates of the leading crops in the United States for the current year:

Corn—An increase of 1,790,000 in acreage, a decrease of 354,772,000 bushels in production, and an increase of $180,441,000 in value.

Winter Wheat—An increase of 1,833,000 in acreage, a decrease of 3,486,000 bushels in production, and a decrease of $3,167,000 in valne.

Spring Wheat—An increase of 2,029,000 in acreage, a decrease of 10,297,000 bushels in production, and a decrease of $14,821,000 in value.

Oats—An increase of 390,000 in acreage, a decrease of 258,215,000 bnshels in production and an increase of $8,257,000 in value.

Rye—A decrease of 26,500 in acreage, a decrease of 1,576,000 in prodnction, and an increase of $1,650,000 in value.

Potatoes—A decrease of 101,000 in acreage, a decrease of 56,295,000 bnshels in production, and an increase of $39,212,000 in valne.

Hay—A decrease of 2,674,000 in acreage, a decrease of 13,534,000 tons in prodnction, and a decrease of $53,199,000 in value.

Tobacco—A decrease of 353,000 in acreage, a decrease of 198,306,000 pounds in production, and a decrease of $16,932,000 in value.

Cotton is not included in this list, but it is now pretty certain that the yield of the fleecy staple will be close around 15,000,000 bales. This does not necessarily mean, however, that the crop will be sold for more than that of last year, since the price is so much lower. But, leaving cotton ont of the calculation, the market value of the eleven most important farm crops for 1911 is computed to foot up the enormous sum of $3,769,562,000, a gain over last year of $190,000,000. Thus it is manifest that our soil continues to yield its increase, and that the tide of prosperity within our national borders yet shows little sign of abatement. A state of business depression may exist in limited localities, but the American people, as a whole, are enormously rich, and growing richer. The possession of such vast wealth is a great responsibility, and, nniess we nse it properly, may become the agency that will corrupt our government and wreck our free institution.

THE VOICE OF GOD.

A Prayer for the New Year.

"They heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day."—Gen. 3. 8.

O God, I pray Thee grant to me
To find within the daily life
A space fenced off from earthly strife,
Where I may wait and watch for Thee.

A garden which Thyself hast made;
Where grow Thy graces rich and fair,
And gently breathes the fragrant air,
And blooms the bliss that doth not fade.

And listening let me gladly run
With eager steps to walk with Thee,
With heart aglow to talk with Thee—
An hour when earth and heaven are one.

W. ... CONNELL—The subject of this tribute was born in Lauderdale County, Miss., Aug. 6, 1851, and spent his entire life in the county where he was born. He was married to Miss Mary Munger Nov. 14, 1872. From this union five children were born, four of whom are still living—the two youngest childen still being with the invalid mother to comfort and cheer her in her loneliness. Brother Connell's care and thoughtfulness for his frail wife was beautiful to behold. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church under the ministry of Rev. W. D. Worsham, in 187... and on Oct. 9, 1911, he was called into the presence of his maker to give an account of his stewardship. When he stood at the altar of the church and assumed its solemn vows there were no mental reservations; his soul gave hearty response to its high and sacred verities. The great teachings of the gospel were fixed principles in his heart and dominated and controlled his entire life. He was a well rounded man. While he was "fervent in spirit," he was also "diligent in business." He carried his religion into the affairs of every day life. For many years he was the agent of the M. & O. Railroad at Mayhew, Miss. During these years he was also engaged in the mercantile business at Mayhew. For many years he was the faithful superintendent of the Sabbath school in his home town. Brother Connell was an intelligent Christian. He read the very best books that he could purchase. He was a devoted husband, and no man was more vitally concerned for the moral and social standing of his children than he. He left them an example worthy their emulation. He was eminently clean and honest in his words and dealings. I question if he ever indulged in a conversation that he could not discuss with absolute propriety in the presence of his wife and children. He was a man of a very striking and strong personality. He had convictions and lived up to them. The things that were true, honest, just, pure lovely and of good report were the things that engaged his heart and mind, and upon these he loved to think. He loved his Church and gave his time and money for the advancement of the Master's kingdom. We shall miss him at the sessions of our Conference—he was rarely ever absent. He served on different boards and was conspicuous in all the work connected with the Conference. The State has lost a true and upright citizen, the church a loyal and consecrated supporter. The bereaved wife will miss that strong arm on which she had leaned so confidently during her entire married life. The children will miss the wise counsel and loving sympathy of their devoted father—we shall all miss him. But, thank God, if our lives are only faithful, as was his, we shall meet him again in mansions of fadeless beauty, where the weary are forever at rest.

Mrs. MOLLIE WRAY (nee Pugh), of Pope, Miss., was born Feb. 11, 1858, and died Nov. 23, 1911. She was married to A. W. Wray in December, 1877. She joined the Methodist Church early in life and lived a faithful and consistent member of the same till the day of her death. She was one of the most unselfish women we ever met. She would have lived longer, doubtless, if she had thought and cared less for others and more for herself. But she wore herself out prematurely in serving others. She was indeed a "living sacrifice" for her family and her friends. She loved her church and all of its interests and was ever ready to respond to its calls. Her home was one in which the preacher and his family always found a hearty welcome. And all who have been so fortunate as to be her pastor have been blessed and strengthened by her kind words and ministries. She is gone, but the light of her beautiful life still shines. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them.' She is survived by her husband, three daughters and one son. May God's grace sustain them all!

T. H. PORTER.

DEWITT LEVERETT: Born Dec. 27, 1891, died July 30, 1911. Between these two dates there was given to the world a noble life and character which lasted not quite twenty years. He was the pride, joy, and fond hope of a devoted mother, for he was a good boy. To know him was to love him. I never heard one word derogatory to his character, but much to commend him in every way. He had a well trained mind, noble ambitions, and pure motives. He was self-sacrificing for his widowed mother and young brothers. No unkind word was heard from his lips concerning any one, and he always discouraged this in others. At the age of sixteen he completed the high school curriculum in his home town of Hickory, Miss., and later spent a year in the State University. He taught in his home county the winter of 1910-11, and at the time of his death was assistant teacher-elect in the high school at Union, Miss. The high esteem in which he was held by the people of his home town was demonstrated on the day of his funeral by the large congregation which gathered at the church and followed his body to the cemetery, and also by every place of business closing during the service. His memory will be fondly cherished. His influence still abides, and will continue to abide, for he did not live in vain! He died at his post of duty true to every trust imposed upon him.

May God comfort his mother and brothers, and all his loved ones who sorrow not as those who have no hope. Good-bye, son, brother, and friend. We hope to meet you when the mists have all rolled away. His pastor,

F. B. ORMOND.

NOTICE.

A Word of Exhortation to the Preachers and Lay-Workers on the Ruston District.

Dear Brethren: Let us resolve to make 1912 the banner year on the Ruston District, and, if possible, let us be able to make the banner report of the districts at Monroe this fall.

Let me urge you, first, to visit faithfully your people. Brethren, it counts; every charge wants a visiting preacher.

Second—Resolve to have revivals. The preacher who does not try to have revivals needs something. Our Methodism was born in a revival, and has been brought up and nourished on revivals. I am not an old man, but I can remember when, under the revival preaching and exhortation of thirty-five years ago, scores of strong men and women wept for sin and knelt at the mourner's bench, groaning for salvation, and they were saved, many of them, and they are the pillars in our churches to-day.

Now, I am not whining for the "good old times," but sin is just as sinful to-day as it ever was, and godly sorrow for sin is just the same, and if Nicodemus had to be "born again," converted, before he could become a citizen of the heavenly kingdom, so the sinner now will be lost, unless he repents and is converted. Nothing is so helpful in the conversion of sinners as revival meetings properly conducted. Let us, therefore, have a revival in every church.

Third—Brethren, please begin in the first of the year to secure your benevolent collections. Begin in January with your mission assessments; get it all, if possible; if not then, do not stop until you get all you can. Then this fall, it will be an easy matter to get the others. Will you not try it? I believe you will. How I would rejoice if we could pay our district out next Conference! Brethren, let us do our best! Faithfully,

R. W. TUCKER.

PROMISES TO BE GREAT OCCASION.

Dear Brother Meek: You will be pleased to know that the outlook for the International Executive Committee Meeting and the General Secretaries' Conference to be held in New Orlans, Feb. 2-9 is very bright. Mr. Marion Lawrance writes: "It will be without doubt the greatest gathering of our paid Sunday school workers and other Sunday school officials ever assembled in North America."

Our central committee has decided to entertain, on the Harvard plan, those who desire entertainment in that way.

Several general meetings will be held during the week, and we are to have with us Prof. E. O. Excell and his wonderful pianist, Mr. Alvin Roper. We hope to make the coming of these specialists a great impetus to the work in our city and State.

We are passing over the threshhold of the old year into the new year with more people vitally interested in the "teaching, developing and training service of the church" than ever before, with greater opportunities and larger responsibilities. With the united prayer and effort of our committee for the leadership of the Holy Spirit during the good year of 1912, we believe God is going to give us the most successful year in our history.

Yours for others,

THOS. V. ELLZEY,
General Secretary.

THE AMERICAN UNDERGRADUATE.

Clayton Sedgwick Cooper, the first of whose series of articles on "The American Undergraduate" appears in the January Century, has made a study of college conditions in the United States, Canada, and Europe for many years, and has lately visited nearly all of the important educational institutions in India, Ceylon, China, Korea, and Japan. While Mr. Cooper has consulted largely with prominent educators and public men throughout the country, his facts and opinions are based almost entirely upon actual contact with students in lecture-rooms, fraternity houses, on the athletic field and campus, in large public gatherings and in thousands of personal interviews. It is perhaps through this intimate personal contact with the individual undergraduate, says Mr. Cooper, that one comes nearer to the real gist and trend of the college man's deeper sentiment.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Adopted by the official board of the First Methodist Church at Greenville, Miss.

TOPIC FOR DEC. 31.

"Reasoning from a Blessed Present to a Glorious Future."

1 John 3:2; 1 Cor. 13:9, 10, 12.

We have come to the last day in the year. The past, with all its privileges and opportunities for improvement and unsefulness, is gone forever. The future, with all its possibilities, lies before us. Only the present is ours to improve. However, the theme for to-day teaches that the present is the prophet of the future, and is therefore very appropriato.

Present Condition and Future Prospects.

John is looking into the future. He cannot lift the veil and see exactly what the future holds in store for him, but he is certain that the future will be a vast improvement over the present—then "we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." However, there were some things connected with the present about which John was positive, and about which every Epworthian should be positive—"Beloved, now are we the sons of God." To be a son of God means that we have been restored to the forfeited honor of the sons of God by "being begotten again by the Father, and born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." We are living now in God's world, which is his footstool. We are his children, and he will take care of us and provide for us here. No evil can befall us, for "all things work together for good to them that love God." In view of our present state of security and blessedness we anticipate that the future state will be more glorious and blessed, because "we shall know as we are known."

"O what a blessed hope is ours!
While here on earth we stay,
We more than taste the heavenly powers,
And antedate that day.
We feel the resurrection near,
Our life in Christ concealed,
And with his glorious presence here
Our earthen vessels filled."

Knowledge Imperfect, but Sufficient.

Here we "see darkly." We are surrounded by mysteries on every hand. There are a great many things concerning the spiritual life we can not comprehend. There are also many things in nature that we do not understand. Bishop Fowler once said: "We are in a world full of mystery. Every step we take the great, deep problems strike us which we are unable to solve. Day fades away into night, the stars walk up and down the vault of night. We can not but wonder why. Say that it is because the earth revolves on its axis, and moves round in its orbit, but where is the force that drives it along its path?" Science can not explain the mysteries that surround us on every hand, but God has graciously given us a revelation, which we accept by faith, and we know that it is true because it satisfies the ardent longings of the human soul. It is true that we see these great truths dimly, for the finite mind can not comprehend Infinity, but we do see Jesus, "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world," and looking to him we have the fact of peace.

Mystery of Transformations.

Ruskin in his "Modern Painters" [illegible] black mud of slime [illegible] outskirts of a [illegible] the absolute [illegible] is composed of four [illegible] clay, mixed with [illegible] ot, a [illegible] and water. [illegible] four [illegible] low their own instincts of [illegible] steps.

[illegible] come a clear, hard substance so set that it can deal with light in a wonderful way, and gather out of it the loviest blue rays only, refusing the rest. We call it then a sapphire. The sand arranges itself in mysterious, infinitely fine parallel lines, which reflect the blue, green, purple and red rays in the greatest beauty. We call it then an opal. The soot becomes the hardest thing in the world, and for the blackness it had obtains the power of reflecting all the rays of the sun at once in the most vivid blaze that any solid thing can shoot. We call it then a diamond. Last of all, the water becomes a dewdrop, or a crystalline star of snow. Thus God can and does transform the vilest sinners into pure and shining jewels fit for his home in heaven."

Heavenly Contemplation.

In this busy, hustling, bustling age it is certainly not necessary to exhort our young people to think more about the present life and its duties than about heaven and its enjoyments. If heaven is to be our eternal home, does it not seem reasonable that we should be somewhat solicitous about where it is and what it will be like? Paul certainly thought much about the future state, and entertained no doubts as to what it would be like. When we think of heaven as the home of the soul, do we not all feel with the child in Mrs. Hemans' beautiful poem, that we would like to know just where it is located?

"I hear thee speak of the better land;
Thou callest its children a happy band;
Mother, oh, where is that radiant shore—
Shall we not seek it, and weep no more?"

—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Suffered Twenty-one Years, Finally Found Relief.

Having suffered for twenty-one years with a pain in my side, I finally have found relief in Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. The physicians called it "Mother's Pain" and injections of morphine were my only relief for short periods of time. I became so sick that I had to undergo a surgical operation in New Orleans, which benefited me for two years. When the same pain came back one day I was so sick that I gave up hopes of living. A friend advised me to try your Swamp-Root and I at once commenced using it. The first bottle did me so much good that I purchased two more bottles. I am now on my second bottle and am feeling like a new woman. I passed a gravel stone as large as a big red bean and several small ones. I have not had the least feeling of pain since taking your Swamp-Root and I feel it my duty to recommend this great medicine to all suffering humanity. Gratefully yours,

The Ideal Reading Lamp

Opticians agree that the light from a good oil lamp is easier on the eyes than any other artificial light.

The Rayo Lamp is the best oil lamp made.

It gives a strong, yet soft, white light; and it never flickers. It preserves the eyesight of the young; it helps and quickens that of the old.

You can pay $5, $10, or $20 for other lamps, but you cannot get better light than the low-priced Rayo gives.

Made of solid brass, nickel-plated. Easily lighted, without removing shade or chimney. Easy to clean and rewick.

A New Era in the Marble Industry.

More interesting facts about the South.

From the very earliest ages of history, marble everywhere has been recognized as pre-eminent in the construction of the world's greatest buildings and monuments, and until a recent discovery, the marble used in the ancient days in building gorgeous temples, has been regarded as the most perfect marble the world has ever produced.

A deposit of marbie has recently been discovered in North Georgia, however, that possesses all the superior qualities of the marbie of the olden days, especially is this true in respect to durability and weathering qualities. These qualities, with its superiority in beauty and markings, has enabled Georgia marble to establish a new era in modern marbie and its uses as a construction material.

Samples of this marble were sent to the U. S. Government for testing, and Mr. J. B. Johnson, Prof. of Engineering and Director of Testing Laboratory, reports that the crushing strength of this marble is upwards of 10,000 pounds per square inch, and a test made by the New York Weekly Underwriter shows that it will withstand heat to upwards of 1000 degrees Fah.

This marble for building purposes is growing in demand by leaps and bounds, but perhaps one of the most practical proofs of the excellency of Georgia marble as a permanent building material of unequalled durability, is the fact that the United States Government is using it in many of their most important and pretentious buildings, buildings erected for the purpose of serving many generations as yet unborn. Then, too, many of these edifices are thousands of miles distant from the Georgia quarries, some in New England and Canada, right in the heart of large marble deposits that have been famous in the past.

For monumental purposes Georgia marble is equally as popular and desirable. The fact that the crystalline formation is so closely interlocked prevents decomposition, insuring a beautiful, permanent monument. It is superior to granite because it is more compact, or harder, and is far more beautiful. In the immense deposits of this large crystal marble in Georgia, in hundreds of places where the projecting points have been exposed to the elements ever since the marble was formed, ages and ages ago, not a single ounce of decomposed marble can be found, and every exposure is free from disintegration or stain.

There are various grades of Georgia marble, but the best are Cherokee, Creole, Etowah and Kennesaw, quarried by the Georgia Marble Company of Tate, Ga. This company conducts the most extensive quarry operations in this country, controlling about 6500 acres of land. Its capacity is about 60,000 cubic feet of marbie per month, which is approximately 30,000 tons. It owns and operates its own electric plant, machine and wood working shops, many miles of standard gauge railroad, switch engines, etc., and works a night and day shift in its mills.

Any one contemplating erecting a monument or building of any nature, should investigate Georgia marble before deciding on the material to be used. This stone can be had in any size, shape or shade desired, and your marble dealer can supply you, if not, simply drop a card to the Georgia Marble Co., Tate, Ga., and they will put you in touch with a nearby dealer who can.

Years of Suffering

Catarrh and Blood Disease—Doctors Failed to Cure.

Miss Mabel F. Dawkins, 1214 Lafayette St., Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "For three years I was troubled with catarrh and blood disease. I tried several doctors and a dozen different remedies, but none of them did me any good. A friend told me of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took two bottles of this medicine and was as well and strong as ever. I feel like a different person and recommend Hood's to any one suffering from catarrh."

HEALTH BRINGS HAPPINESS—

BULL'S HERBS AND IRON

BRINGS HEALTH

THE CAUSE To properly treat any disease, it is first necessary to ascertain the cause, to get at the root of the trouble. The cause ninety-nine times in a hundred is poisoned blood, for every part of the body receives its nourishment from the blood; therefore, if you have impure blood in your veins, those impurities are distributed throughout your whole body, causing sickness and disease.

THE EFFECT Sluggish, impure blood is the most disastrous thing the system has to contend with. It breeds disease; retards digestion; causes constipation; heart palpitation; dizziness; headaches; nervousness and wrecks the whole body generally. It produces that tired, indifferent, good-for-nothing feeling, brings on the blues and makes you feel as though life were not worth the living.

THE CURE W. H. Bull's HERBS and IRON is an ideal combination of medicinal herbs and Pyrophosphate of Iron, which makes it invaluable in all cases of liver, kidney and stomach troubles, and is especially recommended to women suffering from female weaknesses in any form. W. H. Bull's HERBS and IRON makes pure, rich, red blood and strengthens heart action. Invigorates the nerves and restores the organs to normal health; cleanses the bowels and insures perfect digestion; creates a hearty appetite and eliminates uric acid from the blood. Mrs. T. Dilworth, Aberdeen, Miss., writes: "I have tried your Herbs and Iron and can vouch that it did me a great deal of good, especially in cleaning up my system and in putting new life and energy into my body."

THE GUARANTEE W. H. Bull's HERBS and IRON is sold by all druggists. Here is our Guarantee. Get a bottle, take two-thirds of it, and if you are not satisfied that it is improving your health, take the remainder back to your druggist and he will refund your money—every cent of it. If your druggist's supply is exhausted ask him to order it for you from his jobber.

Thousands Now Use This Low-Cost Cough Syrup

A Family Supply for 50c, Saving You $2. The Quickest, Best Thing You Ever Used, or Money Refunded.

The prompt and positive results given by this inexpensive cough medicine have caused it to be used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy. It gives instant relief and will usually wipe out the most obstinate, deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. It quickly succeeds, even in whooping cough and croup.

A 50 cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, makes a full pint—a family supply—of the most pleasant and effective cough remedy that money could buy, at a saving of $2. Easily prepared in five minutes—full directions in package.

Children take Pinex Cough Syrup willingly, because it tastes good. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both excellent featnres. Splendid for hoarseness, throat tickle, bronchitis, etc., and a prompt, snccessful remedy for incipient lung trouble.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated componnd of imported Norway White Pine extract and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix it with sngar syrup or strained honey, in a pint bottle, and it is ready for use.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never snccessfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

The Sunday School.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

At the first of last Conference year Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir found fifty in the Sunday school at Eunice, and at the close of the year he left 150.

* * *

Rev. R. Fulton reported at Conference that he had organized four new Sunday schools on the Denham Springs charge. Who beats that record?

* * *

One of our Bishops has recently ruled that our statistical tables on "How many have been enrolled in our Sunday schools for the year?" should include Sunday schools that have gone into winter quarters. The question is not how many are now attending our Sunday schools, but how many have been enrolled.

* * *

At its Conference session the Sunday School Board granted Rev. H. S. Johns the usual 300 quarterlies for the State Penitentiary Sunday schools, about four in number. The American Bible Society furnishes him 150 New Testaments annually, and the Moody Colportage Library books are used extensively. Brother Johns complains that his work is hindered for lack of capable leaders of irreproachable character.

Our Sunday School Guests of Honor.

About the middle of January New Orleans is to be host to the second annual gathering of the chairmen and field secretaries of the several Conference Sunday school boards of our Church, together with the general leaders from Nashville. A splendid Sunday school program may be expected. This annual gathering of our leaders had its rise in the mind of our General Secretary last year, and the first meeting at Memphis was productive of permanent and definite good. All members of our Conference Sunday School Board should avail themselves of this institute of intensive methods in the newest and livest Sunday school work, and all others have a cordial invitation to attend and participate in the program, a copy of which will be published later.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The value of a book is not in the knowledge that it imparts, but in the inspiration that it bestows upon the reader.

* * *

Bishop McDowell says "The Sunday school furnishes the most significant, valuable, fruitful and permanent work of the church."

* * *

A live Home Department should have an annual social, and see that each member receives a birthday letter and a special invitation to special day services.

* * *

Emerson says that the greatest teacher is not the one who supplies the pupil with the most facts, but the one in whose presence the pupil becomes a different person.

* * *

The traveling library plan is a most helpful one for a school not financially able to purchase a library. The library is well selected and stays six months with each school.

Enthusiasm is the touchstone of success, the heart-to-heart quality that gets results, the bond of sympathy between teachers and pupil and teachers and superintendents.

* * *

A fine men's class in Louisiana has for its name, "Go-On-Working," and they are accomplishing fine results as well as getting help from all over the country in regard to method and progress.

* * *

At this season many classes of smaller boys and girls are meeting with their teachers and mending and re-arranging boxes of good toys to send to mission schools, and the interest these blessed children take in this work is contagious.

* * *

Mrs. V. T. Hoyle, the accomplished teacher of the Alpha Wesley Class in Tupelo, has gotten out very attractive and helpful programs for class work for December. They are all most interesting and suggestive.

* * *

The first and only child welfare exhibit ever held, took place in Kansas City, Nov. 3, 1911. It was planned by the Board of Public Welfare. It was divided into Departments of home, health, church, corrective, charity and education, and marks an epoch of new necessary attention to child life.

* * *

Trained leadership, trained teachers, trained superintendents are the crying need of the hour. How the busy pastor needs such help! Will not some of the fine, capable men and women in our Conference bring this helpfulness as a white gift to the Christ-King for the coming year?

* * *

In all of the Michigan counties a splendid idea has been worked out successfully—a county library for Sunday school teachers is placed in the city library at the county seat. On two afternoons a week a Sunday school teacher is assigned the care of this special collection of books. The interest has been so great that the books are nearly worn out by readers eager to find better methods of teaching.

* * *

The plan of getting the mothers together, as mothers, to discuss that most vital subject—the religious training of their children—is wonderfully significant. It will mean a loss of prejudice and gain in co-operation. It will mean a quickened interest in the church and school, and more harmony among those who work for the young. Home co-operation is necessary and vitally helpful to all Sunday school effort.

A LETTER FROM MISSISSIPPI.

Mr. H. H. Jackson, of Friar's Point, Miss., writes: "Find enclosed 50c for which send me two boxes of Gray's Ointment. I am glad to report that Gray's Ointment has made a permanent cure of a sore of sixteen years' standing.

For ninety-one years (almost a century) Gray's Ointment has held first place with physicians and people alike, in the cure of boils, carbuncles, old sores and other inflammations, and in the prevention of blood poisoning. The Home Circle

FOR THE NEW YEAR.

What shall I wish thee this new year—
Health, wealth, prosperity, good cheer,
All sunshine—not a cloud or tear?
Nay! only this:

That God may lead thee his own way,
That He may choose thy path each day,
That thou mayest feel him near alway,
For this is bliss!

I dare not ask aught else for thee.
How could I tell what best would be?
But God the end of all can see—
His will is best.

To know He rules—come loss or gain,
Sorrow or gladness, sun or rain;
To know He loves—in ease or pain,
Is perfect rest.

New York Christian Advocate.

THE NEW YEAR'S GIFT.

The little boy and the little girl had many friends among the animals. There were the rabbit, the turtle, and the owl and the proud bluejay and pretty, cherry robin. The old gray goose and the speckled guinea hen and the quacking duck and the strutting rooster and the clucking hens were their friends, too. So were the pigeons and the old black crow, and the little, frisky, scampering squirrel.

These friends all knew that early New Year's morning the little girl and the little boy would go to the evergreen playhouse for the gift the New Year brought. Nobody had ever told the little girl and the little boy that the New Year would bring them a gift, but all children know a great many things that nobody tells them.

The evergreen playhouse was a beautiful circle of evergreen trees, with an opening on one side for a door. This playhouse had only the sky for a roof, so it was very gay and cheerful. A table for play stood in the center of the house.

All these birds and animal friends of the little girl and the boy thought it would be nice to bring New Year's gifts and lay them on the table in the evergreen playhouse—fine, good, New Year's gifts.

So early New Year's morning the little boy and girl went hand in hand to the evergreen house and stood quietly inside the door.

Then they looked at the table and there they saw all the beautiful New Year's gifts.

"Feathers!" shouted the little boy when he saw what some of the birds had brought. "Feathers of all sorts of colors! I know what I will do. I am going to make an Indian war-bonnet that is a war-bonnet!—a perfect beauty!"

"Oh, see the red grains of corn and the yellow grains of corn!" cried the little girl, as she saw the present the barn-yard fowls had brought. "I'll string them for a necklace!"

"Oh, goody, look at the nuts!" laughed the little boy, as he saw the nuts the squirrel had brought; "won't they taste fine!"

"There's my little doll—the one I lost!" shouted the little girl. The shary-eyed crow had brought it back from his hidingplace.

"And there's my lucky penny!" shouted the little boy. For the rascal of a crow had brought that back, too.

So they laughed over their presents until all their animal friends crept in to see.

"Come!" cried the little boy, "we'll all have a dance around the table!"

So around they went; the birds and chickens, the squirrel and the crow, and all the friends, speaking and quacking and crowing and chirping and cawing, while the little girl and boy sang "la, la, la," to no tune at all, just because they were so happy.

Mercy, children!" called their mother, who came out to the evergreen house to see what was going on, "what are you doing?"

"Just having fun!" answered the little boy.

"Oh, the mostest fun, mamma!" called the little girl, "with all our friends!"—Saint Nicholas.

HOW BOB LIVED HIS RELIGION.

Bob began work at a salary of $35 per month, and when he drew his first month's salary he counted out his money and laid aside $3.50. "Now," said he, "that is my church money for this month."

"You don't mean to give that much out of your own month's salary, do you?" asked someone.

"No," replied Bob. "I am not giving that, I am only paying a debt. That tenth belongs to the Lord. After that comes the giving."

After a while Bob got a raise to $50 per month. Some of the boys said: "Well, Bob, I suppose you will give $5 out of your month's wages."

"I'll pay my debts," said Bob.

Again he was raised to $60 per month, and it was the same thing.

But Bob was to be tested in another way. One Saturday afternoon the assistant superintendent said: "Well, boys, I don't have you to work on Sunday, as a rule; but we are behind now, and you will all have to come down to-morrow and work to get things in shape for the end of the month."

Bob spoke quietly: "I can't work on Sunday."

"Now, Bob, this is the first time I have had you boys to do so, and we must work to-morrow to catch up."

"I'm sorry, sir," said Bob firmly, "but it is against my religious principles to do so."

"Well, Bob, if you can't do the work I want you to at the time I want it done, I'll have to get a man that will."

Sunday morning everyone but Bob went down to work. He went to Sunday school and preaching. Monday morning he was "fired."

That night when Bob brought in his part of a month's wages some of the boys said: "Well, Bob, I guess you won't give any of that money to the Church, but keep it to live on until you get another job." Bob still paid his dues.

Bob started at once to hunt him another job. But days passed, and still he was out of a job, until the boys thought things were pretty blue for him. But there was a brighter day ahead for him.

One day the president of the company came in. He knew Bob and missed him right away. "Where is Bob T—?" said he.

"I had to let him go."

"What was the matter?"

"I had to work some on Sunday, we were so badly behind. Bob refused to work, so I had to let him out."

The colonel made no further remark then; but afterwards he asked about Bob, where he was and what he was doing. He sent for him to come to the office. Bob went over the next morning. "Well," said the colonel, "you are the chap that preferred losing a job to working on the Sabbath?"

"Yes, sir."

"You are the boy that I have been looking for—one that will stand by his principles. You can go to work at once in my office. What salary have you been getting?"

"Sixty dollars per month was my last salary?"

"I'll start you at $75," said the colonel.

And little Bobbie went on climbing up until he climbed up to New York, and the last I heard of him he was getting $150 per month. He may be still climbing, but I have lost sight of him for some years.—Christian Observer.

MISSIONARY POCKETS.

"What are you going to do with my coat, mamma?" asked Robert, watching his mother as she laid out a pile of little garments.

"It is for the missionary box, dear," said Mrs. Vincent. "It is too small for you, and being almost new, will fit some smaller boy nicely. My boy is getting so big he hardly has a chance to wear out anything."

"Please wait a minute, mamma. There are some things in the pockets I want."

"And, mamma, if you are going to send my little white apron, there are some things in the pockets that I want," said Amy, putting aside her doll to hurry to the pile of garments. "I couldn't think of giving away this lovely blue hair ribbon."

"And my jacknife, and three of my best marbles are in the pockets of these trousers. Mamma, would you have given these clothes without examining them?" he asked, turning over everything in the heap, as he looked through other clothes for treasures.

"You have so many playthings, Robert, that I thought you wouldn't miss a few of them. If I were a little boy 'way off in a lonely little home out West, I think I should like to find a few pretty things in the pockets of the clothes that come in the missionary box; don't you?"

"Missionary boys are different," muttered Robert; "they don't expect playthings."

"No, I suppose not," said his mother; "but do you not think they would enjoy them?"

"Maybe they would, but I can't spare these.

Mrs. Vincent went off to the meeting with the little clothes and her own gifts, but not until every pocket had been searched. Robert and Amy carried the treasures to the playroom, and put them in their proper places, but somehow neither was easy. They tried playing, but the game broke up in a quarrel, and both wished it were a school day, so there would be something going on.

"I'm going down to Mrs. Upton's with some of my things in those pockets," said Robert, suddenly. "It isn't fair that we should have so much and those other children nothing."

"That is just what I was thinking," said Amy. "Let's fill every pocket full."

When the ladies saw the children coming with their hands full of gifts, they said, "Let's not send the box to-day, but give all the children a chance to fill the pockets of their garments, too."

And when that box was opened in that lonely little home out West, I wish you could have heard the squeals of delight from the four little children. The oldest was only eight and the baby three, but every one had been remembered, and the floor was just covered with marbles and little toys and trinkets. They liked the clothes very much, but the pockets filled to overflowing with nice things they liked best of all.

When the letter came, telling about their great joy, Amy said, "Let's always see that the missionary pockets are full instead of empty." And ever since then the boys and girls save up all the year, so there will be no pockets empty when the big box goes on its long journey.—World Wide.

Moreover, we must remember that all self-denial develops character; that not only in order to resist temptation to bodily indulgence, but also to strengthen the will, we need to learn a little hardness.—Bishop Hall.
